One of the weaknesses of people at the North is a dislike to see an honest man, earning an honest livelihood in a Free State, pounced upon in broad daylight by United States officers, in the house of his employer, and forced to defend himself with deadly weapons, to prevent his being carried to hopeless and cruel bondage. Another of our prejudices is a prejudice against the arrest of free citizens, under cover of law, for affording aid and protection to wretched fugitives, flying from labor without wages, from punishment without trial, from suffering without hope. Our Southern neighbors know perfectly well how sensitive we are on these points, and how apt we are to lose our temper and commit acts of violence, when our foolish passion for liberty and equal rights is roused. Why not deal tenderly with us? Why not respect our weakness? Why does not the South, for the sake of that peace and harmony for which she asks us to sacrifice so much, make some little sacrifice herself? Why not collect among the sons of chivalry enough money from time to time to compensate the owners of fugitive slaves, and thus avoid rousing the fiercest enmities, and convulsing whole States from border to border, by attempting to enforce a law which every Northern mother who has ever read the story of the Good Samaritan, or ever felt a generous impulse rise in her heart, must teach her children to disregard and abhor. Why for the sake of a paltry $1,500 worth of damaged goods, bring about such disorders as have recently occurred in Ohio, and place the Federal and United States officers in deadly collision? The Fugitive Slave Law is law, but so long as all that is best and noblest amongst the white population of the North rises up against it in bitter hostility, the man who attempts to enforce it, is the sworn foe of the Union. We extend indulgence in the amplest manner to many failings of our Southern friends, upon which the rest of the world are not disposed to look so leniently. We forgive their censorship of the press, their lynch law, their deliberate exclusion of large numbers of citizens of these States from the protection of their Courts, their repudiation of some of the leading passages in the Declaration of Independence, their bloody quarrels, their reckless piracy and freebooting. We tread through their sunny territory with baited breath and sealed lips.

Are we to have no return for all this suavity and politeness? Is Ohio not entitled to the courtesy she extends to Kentucky?

The forcible seizure and abduction into captivity of a free man is as great an outrage on the feelings of the people of Mechanicsburg, as an Abolitionist oration would be on those of the citizens of Charleston. The arrest of five citizens for the crime of affording to a human being, guilty of no offence, help and succor in the direst extremity and the sorest need in which human being could be placed, is a spectacle as revolting to the people of Ohio, as an assault by a slave on his master would prove to Alabama planters. It is useless to expect them to lay aside these prejudices, just as useless as to ask Governor WISE to preside at an Abolitionist Convention. They are fortified in their errors by the lives and deaths of a whole army of martyrs. This weakness in favor of liberty and human rights has come down to them from MORE, and HAMPDEN, and RUSSELL, and SYDNEY. Scholars, soldiers and poets have adorned the delusion by boundless sacrifices and matchless courage, by genius and by eloquence. Why goad these free-soil fanatics, thus encouraged and sustained, into resistance to the constituted authorities, and violation of the rights of the slaveholders? Better far let them alone, though the abstinence cost a little money. By and by they may begin to see their blunder, and prove as zealous in the good old cause of Slavery, the cause for which "WALLACE fought and HAMPDEN bled," as they now are in support of the monstrous fallacy that freedom is a blessing, and that "inalienable rights" are not affected by color.

The Office of Street Commissioner.

By the death of Mr. TAYLOR, the office of Street Commissioner does not become vacant, but devolves upon Mr. CHARLES TURNER, hitherto Deputy Street Commissioner. The ordinance of 1849, organizing the Departments of the Municipal Government, provides that "in case of a vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner, the Deputy shall act as Street Commissioner until the vacancy shall be supplied by a new appointment, and until the person appointed shall be duly qualified." The new charter prescribes that the Street Commissioner "shall continue in office until the expiration of his term, and shall not be removed from office during such continuance." As Mr. TAYLOR'S term would not have expired until the 1st of January, 1858, his Deputy will of course hold on until that time. The new charter does not make any provision, even for cases of removal from office of heads of Departments, excepting in the instances of the Comptroller and Counsel of the Corporation. Their places, if "occasioned by removal," may be filled by the Mayor, "with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen." If these places were vacated, however, by death, the Mayor could not legally fill them, nor can be fill the Street Commissioner's post, under any circumstances whatever. Nothing can, in fact, be conceived more bungling and clumsy than the legislation of the charter respecting vacancies.

It is stated that, as it is impossible for the Mayor to seize upon the extensive patronage of the Street Commissioner's Department, under the new Charter, he will fall back upon the old, and attempt to enforce, illegally, that section of the latter which provides that "in case of vacancy of any of the heads of departments, by removal from office or otherwise, the Mayor, by and with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen, shall appoint a person to fill the same, until the vacancy shall be filled by the electors at the next Charter election." When it is recollected that several hundreds of individuals are directly or indirectly employed, as clerks or inspectors, by the different bureaux of the Street Commissioner's office, the motive of the Mayor will readily be divined. From all appearances, however, he will be disappointed in his efforts, and the care of the office remain in the hands which directed it during Mr. TAYLOR'S last illness.

THE STEAM FRIGATE NIAGARA.—A correspondent of the Washington Union, in commenting upon our remarks on the first voyage of the Niagara, says:

We deem it but fair to state, in advance of results, that the Niagara did not emanate from the Navy Department, but, on the contrary—as we have reason to believe—was forced upon the department by irresistible outside pressure; therefore, as the department cannot take credit for any excellence this ship may display, it must be held equally above reproach for her inefficiency. The model of the Niagara, submitted by her constructor, though presenting admirable points, and most especially designed for the attainment of high speed, did not meet the approval of the constructors at Washington, and the arrangement of her decks and disposition of her interior was at variance with the general views of the Navy. Her spars, as well as everything else about her, were draughted by the same hand, excepting only the engines, which were built by contract.

Nothing in the slightest degree detrimental to the model of the Niagara, her build, or her rig, has been uttered; they are acknowledged, on all hands, to be nearer perfection than had ever before been attained in one of our national vessels, and so far from "all that the Navy Department had to do with her" having been well done, being true, the reverse is the fact. The cause of the detention and accidents on the passage of the ship were owing to the imperfect manner in which she was rigged and the worthlessness of the materials. These were matters with which none but the officers of the Navy had anything whatever to do. The topgallant-masts were carried away because the spars were poor; the chain part of the standing rigging gave way because the iron was bad, and from the same cause the other accidents happened. We were aware that the model of the Niagara did not meet the approbation of the officers of the Government, but this fact is not one that their friends ought to be anxious of making known.

Amusements.

CONCERT.—Madame LA GRANGE gives a grand farewell concert to-night, at Niblo's Saloon, assisted by valuable talent. We need say no more.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—A well-balanced performance of "Romeo and Juliet" is a luxury not easily obtained in any city. The representation given last night by the members of Mr. STUART'S company, deserves this high commendation. It was not overwrought, not spasmodic, not wearisome.

Mrs. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., needs no excuse for appearing in man's apparel. Her inches compare favorably with the most stalwart of men, and her step, although a trifle lighter, is not much shorter. She speaks melodiously, fextatically;—in some respects like a "flabbergasted" Romeo. She stands like MACREADY in his most acadsmical moments. Her voice last night appeared to be tortured with a cold, but she used it with discretion, and was effective and quite successful.

Mr. LESTER as Mercutio was superb; no actor living can by any possibility play the character better. His Queen Mab speech was a picture gallery of dramatic art, and his death by that black ruffian Tybalt a public calamity.

Mrs. HOEY improves so rapidly that we never know where to place her. We were a little apprehensive of her Juliet, but unjustly, for it was unequivocally good—a little more heroical than most personations, but clearly and humanly sketched. It was the performance of the evening.

Mrs. VERNON as the nurse was of course inimitable.

All the minor parts were particularly well sustained. Indeed, we find everything to praise, except the mechanical part of the scenic department, which was, from first to last, disgracefully managed. Mr. STUART should agitate the subject of scenic shifting. As conducted last night, it is simply an outrage on the taste of the audience.

BENEFIT.—Mr. MOSS, the gentlemanly and efficient Treasurer of Wallack's Theatre, takes his annual benefit on Monday evening. Mr. WALLACK, the entire strength of Mr. STUART'S Company, and other artists, will assist. The entertainment promises to be popularly and artistically interesting.

Personnl.

A number of eminent citizens of Philadelphia have united in tendering to Hon. W. B. REED, Minister to China, the compliment of a public dinner, prior to his departure for the Celestial Empire. The brief time, however, which remains before the Minnesota will leave Norfolk, will probably prevent the fulfillment of the intended compliment.

It is stated that the late Rev. Dr. WOODS left a history of the Theological Seminary at Andover, nearly completed, and that the manuscript has passed into the hands of his son, President WOODS, of Bowdoin College, who is preparing it for publication.

The creed, the Lord's prayer, and the commandments, were first translated into the Saxon language by ALFRED, in 761—the first translation of any portion of the Bible into English.

A History of the Webster Grant.

SIR: I sent to you a few days since a letter signed "Stockholder," a nom de plume which I have assumed in commemoration of my adventures in Accessory Transit Stock. People who have been tempted by their evil stars to meddle in Transit matters, acquire an itch for information, and pass a good part of their lives in watching the movements of two or three men. While I was lounging on the curb, day before yesterday, with a knot of brokers, a man whom I knew well rushed by, his hair wildly flying, his eyes bloodshot and his entire dress and behavior indicating a mind burthened with the news of some terrible calamity. I seized him forcibly by the collar and with difficulty checked his furious career. "JACK," said I, "for heaven's sake, what is the matter?" He stared at me wildly for a moment, held up one finger, put his mouth to my ear, and whispered hoarsly, "VANDERBILT has gone to Costa Rica with three hundred thousand dollars to buy the Nicaragnan Transit Line."

As my friend, JACK MEDDLE, though infested with the Transit mania, is really a decent and respectable person, I was struck with pity, and drawing him aside, endeavored to put his mind at rest by informing him that as I had conversed with VANDERBILT only an hour before, if he had gone to Costa Rica he must have taken his departure under the patronage of a squad of gutta-percha balloons. "But," I added, "pray tell me, JACK, what interest you have in the matter?" My friend tried to stammer out some sort of an explanation, but finding it impossible, put his finger in his mouth and went away. In fact, as I had known for some time, JACK, by force of good nature, the possession of a little money, some wit and a great deal of loaferish idleness, got himself wedged into a level of people whose entire business and sole occupation it is to watch the movements of VANDERBILT, GARRISON, LAW and MORGAN.

The principal observatory of these astronomers is said to be somewhere in Pine street, but they shift their telescopes often to the St. Nicholas, the Metropolitan, the Bowling Green, Madison-square, and other regions; where on a clear night, or even in the day-time, with glasses made sufficiently strong, many silver stars can be seen, some of the first magnitude. Their observations on the constellation of the Steamer, which consists of the above-named four stars of the first magnitude, and others whose names I do not now recollect, are probably to be found in some country newspaper which kindly lends them the "Poet's Corner" for the record of their works of imagination.

On or about the 27th of January last, while our astronomers were engaged in watching the Transit of GARRISON and MORGAN across the disc of VANDERBILT, a broad red meteoric or cometary body suddenly entered the field of telescopic vision. Mr. W. R. C. WEBSTER brought with him from Costa Rica a grant or charter delivering over to him, in good set legal phrase, the exclusive right of way for 50 years over the Territory of Costa Rica, and, as I am informed by a legal gentleman at my elbow, who professes to have seen this grant, or an English version of it,—binding the said WEBSTER to procure a loan of $1,000,000 for the State of Costa Rica.

Resting exclusively upon the information of my legal friend, I proceed to inform you that W. R. C. WEBSTER was formerly engaged in the WALKER movement at New-Orleans in connection with one DELANO, a pork merchant of Cincinnati. That he went out in the Mississippi from New-Orleans and remained some weeks at Granada, but becoming displeased with the great filibuster WALKER, he made his way back to New-York, and soon after went out to Costa Rica in company with SPENCER, who, it is said, furnished him with the means and expenses. "In Costa Rica," continues my legal friend, "he presented himself as a man of large means, and almost boundless resources, and succeeded in obtaining for himself the confidence of the President by allowing the rumor to go abroad that he was the agent of Mr. VANDERBILT. It was even reported and believed that he had the power to draw large sums upon VANDERBILT and others, which was not the fact. How these rumors originated deponent sayeth not. Rumors, however, sometimes breed money. The President took W. R. C. WEBSTER into his confidence, and he became the ostensible manager of a military expedition, of which the practical details were conducted by SPENCER, for the recapture of the boats of the Accessory Transit Company. W. R. C. WEBSTER did not engage in the service with SPENCER, but remained quietly at San José, in Costa Rica, until the capture was completed. He then received from President MORA an obligation of $100,000—the half of which was to go to SPENCER, for advising and counseling the capture of the boats—bound himself to make a loan of $1,000,000 for Costa Rica, and received, in addition, the privilege of the Transit for fifty years—my legal friend corrects me—"for seventy-five years." A contract, in due form, was drawn up. W. R. C. WEBSTER, his heirs and assigns, bind themselves in the penalty of $500,000, to perform all their part of the written obligations of the contract. Within six months after the time when said W. R. C. WEBSTER should be served with a written notice that the boats of the Accessory Transit Company, or any portion of them, should have been taken, he should have effected one-half of the million loan, the other half to be paid at intervals, I suppose; but of these I have no account. This notice of capture was served on or about the 1st of January; consequently Costa Rica will receive her half million on or about the 1st of July next; or the said W. R. C. WEBSTER, his associates and assigns, are liable to the Government of Costa Rica in the sum of $500,000. From this you will detect the origin of the ridiculous rumor that "Mr. VANDERBILT went by the last steamer to Costa Rica, taking with him $300,000." The inventors of the story believed that Mr. V. had purchased the Webster grant, and that he had gone off in a hurry to make a first payment.

But this obligation to pay $500,000 to Costa Rica on the 1st of July, or become legally liable for the same, Transit or no Transit, was not the only feature in the Webster grant which deterred the great steamship owners from its purchase. I am informed by my legal friend that Costa Rica had granted the monopoly of the land carriage across her territory from Lake Nicaragua to Salina's Bay, in the Pacific, to a certain Native Transportation Company. This Transportation Company proposed to charge $10 a head for every passenger; and, as their rights were identical with those granted to W. R. WEBSTER, and the two charters hung together, like the Siamese Twins, there was no possibility of a profit to the steamship owners who might open the Transit.

The Webster Grant, loaded with these immense obligations, went a begging. No man in his sober senses would ever look at it. It was rejected successively by five or six leading operators, and finally fell dead. SPENCER, utterly disheartened, went off to Costa Rica to look after his fifty thousand dollars. Mr. YOUNG ANDERSON, who appears to have been sent on by President MORA to keep an eye on the business, followed in the next steamer, and by the Illinois the veritable W. R. C. WEBSTER himself took his departure, in the hope, I suppose, of getting another and more negotiable contract.

There was a third feature in this dead and exploded Webster Grant, which would have rendered it valueless, even if the enormous obligations of the loan, the penalty, and the $10 a head for land transit had been removed. It had never received the sanction of the Nicaraguan Government. Although Costa Rica has been the warm ally and supporter of Nicaragua, and by right of conquest is admitted to hold a present possession of the boats which were used by WALKER to convey troops and munitions of war to her injury, she did not hold an exclusive right to the River San Juan, and consequently could not grant an exclusive navigation to a Transit Company. This is a [illegible] and curious question, and must be [illegible] between Nicaragua and Costa Rica, [illegible] are, before a Transit can be established.

Costa Rica did not acknowledge the Presidency of WALKER and was not therefore making war upon Nicaragua as a State. Costa Rica did not therefore acquire rights of conquest over the river San Juan, but only over the boats of the filibusters. She can grant a Transit over the own territory, and can confer the right to navigate the river, which she herself represses, but cannot make it exclusive without the consent of Nicaragua. Independently, therefore, of all other incumbrances, and not taking into consideration the means by which the Webster grant may have been obtained, and which would require a thorough investigation,—the laws of Costa Rica being very severe in regard to representations made by negotiators,—the document itself seems to have been only half concocted, and to be deficient in the most important elements of all, namely, the written consent and agreements of all the contracting powers.

I believe I have sufficiently explained to you why this celebrated document has met with so little favor in New-York. It can hardly be regarded as a complication of the business of the Accessory Transit Company, as it does not in the least interfere with their claims against Nicaragua; nor does it affect or interfere with any claims which may be urged by GARRISON and MORGAN, founded on the Randolph grant made by the Walker-Rivas Government. All of these charters claim to be perpetual. If the Accessory Company make terms with Nicaragua for the settlement of the old debt, their possession will only have been temporarily suspended.

STOCKHOLDER.

RECENT DEATHS.

COMMISSIONER TAYLOR AND DR. VACHE.

Meeting of the Ten Governors.

A special meeting of the Board of Ten Governors was held last evening, on account of the death of Commissioner JOSEPH S. TAYLOR. The meeting was called for 7½ o'clock, but was not held until an hour later. Governor GUNTHER, the President, took the chair.

Gov. TOWNSEND briefly stated the object of the meeting, and offered the following preamble and resolutions:

Whereas, It hath pleased the great Disposer of events in his inscrutable wisdom to remove from our midst our late associate and colleague, JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, who, by his many virtues and generous qualities had endeared himself to the members of this Board, and

Whereas, In order to express our sympathies to the bereaved widow and friends of the deceased, we have assembled this evening; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we sensibly and fully realize the great loss which we have sustained, and heartily regret the demise of JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, our highly esteemed colleague, whose life and character have endeared his memory worthy a cherished remembrance throughout the City which he served while living.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the widow, family and relatives of the deceased, and tender them a just appreciation of their sorrow in their bereavement, commending them to the consolation embraced in the thought that "He who gave" is also the resurrection and the life.

Resolved, That the members of this Board do attend the funeral of the deceased, and a Committee of two be appointed to assist in making the necessary arrangements.

Resolved, That a copy of the above preamble and resolutions, duly authenticated by the Clerk of the Board, be transmitted to the family of the deceased.

Governor PISCKNEY, in according the resolutions, bore testimony to the merits of the deceased, and spoke feelingly of the lesson which his death taught—the uncertainty of life.

Governor MALONY thought the public services of deceased worthy of emulation by them all. No shadow of suspicion could be thrown on his name. He concluded by expressing his condolence with the bereaved family of Mr. TAYLOR.

Gov. OLIVER had been acquainted with Mr. TAYLOR from his boyhood. No young man bade fairer to live a life of usefulness than he. Death had claimed him in the strength of his manhood, but in his short life he had held high positions in the public service.

Gov. GUNTHER said he had been associated with deceased in the Fire Department, and in that Board, and had always found him a faithful friend and a good man.

The resolutions were then adopted, and the Board adjourned.

Board of Aldermen.

A special meeting of the Board of Aldermen took place last evening for the purpose of taking proper notice of the decease of JOSEPH TAYLOR, late Street Commissioner. The President stated the object of the meeting and caused the following message from the Mayor to be read:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
NEW-YORK, Wednesday, JUNE 10, 1857.

To the Honorable the Common Council:

GENTLEMEN: We are again called upon to mourn the loss of a prominent and respected member of the City Government. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Esq., Street Commissioner, died at the residence of his father yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. In making this announcement I should do injustice to the memory of the deceased and to my own feelings did I not add, that in his death the Executive Department has lost an able and energetic officer. He was as diligent in the discharge of the important public trusts confided to him as he was generally esteemed and beloved in all the walks of private life and social intercourse. I recommend that such arrangements be made for the funeral ceremonies as become the position and character of the lamented deceased.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

The following preamble and resolutions were then presented by Alderman MCSPEDON:

Whereas, It has pleased the Maker and Disposer of the universe to remove from our midst JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, Street Commissioner of this City, who, from his high official position, his active and energetic public course, and personal worth and character, secured for himself the confidence, esteem and regard of the public who elevated him to that station; and,

Whereas, This dispensation is peculiarly impressive, considering the youth of the deceased, stricken down in the midst of his usefulness and surrounded by such friendship, honors and hopes as are attached to a life of honorable deportment; and,

Whereas, This Common Council, deeply sympathizing with the afflicted family of the deceased, deem it their duty to testify in a proper manner the respect they entertain for his memory, and participating in the general sorrow consequent upon the event; therefore, be it

Resolved, That this Common Council offer their sincere and respectful condolence and sympathy to the family of JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, late Street Commissioner, in the melancholy affliction by which they are deprived of a husband, father and protector.

Resolved, That this Common Council will attend the funeral of the deceased, and wear the usual badge of mourning thirty days.

Resolved, That a Committee be appointed to make the necessary arrangements to attend the funeral in a body.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the Common Council cause a copy of these resolutions to be properly attested, and presented to the family of the deceased.

Alderman FULMER, in seconding the resolutions, said the deceased was a man to whom the Board looked up as an honorable man, a man of business, and a man well qualified for the office, to fill which he was called by the City of New-York. He hoped the resolutions would be adopted unanimously, and that their spirit would be carried out with feelings of harmony and good will.

The resolutions were adopted unanimously, and a Committee of five appointed, consisting of Aldermen MCSPEDON, Valentine, Hoffmire, Fulmer and Tucker.

Alderman FULMER then offered the following, relative to the death of Dr. VACHE:

Whereas, The Common Council have received the melancholy intelligence of the death of Dr. Alexander Vache, who during his life filled with honor and credit the important public positions of Resident Physician, Physician to the Almshouse, and Physician to the Cholera Hospitals, and other places of public trust—a citizen distinguished for the most estimable qualities, both of the head and heart, and who has earned the just confidence and the affections of the public; and

Whereas, It is our duty to make public acknowledgment of the virtues of the deceased who-se whole life has been devoted to ameliorating the sufferings and ministering to the comforts of the sick and unfortunate, therefore be it

Resolved, That to testify our respect for the eminent character and public positions held by the deceased, we will attend the funeral and wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the afflicted family of the deceased, and tender our heartfelt condolence.

Resolved, That the Clerk of the Common Council cause a copy of these resolutions to be engrossed and properly attested, and presented to the family of the deceased.

Alderman STEERS rose to second the resolutions, and in doing so spoke of Dr. Vache as one of the old specimens of New-York, and a man who had devoted his whole time to the benefit of mankind. He referred to his courage and benevolence during the cholera of 1832, being at the post of duty while other physicians would not enter a hospital; and of his separating himself from his family for six weeks during the prevalence of disease. Every one knew that he had fulfilled the duties of the several offices he had held with honor to himself and benefit to all concerned.

The resolutions were then unanimously adopted, and the same Committee of Arrangements appointed.

The President stated that the funeral would take place on Friday, at 4 P. M., from St. Stephen's Church, corner of Broome and Christie streets.

The Board then adjourned.

Special Meeting of the Board of Councilmen.

The reading of the minutes of last meeting being dispensed with, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., communicated officially to the Board the loss which the public has sustained. In few but appropriate words he characterized the late Mr. TAYLOR as a "faithful and energetic officer of the City Government." He then alluded to the recent death of Doctor A. F. VACHE, in very brief terms, as an added public calamity.

The Board concurred with the Board of Aldermen

To the Honorable the Common Council:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: We are again called on to mourn the loss of a prominent and respected member of the City Government. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR Esq., Street Commissioner, died at the residence of his father, yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock. In making this announcement I should do injustice to the memory of the deceased and to my own feelings did I not add that in his death the Executive Department has lost an able, faithful and energetic officer. He was diligent in the discharge of the important public trusts confided to him, as he was generally esteemed and beloved in all the walks of private life and social intercourse. I recommend that such arrangements be made for the funeral ceremonies as becomes the position and character of the lamented deceased.

FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

The Board then formally concurred with the Board of Aldermen in their resolutions of condolence with the family of the deceased, and in the necessary arrangements for the funeral proposed by his Honor the Mayor. The Common Council will attend the funeral to-day, and wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days—Aldermen McSpedon, Hoffmire, Valentine, Fullmer and Tucker being appointed the Committee to make the necessary arrangements.

Councilman JONES offered the following resolution

Whereas, It has been officially communicated to this Board that JOSEPH TAYLOR, Street Commissioner, and head of one of the most important executive departments, has departed this life.

Resolved, That this Common Council hereby tender to the afflicted family of the deceased its sympathies and deep condolence for this dispensation of an allwise Providence, who has thus seen fit to close so early the pilgrimage here of one who, though so young, has filled some of the most prominent positions in the gift of our citizens

Resolved, That it is with sincere grief and heartfelt sorrow that the citizens of New York are sensible of the great loss they have sustained, and in respect of the many virtues of the deceased, and the high position in our executive departments held by him.

He then spoke for a few minutes in terms of warm eulogy of the deceased, moralizing on the shortness of life, the necessity of preparation for death, urging it as the duty of all men, that in the words of the poet, they be careful they "Go not to their graves, like galley slaves scourged to their nightly dungeons."

The President, having left his seat, observed that his feelings would not suffer him to speak at length of the late Mr. TAYLOR. He characterized him as an indomitable, untiring and upright public officer—opposed in politics, there had ever been the most kindly private friendship existing between them.

These resolutions, on vote, were adopted unanimously, and the following gentlemen were appointed a Committee of the Board of Councilmen to cooperate with the Committee of the Board of Aldermen in the funeral arrangements which will take place on Friday, at 4 o'clock, at St. Stephen's Church corner of Broome and Elizabeth streets, the City flags being half-masted. Councilmen Boole, Jones, Crawford, H. Y. Smith and Franklin.

Of Dr. VACHE, whose important services to the City have extended over a period of more than twenty five years—an eminent surgeon, the favorite pupil of MOTT, whose energies stood in the gap of pestilence and death in 1832 and 1834, when few understood and all dreaded the incursions of cholera; principal physician of the public City hospitals during that epidemic, and whose services since that time have been untiring at various public institutions, especially during the prevalence of ship fever, hardly ten—certainly not twenty—words were uttered, and they were uttered by the President.

DEATH OF COMMODORE STEVENS.—At 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, Commodore (Yacht) JOHN C. STEVENS died at his residence in Hoboken, aged 72 years. His disease was enlargement of the heart and disease of the Kidneys. He has been sick for several weeks. The flags of the Hobokon Ferry were at half-mast yesterday afternoon, as a mark of respect.

CORRECTION.—In our notice in yesterday's paper of the death of Mr. JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, we stated that Mr. PINKNEY, of the firm formerly existing as PINKNEY & CRANE, died in 1851. This was a mistake. That firm was dissolved in 1843. Mr. TAYLOR was formerly a clerk in their establishment.

Governor Dugro Not Dead.

HEMPSTEAD, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I find in a copy of your paper of Wednesday, June 10, an article reporting the death of Mr. ANTHONY DUGRO, which I report to you is false. Mr. DUGRO is not dead, but in good health, and wishes you to contradict the report of his death for the anxiety of his friends.

P. S.—Please contradict it immediately.

We publish the above from Mr. J. S. HENDRICKSON (Mr. J. S. HENDRICKSON has been missing from his home on Long Island for several weeks, together with a lot of cows which he was driving) Mr. HENDRICKSON, we are disposed to believe, however, is not mistaken. Still, the statement of Governor DUGRO'S death was learned from a source which ought to be correct—the Police telegraph from the Chief MARSELL'S office to the Seventeenth Ward Station-house. HUGHY MONAGHAN heard it, and Sergeant FRANK OWENS operated.

Mr. DUGRO'S name appeared yesterday morning, among a number of others, for a plan to "redeem" Tammany Hall.

Mr. DUGRO was born in Germany, and came here when quite young. Being like all his countrymen—very industrious—he soon acquired a competency in various ways, and, when old enough to do so, became an active Democratic politician, and won to his support our German fellow-citizens, who made him a Governor of the Almshouse, which office he held at the time of his death. Mr. DUGRO was about 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and family.

Why the Theatre Cannot be Reformed.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I propose to treat this subject under two divisions, and to show—

First, that the Theatre, as at present organized, cannot be reformed; and,

Secondly, that, if organized radically different, and reformed thoroughly, it would soon degenerate and become impure.

First, then, let us see why the Theatre, as at present constituted, cannot be reformed. We know that it is simply a place of amusement, carried on as a money speculation, and dependent for its profits upon the gratification it ministers. Its managers must touch the fountains of pleasure in the human heart, or else it will not pay. The Theatre never can be a reformatory institution, while depending upon popular gratification for support. Reform, from its very nature, must go against the evil desires of mankind; and the great majority of mankind will not pay for the privilege of having any desire crossed. The Theatre, then, must needs slide easily down the social stream, accommodating itself to men about as it finds them, and forming a tolerably fair index as to their true interior life.

It is quite evident, then, that the Theatre cannot rise in moral character above the average of society. Now, what is the average of moral character in New-York? Is it pure? We know it is far otherwise—the natural tendencies of the human heart are towards the gratification of pride, ambition, avarice, lust, and every evil passion, restrained by many outside influences, but ever manifesting themselves in thousand-fold variety. We know that purity is attained gradually, through struggles and self denials, and is effectual by a most blessed Divine influence. Purity is not a natural growth—if it were, then at least some portions of the human family would rise to it without Revelation, whereas history shows abundantly that they sink deeper and deeper in pollution.

Now, it is evident that the Theatre must gratify these baser passions of mankind in order to become profitable. The proud man, the avaricious man, the ambitious man, must all be gratified by the display of their own darling passions personified, trampling under human hearts, hopes and lives to gratify a God-defying selfishness. The passion of lust—more nearly universal than any other—how must that be gratified by the slyinuendo, the vulgar jest, immodest display and demeanor, and, more than all, by the representation of a criminal career. Managers and actors understand this thing perfectly well. They know that the interest of an audience, many of whom are wearied with the day's labor, can be kept up much better by introducing these means. Does any one think that an actor of comedy, to whom a hearty laugh by a whole audience may be worth hundreds of dollars, will be scrupulous about the precise moral character of the jest which does the work? In negro minstrelsy we see the same thing. A fine musical performance gains much approval; but a vulgar way of stepping off the stage, by a man dressed as an actress, draws forth the most deafening peals of applause from an audience convulsed with laughter. It is idle to expect that actors will refrain from such means when they produce such popular effects.

If this were the end—a hearty laugh—all would be well; but this end is often far otherwise. How hard is it to eradicate the memory of a vulgar story, or an obscene jest? To what a low taste do they lead, until by much indulgence the imagination has become like a loathsome cavern—"a cage of unclean and hateful birds." From such an imagination must naturally flow evil deeds—the result is just as inevitable as the rising of a river when the neighboring hills and mountains are watered with heavy rains. How many persons of both sexes, now indulging in open vice, and how many more in secret, may trace the beginnings of their evil course to impure thoughts suggested in the theatre!

Recurring to the second point, I think that a reformed theatre would necessarily degenerate and become impure. If Dr. BELLOWS does not believe this, let him raise the funds, as for a benevolent institution, and start such a theatre, with a pious manager, actors of spotless character, and expurgated plays. After a little of the novelty was over, he would find his theatre much in the condition of temperance houses in country villages, quite indifferently supported, compared to the fat, vicious rival over the way. Suppose the reverend Doctor's eloquent appeals responded to by the congregation of "All Souls" (as other ministers are for missionary societies) and the benevolent institutions were supported, could actors of talent be secured for it? We know that the fame of drawing crowded houses stimulates their ambition far more than pecuniary reward. Those who have established their fame, have no inducement to make a hazardous change; and young aspirants would certainly soon leave a half empty theatre.

But, suppose all these difficulties overcome, there is yet another insurmountable difficulty in the way of keeping a theatre purified, which is, that the actors and actresses themselves will very probably become impure. We know this to be the fact, now, that most members of this profession are not pure in morals. Now, why is it? There must be some general reason for an effect so nearly universal; and that reason appears to be this: The profession of an actor is utterly opposed to the laws of growth in true excellence. We were not made to personate other people, but to develop our own individual natures. We were not made to seek the praise of men, but to seek "the honor that cometh from God only." The distinctions between right and wrong must be obliterated by the habit of personating both indiscriminately. The actor, dependent upon the breath of popular applause, must become inordinately vain, proud, and consequently mean, (for meanness is near akin to pride;) his vanity will lead him to the use of unworthy means for surpassing his competitors, and immoral means for attaining popularity, to suppress whom would require a censorship more strict than Dr. BELLOWS or anybody else could invent.

And if the man would become vicious in this false position, what would the woman become? How must feminine modesty be broken down by so many public appearances—how must vanity and pride be pampered until they are too strong for control, and most powerful to urge the soul on in its downward course!

In conclusion, it appears to me, first, that the theatre cannot be reformed while depending upon popularity for support; and secondly, that if reformed entirely, it must needs be supported as a benevolent institution, and would probably fail of offering any but indifferent actors, while the latter would necessarily deteriorate in moral character. Is it wise to attempt such a reform? Nay,—the theatre will not be purified until society becomes pure, and when that blessed time comes—as it surely will come—we shall have no theatres.

BROOKLYN, May 28, 1857.

Visit of Hon. William L. Marcy to the City of Troy—He is Waited Upon by Numerous Old Friends and Acquaintances—Interesting Anecdote, &c.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

TROY, Saturday, May 30, 1857.

Hon. WILLIAM L. MARCY has paid a visit to the scene of his former labors, the spot where much of his early education was acquired, and several of our citizens have seized upon the opportunity of calling upon him, some to renew their former friendship, and some to be introduced for the first time to the Ex-Secretary. His visit to the city was purely of a business nature, he had no political object in view in coming to his old home; in fact, his presence in the city during his short stay at the Troy House was known to but few of our citizens; but those few who did know of it and called upon the venerable Ex-Secretary, enjoyed a rich treat in the anecdotes that circulated among the veteran campaigners in the political wars of our country there assembled, when party spirit ran even higher than it does now, and when the Federalists, Clintonians, Bucktails, Republicans, &c., were as much enemies as the Cavaliers and Roundheads of old. Those were the times upon which the company loved to dwell, and your correspondent, although he did not know many of the parties concerned, esteemed it a rich intellectual feast.

Among our prominent citizens assembled to wait upon Mr. MARCY, were Hon. THOMAS B. CARROLL, Hon. THOMAS CLOWES, JACOB L. LANE, Esq., and many other old friends. The Ex Secretary, although he admits to 70 Winters, was in excellent health and spirits, and seemed delighted at the reunion; he had apparently thrown aside all the cares of State and gave himself up to the joviality of the hour and pleasant social intercourse.

Mr. MARCY, as you are aware, was born in Stockbridge, Mass., and having graduated at Brown University, came in the year 1808 to the city of Troy. The city was then in its infancy, and Mr. MARCY was entirely unknown to any of its few residents, but he soon acquired friends, and commenced the study of the law with JOHN RUSSELL, Esq., in a little office still standing on First-street. Soon after coming here he dipped largely into politics, and bitterly opposed the election of BUGGLES HUBBARD to the office of State Senator. HUBBARD was a particular friend of Judge RUSSELL, and, in consequence, the embryo Secretary of State had to leave the office. During the war of 1812, he joined a militia company of the city, as a lieutenant, and marched to the Canada frontier. At St. Regis they captured a banner from the enemy. Thus ended Mr. MARCY'S military experience. In 1816, he was appointed Recorder of Troy, upon the incorporation of the city, but was removed by Governor DE WITT CLINTON in 1818. He afterwards filled the offices of Adjutant-General and Comptroller of the State, and was reinstated in his office of Recorder. In 1828 he was appointed Judge of the Supreme Court, and he filled the office in the most dignified and impartial manner. When he left the Bench, all united that it had lost one of its brightest ornaments.

His subsequent career as Governor of the State, State Senator, &c., after he left the City, are too well known to bear repetition, until at last he became the prop and support of the Pierce Administration.

Troy may well be proud of having professionally educated such a man, for although not born here, he became a resident at an early age, grew with the city's growth, until finding the field too small for him, he sought the service of a State and a Nation instead of our city. It is singular that two such great men as WILLIAM L. MARCY and General WOOL should have been brought up in Troy. General WOOL, you remember, was a merchant here; being burnt out, he sought the law as a profession; but that required seven years' study previous to admission, so he accepted the Captaincy in a regiment then raised for the war of 1812, and thus rose to his present position.

Mr. MARCY dined with Hon. JACOB L. LANE to day, and has by this time left the City. The career of Mr. MARCY has been a long and honorable one; he has seen many a party rise and fall, and many an idea brought forward only to be abandoned. He has, on several occasions, come very near the Presidential chair, in 1840 and 1856; but it seems fated that few great men should rise higher than the dignity of Premier; perhaps Mr. MARCY'S well-known love of office may have contributed to this end. He is now about to retire from the public service and devote himself to literary pursuits and his private business. A long career has rendered him independent as regards the goods of this world. A few years more, and the sun of the contemporary of the Spencers and the Clintons, as well as the modern generation of statesmen, will have set.

Many persons here remember Mr. MARCY when he was plain "BILL MARCY," and had an office on Congress-street—one old codger in particular—bearing the ambitious title of John Quincy Adams, one of that class of characters to be met with around country bar rooms, is a particular friend of his. In his happy moments he relates anecdotes that the dignified author of the Greytown bombardment would hardly own, and had he known the presence of Mr. MARCY in the City would probably have been down to solicit a loan on the strength of a vote given for him before the TIMES or your correspondent were in existence.

From the Ledger.

After the Ledger went to press on Wednesday morning, a fire occurred in the Melodeon Building, occupied by a band of Ethiopian Minstrels. The fire originated on the stage, and the building was nearly gutted. The ground floor was occupied by Messrs. STEINBACH & BERDING, Jewelers, and by A. GIMSON, Optician. Nearly all the stock was taken safely out and conveyed to Jones' Hotel. None of the surrounding property was injured.

The Melodeon was built upon the walls of the old Bolivar House, for many years a favorite place of resort, by Messrs. WOOD & WARN, in the year 1854. The property was owned by Dr. JAYNE, who leased it to the gentlemen named for six years. MYERS & LANDIS' troupe of Virginia Serenaders gave a performance there on the evening before, and several of the members lost their instruments, music, and wardrobe. The origin of the fire is involved in mystery.

As the Melodeon was rather a bad speculation, and has never paid the interest of the amount expended upon it, it is not probable that it will be rebuilt. Being out of the way, the improvements, some time since projected by Dr. JAYNE, will no doubt be the earlier consummated.

We regret to state that during the progress of the fire several firemen were injured, two of them quite seriously. One of these, DAVID MATTHEWS, of the America Hose, who was on a ladder against the front of the building when the wall fell, leaped from it at the first indication of the fall. His feet catching in the rounds, he fell to the ground head-foremost, and a mass of the wall came down upon him. His companions at once relieved him from his painful position, and he was first taken to the Station-house, and afterwards to the Hospital, where every attention was paid him. No limbs were broken, but he was seriously bruised, and doubtless injured internally. Yesterday afternoon, his friends removed him to his own home. His condition is very critical.

Moral and Religious.

ANCIENT "POLITICAL SERMONS."—At the annual meeting of the Presbyterian Historical Society, in Philadelphia, Rev. Mr. WALLACE presented to the Society a sermon preached by Rev. ROBERT COOPER called "Courage in a Good Cause," one year before the Declaration of Independence, to Col. MONTGOMERY'S battalion of troops under arms, at Shippensburg, by Rev. GEORGE DUFFIELD, Jr., of his great grandfather, Rev. GEORGE DUFFIELD, D. D., preached in 1777. Dr. DUFFIELD was Chaplain to the first Congress, in conjunction with the venerable Bishop WHITE, and also the first pastor of the Pine-street Church, Philadelphia. A book was also presented by Rev. Mr. BAIRD, written by the Scottish worthies, JAMES BUCHANAN and JOHN KNOX; the contents being "Two Blasts Against the Regal Claims of Women," and contending that monarchs derive their right to rule from the people, and that the latter have authority to remove them when they do not fear God or do justice to their subjects. "Political preaching," now-a-days, is but a small affair compared with the pulpit "blasts" of former times.

CATHOLIC VIEW OF THE PROPHECIES.—HOLZHAUSER, a venerable priest, who died in 1858, left behind him a learned Latin Commentary on the Revelation of St. John, which has gradually attained much credit in the Church of Rome. It has recently been translated into French, with notes, in ten volumes, and creates quite a sensation among the French Catholics. They affirm that during the two centuries which have elapsed since the first publication of the original work, a great many events have occurred which HOLZHAUSER had foretold. Thus he predicted the present revival of the Roman Church in England, and had even accurately fixed the date when the mass would be allowed to be publicly celebrated in that country. HOLZHAUSER placed the birth of Antichrist in the year 1855. He must descend from two races, the Jewish and the Mohammedan. The Jewish origin is proved from the fact that the Jews are to acknowledge him as their Messiah; moreover, on the authority of the fathers of the Church, he is to belong to a portion of the tribe of Dan, which inhabits Persia. LUTHER is quoted as assenting to the last opinion.

DENOMINATIONS IN LONDON.—In Mr. HOW'S Hand-Book to Places of Worship in London there is a list of 871 churches and chapels in connection with the establishment. The number of church sittings, according to Mr. MANN, is 409,184. The Independents have about 140 places of worship, and 100,436 sittings; the Baptists, 130 chapels, and accommodations for 54,234; the Methodists, 154 chapels, 69,676 sittings; the Presbyterians, 23 chapels, and 13,211 sittings; the Unitarians, 9 chapels, and about 3,300 sittings; the Roman Catholics, 35 chapels, and 35,924 sittings; 4 Quaker chapels, with sittings for 3,151; the Moroviane have 2 chapels, with 1,100 sittings; the Jews have 11 synagogues, and 3,642 sittings; and there are 94 chapels belonging to the New Church, the Plymouth Brethren, the Irvingites, the Latter-Day Saints, Sardomaniana, Lutherans, French Protestants, Greeks, Germans, Italians, which chapels have sittings for 18,883.

CHURCH ORNAMENTS' DECISION.—The Bishop of Exeter has published a charge, marked with some considerable ability, in which he approves the late decision of the Judicial Committee in Church Ornaments cases, except where it touches upon doctrine which was not before them for decision. He recurs again to the Gorham decision, and justifies himself for still continuing to reject clergymen for precisely the same reasons that he rejected Mr. GORHAM. He rests his justification on the ground, that in that judgment the Judicial Committee put into Mr. GORHAM'S mouth a statement of doctrine which he had never used, while the very point on which the Bishop had condemned Mr. GORHAM they passed over unnoticed. Thus this most harassing controversy, though in one sense settled, is likely to be extended by fresh and subtle complications.

TOLERATION NOT ALL ON ONE SIDE.—Sir JOHN BOWRING found the Siamese very tolerant in religion. Their common remark was, "Your religion is excellent for you, and ours is excellent for us. All countries do not produce the same fruits and flowers, and we find various religions suited to various nations." Even the King of Siam said to some Christian missionaries: "Persecution is hateful; every man ought to be free to profess the religion he prefers. If you convert a certain number of people anywhere, let me know it, and I will give them a Christian Governor, and they shall not be annoyed by Siampse authorities. We cannot tell who is right or who is wrong, but I will pray my God to give you his blessing, and you must pray your God to bless me, and so blessings may descend upon both."

RELIGIOUS CONDITION OF TEXAS.—A writer in one of the religious journals gives a gratifying account of the present state of religion in Texas and of the attendance on public worship. One of the best aspects of the case, according to this writer, is that "all denominations labor side by side, heartily and without jolting. Even the most sectarian preachers have learned that their own laity will not go with them in partisanship, and that the most certain way for them to destroy themselves and denomination in the favor of the people is to rail at others." In this respect Texas may certainly claim to be regarded as a pattern for other and older States. The rancor of denominational partisanship in some sections of our country has the most blighting influence for evil upon the community.

MUNIFICENCENCE OF THE POPE.—Some time since a national committee was formed at Rome, for the purpose of erecting a monument to the memory of TORQUATO TASSO, in the Church of St. Onfrio. The Pope had contributed largely towards this monument, and finding that the means of the Committee were insufficient, he resolved to complete the execution of the mausoleum at his own expense. The remains of TASSO who sang "Jerusalem Delivered," lie in a narrow corner of the above named church; the Pope has decided upon enlarging the chapel, and having the interior ornamented by the painter Signor BALBI, well known by his scenes of domestic life.

APPLAUDING PREACHERS.—In the fourth century the preachers were applauded during the delivery of their discourses, after the manner of popular lectures and political assemblies in modern times. Indeed, the frequent cries of "Orthodox," and the clapping of the hands and stamping of the feet in the churches, were as common at this period as similar proceedings now are at the opera. It is related that CHRYSOSTOM, the celebrated preacher, was applauded in the great church at Constantinople by the people waving their plumes, the handkerchiefs, and their garments, and by others laying their hands on their hearts and exclaiming, "Thou art worthy of the Priesthood."

ROMAN SANCTITY INVADED.—The Tablet, one of the ablest of Catholic journals in Europe, declares that a belief in spirit-rapping is widely extended in Italy. It says: "The clergy, it is alleged, are not sufficiently awake to the gravity and importance which this subject derives from the unbridled curiosity of the present age—a curiosity which it has been the primary object of modern education to increase. The establishment of these schools of iniquity has been connived at by the Catholic Governments of Italy, and in Sardinia and Lombardy the towns and villages swarm with magnetizers.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.—The Protestant congregation of Florence has elected as their pastor Rev. Dr. SCHAPTER, of Bern, hitherto preacher of the Prussian Embassy at Naples, a distinguished pulpit orator.

Considerable rejoicing has been indulged by the Tablet, because, as it says, in the new Parliament there is once more a Papal phalanx, pledged to oppose every ministry that does not play into their hands. The number is not large, but is expected to be effective. It will ask for leave to bring in bills to withdraw all State aid to religious bodies in Ireland, disestablishing the Irish Church, and cutting off both the Regium Donum of the Protestant Dissenters, and the Maynooth grant of the Catholics.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times states that the Cardinal Archbishop of that City recently made a fruitless attempt to introduce the Jesuits into the suburbs of Alser and Roseau. The directors of the suburbs declined permission.

After ten years spent in thorough repairs, the Cathedral of Llandaff has been reopened for public worship, the Bishop of Oxford preaching the sermon. The offertory on the occasion realized £2,800.

Bishop BURGESS, of Maine, has offered to give his parish, in the City of Gardiner, $1,000, to be expended in enlarging their church—the whole expense being estimated at about $3,000.

The sermon preached by Rev. Mr. CAIRD, of Erral, before the Queen, has been translated into German, with a preface by Chevalier BUNSEN, and ten thousand copies of it sold.

Twenty-six students completed the full course of study at the late Session of the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Princeton, N. J., and received their diplomas.

The New American Mission Field in India.

A letter from Rev. Dr. DURBIN, in the Philadelphia Bulletin, describes the new Mission field of the American Board in the Rohilcund territory of Northwestern India. Dr. DURBIN says:

"The Rohilcund country comprehends, properly, five districts, namely, Rohilcund, Bijnour, Moradabad, Budaon, Bareilly and Shahjehanpore, and the little native State of Rampoor, in the centre. The whole territory indicated by these districts is scarcely two hundred miles long, from east to west, by about an average of one hundred from north to south. It is bounded on the north by the Himalaya Mountains, on the south and west by the river Ganges, and on the east by the late Kingdom of Oude, which was recently annexed to the British Empire. Within the limits indicated there are five millions of people, more densely crowded than any other portion of India. The largest city is Bareilly, containing about one hundred and twelve thousand, and is the capital and the centre of the civil and military administration of the country. The race of people in Rohilcund is considered, physically, far superior to the people of the more southern provinces. They are tall, well proportioned and athletic. The productions of the country are in great variety and abundance, comprehending everything that grows in the middle and southern portions of Europe; and, what is a great blessing in the East, wells of pure, good water, abound everywhere.

"The language spoken in Rohilcund is the Hindoostanee, although the Hindoo is spoken much by the lower classes. The language of our mission will be Hindoostanee. Our brethren will preach, or converse, at first, through an interpreter, until they can speak directly to the people; and when they shall have raised up a native church, and organized it with catechists and other officers, they will be ready to prosecute their mission in the region round about by itinerating from town to town in tents, and thus gathering and preaching to the people."

The Shooting Affray at Rondout.

DEATH OF AARON COLE—THE MURDERER IN JAIL AT POUGHKEEPSIE.

From the Hudson Star of Wednesday morning.

The man COLE, who shot CHAS. SALPAUGH and AARON COLE while fishing at High Rock on Sunday evening last is now safely lodged in the Dutchess County jail at Poughkeepsie.

A Coroner's inquest was held upon the body of CHAS. SALPAUGH on Monday and a verdict rendered attributing his death to wilful murder at the hands of BENJ. S. COLE. The facts of the affray, as given in evidence, were, as we learn, substantially as follows:

"Mr. PETER D. COLE, (son of JACOB COLE,) laid down his net upon his own ground, adjoining that of BENJ. COLE. Soon afterwards a man named KIPP, in the employ of the latter, laid a net just above, which drifted down upon that of PETER COLE. PETER COLE subsequently ordered SAMUEL SALPAUGH (brother to CHAS.) to take up the net and the latter proceeded to do so, when he was told by KIPP that if he touched his net he would shoot him. SALPAUGH kept about his work in defiance of the threats, while his brother CHARLES and AARON COLE, who were in a boat near by, rowed up to KIPP'S boat, saying that the gun should be taken away from him and threwo overboard, he having already pointed it at SAMUEL. As they approached, KIPP passed the gun to BENJAMIN COLE, and in a moment afterwards was clinched by AARON COLE and CHARLES SALPAUGH. BENJAMIN then deliberately leveled the gun and shot the two in quick succession, the charges consisting of heavy shot and slugs. He then reloaded and threatened to shoot the first one who attempted to arrest him. No one dared approach, and he escaped to the shore.

AARON COLE died in great agony on Monday afternoon. He suffered extreme anguish from the time he was shot till his expired. The result of this inquest upon his body we have not yet learned. The Poughkeepsie piece of yesterday has the following in regard to the murder:

After committing the deed, COLE proceeded to Rhinebeck, and delivered himself up to a Justice of the Peace, who, after a preliminary investigation, gave him in charge of Officer OSTROM to bring to our jail. In the meantime, Officer MALOY, of Rondout, who had a warrant from the authorities of Ulster County, went to Rhinebeck to arrest COLE, and learning what had been done, proceeded to this city, and arrived here before COLE had been put in prison, and undertook to take the prisoner from OSTROM. The latter refused to give up COLE, and both officers drew revolvers and threatened to give us another "fatal shooting affair" to chronicle, but several bystanders interfered and prevented the belligerent officials from blowing out each other's brains.

A meeting of the butchers of Philadelphia was held on Monday evening, to take some action in relation to the high price of meat.

Two communications from Baltimore were read. One announced the formation of a Butchers' Society in that city, and its successful operation. The other speaks favorably of some propositions, such as holding a Convention of Butchers, &c., and also gives the price of cattle in Baltimore, which is considerably less than in our city.

Mr. LOWRY said that many had written to New-York, Baltimore and Cincinnati, and the butchers of these cities were willing to have a Convention for the purpose of comparing views on the proper method of purchasing cattle. He said that what they wanted to do by this meeting, was to agree with these cities by adopting a uniform price for the purchase of cattle, and also abolish the scales.

Mr. L. said that the propositions he was about to make were to appoint delegates in July to a Convention to assemble in Baltimore.

Mr. LOWRY then offered the following propositions:

1. That the scales be disponsed with.

2. That a Board of Purchase be established, whose duty it shall be to purchase cattle and sheep for the use of the Society.

3. That they recommend hereafter that butchers pay cash for their stock.

4. That an Association be formed in this City.

5. That the Board of Purchase establish a correspondence in relation to stock, so that any cities be coming short of it, that they could be immediately supplied.

6. That the Convention adopt a uniform constitution for the government of the Societies, and that a National Society of Butchers be formed.

Resolved, That ten delegates be elected on the first Thursday in July, to represent Philadelphia in a Convention to be held in Baltimore on the first Thursday in September next.

Resolved, That we request the other cities to give their views on the subject.

Resolved, That we request the fraternity of Baltimore, if they accede to the propositions, they will announce their delegation, and receive the replies from other States. Also, they will publish a list of the representatives two weeks before the meeting of the Convention.

The propositions were agreed to.

Mr. JOSEPH J. KEEFE said he represented the Republic of Venezuela, where good cattle could be purchased for $4 or $5 per head. They could be brought to this country for about $10 or $15 per head, and with a steam propeller the distance is about ten days. Mr. K. said that a person had come to this country for the purpose of raising $150,000, and proposed to sell 150,000 head of cattle at $1 per head. One million of cattle, said the speaker, are slain every year for their hides, on account of their commanding such a high price. Cattle are so thick on the plains of Venezuela that there is no grass there.

Col. JOHN WHITING, of Chiriqui, said he had been in Venezuela for twenty years, and saw no difference between the meat in that country and that of this.

The Secretary thought it would be a good speculation for any body to go into. He had been told that there was plenty of cattle in Virginia fit to kill, but it was all in the hands of speculators. The same was the case in Ohio.

The meeting then adjourned to meet on Thursday, the 18th of June, for the purpose of nominating delegates to the Convention.

Destitution of the French Emigrants in Virginia.

To the Editor of the Courrier des Etats Unis:

SIR: The Richmond Daily Dispatch of the 14th instant, asserts that the Franco German Emigration Company, whose principal settlement is at Wytheville, is at present composed of five hundred colonists. This is certainly an error; for only five colonists reside there, and the settlement which your contemporary represents as in a flourishing condition is in complete disorder. Not one of the promises held out to the emigrants has been realized; and of the thirty-five who came here, those only remain who are, unfortunately, too poor to get away with their large families.

Not a particle of land has been delivered [to us]. M. LACOUTURE, who had sold the Company lands, has not yet given us possession of a single acre, notwithstanding he is said to own a million in Virginia.

The undersigned were formerly members of that settlement; but we were compelled to leave Wytheville to escape destitution; and we are now in Richmond, awaiting the result of a process which we have instituted against the Company in France, where our complaints and depositions have been forwarded by the French Consul in Richmond.

We ask you, Mr. Editor, to publish this brief statement, to do justice to the truth, and to warn others against deception. Yours, &c.,

Crop Prospects.

From the Cincinnati Price Current, June 3.

The crop prospects are generally reported favorable. There is, of course, the usual amount of croaking, and for this there is doubtless some cause, but in most cases the growing crops look fine. Owing to the favorable weather that prevails, vegetation is progressing very rapidly, thus making up for lost time. Wheat, barley and grass are now almost as forward as usual at this season, and corn is making rapid strides forward, and with a continuance of the present weather, it too will be up to time in a few weeks. Experienced fruit growers inform us that the prospect for a fruit crop was never more favorable in Ohio than at this time. These features are now affecting the produce markets. Vegetables are beginning to come in pretty briskly. This causes a falling off in the consumption in flour, meat, &c.; and as consumers get within seeing distance of the new crop, they purchase very sparingly of the staple products.

Our market for flour has become dull and heavy. The supplies are increasing, and there being no demand from the seaboard markets, prices are now governed entirely by receipts and the local demand. Now that farmers consider themselves pretty well out of the woods, as regards the growing crops, they will sell their reserved stocks of grain, and we may therefore expect, between now and harvest, more liberal supplies than have been received for a month or six weeks past.

List of Patents

Issued from the United States Patent Office, for the week ending June 9, 1857, and all bearing that date.

Reuben G. Alberton, of New-York, N. Y.—Blotter.

Geo. Benjamin, of Avoca, N. Y.—Improved devices for holding bit in the brace.

Samuel C. Bishop, of New-York, N. Y.—Improvement in machines for covering insulated wire with lead or other ductile metal.

Chas. F. Bosworth, of Petersham, Mass.—Improvement in machines for paring, coring and quartering apples.

J. S. Brown, of Washington, D. C.—Improved self-loading cart.

Wm. L. Cawthron, of Harper's Ferry, Va.—Railroad switch lock.

Blackwell's Island Penitentiary Hospital.

The report of the Resident Physician, Dr. SANGER at Blackwell's Island, for the year 1856, has just been published. From it we learn that the total number of admissions to the Penitentiary Hospitals in 1856, was 1,733; in 1855, the number was 2,158, and in 1854, 3,744. Of the number in 1856, 73 1-10 per cent. were treated for syphilitic diseases. In 1854, the ratio of this class of patients on the whole number treated was but 37 4 10. The increase is a sad comment on our improving morality.

Of those admitted to the hospital, 27 9-10 per cent. were natives, and 70 1-10 per cent. foreigners. Of the foreigners admitted 89 9-10 per cent. were from the British Islands; 7 5-10 from Germany, and 1 8-10 from other European nations. Of the foreign-born patients 23 2-10 per cent. had resided less than five years in the country; 33 3-10 per cent. had resided here from five to ten years, and the remainder had resided here for longer periods. Of all admitted 80 4-10 per cent. were under thirty years of age.

The largest percentage of admissions was of persons between the ages of 17 and 25. Of those admitted, 18 3-10 per cent. could read and write well; imperfectly educated, 47 3-10 per cent.; unadducated, 33 3-10 per cent.; and unascertained, 7-10 per cent. The single were 68 8 10 per cent.; married, 20 per cent.; widowed, 9 6-10 per cent.; and unascertained, 6-10 per cent.; showing that education and marriage are favorable to morality and health. 14 9 10 per cent. of all were temperate in their habits; 13 9-10 per cent. were moderate drinkers; 50 9-10 per cent. acknowledged intemperate, and 20 per cent. habitual drunkards. 73 in every hundred of the victims of intoxication were under 30 years of age.

WALL-STREET BROKERS COMPLAINED OF AS A NUISANCE.—A note from Mr. AUSTIN, owner of a building on Wall, near William-street, was received yesterday morning by Mr. DRAPER, President of the Metropolitan Police Commission. The writer complained that during "'Change" hour, Wall-street was so blocked up by brokers, and the entry-ways so filled that people could pass only with difficulty, and that his (AUSTIN's) tenants complained bitterly, and threatened to vacate the offices they occupied, unless the nuisance were abated. The writer prayed, therefore, that a sufficient police force should be sent to the place designated to keep the public walk clear, and prevent crowds from blocking up the entry-ways. President DRAPER referred the matter to Deputy CARPENTER, who dispatched Sergeant LEFFERTS to the place designated, with orders to act as the case required.

Sergeant LEFFERTS did as directed. On reaching Wall-street he placed upon his hat the badge inscribed "Metropolitan Police." He found that a municipal policeman from the First Ward was already present remonstrating with the Bulls and Bears in their conduct, but the municipal officer's remonstrances and threats were met only with derision and laughter. "We do not recognize your authority" said the men on 'Change. "You are not a policeman, and have no authority; you are suspended. You belong to WOOD," &c., &c. "But here is a man" they added, espying Sergeant LEFFERTS and his badge, whose orders we will obey;—he belongs to the Police—see his badge."

And they did recognize Sergeant LEFFERTS, who made known the cause of his visit; desired the men of money to move on and expelled them from the entry-ways.

People looked on and laughed, and the whole affair ended pleasantly. No one was taken to the Station-house.

MEETING OF THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The Board met at 10 A. M., in the Common Pleas Court room. Present, Commissioners HASKETT and HOLMES. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

JOHN B. LAFORGE, Esq., presented the application of JOHN H. BABCOCK, for an innkeeper's license for No. 586 Broadway, with the petition required by the law.

The same gentleman presented the application of LORENZO DELMONICO, of No. 2 South William-street, and of SIRO DELMONICO, of No. 277 Broadway, for innkeeper's licenses.

The Board then adjourned to meet this morning, at 10 o'clock, in the Common Pleas Court room.

COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.—The Board of Commissioners of Emigration met in Anthony-street on Wednesday afternoon—the President, G. C. VERPLANCK, Esq., in the Chair. The following is the usual weekly report:

REMOVAL OF STEAMBOAT LANDINGS.—The Special Committee of the Board of Aldermen on the Removal of Steamboat Landings, had another sitting on Wednesday. Alderman STEERE in the Chair.

Mr. ISAAC NEWTON, proprietor of several steamboats, and who opposes the removal, deposed that the People's Line is incorporated in New-Jersey, but pays taxes here. A special act of the Legislature was passed, appropriating the slip they use. There is no City ordinance respecting it. That would not stand in the way of their removal.

Mr. JOHN LUDLOW, proprietor of the Houston-street line of stages, thought that if the general good required the steamboats to be removed, the proprietor of those vessels ought to be compensated.

Mr. KELLY said that the numbers were 150 against 658 as to passengers temporarily residing in hotels up town, as compared with those staying down town.

Mr. BOARDEN, owner and agent of the Fall River line, urged that the extra expense of cartage which the removal would produce would make a difference of an extra cent or two upon every hundred weight, and that would divert a vast amount of business from the companies transmitting goods, and so New-York would suffer.

The Chairman said private interests were not the question. Would it be a public benefit to remove these landings?

Mr. BORDEN said that every man advocating the removal had a personal interest in the change. They are all located in that part of the City expected to be benefited, and to those the crowding of Broadway is undesirable. If there be danger in the East River, (as conceded,) is prohibition the only and the proper remedy?

The Chairman remarked on the recklessness of steamboat pilots. He had been run down twice, and abused into the bargain.

Nothing new was advanced in what was subsequently stated by other individuals. A remonstrance was presented against the removal, to which were appended 2,700 signatures.

IRON PAVEMENTS.—The Councilmen's Committee on Streets met on Wednesday, to take into consideration the petition of C. J. SHERMAN and others, that the contractors may be allowed to use their iron pavement in Maiden-lane and Cortlandt street. The contract is for a pavement similar to that opposite the Post-Office, the patentees of which charge $1 a yard as a fee, which would very largely enhance the price of the pavement. The proposition is to use Shepherd's or some other kind of iron pavement in fulfilling the contract.

The question was argued before the Committee by Mr. SHEPHERD, by counsel for the Iron Pavement Company, and also for the contractors by Mr. STILLWELL. Of course the legal argument was sufficiently dry and prolix.

MASONIC.—St. John's Grand Lodge F. & A. M. of the State of New-York, concluded its labors on Monday evening, with the exception of the installation of officers, which will take place on Saturday evening next. From the Report of the Grand Secretary, we learn that St. John's Grand Lodge was re-organized in June, 1850, by a Convention, composed of representatives from ten subordinate lodges, working under the Grand Lodge of the State of New-York viz.: Independent Royal Arch Lodge, No. 2; York No. 197; Benevolent, No. 192; Hyatt, No. 209; Worth, No. 210; Keystone, No. 255; Delta, No. 242; Independent, No. 185; Eastern Star No. 247; Lebanon, No. 191, and several others, whose returns were not made in form. Two of these lodges only, however, adhered to the organization they had formed, viz., Keystone and Benevolent, numbering in the aggregate 60 members. From this small nucleus, the Order have increased in the space of four years to 1857. On the 1st of June, 1857, there were 640 members. Since that time three lodges have withdrawn from the jurisdiction, and one has been expelled, numbering collectively 153 members. Yet, notwithstanding these reverses, there has been a net increase during the present year of 180—a larger increase than during any previous year since its organization.

A Committee was raised, for the appointment of a Committee to confer with the other Masonic bodies of this State on the subject of union, was presented and referred to a Committee of three, who reported that: "In consideration of the treatment which the Committee appointed by this Grand Lodge in December last, received from the Committees of the other Masonic bodies in this State, we are of the opinion that this Grand Lodge would place itself in a humiliating position by taking any further steps in this matter until an invitation is extended to us by those Grand bodies.

The report was unanimously adopted.

Grand Master—M. W. GEORGE ELY.
Deputy Grand Master—R. W. Charles W. Atwood.
Senior Grand Warden—R. W. John H. Hyde.
Junior Grand Warden—R. W. Wm. F. McKay.
Grand Secretary—R. W. Salmon Winchester.
Grand Treasurer—R. W. Delos B. Smith.
Grand Chaplains—R. W. Rev. James G. Kent and R. W. Rev. Stephen Remington.
Grand Lecturer—R. W. Hopkins Thompson.

☞ The Central Park Commissioners have elected Mr. D. E. HART as permanent Clerk to their Board. Should the Common Council determine to issue bonds to the amount of $275,000 for purchasing the State Arsenal property within the limits of the Central Park, the Commissioners will proceed to consider the utility of setting apart six or eight acres for a parade ground, and reserving the Arsenal building for the accommodation of the military when they have occasion to turn out there. The Commissioners have not yet decided what plan to adopt for the laying out and grading of the grounds.

EXCURSIONS TO BOSTON.—A battalion of two companies from the 5th Regiment, (Washington Greys,) and the whole of the 7th Regiment, will visit Boston next week, to unite in the celebration of the Battle of Bunker Hill. The detachment of the 5th will be under the command of Major BUCK, and Captains WENTWORTH and WATERMAN, and will leave New-York on Tuesday 16th inst., by the Fall River route, accompanied by DONWORTH'S celebrated Cornet Band of 30 men. They will quarter during their stay in Boston at the American Hotel, and will leave on their return home on Thursday, 18th inst. The 7th Regiment goes by the Stonington route.

BOSTONIAN VISITORS.—A delegation of nine members of the Boston Common Council are in the City, and intend to visit the Islands to-day, under the auspices of the Board of Governors, leaving Bellevue at 10½ o'clock. Some time since, the Mayor and Common Council of Boston examined the arrangements at the Islands, and were so well pleased that this delegation has been sent to examine the system more minutely, and adopt it in the Boston charitable institutions.

☞ The steamship Atlantic, Capt. OLIVER ELDRIDGE, will sail with the United States mails for Liverpool on the 20th inst. from her dock at the foot of Canal-street.

☞ At a meeting of the Board of Trustees of Columbia College, Tuesday, Prof. SAMUEL ELIOT, of Trinity College, Hartford, was chosen Professor of Ancient and Modern Literature. The chair of Philosophy remains to be filled.

ATTEMPT AT MURDER.—JAMES O'NEIL, a resident of Fourteenth-street, was found last night about 11 o'clock lying on the sidewalk of Seventeenth-street, corner of First-avenue, with his throat cut. The wound was small, but the jugular vein was partly severed. O'NEIL was taken to the Eighteenth Ward Station-house, where a physician dressed the wound. His recovery was thought to be possible. O'NEIL told the police that in turning the above corner he was seized by two men, one of whom inflicted the wound, and both fled. He had no idea who they were.

Coroner's Inquests.

SUDDEN DEATH—SUPPOSED SUICIDE.—A German named SCHUBARTH, a teacher or professor of music, was found dead in his bed yesterday morning, at the lodging-house No. 42. He retired the previous evening in apparent good health, and as he was known to be very destitute and low-spirited, it is supposed he committed suicide by taking poison. Coroner PERRY was notified of the occurrence, and will to-day hold an inquest upon the body. Upon the person of the deceased was found the following paper:

The subscriber is one of the unfortunate passengers from the Atlantic—thrown ashore in a foreign country, deprived of the last vestige of means for clothing and sustenance, entirely unacquainted and unaccustomed to manual labor, to which I have cheerfully resorted without being able to earn enough to sustain life; my poverty is honest, my will is to help myself, but I cannot; my request to you is my last resort, surely as I regret the dire necessity.

I have for a long time been sick and unfit for exertion of any kind.

Now, I hope, with some assistance from the benevolent and magnanimous citizens of New-York, to be enabled to open a class for teaching of the ancient and modern languages and of music, trusting that their sympathies will lead them to grant me that aid which will relieve my present want.

Most respectfully,
S. SCHUBARTH, Phil. Professor.

DEATH BY A FALL.—A laborer, named PATRICK CUREY, aged 45 years, was killed on Tuesday afternoon by falling from the fifth story to the cellar of the new building Nos. 89 and 91 Reade street. He had just ascended with a hod of mortar, and was about turning round to descend again, when he made a misstep and fell through the light-hole, and was instantly killed. The body was conveyed to his late residence, at No. 10 York-street, where an inquest was held upon it by Coroner CONNERY. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts.

DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man was found yesterday morning in the North River, at the foot of North Moore-street. An inquest was held upon the body by Coroner CONNERY. The verdict rendered was "Death by being drowned, but under what circumstances the Jury cannot say." The deceased was very stoutly built, had full black whiskers—had on a brown coat, black cassimere vest, brown pantaloons, and shoes.

CHILD KILLED BY A FALL.—Coroner PERRY held an inquest yesterday at No. 36 Cherry-street, upon the body of BRIDGET HOLLEY, a child four years of age, who came to its death from concussion of the brain, the result of an accidental fall down a flight of stairs.

RESPECT FOR THE DEAD.

This is the season of the year when affection prompts the decoration of graves with flowers, and other fitting marks of respect for those who sleep in their last earthly homes. Every cemetery burial lot, obelisk, or monument, should be surrounded by an appropriate iron railing. Numbers of people are now busy in beautifying and protecting the graves of their dead friends and relatives, and we think the suggestion that they visit Mr. WICKERSHAM, at the show-rooms of the New-York Wire Railing Company, No. 312 Broadway, both timely and appropriate. The Composite Iron Railing, of which we recently gave a description, is exactly fitted to cemetery purposes. It is the most durable, the handsomest, and the cheapest Railing ever manufactured, combining utility with ornament to perfection. This is not more asserted, but fact, which the Railing itself sustains to universal satisfaction. It can be bought for from 62 cents a foot to almost any price you choose. The cheapest style is beautiful, and is calculated to do as much service as any other Railing (not made by the Company) costing three times the amount. Remember that the Composite Iron Railing, no matter at what price, will remain up for ages without losing its elegance and strength.

LONG ISLAND.

Mr. De Burg's Establishment and the Board of Health.

Mr. GEORGE A. FORBES, who has the "Reynold's contract" for removing offal and dead animals for the next four years, complains that we did great injustice to several parties in our report of the Board of Health's visit to DE BURG'S super-phosphate of lime establishment in Williamsburg. Our report stated that the Committee found "several hundred barrels of the flesh of dead animals in various stages of decomposition. It had been stripped," said our reporter, "from dead animals at Barren Island, and brought by the cargo in barrels to this establishment where it has been worked up."

Mr. FORBES positively asserts that there is and has been no flesh of dead animals for a month in Mr. DE BURG'S establishment. The barrels that the gentlemen of the Committee saw contained nothing else but the Empire Animal Fertilizer, an article manufactured at Barren Island, and the whole of it delivered to Mr. DE BURG. The Fertilizer is the product of dead flesh and offal, and certainly does enjoy, if the specimen left at our office is a fair sample, a very peculiar and pungent odor, which would naturally be much more grateful to the noetrils of the farmer whose olfactories can convert such stenches into the pleasant smell of grains and mellow fruit, than to a Board of Health which regards all offensive odors as indexes of the material out of which malaria and public poisons are bred.

Beside what was in the barrels, Mr. FORBES says that there is nothing like animal matter on the premises, except some heaps of turnips' refuse, matter from the sugar refineries, and that sort of thing.

We are at a loss to account for the discrepancy of statement between the Board of Health and our informant, who knows. Meanwhile, the Board have ordered Mr. DE BURG to remove from his establishment anything that can offend sensitive noses, and the eight days they give him to do it in will be up next Monday. The Patent Fertilizer, they say, can, without detriment to its virtues, be completely deodorized, but with its odor all about it, it speaks for itself as a manure, while deprived of its odor, it requires strong faith in the purchaser to believe it will ever make two spires of grass grow where one was before, and hence the objection to leaving the foot of Division-avenue as sweet an atmosphere as nature and the Boy had intended to bless it with.

Meanwhile have the Board of Health overhauled the adjoining slip, where Mr. CORNELL, offal contractor for Brooklyn, ships his Eastern District offal and dead horses?

BROOKLYN AND JAMAICA RAILROAD.—In consequence of the opposition on the part of some of the owners of property in Atlantic-street, who want to use for city railroad cars the tracks the Long Island Railroad Company have laid down for locomotives, the Directors of the Brooklyn and Jamaica Company have issued a circular to each of their stockholders, the gist of which is as follows:

"You are aware that the railroad is located between Jamaica and the South Ferry, Brooklyn; and is leased to the Long Island Railroad Company, at an annual rent, (the maximum being $35,300,) payable monthly, and ascertained upon the bases of 10 per cent., upon the gross receipts of both roads; for the last and present year, it has amounted to about $32,000.

That, for a long period, the motive power over the whole line to the end thereof, at the South Ferry, has been steam—passing, since the year 18—, through a tunnel built under a part of Atlantic-street.

That Atlantic street was opened, laid out, cut, graded and paved by your Company, under an agreement with the Corporation of Brooklyn, with the assent of the parties in interest, at a cost to the Company of $38 626.

That a most active and unscrupulous opposition to the use of steam and to the tunnel in Atlantic-street, has existed for some months; and that an attempt is now being made, backed by inflammatory appeals to unworthy feelings and prejudices, to induce the Corporation of Brooklyn to violate the rights secured to your Company by the solemn contracts made with them.

Your railroad, and its predecessor, the Brooklyn and Jamaica Turnpike, has undoubtedly promoted the interests of the people of Brooklyn, of New-York, and of Long Island, while it has been an unprofitable investment to its owners. When it was first located, open fields existed where Atlantic-street is now known. The persons who built and invested there, did so with the full knowledge of the circumstances, of which they now complain as an intolerable nuisance, to be removed by violence if it cannot be done by lawful means.

Although your Board of Directors have entire confidence that your rights are founded in Law and Justice, and that they will be sustained by the Courts of the State and the Executive authorities, they have offered to settle these difficulties by selling out the stock, with your sanction; and to that end, have given notice that they will receive an offer, from responsible parties, to purchase the whole capital stock at $64 37-100ths per share.

AN IMMATERIAL PARENT.—A person named TOLLEN, while walking up Atlantic-street, Brooklyn, Tuesday evening, dropped a baby 3 months old, which he carried in his arms, into the gutter, and proceeded on his way, with his other small children he had with him. Officer DONOHERTY, of the First District Police, soon after discovered the child, and conveyed it to his residence. The same night, TOLLEN was arrested for intoxication by the Third District Police, and yesterday he was brought before Justice BLATCHLY. That officer having some compassion for the children, permitted the father, their only natural protector, to go at large upon paying a small fine.

WEDNESDAY, June 10—P. M.

The Ericsson, from Liverpool, with four days' later European news, reached this port this afternoon. Her advices are not very important. The London Money Market had not varied essentially. The demand for accommodation was rather urgent, and loan and discount rates were fully supported. An arrival of $900,000 in gold, from Australia, was to have been delivered on the 26th ult., and a considerable sum of Russian gold was likewise looked for. These supplied, it was anticipated, would add to the reserve in the Bank of England.

Consols were rather heavy, though they closed with an appearance of returning firmness and buoyancy, at 93⅝@93¾ for money, and 93¾@93⅞ on account. In American Securities the operations were very moderate, including some Illinois Sixes of 1875 at 87⅜; New-York and Erie Sinking Fund Mortgage Bonds, of 1875, at 81, and Pennsylvania Central Railroad First Mortgage 6 ₱ cent., Convertible Bonds, at 90. The general accounts from Paris are rather less satisfactory. The Bank of France maintained its stock of bullion, by purchasing not only at the head establishment, but also at some of the principal branches, while the discount market displayed a little more ease; but this feature was considered merely temporary, as the increased circulation required at this season in connection with the silk crop, and a renewed demand for silver for China would most likely debar any immediate relief of a permanent character. Still, the French Funds had reached 69.50 on the Paris Bourse,—a slight improvement on the previous currency.

A rumor obtained that the Bank of France was about to issue 50f. notes. THURNEYSSEN'S defalcation was apt to prove even more serious than at first suspected,—his known liabilities having, at the latest dates, been estimated at not less than $3,000,000. One communication from a leading capitalist asserts that the Crédit Mobilier is understood to have found itself compromised to the extent of £75,000. Apart from personal losses sustained by several of its administrators, the principal foreign losses are at Amsterdam and Antwerp.

From Liverpool, we have reports of increased activity in Breadstuffs at advanced prices. Western Canal Flour had risen to 31s.@32s.; White Wheat, 10s.@10s. 4d.@ 70 lbs.; and Mixed Corn, 38s. 6d.@39s., @ 480 lbs. The demand was brisk both from consumers and speculators. The improvement in prices of Flour equaled 1s. ₱ bbl.; Wheat, 2d@3d. ₱ 70 lbs.; and Corn, 1s.@1s. 6d. ₱ quarter, but the market closed rather tame, with a tendency favorable to buyers.

Cotton was very sparingly sought after, and prices exhibited no change for the better. Provisions were quite dull, and quotations barely supported. The failure in the Liverpool Provision and Grain trade, reported by the last mail, was, as we have heretofore announced, that of JOHN DOHERTY, whose liabilities reach $500,000, with a small show of assets. The trade reports from the manufacturing districts are, if anything, more gloomy. Manchester advices mention increased dullness in business, with less disposition among manufacturers to keep up the production while the raw material ranges so high relatively. The Leicester Hosiery trade was tame, while in the Woolen manufacturing districts a little more animation was apparent, with somewhat greater firmness in prices. The Irish Linen trade was quiet. ROBERT ORRELL, manufacturer and spinner, of Cnerden Mill, near Preston, Eng., had suspended, with liabilities of $200,000. The cotton spinners and manufacturers of Preston and neighborhood have agreed to restrict the working of their respective establishments to forty hours per week, for four weeks from June 1, provided two-thirds of the "power" concur in the resolution. From Birmingham the advices describe steadiness in the Iron market, and no alteration in the general business. The following is the latest Liverpool market report:

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, May 27—Noon.

Transactions in Breadstuffs, to-day, have been to a moderate extent, at yesterday's advance, which is freely acceded to by purchasers.

The Provision dealers report the market quiet, but steady.

The steamer Arabia, for Liverpool, this morning, carried out in Gold and Silver, $2,265,221. The magnitude of the shipment has had no influence on the Street supply of Money, and the Banks continue to lend with freedom. At the same time the offerings at Bank for discount at 7 ₱ cent. are, in some quarters, on the increase, partly, no doubt, in anticipation of the mercantile wants in July, and outside lenders are disposed to make the rates dearer on paper. There is no decided or general increase, as yet, of first class bills offering through the Discount Brokers. There is a marked disposition to enter upon new obligations with caution. The Stock Brokers are not using a large amount of Money at call. The general account at the Board is, as it has been for many months, a Bearish one, and the comparatively few Bull speculators find no difficulty in lending their surplus stocks, in many cases free of interest, and in few or none over 6 or 7 ₱ cent. Thus 4,000 or 5,000 shares of Reading were turned to-day 78¾ cash and 77 seller's option 60 days, the contracts carrying but 6 ₱ cent. And one or two thousand shares were lent between Brokers free of interest. Even Michigan Southern, which has been borne down to 46 ₱ cent. is not abundant on the Street, and ¼@½ ₱ cent. difference is made on seller's options a week or 10 days. Illinois Central 137⅜ cash; 134½ seller 60 days. New-York Central 82⅝@½ cash, and 81 at long option. As further specimens of the Bearish forcing of the Street, we may mention that $1,500 has been paid for the privilege of delivering 1,500 shares Illinois Central in all this year at par, and the August dividends on New-York Central and Reading, both of which will as certainly be 4 ₱ cent. as any event not absolutely known or declared can be, have been sold at 3 ₱ cent.

There was some improvement at the Stock Exchange in the dealings to day, and prices were stiffer on nearly all the railroads—Galena and Chicago and Southern Michigan being exceptions. New-York and Erie 82¼@⅝ at the close of the Second Board; Rock Island, 92½; Illinois Central, 137⅜; Reading, 78⅝; New-York Central 82⅝; Michigan Central, 91¼; Michigan Southern sales at 46¼ cash, 46 seller a week, and a lower figure, 44⅜@⅞, made after the list was printed; Galena and Chicago, 88 ₱ cent. The general market closed unsettled, the appearance of recovery in most of the Stocks being strongly contested by the specul

THE WAR OF THE RIVER COUNTIES.

Details of the Late Fatal Fight at Rondout.

The recent disgraceful affair at Rondout, in which one fisherman was killed, another mortally wounded and a third injured, has created an intense excitement in all that vicinity. The usually quiet villagers adjoining Rondout, on the Ulster county side of the river and no less on the Dochess county side opposite, have all been deeply stirred by the event. For they fear this murder is but the tragic beginning of an open warfare between the rival interests of the opposite sides of the river—the causes of which have been accumulating for years. One of our reporters visited Rondont yesterday and gathered the following full and interesting particulars tenching the nature of the difficultics between the fishermen referred to, as well as some further details of the murder and the inquest

From the time of the first settlement of Dutches and Ulster Counties, the water of the Hudson dividing the counties has richly abounded in fish, and the inhabitants have not been neglectful of the opportunities afforded them to supply their tables with its delicacies, and to fill their pockets from the proceeds of the sale of what remained over their own use. The fishing grounds, as they are called, extend about five miles above Rondont. There are a few favorite fishing places, such as at Steep Rock, East Camp, &c., but the fishing is good the entire distance, though generally much better on the Ulster County side. Parties living on either side of the river used to enjoy unlimited freedom in fishing where they pleased. Bnt as the business increased in importance, and the profits began to count up by thousands of dollars, and whole families turned their attention to the business, jealousies and disputes arose between them as to their respective rights. Of more than two hundred families, all the males, from the grandfather to the boy just big enough to hold a line or carry bait, and many of the females, do nothing else but fish in the fishing season—that is, from the middle of April till the first of July. Some men of capital hire fishermen, and pay them from $25 to $75 a month, according to their experience and efficiency. The river is alive with fishermen dnring the day and night. On the shores are small shanties, used for sleeping in and cooking, and arranging seines and nets. Some of the seines cost $400 each, and there is great lamentation when one gete torn to pieces by a steamboat, as not unfrequently occurs. They have to pocket the loss as philosophically as they can, however, for it is at their own risks they cest their seines. The kind of fish principally canght are shad and herring. Juet previous to the recent difficulty, the value of the fish daily taken was estimated at $500. Their market is New-York and all the intermediate towns between Hudson and this City.

Jealousies we have said have long existed between the fishemen living on the opposite shores. Every season of late has been notsbie for more or less wrangling and fighting. Occasionally the Ulster people on the west have knocked the Dutchess men, and as often the Dutchesses on the east have blacked the Ulster eye. But the naked fist, the club or the lead sinker have been the only weapons used. This season the battle has assumed a fiercer aspect, and there have been apprehensions for some time that blood would be shed and lives lost.

The facts of the present effray as near as can be learned from consulting the opposing parties are substantially as followe:

On Sunday afternoon last, about 6 o'clock, CHARLES SALPAUGH and a man named AARON COLE went to the fishing grounds at Steep Rocks and rowed out to near the middle of the river, where several other boats were engaged in fishing. A man named EDWARD KIPP, with whom SALPAUGH had some difficulty as to the disposition of their nets, raised a gun and pointed it at SALPAUGH. SALPAUGH and COLE rowed up to KIPP's boat and attempted to take the gun from him. KIPP threw the gun into an adjoining boat, and a moment afterwards BENJAMIN COLE, who was in the employ of KIPP, deliberately leveled a double-barreled gnn and shot SALPAUGH and COLE, the one directly after the other. SALPAUGH received thirty-eight buckshot in his head, neck and shoulders, and COLE probably as many more. SAMUEL SALPAUGH, a brother of CHARLES, who was in another boat near by, received two or three shot in his right arm, badly wounding it. The shooting of course created a great excitement. BENJAMIN COLE and KIPP at once pushed for shore in their boat and escaped. CHARLES SALPAUGH and AARON COLE were taken to Steep Rock and messengers sent at once to Rondout for physicians. Drs CRISPELL, HOLT and PERKINS were quickly in attendance, and did all they could for the suffering men. CHARLES SALPAUGH lived only about an hour. COLE was alive yesterday morning, bnt his death was hourly expected. SAMUEL SALPAUGH, who was wounded in the arm, was doing well. The brothers SALPAUGH and AARON COLE belong on the Dutchess County side of the river, and BENJAMIN COLE and KIPP in Ulster County.

THE INQUEST.

Coroner HASBROUCK, of Rondout, being informed of the murder, proceeded on Monday forenoon to Steep Rocks, where the body still remained, and at once held an inquest npon it. The following were impanneled as the Jurors: Wm. Lawson, Thomas L. Johnston, James M. Schipmoes, George N. Nickerson, John A. Post, Abram Ellsworth, and A. T. Vonderwark.

PETER COLE was the first witness called. He testified as follows:

'I know CHARLES E. SALPAUGH; he was in a boat Sunday efternoon fishing at the Steep Rocke fishing grounds; there were a number of boats with parties in them engaged in fishing at the same time; I was fishing, also; the bont in which I was was about twenty-five yards from the boat occupied by SALPAUGH, the deceased, and a man named AARON COLE; their boat was in nearly the middle of the river; BENJAMIN COLE was in a boat some fifteen yards from the boat occupied by SALPAUGH; in another boat, close by COLE's, were two men named CHARLES SALPAUGH, a brother of the deceased, and EDWARD KIPP; JOSIAH HOW was in the boat with me; I saw no difficulty between the deceased and BENJAMIN COLE; I knew that they had altercations at previous times; I saw EDWARD KIPP take up a gun and point it at CHARLES SALPAUGH, when SALPAUGH tried to get it out of his hands, but did not succeed; KIPP threw the gun into another boat near his, I think BENJAMIN COLE's boat; immediately after KIPP had thrown his gun away, BENJAMIN COLE raised a gun—a double-barreled musket—from his boat, and deliberately fired one of the loads at CHARLES SALPAUGH, the deceased, and the other load in quick succession at AARON COLE; CHARLES SALPAUGH was standing up, bnt, after being shot, immediately fell down into the boat, his head leaning over the side of the boat; AARON COLE was sitting down, and tumbled from his seat.

GEORGE N. MILLER, next sworn, gave the following testimony: I was on the fishing-grounds last Sunday about half past six o'clock in the afternoon; CHARLES SALPAUGH, the deceased, and AARON COLE came ont in a boat, to fish, and rowed their boat up to near mine; ISAAC KIPP point a gun at the deceased, but he did not fire, but threw the gun into another boat; very soon after BENJAMIN COLE fired two loads from a doubled-barrelled gun—the first at deceased, the other at AARON COLE; both of which took effect; I immediately helped to pull the two wounded men into my boat; there was great excitement among those present; I nm positive that BENJAMIN COLE fired the gun.

Dr. ABRAHAM CRISPELL testified that he was a physician and surgeon, residing at Roudout; he made a post mortem examination of the body of the deceased; he found 38 buck shot in the back of his head, neck, and between his shoulders; a No. 3 shot was lying against his skull to the left, about one inch from the mastoid process; the shot was flattened; one shot ent into the vertebral artery and fracturing the skull, passed into the brain; several of the shots passed through the back into the lungs; the wounds, severally or separately, were sufficient to cause death.

Drs. JOHN V. HOLT and G. K. PERKINS, of Roudont, confirmed the ovidence of Dr. CRISPELL.

The Coroner deemed it unnecessary to call further witnesses and submitted the evidence taken to the Jury, who at once rendered a verdict of "Felonious killing and murder," with "a certain double-barreled gun in the hands of BENJAMIN COLE."

PURSUIT OF THE MURDERER.

Upon the reodition of the verdict Coroner HASBROUCK made out a warrant for the arrest of BENJAMIN COLE, and placed it in the hands of Constable MALOY, of Rondcut. MALOY weot to East Camp, COLE's place of residence, but he had left before he arrived there. He found however the double-barreled gun with which he shot SALPAUGH and COLE. Both the barrels were partially reloaded. Suspecting he had gone to Rhinebeck, he was pursued there, and the Constable of Rhinebeck applied to, but nothing was learned from him. Calling on the Deputy-Sheriff he learned that the fugitive was safely concealed. Afterwards the pursuer found that all this while COLE was concealed in the constable's house, where his counsel saw and advised him to deliver himself up to the Rhinebeck Sheriff. Mr. MALOY next went to Poughkeepsie, and there found COLE and a party of nearly 200 friends, drinking at a public house. Upon his stating that he desired COLE to be given into his custody in compliance with the requisition of the Coroner of Ulster County, the Deputy Sheriff replied that he would not give him up. When MALOY insisted, the Depnty Sheriff and two constables of Rhinebeck drew their revolvers on him, (MALOY,) and threatened to blow his brains out. MALOY drew his revolver in turn, upon which the others pnt theirs aside. The crowd took both COLE and MALOY, and carried them together to the jail. In about ten minutes, MALOY was released and permitted to go his way—leaving COLE in the jail, where he is still confined.

FUNERAL OF SALPAUGH.

The funeral of SALPAUGH, the murdered man took place at Oak Hill, on Tuesdey, and was numerously attended. He was only 27 years old, and had been married about three months. He has followed fishing ever since he was a boy, and was one of the most expert and efficient fishermen on the river. AARON COLE, the other wounded man, is not expected to live. Though of the same name with the alleged murderer, he bears no relationship to him. His place of residence is Oak Hills. He is about 40 years old, and has a wife and several children. Since the occurrence of the above melancholy affair fishing has been nearly abandoned at the fishing-grounds, and nothing is talked of in all that region hnt this.

WELCOME TO GENERAL WALKER.

Arrangements for his Reception in New-York.

Speeches of Messrs. Fabens, Purdy, Plumb, Creighton and Others.

There was a meeting of the friends and admirers of General WALKER, in National Hall, Canal-street, last evening, in response to the following

CALL:

The people of New-York, desirous of giving a public reception to General WILLIAM WALKER, the champion of republican liberty in Nicaragua, will meet at National Hall, Canal-street, on Thursday evening, June 11, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of making necessary arrangements for the occasion.

Gilbert Dean,	James D. Wescott,
James S. Sluyter,	Ward B. Burnett,
William L. Cazneau,	George F. Toomson,
Albert A. Thompson,	Thos. F. Meagher,
George F. Osborne,	Thos. J. Green,
Horatio N. Wild,	Alex. C. Morton.
William Wilson,	Charles H. Ring,
George Pollen,	Alex. C. Lawrence,
Harvey Waterson,	Albert Cordozo,
Louie F. Tasistro,	Thomas N. Carr,
Malcolm Campbell,	Edward Cooper,
Edmund Blankman,	John B. Fogarty,
Charles Stearns,	Daniel H. Johnson,
Mike Walsh,	Geo. W. Cochrane,
Benj. F. Blankman,	Samuel Brevoort,
George W. Wyer,	Samuel F. Horton,
T. F. Englebrecht,	John G. Miller,
Frank B. Dowde,	W. F. Butterworth,

And several hundred others.

In consequence of the storm, a number of those present did not arrive until after the hour named for the commencement of proceedings, the result of which was, that the organization was not completed until after 8 o'clock. Besides the decorations which have been in the room since the last Presidential campaign, there was a transparency on the left of the speaker's stand, on which there was written on one side:

"Nicaragua shall soon be free."

And on the other:

"We honor the brave."

The meeting was called to order by Hon. H. N. WILD, who was nominated for Chairman, but declined.

The meeting was then organized as follows:

President—ELIJAH F. PURDY.

Vice-Presidents—Dr. George F. Osborne, Hon. A. A. Thompson, Gen. Ward B. Burnett, Horatio N. Wild, Saml. Brevoort, Charles H. Ring.

Secretaries—Malcolm Campbell, Edward Cooper.

Mr. PURDY, on taking the Chair, said he had not supposed he would be called upon to preside over the meeting, but his sympathies were with Gen. WALKER and his cause, and he was therefore willing to do anything he could towards arranging for his reception here.

The first speaker introduced was Mr. BLANKMAN, who said he had not expected to speak, but nevertheless, whon the cause of liberty and humanity was the subject, he thought there was no apology necessary for his appearance.

He sympathized deeply with the cause of which Gen. WALKER is the acknowledged champion, and was with the meeting in any action they might take for his proper reception. He was followed by Mr. JOHN CREIGHTON, who first of all wished to put himself right on the record, as some misapprehension has been caused by some remarks at a previous meeting. He considered Gen. WALKER one of the greatest captains and statesmen of the age, and was willing to do all in his power towards arranging for his proper reception when it should please him to visit New-York. He believed when Gen. WALKER should arrive, there would be such a gathering in the Park as had not been seen before for fifty years.

ANDREW JACKSON PLUMB was next called upon. He had known Gen. WILLIAM WALKER in California, when he had a law office in Marysville, and he had watched his progress from that time to the present. The result of his watching was a conclusion that all the elements of a statesman and a general had been shown in Gen. WALKER. It was true that he had been denounced by the Black Republican newspapers, but then, it must be remembered, that the very same press extolled that demagogue KOESUTH. WILLIAM WALKER wished to do just what KOSSUTH wished to do, and, therefore, he hoped the citizens of New-York would welcome him as the mother did her prodigal son.

Mr. ISAAC BOYCE, of California, was the next speaker. He, too, had known Gen. WALKER, and he was glad to witness so much enthusiasm on such an occasion. It was gratifying to see so many present. The reports of the meeting would gratify the lovers of liberty throughout the Union—in New-Orleans and elsewhere. He had the cause of Gen. WALKER at heart, for he believed that country worthy of regeneration; and he believed that the young men of America, led on by Gen. WALKER, were destined to regenerate it. He called upon them again and again to give Gen. WALKER a hearty reception.

Mr. MALCOLM CAMPBELL followed. He was about to read the resolution, but before doing so he wished to say that all knew that General WALKER had been invited to Nicaragua; and that he had done all he could for the cause of the Liberal Party there. Mr. CAMPBELL recapitulated the recent history of General WALKER's doings in Nicaragua, and spoke with much feeling with reference to the charges of cruelty preferred against WILLIAM WALKER. He referred to the charge that he had killed a man who had been fighting for his cause, on the dey when he accepted the terms forced upon him by the commander of an American frigate, simply because the man went beyond the linee to get a drink of brandy and water.

It was said that, when the platoon was ordered to fire, the men refused, on the ground that the offence was not deserving of death. He had the best of authority for denying the story as reported in the papers. Like the others that had appeared against him, it had been prepared either at Panama, or Aspinwall, or Greytown, to be used against him. He then read the following

RESOLUTIONS:

Whereas, The time has arrived when it becomes necessary for the American people to give public expression to their views now before the world, and especially upon the momentous questions of the supremacy of Republican institutions upon this side of the Atlantic; therefore

Resolved, That we, the people of New-York, sympathize deeply with our fellow-countrymen who have gallantly struggled for the past two years against obstacles hitherto insurmountable, to aid our Democratic brethren in Nicaragua in the establishment and maintainance of the institutions of a pure republicanism.

Resolved, That inasmuch as they stood firm in position and integrity of purpose against the united attacks of Guatemala, San Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica, aided by an infamous association of American capital, and cheered on by the material and moral countenance of Great Britain, the self-styled protector of Central America, and only yielded at length when the flag of their native land appeared to be arrayed against them, they have displayed a heroism that merits the highest encomiums.

Resolved, That the principle of the Monroe doctrine is vital to us as a nation, and that we should view with a jealous eye the slightest attempt, from whatever source, as an infringement of the rights therein declared.

Resolved, That we recognize in WILLIAM WALKER, and the movement he so worthily represents the only element that can give peace and prosperity to a distracted and impoverished neighborhood, and that our own welfare and security, not less than the dictates of a common humanity, should lead us to extend to him our sympathy and aid.

Resolved, That the course of WILLIAM WALKER in Nicaragua, in the field, and in the council chamber, has given the best evidences of genius to conceive, and ability to execute the mission of improvement of a suffering and degraded people, and while we indorse him in the past, we declare our unwavering confidence in him for the future.

Resolved, That we invite WILLIAM WALKER, the gallant embodiment of those principles of Democracy and progress, most dear to our hearts, to visit this City, as the guest of the people, that we may exchange with him congratulations over the past, and manifest to him our bright anticipations of the future.

When the resolution had been adopted there were several cries for General CAZNEAU, but he declined speaking on the ground of bodily indisposition.

There were then cries for Colonel FABENS, who was introduced amid applause, and spoke nearly as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT AND FELLOW-CITIZENS: The spectacle of this very enthusiastic meeting here, to-night, is, under the circumstances, as novel as it is creditable to all concerned. In this spontaneous movement of a sovereign people to do honor to greatness that adversity cannot detract from, and to genius that burns yet brighter in the cold atmosphere of misfortune, we recognize that indomitable adherence to principle which our fathers have left to us as their choicest legacy. We have not met to greet with plaudits the triumphal chariot of a conquorer returning from a war of conquest, with a long retinue of captive slaves, and a train of magnificent spoils, but we are here to offer the simple tribute of "well done" to those who have battled for two long years against odds such as people seldom stand up under for a day—for what? Personal aggrandizement? No. The further aggrandizement of this great country? No; but to aid a weak and suffering sister Republic in "the establishment and maintenance of the institutions of a pure republicanism," as the resolutions, which you have just heard read, truly and eloquently express it. Aye, fellow-citizens, our institutions of liberty, intelligence and religion. This is what we are here for,—and well do the noble WALKER and the gallant HENNINGSEN deserve these honors.

I rejoice at this demonstration—I rejoice at it not more because it shows your appreciation and indorsement of the gallant conduct of our countrymen in Central America, than because it administers another well-merited rebuke to those who, having the power intrusted to them at your hands, wielded it against your wishes, and who thus ignoring and defying the well-known sentiments of the masses—the rank and file of the people of this country—struck a blow at the very root of Democracy. But the nobler is for those who stood up against it all—more Romen than CÆSAR they faltered not, even when the traitor BRUTUS buried the fratricidal knife. And where are the conspirators? How have they really benefited by their temporary successes? What has become of those 20,000 of the youth—the flower and chivalry of Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras and Costa Rica? Their bones lie whitening on the savannahs, or rotting in the dense forests of Nicaragua; and the poor, feeble, demoralized remnant of that once proud army are hovering, like foul birds, around the fields which their own jealousy and mad ambition have made putrid with corpses! What new laurels has Great Britain—"the self styled protector of Central America"—(I am quoting the resolutions again, for I cannot better express my own views,) added to her chaplet in exchange for those lost in the Baltic and the Crimea? And your Wall-street and Bowling-green speculators—I mean of course VANDERBILT & Co.—what dividend do they expect on their investment in the humane and anti filibustering business of slaughtering their brave young fellow countrymen abroad? For it is gold—aye—gold from this very City of New-York that has finally worsted them. As was said by the poet of ABD-EL-KADER, while a prisoner within the white walls of Toulon, may with equal propriety be said of WALKER and HENNINGSEN:

"Avelled not or steel or shot, 'gainst those charmed lives secure,
'Till cunning men in last resort, tost up the golden lure:
And the carrion buzzards roand it stooped, faithless to the cast,

Where now is WILLIAM L. MARCY? A stranger in his old home, preparing, as the newspapers tell us to go abroad to inspect, probably the practical working of that delectable black-coat-and-blue-stocking diplomacy, which is the only really American line of policy which he has inaugurated in our foreign affairs. Where is CALEB CUSHING? Glorifying himself in magniloquent speeches, as usual—blowing his own trumpet through the land—parading his infamy before his old fellow-townsmen of Newburyport—as did Hester Prynne, the unhappy adulteress of HAWTHORNE'a tale, the Scarlet Letter, on her breast. As for poor FRANK PIERCE, nobody knows and nobody cares what has become of him. He has disappeared mysteriously—but neither the TIMES nor the Herald have thought it worth their while to offer a reward for the discovery of his whereabouts.

But, fellow-citizens, the cause of Nicaraguan independence is not dead. The darkness that seems for the moment to hover around it is not the darkness of the grave. Oh, if it were—if it were—if it lay stretched before us, cold and stiff, with nothing of its strength and health and beauty left, except the unchangeable beauty of death—we would still be here. We would esteem it our sorrowful privilege to come and pay to it the last sad honors due to departed glory. With tearful eyes, and sobbing voices, and breaking hearts we would throw over its coffin the richest pall that ever woman's hand embroidered, and heap above it the fairest flowers of the young Spring. But, thank God, we have no such melancholy task to perform! We are not here to bury CÆSAR, but to praise him. The cause lives. I recognize it instinct with vigor in your presence here to-night. It lives this very day in the hearts of a million of freemen! It lives in the persons of the heroes who have so worthily illustrated and ennobled it! It cannot be crushed out!

When the news of the arrival of WALKER and HENNINGSEN flashed along the electric wires from one end of this land to the other, the heart of the nation responded in tones of sympathy and welcome—not the hireling presence of a bogus Republicanism and a spurious philanthropy—but the blacksmith at his forge, the farmer at his plow, the weaver at his loom, the sailor on his ship, the schoolboy chafing over his unwelcome task, the maiden whose throbbing breast and glistening eye told where her truant heart was wandering—all these saw not the capitulation—not the retreat—but the noble heroism, the self denial, the voluntary hardships, the patience in adversity that guaranteed eventually a full and perfect triumph. And that triumph is certain, just as certain as to-morrow's sun will rise. I think I may hazard the prediction that before ninety days the unanimous voice of the people of Nicaragua—now scourged again, as I am sure they are, and I speak from an experience of their character of many years—now scourged again with civil dissensions, and withering under the curse of the allied locusts, will call on WALKER and HENNINGSEN to come back. And there will be no more blockade of steamships—no more arrests and imprisonments in Eldridge-street Jail—but the man who bear the banners of republican liberty and human progress may march at mid day, with their bayonets glistening in the sun that shines for all—for we also live under another star, and the clouds that recently obscured the bright light of our political firmament are dispersed, and the people—the will and the sentiments of the people, are recognized again as the reigning power in the land.

After a few remarks from Mr. S. B. FOGARTY, the following gentlemen were appointed a Committee to make arrangements for the reception of Gen. WALKER:

George T. Thompson, Judge Albert A. Thompson, Judge Florence McCarty, Judge Gilner Dean, J. B. Fogarty, Malcolm Campbell, Ward B. Burnett, Alex. C. Morton, H. N. Wild, John Clancy, John Creighton, W. P. Walker, William Wilson.

On motion of Mr. CAMPBELL, the Chairman, Mr. ELIJAH F. PURDY was added to the Committee, and the meeting adjourned.

Meeting of the Wilson Small General Committee.

An adjourned meeting of the "Wilson Small" General Committee was held last evening at Tammany Hall. Sixty-five members were present. Mr. SMALL presided. A resolution offered at the last meeting for the expulsion of such members as failed to attend was called, and after some debate adopted by a large majority. The names of those expelled are: Andrew Froment, Isaac V. Fowler, Daniel H. Norris, Emanuel B. Hart, J. B. Ryer, Isaac Bell, Jr., and John Cochrane. The following gentlemen who were appointed to prepare a plan for the reorganization of the party reported progress, and will report finally on Tuesday next: A. B. Rollins, Augo Herrick, Josiah Sutherland, Henry H. Morange, Michael Murray, James Leonard, P. G. Maloney, Patrick Coyle, Henry R Hoffmire, John Clancy, John Tipper, George G. Barnard, Ashbel Reed, H. Richardson, John C. Fraser, John H. Chambers, Charles A. May, William Coulter, Harris Wines, Sr., Daniel Kennedy, Dennis F. Root.

After the transaction of business of minor importance, the meeting adjourned,

NEW ROUTE TO NEW-LONDON, NORWICH, MYSTIC AND STONINGTON.—The Long Island Railroad Company have just completed arrangements for opening a new communication between this City and New London, Conn. Trains will leave South Ferry, Brooklyn, every morning at 9 o'clock, and connect at Greenport with the steamer Catalina, where passengers and freight will be immediately transported to either New-London, Mystic, Norwich or Stonington. Fare to the first-named place, $2 20; to the others, $2 50.

The news from Great Britain presents no features of special importance.

The London Times states that the St. Jean d'Acre 101 guns, screw steamship, is to be immediately fitted at Devonport for the purpose of taking the Halifax side portion of the cable, instead of the Niagara, and that vessel will render her services in any way in which she may be found available.

An interesting discussion (published below) had taken place in the House of Commons with reference to the non-ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty.

In the House of Commons on the 28th ult., Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the subject of British relations with Brazil, and moved for a Select Committee to take into consideration those relations and report therenpon. He urged that the Government of Brazil had acted in good faith in endeavoring to extinguish the Slave-trade, that their endeavors had been entirely successful, and that the steps taken by Great Britain, through her ships on the Brazilian coast, were highly offensive to the Brazilian Government, and extremely prejudicial to Brazilian commerce.

Lord PALMERSTON opposed the motion as being entirely unnecessary, asserting that Mr. ROEBUCK had made exaggerated statements, that the British cruisers had only acted as they were bound to do for the prevention of the slave-trade, and that no improper interference had taken place with the legitimate commerce of Brazil, and that the success of the motion would give encouragement to the slave-trade in all directions.

After some debate the motion was rejected by 295 majority.

Sir CHARLES NAPIER moved for a Select Committee to inquire into the Constitution of the Board of Admiralty, with a view to reform, and in doing so took occesion to reiterate his well-known grievances. The motion was negatived by a large majority.

The proceedings in the House of Lorde were of no special importance, and the House had adjourned over to the 4th of June.

The London Times, in an article upon Mr. ROEBUCK's motion in regard to the Slave-trade of Brazil, advocates the gradual abandonment of the police supervision heretofore exercised by England in this matter.

Mr. H. S. KEATING has been appointed Solicitor General, vice Mr. STUART WORTLEY, resigned, and Mr. H. HERBERT is appointed Secretary for Ireland.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE, of Russia, was expected to reach England on the 31st of May. His visit was to be one of mere friendly courtesy to the Queen, and therefore divested of any special demonstrations.

NEAL DOW made his first appearance before a London audience at Exeter Hall on the 26th. His reception was quite enthusiastic.

The visit of the King of Bavaria continued to monopolize attention at Paris.

The Corpe Legislatif had unanimously passed a bill increasing the pay of Captains and Lieutenants in the Army by 150 francs a year.

The law in relation to the Bank of France had passed by 225 against 15. M. MAGNE, Minister of Finance, is mentioned as likely to be the future Governor of the Bank.

The law for the establishment of three lines of transatlantic mail steamers has passed the Legislative Assembly. The ports of embarkation were left for subsequent settlement.

General CAVAIGNAC and several other Republicans will, it is said, become candidates to represent Paris in the new Corpe Legislatif.

Dispatches from Algeria mention that the French expeditionary corps had attacked Beni Ratten, on the 23d May, from three different directions, and captured the position after two hours' fighting. The advance guard had penetrated into Kabylia.

Letters from Algeria report that the appearance of the crops there was splendid, and promised an early and most abundant harvest.

The French Government has fixed the army at 600,000 men—an increase upon the ordinary peace establishment.

Baron GROS and the whole of the mission for China left Toulon on the 27th. The French naval forces will follow. They are, however, to avoid a threatening attitude until diplomatic attempts have failed.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says:

"A private letter from Toulon contains some details respecting the steam-frigate Audacieuse, which has just sailed for China. The frigate is only to touch at Senegal and at the Cape of Good Hope. She carries coal for eight days, so that she may steam over that portion of the passage where sailing-ships are detained by light winds, and which comprises a distance of from 200 to 250 maritime leagues. This is the first screw-frigate which has been dispatched to the Indian seas. As the Audacieuse is a frigate of great speed, she may be expected to perform the passage to Singapore in 45 days, where Baron GROS will meet Lord ELGIN, who has gone by Suez."

The French Legislative Assembly closed on the 28th, its period of six years having expired.

Of the 45 persons tried in Paris for complicity in the recent conspiracy, six are acquitted and 39 condemned to short imprisonments.

The settlement of the Neufchatel question is thus announced in the Paris Moniteur of the 26th May:

"The Plenipotentiaries of France, Austria, Great Britain, Prussia, Russia and Switzerland, assembled yesterday at the Ministry for Foreign Affairs, and signed a treaty regulating in a definitive manner the Neufchatel Question, by the renunciation on the part of the King of Prussia of the sovereign rights which treaties had given him over that principality, and by engagements entered into by the Swiss Confederation, which are of a nature to respond to the deep solicitude of King FREDERICK WILLIAM for the inhabitants of Neufchatel. The text of the treaty will be published after the exchange of the ratifications, which is to take place within a delay of twenty-one days."

It is said that, in consequence of the intervention of the French Ambassador at Constantinople, the Moldavian and Wallachian refugees, who had been stopped at Rustchuk, had been permitted to return to their native country.

The following dispatch, dated Cardiff, Wednesday, 27th May, was posted on the 30th in the Liverpool Underwriters' Rooms:

"The schooner John and Edward, from Bordeaux to Liverpool, put into Bellisle, wind bound, on the 24th May. In the roads, the French war schooner Maratch was at anchor, and the John and Edward came to anchor a cable's length under her stern, without giving a signal. Though one of the crew held a flag in his hand, the Maratch fired at the schooner three times, and JAMES WILLIAMS, one of the crew of the latter, was shot dead."

BRITISH POLITICS AND NEWS.

The Central American Treaty before the House—Lord Palmerston's Explanation of its non-Ratification—Treaty between France and Honduras—Discussion in the Commons on the Slave-Trade and Relations with Brazil—The Opium-Trade with China—The Nicaragua Literary News—The Derby.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

LONDON, Friday Night, May 29, 1856.

Mr. DISRAELI, after some few introductory remarks, has this evening inquired of Her Majesty's Government as to the reasons for the non-ratification of the treaty between England and the Government of the United States about Honduras; as to the present state of the negotiations; and whether papers will be laid before Parliament? Lord PALMERSTON, who had had one notice of this question, and had obviously prepared his answer with great circumspection and deliberation, replied in some detail, recapitulating the nature of the proposed treety alike with Honduras in relation to the Bay Islands, and with the United States in reference to Nicaragua and Costa Rica. His tone was very courteous to the United States; and when, in a second question, Mr. DISRAELI asked whether et a particular etage of the correspondence instructions had been given to the British Minister at Washington complaining of the conduct of the United States, the noble Lord said he took exception to the word "complaint;" there was nothing to "complain" of in the conduct of the United States; they had a perfect right to take whet view they pleased of the provisions of a treaty affecting themselves; the view they had taken in this matter was not one for the censure of another Government. He went on to say that it would have been contrary to diplomatic usage and precedent for the sovereign of Great Britain to have "ratified" the treaty with the United States, as it had been altered by the Senate, bnt so anxious was Great Britain to meet the wishes of the United States, that she had consented to several not unimportant alterations in the proposed Nicaragua and Costa Rica treety, and, also, to all hut one of the United States' proposals as to Honduras, and that was the unconditional surrender of the Bay Islands—the surrender without terms, which would be to sacrifice the interests of the colonists, British subjects already settled there, and also the policy of Great Britain. He did not say a word as to the Anti-Slavery clause in the Honduras treaty. As to the present state of matters, he said that no official notification had yet been received of the ratification of the treaty on the part of Honduras with England. Private accounts had come to hand that there were some impediments to the completion, but nothing definite on that head was yet known.

Neither was it officially known whet action the United States Government had resolved upon in reference to the several treaties which were so interwoven with and dependent upon each other. At this moment, he continued, while negotiations were still pending, it would be inexpedient and improper to lay papers before Parliament; but if, unfortunately, these negotiattons should not come to the desired result then it would be the duty of Her Majesty's Government to show, by the publication of the correspondence in the usual form, what steps had been taken throughout these transactions.

The rules of the House not permitting of debate where a mere question had been asked, no further conversation ensued. It was not very easy to follow the thread of Lord PALMERSTON's remarks, owing to the noise that prevailed at the time, just as members were going to dinner. But he never once alluded to the Clayton-Bnlwer Treaty, or to other actual or possible complications; and the impression derivable from his speech, which was very much in the tone of his new tone on the New-Granada embroilment, was that a pecific solution of the whole difficulty was at hand, and that if it were not, it would not be for want of good-will on the part of Her Majesty's Government.

In reference to these matters, it may be observed that news has been received to-day from the Honduras Plenipotentiary accredited to this country and France, and now resident in Paris, Señor HERRAN, that M. WALEWSKI is quite willing, on behalf of France, to ratify a treaty in all respects the same with Honduras as that which was concluded last Autumn between Señor HERRAN and Lord CLARENDON, and whose ratification by Honduras is now awaited with eagerness here by all parties interested in Anglo-Honduras affairs, and by all desirous of the consolidation of friendly feelings and interests between Great Britain and the United States through the instrumentality of Honduras.

As not altogether irrelevant to one portion of this topic, and as bearing on the unexpressed but well understood Slavery phase in the concession or non-concession of the Bay Islands, it may be mentioned that last night an important debate took place in the House of Commons on the subject of British relations with Brazil, brought forward by Mr. ROEBUCK. The object of the honorable member was to obtain a Committee of Inquiry, with a view to the repeal of the act of 1845, which he maintained had the effect of impeding our commercial relations with Brazil, without being at all necessary, the Slave-trade having wholly ceased and been denounced by the Brazilian Government itself as piracy. In the course of his speech Mr. ROEBUCK twitted Lord PALMERSTON with constantly hullying weak powers, while he succumbed to those which are strong enough to defend themselves, and declared that he would not dare to continue such an act if the United States was the country affected by it instead of Brazil. The Premier repelled the insinuation, and stated that the act of 1845 had been suspended by mutual consent for several years past, and was now virtually a dead letter. It would, nevertheless, he thought, be dangerous to repeal the act, there being parties at Rio prone to protect and encourage the Slave-trade. Mr. B. MOORE, Chairman of the Brazilian Commercial Association at Liverpool, one who is thoroughly acquainted with all commercial matters relating to Brazil, supported the motion, maintaining that the Brazilian Government was sincere in its wish to abolish the Slave-trade, and had done everything in its power for its suppression. In the course of his speech he pointed out a mistake, which Mr. ROEBUCK had made in representing the value of British trade with Brazil at £12,000,000; it was not, he said, half that sum; which was the value of the whole imports into Brazil from all parts of the world. Mr. MONCTON MILNES opposed the motion, and Mr. DISRAELI and Lord J. RUSSELL, though coinciding with much that fell from the member for Sheffield, (ROEBUCK,) deprecated a division, as the motion implied a want of confidence in the Government. Mr. ROEBUCK, in replying to Lord PALMERSTON, maintained that the suppression of the Slave-trade had been accomplished by Brazil alone, notwithstanding British interference for that object, and repeated his former assertions as to the foreign policy of the British Government. They sent cruisers to the coast of Brazil, he said, bnt they would not dare to act in the same manner towards the United States; if they seized an American vessel in the Chesapeake with slaves aboard, the whole Union would be in arms, and the British Government would be forced to succumb. The House divided on the question, but only 17 members went into the same lobby with Mr. ROEBUCK, while 312 voted with the Government and against the inquiry.

Several other discussions and publications of the British Parliament deserve to be presented in brief to the notice of American readers.

There was issued yesterday, from the Paper Office of the House of Lords, a collection of documents relating to the opium-trade with China, ranging over the period from 1842 down to the month of January last. It was the opinion of Sir H. POTTINGER, whose dispatches form the most important portion of the earlier papers, that nothing could be done, or reasonably expected to be done by Great Britain for the prevention of the opium-trade, so long as the Chinese Government was powerless to enforce its prohibition. The Celestials were determined to have the drug, and the Mandarins often connived at its introduction into the country; and if the British Government forbade its cultivation in India

Anglo-Saxon Law Again—The Last of Neufchatel—Horace Vernet Not Coming to the United States—An Anecdote of Dumas—A Sad Position—Thurneyssen to be Extradited—Miscellaneous.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

PARIS, Thursday, May 28, 1857.

The discussion on the inefficiency and the abuses of the Anglo-Saxon law has been revived again, by a vile article of the New-York Herald on this subject. The article of the Herald, which represents American society, in general terms, as in a state of anarchy, to which California, eight years ago, would have been an example of a well-organized and well-governed community, is seized upon by the Constitutionnel, as a sweet morsel to turn against its opponents in the discussion. It does not mend the matter that the Herald starts out with the assertion that the American law is superior to the despotic Napoleonic and Justinian Codes, (not to mention the fact that it makes a gross error of history in designating the Code Napoleon as the work of a single man,) for it immediately changes its tone, and gives the lie to its own assertion. The Débats, which had undertaken the defence of the American law against the Constitutionnel, feels called upon to denounce the article of the Herald as a gross exaggeration of the facts, and as a libel on the institutions, manners, and habits of the country in which it is printed. The Débats admits, however, that the prediction of DE TOCQUEVILLE, in his Democracy in America, that a disregard for the supremacy of the law would be likely to grow out of the state of society as it then presented itself to him, has been realized to a greater extent than the friends of America and her institutions had hoped. However this may be, the best thing that could happen for American society—the first reform to strike at the root of the evils that exist—would be to suppress, immediately and without mercy, the New-York Herald. That journal always gives me the effect of a viper warmed and nourished in the bosom of a society it is continually wounding by its poisonous stings.

The Moniteur, yesterday, gave the political world of Paris occasion for one of those long inspirations which convey so much relief to the burdened inward man. It announced, officially, the signing of the Neufchatel treaty. But there was a something in the grouping of the words, certainly not in the words themselves, which gave one the impression that the man who penned the article was smiling comically out of the corner of his mouth when he wrote it. He felt, no doubt, that his readers were going to say, "Well, that long-drawn-out farce is at last ended." There is general rejoicing that the affair is definitively disposed of.

Some time ago a report found circulation in France and England, and subsequently in the United States, that the distinguished French artist, M. HORACE VERNET, had been employed by the Government of the United States to execute for the new Capitol at Washington one or more pictures, for which he was to receive a fabulous compensation. I regret to have made myself the echo of these reports, for nothing could have been more untrue. The subject was brought to recollection a few days ago, by seeing in an American paper the statement that M. VERNET was going to Washington to paint Mr. BUCHANAN's portrait. All this is completely without foundation. M. VERNET has never been employed to paint either a picture for the Capitol, or Mr. BUCHANAN's portrait, and instead of being on the point of starting to the United States to make himself a millionaire, is quietly at work in his studio in the Institute of France, engaged on historical pictures for the French Museums. It is true that the American Minister talked to M. VERNET on the subject of a picture for the Capitol, but the interview rests without result.

The least of ALEXANDER DUMAS' sins is certainly not modesty. Lately, when he was at London—he recounts this himself in this morning's number of Monte Cristo—he visited a Mr. DANIEL, a dealer in porcelain. In entering the door he heard a word which arrested his attention, Mr. DANIEL said to his clerk, "Don't mention the prices."

The great romancer demanded the occasion of giving this order.

"Because," replied Mr. DANIEL, "the price at which we sell to you ought not to be the price for other people."

"I hardly understand you," said DUMAS, modestly.

"Here are my bills of purchase. Choose and pay your purchases at the prices they cost me. I will accept no more."

"But if I take the whole store?"

"I will renew it again," said Mr. DANIEL, with courtesy.

"Would you believe," continues the author of Monte Cristo, "that if WALTER SCOTT or BYRON had visited our dealers of porcelain in France there would have been found one who have done as much as he?"

LOBETTE LITERATURE.

The work of CHLESTE MOGADOR, Les Voleurs d'Or, (The Gold Stealers,) appeared from the press of MICHEL LEVY last week, and at once obtained a rapid sale. The authoress, you will recollect, was but a few years ago a queen of the demi-monde, who wrote her memoirs in five volumes, in which she unrolled before the world the history of her loves and adventures, with here and there a name thrown in by way of spice. The police saw fit to smother CELESTE's first bantling at its birth, and I believe the public never saw but the three first volumes. The book was suppressed ostensibly for its immorality, but really on account of official names that figured in the book in a position too equivocal for the public eye.

CELESTE then made the acquaintance of a young man of good family, the Viscount de CHABRILLAN, who, from the position of lover, was seduced by the syren into that of husband. CELESTE was a woman of talent, and she promised, on condition of being made a Countess, to reform and to exhibit to the world a model wife. The Viscount married her, but, it is hardly necessary to say, against his family's wish. The father, to avoid the embarrassments of a proximity to a daughter-in-law whose name was still sung in the bacchanalian retreats of the Maison Dorée, and whose choregraphic feats were still the wonder of Mabille, determined to expatriate the interesting addition to his family, honorably if possible, but at any rate to expatriate her. He went to the Foreign Office, and asked for a foreign appointment for his son. There was no vacancy compatible with the young man's talents. But he induced them to create one. The gold fever had just broken out in Australia, some French ships had already started for Melbourne, and the Viscount de CHABRILLAN was appointed Consul at Melbourne.

There they remained three or four years, and during this time CELESTE was re-forming her habits, and laying schemes to force open the doors of society on her return to France. She naturally turned her attention to literature, and Les Voleurs d'Or is the result of her Australian incubation. The Gold Stealers is a sort of half-history, half-romance, which is related with a good deal of clearness, and with an interest that enchains the reader from the first to the last page. It is neither brilliant nor bad. It is unexceptionable in morality, for it is the reformed harlot who is most savagely puritan before the public. The principal personages of her story are English; the whole book is, in fact, English. It turns on the family of an English doctor, who left London, to seek his fortune in Australia, and whose daughter fell into the hands, by force, of a vile South American, a stealer of gold. She displays in this book a better knowledge of English society and habits than most French authors.

There is a man, a native of New-York, who, in order to cure epileptic fits, was submitted for some months to large doses of nitrate of silver. This man, who is highly connected in New-York as well by birth as by marriage, is known there as the Blue Man. He is, in fact, so well known by this appellation, and has acquired so much the position of a public character, that his friends have almost discarded him, much as they sympathize with his deplorable condition. The nitrate of silver afforded only temporary relief to the epilepsy, but it produced an effect on the skin which is not unfrequently observed from the use of this substance,—his skin was changed indelibly and irremediably blue. For many years remedies for both the epilepsy and the discoloration of the skin were tried in vain in New-York, and six months ago this man came to France.

On his way home, however, he stopped in London, and there saw Dr. MARSHALL HALL, who advised the operation of tracheotomy—an opening into the windpipe. He came to France and entered the service, first of M. NELATON, the distinguished surgeon of the Hospital of the Faculty, but only remained there a month, and was then transferred to the wards of M. TROUSSEAU, at the Hospital Hotel Dieu. M. TROUSSEAU, strong in the faith of a new remedy for epilepsy, from which he had already derived signal benefit, Belladonna, (deadly night-shade,) commenced the administration of this medicine, which he continued for four months, without any benefit whatever. He tried also to remove the blueness of the skin by applications of hyposulfite of soda and other remedies, without appreciable results. (All this has been published and discussed in the Paris journals of medicine, and in the Societies, since he came under M. TROUSSEAU's treatment.) At the end of four months, after experiencing a complete failure of what were certainly too sanguine promises in the commencement, Mr. TROUSSEAU, for reasons which I should not dare to judge, for fear of doing injustice to the honorable professor's motives, made out an order which consigned our unfortunate countryman to the walls of the Bicêtre Lunatic Asylum. He was quietly descending the stairs of the Hotel Dieu, in the belief that he was leaving the hospital, when at the door he was invited to get in a carriage, which carriage was closed on him, and he was driven to Bicêtre.

He could not speak a word of French, and at Bicêtre, without yet knowing where he was, his clothes were replaced by hospital clothes, and from the pocket of his cast-off pantaloons, he was robbed by the attendants of all the money he had. It was three or four days before he met any one who could speak English, and then it was too late to find the thief. He at last met here a house-surgeon from New-Orleans, Dr. CHARVET, to whom he explained his difficulties, and who astonished him by the revelation of the fact that he was in Bedlam.

This was a month ago. Through Dr. CHARVET, steps were immediately taken to obtain his release; but before all the formalities could be fulfilled, a month elapsed, and it was not till yesterday that the poor fellow escaped from the clutches of the leeches, the setons and the blistere which routine and the unhappy order of Prof. TROUSSEAU had consigned him. He came to see me in a most pitiable condition, and begged to be sent home. A subscription was readily made up, for the case was too palpable for hesitation, and to-day he left for London, cured of his admiration for French therapeutics. He intends again, however, to visit Dr. MARSHALL HALL at London, and if he still recommends tracheotomy, to submit to that operation.

You have in your midst at this moment another CARPENTIER, for whom it is said the French Government are going to demand the extradition. His name is THURNEYSSEN. He was a banker and stock-broker, and failed for thirty millions, carrying with him to America several of his dishonorably gained millions. A few days ago, while seated in the bureau of the American Legation, a gentleman and lady entered, who were evidently laboring under a severe affliction. This couple, who it seems must have had an immense confidence in the absconding M. THURNEYSSEN, had placed in that gentleman's hands securities to the amount of three millions of francs! every sou of which took its flight across the Atlantic at the same moment as its holder. The husband was furious, and came to the Legation to know what were the prospects of arresting the defaulter and returning him to France: the wife was calm. And yet three-fourths of the lost deposit belonged to her private fortune. Happily they have plenty left.

It is announced that HUME, the spiritualist, has arrived in Paris with his sister, and descended at the Hotel Vouillemot, in the Champs Elysées. We shall no doubt soon hear of more wonders at the Tuileries, for it is certain that before leaving HUME established a certain influence in the Imperial circle.

The Non-Ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty—Explanation by Lord Palmerston.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Saturday, May 30.

Mr. DISRAELI.—I rise, Sir, to make inquiry of Her Majesty's Government respecting the non-ratification of the treaty entered into by Her Majesty and the Government of the United States in reference to Honduras. I should be glad if the noble Lord at the head of the Government could state to the House the reasons why that treaty has not been ratified, and I should wish that he would also inform us whether negotiations are still pending upon the subject, and whether any papers with regard to it are to be laid upon the table of the House?

Lord PALMERSTON—In answer to the right honorable gentleman, I have to state that in the course of last Summer two treaties were concluded by Her Majesty's Government—the one with the Republic of Honduras, the other with the Government of the United States. The object of the treaty which we entered into with Honduras was, among other things, the cession to her of what are called the Bay Islands—namely, Ruatan, Bonacca, and two or three other smaller islands. Those Islands were, under the provision of the treaty, ceded to Honduras upon certain conditions which Her Majesty's Government deemed it to be necessary to impose for the security and well being of such British settlers as had property within them. The treaty also provides that the islands in question should not be allowed to fall into the possession of any great maritime Power; that no fortifications should be erected upon them, but that they should continue to be—that which they hitherto have been—inoffensive and non-military stations. The treaty which we concluded with the United States divides itself into two distinct parts. The first part contains the article of the treaty which Great Britain and the United States were to agree to propose to Nicaragua and Costa Rica for the purpose of settling the differences which have arisen between the Spanish American States in Central America and for the future regulation of the Mosquito Indians. The other part of the treaty contained the conditions of an engagement between England and the United States, and one of these articles was to this effect—that whereas a Convention had been concluded between Great Britain and Honduras whereby, on certain conditions, the Bay Islands had been ceded to Honduras, Great Britain and the United States engaged henceforward to acknowledge those islands as part of the territory of Honduras. This treaty was signed by my noble friend at the head of the Foreign Department (Lord CLARENDON) and Mr. DALLAS, the American Minister here. This treaty was sent to Honduras and Washington respectively for the ratification of those Governments. We have not yet received an official notice from Honduras whether the treaty to which I have alluded has been ratified or not by the Government of Honduras. We have, indeed, heard privately that some technical difficulties have prevented its ratification, but we have no official information on the subject. The treaty of the United States was referred, of course, to the Senate. The Senate proposed several alterations in that treaty. Some of those alterations were of considerable importance, and one was of very great importance. The treaty so amended was sent back to this country with the ratification of the Government of the United States, and we were asked to adopt those alterations. Now, of course, the Senate of the United States have an undoubted right to modify and alter any treaty with which they are not satisfied, and which may become the subject of discussion. But the ratification of a treaty by a sovereign Power means that that sovereign Power adopts and ratifies by its signature the engagements taken in its behalf by authorized diplomatic agents; and to ratify a treaty which, having been altered by another Power, is no longer the treaty that was concluded by an authorized diplomatic agent would be against all rule and against all the principles of diplomatic usage. Therefore, even if the British Government agreed to adopt the alterations in the treaty made by the Senate after its signature, it would be necessary that a fresh treaty should be concluded adopting those changes, and that this new treaty should be ratified by the sovereign powers of the two countries. There were several changes made in the treaty—none of them, as I have stated, unimportant, but, nevertheless, Her Majesty's Government being desirous of not raising unnecessary difficulties upon a question which it was highly desirable should be settled, waived their objections to all but one, and that was a change made, not in the treaty which the two Governments proposed to Nicaragua and Costa Rica, but in the recital of that treaty. There were alterations in that draught of the treaty which was embodied in the Convention with the United States. They were far from unimportant, yet we were prepared to adopt them. But, in the other articles which were agreed to be directly contracted between the United States and Great Britain, there was an alteration which I will mention. The article relating to the Bay Islands contained, as I have stated, the recital of a Convention between Great Britain and Honduras for the settlement of these Islands upon certain conditions, and it said, "Whereas, such Convention has been concluded between the Government of Great Britain and Honduras, and it has been agreed to consider these Islands as part of the territory of Honduras." The Senate of the United States proposed to omit all reference to the Convention between Great Britain and Honduras, and the United States acknowledged these islands as part of the territory of Honduras. Now, the obvious effect would have been, by implication, and, indeed, directly, that we were making an unconditional cession of these Islands to Honduras divested of those steps which we thought necessary for the well being of the colony and the future political interests of the country. Her Majesty's Government therefore expressed their regret that they could not adopt that alteration, but they proposed an addition to the article as it was amended by the United States, which would have made the cession of these islands conclusive only upon the acceptance by Honduras of the conditions and stipulations we proposed. That proposal was sent to the United States, and the matter is still under negotiation. Therefore, with respect both to this treaty and to the treaty with Honduras, it is not in my power, according to the established practice, to lay these papers before the House. If, unfortunately, these negotiations do not turn out successful, it will be the duty of Her Majesty's Government to lay before the House the grounds of the stand which they have thought proper to make. If, on the other hand, the negotiations are successful and the treaty should be ratified and signed in the form which the interests of this country require, then the House will probably be content without inquiring into the differences between the two countries.

Mr. DISRAELI.—I wish to know whether the alterations made in the treaty were not communicated to our representative at Washington, and whether an announcement of those alterations was not received from him before the treaty was ratified and sent to this country?

Lord PALMERSTON.—I do not quite comprehend the right hon. gentleman's question.

Mr. DISRAELI.—My question is, whether the alterations which Her Majesty's Government could not accede to were not communicated to our representative at Washington, and whether an answer to the alterations of which the noble Lord complained was not sent out before the treaty was sent over here for the ratification of Her Majesty's Government?

Lord PALMERSTON.—I might take exception to the word "complained." [Mr. DISRAELI.—"Well, objected."] The Senate of the United States had a right to make what alterations they pleased in the treaty if they thought it not fit to be agreed to. No doubt the probability of some alterations being made in the treaty by the Senate was communicated by our Minister at Washington. That arrived before the treaty, but our answer was communicated on the official communication of the result of the deliberations of the Senate.

The Slave Trade.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, May 28.

Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the subject of our relations with Brazil. He referred to the Act (Lord ABERDEEN's) of 1845, which had created, he said, great indignation in the minds of the people of Brazil, and he urged that, as the Slave-trade had been put an end to there, and had utterly disappeared, the slave-traders having been expelled, and the trade itself having been denounced by the Brazilian Government as piracy, that Act, which had the effect of impeding our Commercial relations with Brazil, should be repealed. He moved for a Select Committee to inquire into our relations with Brazil, and into the policy of repealing the Act of 1845.

Lord PALMERSTON, after expressing his surprise that a person like Mr. ROEBUCK should have given countenance, in the course of his speech, to the vulgar and unfounded insinuation that it was the practice of England to bully the weak and succumb to the strong, observed that he had erroneously assumed that the act of 1845 was still in operation, whereas it had been suspended by mutual consent for some years past, and, for all practical purposes, was a dead letter. That act, he said, had been justified by the conduct of the Brazilian Government in relation to the Slave-trade; they had neglected repeated warnings, and refused to do anything to stop that trade according to treaty. In 1850, upon an intimation that the provisions of the act would be enforced, an assurance was given by the Brazilian Government that measures would be taken to put down the trade, and the act was suspended; but, instead of the promised measures, the trade was prosecuted to the utmost extent. The act was consequently put in operation, and produced its proper effect; and when our Government found that of Brazil was in earnest, the operation of the act was suspended, and had continued so until the present time. Nevertheless, it would, in his opinion, be most dangerous to repeal the act, there being parties at Rio prone to protect and encourage the Slave-trade. He therefore entreated Mr. ROEBUCK and the House not to take a step that would be misunderstood by the Brazilians, and have the effect of renewing this hateful traffic.

Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE supported the motion. He characterized the Act of 1845 as an interference with the sovereignty and independence of Brazil, the Government of which, he contended, had been sincere in its efforts to put down the Slave-trade. But the subject was a difficult one; the Slave-trade existed, he said, in the British colonies, and even at Sierra Leone.

M. M. MILNES trusted that the House would not agree to the motion for a Committee, which would be totally useless for the purpose in view.

After a reply by Mr. ROEBUCK,

Mr. DISRAELI observed that the motion was a very strong one, inasmuch as it proposed to take the management of our diplomatic relation with a foreign power out of the hands of the Government, and there by implied a want of confidence in the Government. He understood that Mr. ROEBUCK did not represent any particular complaint on the part of the Brazilian Government with reference to the Act in question, and he understood from Lord PALMERSTON that the Act was at this moment in suspense by mutual agreement between the two countries, and under these circumstances he could not support the motion. At the same time, the subject was one which, in his opinion, ought to interest the House.

Lord J. RUSSELL said it appeared that for some time our efforts to induce the Brazilian Government to exert itself in putting down the Slave-trade had failed; but, by increased vigilance on our part and more stringent measures directed by the Foreign Office, the trade was put an end to, owing to its being found to be a losing concern. Believing this to be the real state of facts, he desired to leave this question in the hands of the Government.

Upon a division, the motion was negatived by 312 to 17.

From the London Times, May 29.

With the exception of Mr. ROEBUCK's own fervid and rather bitter harangue, there is a very observable poising of judgment and halting of opinion in all the principal speeches last night on our relations with Brazil. Lord PALMERSTON himself, Mr. DISRAELI, Lord JOHN RUSSELL, all agree, in a tone of dissatisfaction, with the present state of things, and wish to regard it as one of transition. It is, however, easy enough to see what the House of Commons, under their guidance, declared by a large majority, and what it did not declare. It would not, without much graver reasons than those now alleged, respond to an appeal expressly and not very courteously made from the Government to the Legislature. It would not stop at once a course of diplomacy for which a defense could be made, or for which at least time could be asked, by a step which, once made, could not be retraced. It would not do that which could even be construed into an abandonment of our long protest against the Slave-trade, a condemnation of ourselves, and a confession that our immense efforts and sacrifices had been made in a fruitless and Quixotic crusade. When it was not only undeniable, but was even alleged in the argument for the motion, that our trade with Brazil was such as to make her the fourth-best customer on our list, and that practically she had given up the importation of slaves, there was, at least, no case for the immediate reversal of our policy and censure of Government. All this was evident, and Mr. ROEBUCK himself could not have been surprised to find himself with only 17 followers against 312. Yet, as we have observed, in the speeches, and not less in the great number of those who, after hearing both sides, declined to vote with either, we may see plainly what the House of Commons regards with dislike, and will not long continue to sanction with even a reluctant and hesitating vote. It will not always persist in a policy which is evidently vexatious to a friendly Government and people. It does not contemplate arrogating for England to the end of time the onerous and most thankless duty of the police of the ocean. Whatever the success of an exceptional policy with one nation as compared with another, or whatever treaties or other historical reasons may be alleged, it does not like such a plain difference of dealing as may provoke the charge of national truculence and baseness made by Mr. ROEBUCK. There is a policy which, wise or unwise, can neither be suspected, nor even charged with making distinctions between the strong and the weak. The House of Commons would rather not have to stand on its defence against charges of this sort; and, though England has certainly proved her courage more than once within Mr. ROEBUCK's own memory, and need not be so jealous of her honor as he wishes her to be in her dealing with her own flesh and blood across the Atlantic, yet there is at least color for the reproach that we are taking stronger measures with Brazil than with the United States. The House of Commons, then, would rather it were not so.

Such a policy as ours with Brazil may be just or not, honorable or not, necessary or not; but one thing is certain,—it is a policy which must come to an end, and the longer it is persisted in the more dangerous it is. Supposing it to be the interest of Brazil to import any number of negroes, and supposing that the Government and people of that country wish to import them, and are only prevented by the fear of our cruisers, our courts, and our arms, then we are at least running up a very long and very deep grievance, which time and opportunity may open into a serious quarrel. No doubt, too, the relations of Brazil with the United States, and their community of interest as Slave Powers, are important elements in the calculation of consequences. We feel ourselves bound to look to the future, whereas there are statesmen, and always have been, who feel more concerned to maintain a point of honor than to prevent future difficulties and disasters. An exceptional policy must always rest on exceptional circumstances, and the Act which forms the subject of Mr. ROEBUCK's complaint is an exceptional measure, founded, of course, on our original Treaty with Brazil, but not less at variance with the policy which we have been compelled to adopt with other Powers. We have only to suppose Brazil strong enough, turbulent enough, democratic enough, or sufficiently allied with the United States, and we might some day find ourselves compelled to carry out or renounce our pretensions. At present Lord PALMERSTON assures us the Act of 1845 is a dead letter,—a sword hung up in our armory, and even rusting in its scabbard; but to Brazil it is a sword ready to fall, and, as we cannot help thinking Lord PALMERSTON would be the last man to recommend us to throw it away when actually challenged to the contest, so we think he would act wisely to get rid of it, if possible, in a season of mutual confidence, respect and repose.

A preventive policy abroad is too like an obstructive policy at home. Statesmen who are always checking what they are pleased to consider bad tendencies in their own people seldom do any positive good, and the best that can be said of their administration afterwards, is that under them the nation stood still. It is at least conceivable that we might have taken some positive course on the subject of negro labor, which, without involving us with all the rest of the world, would have made the cession of these islands conclusive only upon the acceptance by Honduras of the conditions and stipulations we proposed. That proposal was sent to the United States, and the matter is still under negotiation. Therefore, with respect both to this treaty and to the treaty with Honduras, it is not in my power, according to the established practice, to lay these papers before the House. If, unfortunately, these negotiations do not turn out successful, it will be the duty of Her Majesty's Government to lay before the House the grounds of the stand which they have thought proper to make. If, on the other hand, the negotiations are successful and the treaty should be ratified and signed in the form which the interests of this country require, then the House will probably be content without inquiring into the differences between the two countries.

Mr. DISRAELI.—I wish to know whether the alterations made in the treaty were not communicated to our representative at Washington, and whether an announcement of those alterations was not received from him before the treaty was ratified and sent to this country?

Lord PALMERSTON.—I do not quite comprehend the right hon. gentleman's question.

Mr. DISRAELI.—My question is, whether the alterations which Her Majesty's Government could not accede to were not communicated to our representative at Washington, and whether an answer to the alterations of which the noble Lord complained was not sent out before the treaty was sent over here for the ratification of Her Majesty's Government?

Lord PALMERSTON.—I might take exception to the word "complained." [Mr. DISRAELI.—"Well, objected."] The Senate of the United States had a right to make what alterations they pleased in the treaty if they thought it not fit to be agreed to. No doubt the probability of some alterations being made in the treaty by the Senate was communicated by our Minister at Washington. That arrived before the treaty, but our answer was communicated on the official communication of the result of the deliberations of the Senate.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, May 28.

Mr. ROEBUCK called attention to the subject of our relations with Brazil. He referred to the Act (Lord ABERDEEN's) of 1845, which had created, he said, great indignation in the minds of the people of Brazil, and he urged that, as the Slave-trade had been put an end to there, and had utterly disappeared, the slave-traders having been expelled, and the trade itself having been denounced by the Brazilian Government as piracy, that Act, which had the effect of impeding our Commercial relations with Brazil, should be repealed. He moved for a Select Committee to inquire into our relations with Brazil, and into the policy of repealing the Act of 1845.

Lord PALMERSTON, after expressing his surprise that a person like Mr. ROEBUCK should have given countenance, in the course of his speech, to the vulgar and unfounded insinuation that it was the practice of England to bully the weak and succumb to the strong, observed that he had erroneously assumed that the act of 1845 was still in operation, whereas it had been suspended by mutual consent for some years past, and, for all practical purposes, was a dead letter. That act, he said, had been justified by the conduct of the Brazilian Government in relation to the Slave-trade; they had neglected repeated warnings, and refused to do anything to stop that trade according to treaty. In 1850, upon an intimation that the provisions of the act would be enforced, an assurance was given by the Brazilian Government that measures would be taken to put down the trade, and the act was suspended; but, instead of the promised measures, the trade was prosecuted to the utmost extent. The act was consequently put in operation, and produced its proper effect; and when our Government found that of Brazil was in earnest, the operation of the act was suspended, and had continued so until the present time. Nevertheless, it would, in his opinion, be most dangerous to repeal the act, there being parties at Rio prone to protect and encourage the Slave-trade. He therefore entreated Mr. ROEBUCK and the House not to take a step that would be misunderstood by the Brazilians, and have the effect of renewing this hateful traffic.

Mr. BRAMLEY-MOORE supported the motion. He characterized the Act of 1845 as an interference with the sovereignty and independence of Brazil, the Government of which, he contended, had been sincere in its efforts to put down the Slave-trade. But the subject was a difficult one; the Slave-trade existed, he said, in the British colonies, and even at Sierra Leone.

M. M. MILNES trusted that the House would not agree to the motion for a Committee, which would be totally useless for the purpose in view.

After a reply by Mr. ROEBUCK,

Mr. DISRAELI observed that the motion was a very strong one, inasmuch as it proposed to take the management of our diplomatic relation with a foreign power out of the hands of the Government, and there by implied a want of confidence in the Government. He understood that Mr. ROEBUCK did not represent any particular complaint on the part of the Brazilian Government with reference to the Act in question, and he understood from Lord PALMERSTON that the Act was at this moment in suspense by mutual agreement between the two countries, and under these circumstances he could not support the motion. At the same time, the subject was one which, in his opinion, ought to interest the House.

Lord J. RUSSELL said it appeared that for some time our efforts to induce the Brazilian Government to exert itself in putting down the Slave-trade had failed; but, by increased vigilance on our part and more stringent measures directed by the Foreign Office, the trade was put an end to, owing to its being found to be a losing concern. Believing this to be the real state of facts, he desired to leave this question in the hands of the Government.

Upon a division, the motion was negatived by 312 to 17.

From the London Times, May 29.

With the exception of Mr. ROEBUCK's own fervid and rather bitter harangue, there is a very observable poising of judgment and halting of opinion in all the principal speeches last night on our relations with Brazil. The Great Failure in Paris.

From the London Times, May 28.

PARIS, Monday, May 25.

SIR: In announcing the failure of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, you have referred to the Crédit Mobilier, and have also stated that he was connected with me by relationship and business transactions.

Your good faith has been imposed upon by statements emanating from malicious motives, for M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN has never had any business connection either with me or with the Crédit Mobilier. He was never at any time mixed up with the operations conducted by that establishment, nor a director of railway companies or other industrial undertakings.

The insinuations, therefore, regarding the Crédit Mobilier are without foundation, nor have they any better basis as respects myself. Although a cousin of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN married one of my nieces, he can scarcely be looked upon as my relative; and I have never had social intercourse or business transactions with him. I regret that this abuse of the privileges of the press should render it necessary for me to enter into my private affairs; but I feel bound to add that on one occasion I rendered a service to M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN, solely out of regard to his family, and that I have suffered in consequence. About three and a half years ago I lent him 500,000f. to extricate him from the embarrassments into which he was plunged by speculations in land, and that sum is still due to me.

His uncle, M. AUGUSTE THURNEYSSEN, whose declining years are embittered, and whose fortune is largely diminished, by this painful event, is one of the most highly esteemed and respected men in Paris. He was formerly a banker, and connected with the house of STIEGLITZ, and for the last twenty years his name has been associated with those of the most respectable English and French capitalists, as a Director of the principal railways. Like his son, M. GEORGE THURNEYSSEN, it is only as a creditor that he is connected with his nephew's failure, which, deplorable as it is, does not possess the exaggerated importance which has been attached to it.

I doubt not, Sir, that, having given currency to reports so unfounded, you will give equal publicity to these explanations. Every one has a perfect right to form his own estimate of the Crédit Mobilier as an institution, but it is an abuse of that right, and one unworthy of the English press, to connect that society with events to which it is completely a stranger, and to attack it through its administrators, who are at least entitled to some consideration, from the position they occupy in public esteem. I am, Sir, your obedient servant, I. PEREIRE.

These statements are simply a series of misconceptions. M. PEREIRE complains that M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN was represented by the Times to be connected with him by relationship and in business transactions. Also that the Times has indulged in insinuations against the Crédit Mobilier, and that the good faith has been imposed upon for malicious purposes. M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN never having been mixed up with the operations of that establishment, nor a director of railway companies or other industrial undertakings. The only reply is, that the Times never stated M. THURNEYSSEN to be a relative of M. PEREIRE; nor that he was connected with him in business. Neither has it indulged in insinuations against the Crédit Mobilier, nor asserted that M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN was a director of railway companies or of any other industrial undertakings. The Times stated that the family of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN is nearly "connected" with that of M. ISAAC PEREIRE; that he is a nephew of M. THURNEYSSEN, the well known banker, and that with such connections he was not likely to have been driven to the necessity of flight if his responsibilities had been of the comparatively insignificant character (from £30,000 to £40,000) alleged by the principal friends of his family in London. The perfect accuracy of the whole of this information is now vouched by M. ISAAC PEREIRE himself, who mentions a former act of generosity, which proves that his family interest in M. THURNEYSSEN was precisely of the character indicated, and adds that the failure did not occur until the fortune of the elder M. THURNEYSSEN had been largely diminished by the conduct of the defaulter. Thus then the only incorrectness is on the part of M. PEREIRE in supposing there has been any error, and the sole imputation upon good faith would have been by publishing his letter without an explanation of its errors. M. PEREIRE, while seeking to use the press to bring groundless charges of malicious motives against others, considers the slightest allusion to himself or to the company of which he is at the head to be an abuse of its functions and privileges. M. PEREIRE has not, as he states, been forced by the press to enter into his private affairs. The family connection of M. CHARLES THURNEYSSEN with M. PEREIR about a foot in front of the bride, and did not seem to take much interest in the ceremony.

Joseph A. Beardsly examined by Mr. Tilden: I am paying teller of the Bank of North America, and have been for nearly six years; my business leads me to scrutinize signatures. [Witness identified Mrs Cunningham's signature to be identical on exchibits 7, 8, and 4.]

Mr. George J. Seney, cashier of the Metropolitan Bank, was called for the same purpose as the previous witness, and gave similar testimony.

The Court adjourned to 10 o'clock to-day.

AFFAIRS IN KANSAS.

Resistance to Taxation in Lawrence.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

LAWRENCE, Monday, June 1, 1857.

This morning, Marshal FAIN came in from Lecompton, and, soon after his arrival, stated to some of our citizens that he was here to assess our property as an officer under the Territorial Legislature. The reportran rapidly through our town, and before noon assessment and tax-paying was the common topic of conversation. The Marshal, Judge and Sheriff FAIN, early this afternoon, called upon the Messrs. DUNCAN, merchants, told them the Sheriff was here to assess property, and asked for a list of their real and personal estate, to which they replied, that they would soon make out one. The DUNCANS are Western men, and have never been identified as Free-State men among us. Feeling began to intensify, and on a few moments' notice a large concourse of citizens assembled in the open air in front of the Morrow House. Mr. JAMES BLOOD was elected President, and S. F TAPPAN and WM. A. PHILLIPS, Secretaries. On motion of Judge CONWAY, a Committee of five persons was appointed to draft resolutions. It was composed of Messrs. Wm. Hutchison, Charles Ingersoll, E. B. Whitman, Chas. Stearns and S. W. Eldridge.

Mr. WM. HUTCHINSON, Chairman of the Committee, made the following report:

Whereas, We understand that a person claiming to be Deputy Sheriff and Assessor of Taxes, under the authority of the Bogus Legislature, is now in our midst; and whereas we utterly repudiate the authority of all persons claiming to be officers of that Legislature; and whereas the moneys so fraudulently collected from our people have been, and may again be, so, proprieted in part, to defray the expenses incurred in burning hotels and private dwellings, destroying Printing Presses, sacking towns and plundering the property and outraging the dearest rights of our settlers: therefore,

Resolved, That in the opinion of this meeting no good citizen will in any manner furnish "aid and comfort" to the Assessor or Collector of Taxes, or render to him a list of the valuation of his property.

Resolved, That, recognizing the principle established by the blood of our fathers, that "representation and taxation are inseparable," we will never violate that principle by the voluntary payment of any taxes levied by the present Territorial Legislature.

Resolved, That a Committee of five be appointed to present these resolutions to all our citizens for their signatures.

Resolved, That a Committee of five persons be appointed to present a copy of these resolutions to any person who may visit this community in the shape of an Assessor or Collector of Taxes, and that a copy be sent to the Excellency Governor WALKER.

MARKET REPORTS.

NEW-YORK, Thursday, June 11, 1857—5 P. M.

ASHES—Are in light supply and demand at previous quotations. Pearls, $7 75; Pots, $8 25, ₱ 100 lbs.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary	12	12	12	12
Middling	13¾	13¾	14	14⅜
Middling Fair	14⅜	14⅜	14¾	15
Fair	14¾	15	15⅛	15¾

FLOUR AND MEAL—The market for State and Western Flour shows no really new feature. The advices by the Ericsson or the Canada have not seriously affected business. The receipts are limited, and owners are not eager sellers. The Hudson River boats brought down only 3,700 bbls. of Flour the past twenty-four hours. The demand is moderate, being chiefly for desirable brands, needed for home use. The sales reported since our last embrace 8,800 bbls., in lots, mainly at the prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 50@6 65
Straight State	6 70@ 6 80
Extra State	6 90@ 7 10
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 60@ 6 90
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 70@ 6 99
Fancy Michigan	6 70@ 6 85
Extra Indiana and Michigan	6 90@ 8 50
Extra Ohio	7 30@ 8 75
Fancy Genesee	7 30@ 7 50
Extra Genesee	7 75@10 00
Extra Missouri	8 00@10 50

Canadian is doing better. Sales have been reported of about 800 bbls., in lots, at from $6 70@9 for superfine to very choice extra ₱ bbl. Mr. JAMES WATSON, Woodstock, C. W., has forwarded to this market a new brand of extra Canadian Flour, styled "Ormond Mills." It is made out of Canadian White Wheat, is of a very superior quality, and for the first lot of it sold here $10 ₱ bbl. was the price obtained. It will take precedence of every other brand of Canadian Flour hitherto known in this market, from its intrinsic excellence, and its suitableness for family use. Southern is brisker and dearer. The transactions since our last comprise about 3,400 bbls. very low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 60@10 ₱ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and quiet, at $4 50@6 25 for Fine to Superfine ₱ bbl. Corn Meal is dull and nominal at $4 25 for Jersey, and $4 50 for Brandywine. ₱ bbl. Buyers refuse to pay these prices, save for very small lots, urgently needed.

GRAIN—Wheat is rather sparingly offered, and at prices above the views of buyers. Hence, it is inactive. Sales transpired of 13 600 bushels, including very choice Western White at $2; and good ordinary Western Red (Club) at $1 54@1 55 ₱ bushel. The Hudson River boats brought down only 7,400 bushels of Wheat, the past twenty-four hours. Rye has not varied much. Sales were made of 1,600 bushels Jersey, in the slip, at $1 18; Prime Northern is held at $1 25 ₱ bush. Barley and Barley-Malt rule about the same. Oats are quiet, and languid at 59c.@60c. for Western, 58c.@59c. for State; 62c.@63c. for Canadian and Jersey; 55c.@61c. for Pennsylvania, and 56c.@58c for Southern ₱ bushel. Corn opened with a fair inquiry at improved prices,—but closed tamely. Sales—18,400 bushels at 97c.@98c for mixed, in store; $1 for yellow, and 98c.@$1 01 for White, ₱ bushel. There was very little Corn received to-day.

PROVISIONS—Pork is saleable and steady. The transactions since our last comprise about 600 bbls., at $23 50 for Mess, and $19 50@20 50 for Prime, ₱ bbl. Cut Meats are in demand, and are firm at 10½c. @11¼c. for Hams, and 10c. for Shoulders, ₱ lb. Bacon is scarce and quiet at 11¾c.@13¼c. ₱ lb. Lard is more inquired for, and is firm. The transactions since our last reach about 700 bbls. and tcs., mostly fair to prime, at 14¾c.@14¾c. ₱ lb. Beef is in fair request at full prices. The transactions since our last consist of 425 bbls., at $14@$15 for Country Mess; $16 50@$17 for repacked Western Mess, and $17 50@$18 for extra Western do., ₱ bbl. New Prime Mess Beef, $22@$23 ₱ tc. Beef Hams, $23@$23 50 ₱ bbl. Butter is plenty and in very moderate demand, at 16c.@21c., for new Ohio; 18c.@23c. for common to very good new State, and 24c @25c. for prime to choice do., ₱ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 6c.@11c. ₱ lb.

FREIGHTS—Continue dull and heavy. For Liverpool—Cotton, 2a 5-32d. ₱ bale; Flour, 6d.@9d. ₱ bbl.; Grain, 2d.@8d. ₱ bushel; Beef, 6d.@1s. ₱ tierce; Resin, 6d.@9d. ₱ bbl.; and Heavy Goods, 10s @15s. 6d. ₱ ton. For other ports, proportionate quotations.

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, FRIDAY, JUNE 12 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The steamship Canada, with three days' later news from Europe, arrived at this port yesterday morning. Two discussions, which will excite some interest on this side of the Atlantic, had taken place in the British Parliament. One arose out of a motion by Mr. ROEBUCK for the appointment of a Select Committee, to take into consideration the relations between Great Britain and Brazil. And, in connection with this subject, a debate ensued on the Slave-trade, and on the means which should be adopted for its suppression. The London Times, in an article which we copy elsewhere, advocates the abandonment of the police supervision hitherto exercised by England in this matter. In the other Parliamentary discussion to which we refer, Mr. DISRAELI inquired the reasons for the non-ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty, and Lord PALMERSTON, in explanation, said that the only amendment made by the United States Senate, which the British Government would not adopt, was the one requiring an unconditional cession of the Bay Islands to Honduras.

The London Times announces that the St. Jean d'Acre screw line-of-battle steamship, of 101 guns, is to be fitted up for the purpose of taking the Halifax-side portion of the submarine telegraph cable instead of the Niagara, which will render her services in any way in which they may be available. We infer from this that it has been found impossible to ship any portion of the cable on board the Niagara.

The political news from the continent of Europe, by this arrival, is not of much importance. It is at length officially announced in the columns of the Paris Moniteur that a treaty has been signed, regulating in a definitive manner, the long-pending dispute between Prussia and Switzerland. By advices from Madrid, we learn that the differences between Spain and Mexico, which had been in a fair way to conclusion, have encountered fresh difficulties. Negotiations, however, have not been interrupted.

The Overland Mail had arrived at Trieste with later intelligence from India and China. According to last accounts, Admiral SEYMOUR was at Hong Kong, awaiting reinforcements, which were expected to arrive in a few weeks.

Details of news from the City of Mexico to the 10th ult. are received. Letters from Guayamas dated the 17th of April, assert positively that all the filibusters belonging to the CRABB expedition, with the exception of a boy 12 years old, had been shot. A rumor had obtained currency in the Capital that in revenge for the death of Gen. CRABB and his associates, the Californians had murdered a great many Mexicans, but there does not seem to be any creditable foundation for such a report. The Presidential election returns, as before announced, were, as far as received, in favor of Gen. COMONFORT.

Bad breaks are reported in the Erie and Genesee Valley Canals, in consequence of freshets caused by the late heavy rains. Miles of embankment have been swept away, and the delay in the forwarding of merchandise must be very serious.

In the Board of Councilmen, on Thursday evening, the question of giving to the City Inspector the cleaning of the streets was taken up. He was authorized to advertise for proposals, but the power to open them was reserved for the Councilmen. A Committee of Conference between Aldermen and Councilmen was agreed on to draw up ordinances and specifications.

The Joint Committee on Ordinances of the Boston Common Council, yesterday visited the institutions on Blackwell's Island. They spent the day profitably, and on returning, will doubtless graft our system upon their similar establishments.

In the Surrogate's Court, yesterday, further evidence was given in behalf of Dr. BURDELL'S blood relatives, to prove his absence from the City on the day of his alleged marriage to Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, and also that Rev. Mr. MARVINE, during the time of the inquest, had expressed himself as unable to recognize the body as that of the man he married.

The Wilson Small General Committee had a meeting last evening at Tammany. Several members were expelled for non-attendance, including Messrs. COCHRANE, FOWLER, FROMENT, HART, BELL, &c., &c. The Committee on the reorganization of the party reported progress, and promised to report finally on Tuesday next.

The trial of DENINY was continued, yesterday, in the Court of General Sessions, and the case for the prosecution brought to a close. The Fire Marshal and other witnesses were examined as on the last trial, and gave the same evidence. The defence opened their testimony and called several witnesses, whose evidence, however, was of little importance. The theory of the defence is that some party from the outside got into the premises and placed shavings, camphene, &c., for the destruction, with a view to injure DENINY. The trial will be resumed this morning, and will occupy the whole day.

The friends of the Colored Home celebrated the Seventeenth Anniversary of the existence of that institution yesterday. The reports showed it to be in a prosperous condition, and doing much good, although in need of additional funds.

There was a meeting at National Hall, last evening, of the friends of General WALKER, called to make arrangements for his reception in the City of New-York. Several speeches were made by Col. FARRAN, ELIJAH F. PUADY and others, and a Committee was appointed to make the necessary arrangements for his reception. The speeches were full of sympathy for the General, and hope of the future success of his cause, with him as its champion.

The Board of Governors for the Woman's Hospital met last evening at the Chapel in the University, and organized by the election of Hon. MARK SPENCER, President; Hon. EBASTUS C. BENEDICT, Secretary, and J. D. WOLFE, Treasurer. The following gentlemen were made a committee to procure a site for the Hospital: Dr. J. Marion Sims, H. M. Schieffelin, and Thomas B. Stillman. The following on Rules and By-laws: Joseph B. Colins, E. C. Benedict, and George J. Trimble. The following on Finance: Peter Cooper, J. B. Colins, G. T. Trimble, R. S. Kennedy and J. C. Green. The classification of the Governors into three classes holding for one, two and three years, was made by lot, after which the Board adjourned to meet at the same place, at 8 o'clock P. M., on the 26th inst.

Mr. CHARLES TURNER, the Deputy Street Commissioner, has resolved to perform the duties of Street Commissioner, and resist all attempts to put any one else in his place, until an appointment shall have been made, in accordance with the provisions of the new Charter. The following is a list of officers in the Street Commissioner's Office, together with their salaries. The list includes the offices formerly connected with the Department of Repairs and Supplies, which office was abolished by the new Charter and incorporated in the office of Street Commissioner.

Officers.	Salaries.
Street Commissioner	$5,000 [and a fortune.]
Deputy Commissioner	2,500
11 Heads of Bureaus, each	2,500—22,000.
10 Clerks, each	1,000—10,000.
5 Clerks, each	1,000— 5,000
5 Clerks, each	800— 4,000.
2 Messengers	800— 1,600.
Total	$48,100

Besides these there are one Collector and three Deputy Collectors, whose compensation is by fees, and usually amount to about $7,000 each per annum. There are also about one hundred Inspectors of contracts in constant employ, who receive their appointment from the Street Commissioner, and who get $1 50 per day, except Inspectors of wharves, piers and slips, who get $2 per day.

Capt. TURNBULL of the Eighth Ward and twenty-eight of his men declared last night for the new Commissioners, and went immediately to a new Station-house in Merritt's Hall, Spring-street. The new Commissioners appointed twenty-three men yesterday on the Police and sent notices to nearly two hundred of the old department to appear for trial. The old Board continues to dismiss and appoint.

The steamer City of Washington, KENNEDY for Liverpool, sailed yesterday at 9 A. M., with 131 cabin and 169 steerage passengers, and a moderate cargo. She took out $112,564 in specie on freight.

A woman named CATHARINE KEYE, wife of SAMUEL KEYS, residing in Hoyt near Butler-street, Brooklyn, was found dead in her bed on Wednesday evening, and by her side, nestling and bloody, her child three years old. From the appearance of the corpse it is supposed to be a case of death from violence at the hands of her husband, who has been committed to await the result of an investigation by the Coroner.

There was a meeting of the officers connected with the Street Department, in the Hall of Records, yesterday, at which resolutions of respect for the late Street Inspector were passed.

Company B, of the New-York Light Guard, held a meeting in Lafayette Hall, last evening, for the purpose of making arrangements to celebrate the approaching anniversary of their regiment, at New-Port.

The late murder at Rondout assumes unusual importance, and creates great excitement in the two Counties of Ulster and Dutchess, from the fact that it was the result of a life-long feud between the river inhabitants of those Counties. A full account of the fend, and its bloody results, we give elsewhere.

The Dallas-Clarendon Treaty.

Mediæval wisdom was so dependent upon dialectics for its developement that in the schools a functionary was maintained who bore the title of the "Master of Disputes," and whose office it was to exhaust his ingenuity in the invention of difficulties intangible, indefinite and insolnble by mortal man. There are seasons in the Parliamentary life of every free nation in which the help of such a personage becomes quite indispensable to the continued existence of an "Opposition." Just now the English House of Commons seems to be in this predicament. There are many and important questions, indeed, to be discussed by that House, out of some of which very serious and pregnant disputes may in time be expected legitimately to arise. But in the actual position of affairs, "Her Majesty's Opposition" are, practically speaking, indebted to the antique astuteness and the scholastic disputatiousness of Mr. BENJAMIN DISRAELI for the show of existence which they continue to maintain.

Mr. DISRAELI is a model "master of disputes." He is abundant in all the qualities essential to that character. He can neither be intimidated by an overwhelming force of hostile votes, nor impressed by a majestic array of unanswerable arguments. He will advance as joyously to the onset of a debate in which he foresees that defeat must be his inevitable portion, as to the collision from which he expects to come ont a Chancellor of the Exchequer or a Premier of England. He possesses, in short, all the unassailable qualities of the Jewish race, the qualities which provoke the scoffs as well as those which control the pockets of Christendom. A facile, a timid, or a merely respectable Premier would live in terror of such an insatiable, such an unscrupulous antagonist. But Lord PALMERSTON is more than a match for the "Cancasian" at his own weapons, and in every encounter which has yet taken place, the Minister has unhorsed his challenger. Such was the result of a brief joust which took place between the two champions on the 28th of May, in regard to the non-ratification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty. Our readers will find the particulars of the debate in another part of our columns. It is more than probable that Mr. DISRAELI hoped to provoke the Premier into some such expression of indignation as was wrung from him in a subsequent discussion of the relations between England and Brazil, by an assertion that England was in the habit of bullying the small powers and giving way to the great. But if such was Mr. DISRAELI'S expectation it was signally disappointed. Lord PALMERSTON made a short, clear and satisfactory reply to the questions which were addressed to him. He informed the House that negotiations were actually in progress between England and the United States in regard to an alteration proposed by the Senate of the United States to be made in that part of the Treaty which relates to the Convention between Great Britain and Honduras. This alteration, the nature and bearings of which we explained to our readers at the time when the Treaty was sent back to England with its amendments, turns out as we anticipated, to be the one point upon which the Government of Great Britain has resolved to make a stand. Lord PALMERSTON'S language in speaking of this matter, while it was commendably calm and courteous towards this country, was perfectly clear and cannot be misunderstood. He declared that while her Majesty's Government could not regard any of the amendments proposed by the United States as utterly unimportant, they were yet prepared to adopt these amendments, one and all, with the single exception of the clause from which the United States proposed to omit all reference to the Convention between England and Honduras. That Convention embodies stipulations as to the future regulation of the Bay Islands by Honduras, which England held it to be her duty to insist upon as essential to the welfare of thes Islands, and to which Honduras was believed to be ready to assent.

It was possible, said Lord PALMERSTON, that some technical difficulties might prevent or at least delay the ratification of the Anglo-Honduras Convention by Honduras. But it was the intention of England to insist upon the stipulation which she had inserted in the draft of that Convention. And it was therefore inevitable that England should decline to omit the consideration of these stipulations from the clause in her Treaty with the United States which referred to the Convention with Honduras. Her Majesty's Government had therefore proposed to the United States an article alluding to the cession of the Bay Islands to Honduras as conclusive only upon the acceptance by Honduras of the conditions and stipulations proposed to that Power by Great Britain. The issue between our Senate and the English Cabinet is joined then just where we have always asserted that it must be joined; and the refusal of England to accept the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty as "amended" by us is founded absolutely upon the modifications introduced into that Treaty by the ultra-Pro-Slavery fanatics of the Senate.

From these modifications our Government must recede, if we are to arrive at an immediate settlement of our long-standing and vexatious difficulties with England and Central America.

The English opposition have not gained much by the onslaught of their redoubtable Condottiere; but we on this side owe Mr. DISRAELI thanks for eliciting from Lord PALMERSTON so distinct a statement of the facts upon which we can found our judgment of the past and our expectations of the future conduct of our own Government.

If Mr. BUCHANAN desires, as we trust he does, an opportunity of rebuking the officious and domineering language of the Southern secessionists—if he wishes to read Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS a lesson in return for the patronizing proclamation recently put forth by that fillibustering Demosthenes, of his intention to convert the actual Administration into a succursale of the great church of Annexation and Disunion, whereof he himself is High Priest and the State of Mississippi the Temple—if Mr. BUCHANAN, we say, wishes sincerely to vindicate the independence of his Government and the integrity of his own political purposes, let him now throw the weight of his influence against the Pro-Slavery modification of the Dallas-Clarendon Treaty.

What have we to do with Slavery in Honduras? Are the United States registered among mankind as a wet-nurse for promising Slave Empires? or are we so anxious to be dismembered and disemboweled, that we are willing to keep alive a frivolous and wasteful quarrel with our chief customer and most natural ally, in order to facilitate the schemes which Mr. JEFFERSON DAVIS and Mr. PIERRE SOULE, aided and abetted by the intelligent and upright WILLIAM WALKER, are wisely concocting for the annihilation of the existing Union, and the formation of the great Caribbean Confederacy? The country will watch, with close and anxious attention, the development, at Washington, of the negotiations to which Lord PALMERSTON has alluded.

Good citizens must rejoice to perceive that there is a prospect of an acknowledgment, by even the Common Council of New-York, that the Charter and Ordinances of the Corporation are the legal guides, which must be followed, in cleaning the streets of this City. The report of the Special Committee, appointed by the Board of Councilmen, to inquire into and report upon, the causes which have resulted in the present neglected and filthy condition of the metropolis, is, on the whole, the ablest document which has been elicited from our municipal legislators, at the City Hall, during the five months of their existence. The investigation which the Committee have made, is thorough and comprehensive. It slurs over, it is true, many of the details of past abuses, but indicates their sources, and suggests a remedy. With supererogatory charity, it declines "entering into a minute investigation of the frauds that might have been (!) committed on the City: but it avows that there is "sufficient evidence to justify a moral conviction" of much evil doing, and it prescribes an efficient check for the future upon defaulting officials. The copious extracts from Dr. WYNNE'S evidence, respecting the systems of street-cleaning in operation on the Continent of Europe, are very valuable, and the statistics of sickness, engendered by filthiness, are equally appalling and instructive. The conclusion of the Committee, under this head, is that "the loss of health, life and property, on account of the filthy condition of our streets, is more, annually, than from any other one cause."

The report of the Committee of the Board of Aldermen on street-cleaning, fully indorses the sentiments contained in that of the Board of Councilmen. Its views are, in the main, just, and it also suggests a method of avoiding future corruption and neglect. We trust, however, that the second in the series of resolutions with which the report of the Aldermen's Committee closes, will not be adopted without modification. It reads as follows:

Resolved, That the City Inspector be, and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals for cleaning the streets of the City of New-York, the same to be done by contract, in such districts and under such specifications as may be directed by the Common Council; the bids to be for one year, and, also, in separate bids, for five years, the City Inspector reserving the right to reject all or any of the estimates, if deemed for the interests of the Corporation.

The clause in italics is clearly illegal. It leaves a power in the hands of the City Inspector which never was contemplated by the Charter, and which paves the way to endless abuses. It would be optional with the City Inspector to refuse all the contracts if he chose, and the probable effect of such a discretion is pointed out by the report of the Committee of the Board of Councilmen, which declares that "the evil arising from leaving the cleaning of the streets to the City, and not putting them out on contract, is that "the person elected to the office of City Inspector may be entirely incompetent or inefficient; or if a political aspirant, he may be an instrument in subserving the ends of his party by using the persons employed to forward its interests, which, in addition to the changes that he may think proper to adopt, would leave the department subject to the caprices and difficulties aforementioned." When the contracts are made, according to law, it then devolves upon the Common Council to confirm them or not as they may think wise and right; but the City Inspector ought not to have a shadow of discretionary power in the premises. The precedent would be extremely dangerous. The new Charter permits the Common Council, in certain extreme cases, to dispense with contracts to the "lowest bidder" by a three-fourths vote of both Boards. Some interpret this as even permitting the two Boards to overrule the contract system altogether. However this may be, the Common Council cannot transfer their right, and least of all to the very individual whose official position renders him most liable to be tempted to follow in the footsteps of EBLING, and others who have misused authority for private or political ends. The resolution drawn up by the Committee of the Board of Councilmen is less objectionable, and we trust that, with some amendments, it may be acquiesced in by the Committee of Conference. It is as follows:

"Resolved, That the City Inspector be, and he is hereby directed to advertise for proposals for cleaning the streets of the City of New-York, the same to be done by contract, in such districts, and under such specifications, as may be directed by the Common Council: the bids to be for one year, and also in seperate bids, for five years, subject to the required legal approval All bids to be submitted to the Common Council for approval."

Both Boards have virtually recognized the necessity of adhering to the contract system; though we fear that, in spite of the ability that has been shown by Messrs. JONES, OTTARSON and CRANE, and the representatives of the Committee of the higher Board, there is a lurking repugnance to give it the trial which the Charter contemplates. The 38th section of the Charter says:

"All contracts shall be entered into by the appropriate heads of departments, and shall be founded on sealed bids or proposals made in compliance with public notice advertised in such of the newspapers of the City as may be employed by the Corporation for the purpose; said notice to be published for at least ten days in each of the daily newspapers so employed; and all such contracts when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder, the terms of whose contract shall be settled by the Corporation Council as an act of preliminary specification to the bid or proposal, and who shall give security for the faithful performance of his contract in the manner prescribed and required by ordinance; and the adequacy and sufficiency of this security shall, in addition to the justification and acknowledgment, be approved by the Comptroller. All bids or proposals shall be publicly opened by the officers advertising for the same, and in the presence of the Comptroller."

The old Charter is equally unambiguous. Section 12 of the Act to amend the Charter, which passed the Legislature on the 12th of April, 1853, reads as follows:

"All work to be done, and all supplies to be furnished for the Corporation, involving an expenditure of more than $250, shall be by contract, founded on sealed bids or proposals, made in compliance with public notice, for the full period of ten days; and all such contracts, when given, shall be given to the lowest bidder, with adequate security. All said bids or proposals shall be opened by the Heads of Departments advertising for them, in the presence of the Comptroller and such of the parties making them as may desire to be present."

In Mr. EBLING'S time this law was evaded from nearly the commencement to the close of his administration. In 1855, by reason of the default of certain contractors, who were illegally appointed in the first instance, the work in several Districts was done, for a stated period, by the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps, with the consent of the Mayor and Comptroller. When the time expired, the community were electrified by the passage of a resolution through both Boards of the Common Council, directing "the Commissioner of Streets and Lamps to withdraw the advertisement inviting proposals for cleaning the streets of the City. This resolution was vetoed by the Mayor. The contracts were therefore made, but the Common Council refused to confirm them, and Mr. EBLING had full sweep until the very last hour in which he held office. Mr. MORTON has inherited his powers. He may, perhaps, intend to do perfect justice to the City, and it may be the agreeable duty of the press to point him out as a public benefactor, in the performance of the responsible duties of his office. We look, however, with great suspicion upon the steps which have thus far been taken, principally in annulling contracts, without instantly advertising for new ones.

The following table, which is published in the report of Messrs. JONES, OTTARSON and CRANE, shows the cost of cleaning the streets, annually, since the year 1832, with the amount received for manure. It indicates, clearly enough, the monstrous nature of the frauds which have been perpetrated under the head of manure alone. A comparison of the years 1838 and 1839 with the years 1854 and 1855 at once suggests the inquiry—how, with nearly a doubled population and area, could the sale of manure have fallen off eighty-five per cent. without wholesale stealing on the part of the head of the Department of Streets and Lamps and his subordinates? The same thing may occur again, unless precautions are taken by the proper authorities.

The Committee remark that the variation "from four to fifty thousand dollars in the prices obtained for manure shows conclusively that there must have been extensive frauds or gross negligence somewhere in the Department." Superintendent MOTT gives it as his opinion that the manure of this City should always fetch $50,000. We think that a more correct estimate would be from $80,000 to $100,000. In no case should the remuneration for it sink below the sum which was obtained sixteen years ago. Deducting the value of garbage, the City ought to be kept always clean, under strict specifications, for a sum not over $275,000 annually. The Common Council will do well to scrutinize closely the character of new contractors, and their securities ought not only to be pronounced "adequate," but they should be held responsible in case of neglect or default. An opportunity presents itself of healing the mischiefs which have become apparently incurable. The reports of the two Committees, particularly that of the Committee of the Board of Councilmen, are a good beginning in the work of reform, and we trust to be able to chronicle that it has been effectually followed up.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.—The London Times pronounced the Niagara one of the most beautiful, as she is one of the largest, men-of-war in the world. The London Mechanics' Magazine gives a long and particular description of the Niagara, and pronounces her "without exception the ugliest ship of war it has ever seen." But both of these authorities may be right in their decision, though they differ so widely. The Niagara may with justice be called ugly if the old style of sailing ships be taken as the standard of naval beauty: but, if she be looked at with an unprejudiced eye, that only seeks to find in her the best form adapted to the most efficient service in the line for which she is intended, why then she is undoubtedly beautiful.

We regret to learn that the Niagara has been found not to be well adapted to the purpose for which she was sent to England, in consequence of a lack of space in which the telegraphic wires can be coiled away, and that a ship from the British Navy has been selected to take her place. The Niagara, however, will accompany the Expedition, it is reported, and will be on hand to render any assistance that may be required.

One Word More With the Tribune.

The New-York Tribune, having retired (in that apology) from its assertion that the TIMES had disseminated a downright falsehood in regard to the Free-State men of Kansas, proceeds to prove, to its own satisfaction, that the TIMES and the National Era recommended a very different policy from that which has been actually adopted by Governor ROBINSON and his party. We do not think it worth while to engage in a controversy with our cotemporary on this subject, and we only allude to the article in which the said demonstration is attempted, for the purpose of correcting another and a very serious blunder, into which our unfortunate neighbor has fallen. A blunder, we call it, because, as it gravely affects the character of this journal, we cannot suppose that our cotemporary, in pretending to do us an act of justice, would be guilty of a piece of deliberate and insolent misrepresentation.

"It may be all very true," observes the Tribune, "and we hope it is so, since that journal positively denies it, that the TIMES has not been sold to the Administration nor to Governor WALKER."

The TIMES has never "positively denied that it has been sold" to the Administration, to Governor WALKER, or to anybody else—simply and solely because from no respectable source has such an assertion been made inviting denial,—and because there are some accusations of which it is not quite consistent with self-respect for any man or any set of men to take any sort of notice until they are formally made and by responsible parties. Our neighbor, who finds it so easy to believe that great masses of the public would rejoice to hear of the venality of a public press or of a public man, may perhaps be insensible to the indecency of such allusions and insinuations as these to which we have called his attention. But when we assure him that honorable and rational men habitually regard charges of bribery and corruption as partaking of the nature of defamation, we are sure that he will be quick to perceive the error of his ways. For we remember that several years ago, when the Editor of the Tribune was examined in England before a Committee of the House of Commons, he was particularly earnest in denouncing the carelessness of character and of reputation noticeable, as he justly observed, in some of the less reputable journals of the United States.

BLINK BONNY.—If any intelligent newspaper reader had been asked two days since the meaning of Blink Bonny, he could not have told whether it meant a man or a mountain. But now Blink Bonny is as well known as Flying Childers or Eclipse. Blink Bonny is the last successful hero of the English turf—the horse who won the race at the last "Derby day," at Epsom. England makes believe in her encouragement of all arts but the great art of horse-racing—into that she enters heart and soul and with a will. There was a vast deal of ostentatious preparation for the opening of the Art-Treasures Exhibition in Manchester, but there was very little heart in the business; it is only a horse race or a yacht race that England goes to see without prompting. The Derby day at Epsom is the great national holiday, or rather the great holiday of London, in which all parties and conditions participate, from the Queen down to the Cadger. Parliament adjourns on that day, and the Premier, in alluding to it, called it "the day of our Isthmian Games." In the language of the "leading journal," on Derby day:

"With one accord, the busiest population in the world shakes itself loose from the trammels of business—gives over for a brief breathing-space the hungry hunt for gold, and swarming forth from its close-pent hive of toil and accumulation, spreads itself under the open eye of Heaven over the broad slopes of the Surrey Downs. The tradesman shuts his shop, the merchant closes his ledger, Westminster Hall misses its accustomed wigs, Capel-court is a solitude, and Cheapside a desolation. The Legislative wisdom of the country condescends, of course for this day only, to cold chicken and champagne. Statesmen allow Europe, the Empire, and Her Majesty's Opposition, for 24 hours to take care of themselves. Even the Journalist (that most unrelieved of toilers) drops his hand for awhile from that never-reeling plough which, working by night as well as by day, turns up each morning the motley crop of facts and speculations, missing which the modern world would be as forlorn as CHARLES LAMB deemed the old one must have been, without the fumes of the great Virginian weed—the breakfast table left to mere tea and toast—the dinner table bankrupt of topics, and the diner-out reduced to the short commons of his own wit."

It is a blessed thing for the "great Wen," as COBBET used to call London, that there is a sufficently powerful attraction even in one day of the year to draw its inhabitants away from their dens and confinement. The object is nothing more noble, to be sure, than to see which of a dozen or two of horses is the fastest runner, and the motive of the majority who go to witness the trial of speed may be the base one of gambling; but still the love of recreation is at the bottom of the sport, and the landable object of improving the breed of the noblest of domestic animals is incidental to it. It would be a good thing for New-York if we had an equivalent for the Derby Day here.

The winning horse at Epsom this year, as is always the case, was not the favorite, but Blink Bonny is now as famous as Bucephalus, and as much an object of adoration among the British people as the Duke of WELLINGTON was after the battle of Waterloo.

Personal.

Mr. MILBURN, the blind preacher of New-York, has arrived in England. He proposes to lecture in Liverpool and the large towns.

Dr. BRANDRETH'S proposition to give $40,000 for the completion of the Washington Monument, is much talked of.

WM. C. GODFREY, who has attained an unenviable celebrity by the charges against him in Dr. KANE'S book on the Arctic voyage, promises to tell the truth of his story in a forthcoming volume.

Senator WILSON has returned to Massachusetts from his Kansas visit. He looks well, though somewhat brown and travel-worn. He met with a very cordial and enthusiastic reception from the Free-State men in the towns and upon the river, and was treated kindly even by the Border Ruffians, many of whom were curious to see and hear the man who had taken so prominent a part in the Congressional debates and political affairs connected with Kansas events.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, June 11.

To-day is the anniversary of General WALKER'S arrival at the Bay of Realejo, on the Pacific side of Nicaragua, two years ago. Preparations were made to receive him here this evening, as he was in Cincinnati yesterday.

A meeting of citizens was held this afternoon at the City Hall, in Judiciary-square, to approve of the course of the President in the late riot. Ex-Postmaster JONES presided. Speeches were made by Mr. RADCLIFFE, and appropriate resolutions adopted. In consequence of the Mayor's card of caution the meeting was not fully attended.

The Governorship to Utah still hangs in the slings, and is certainly still uncertain. But this much is known—if it be not Gov. THOMAS, then it will be Col. CUMMINGS.

W. R. C. WEBSTER, who represented himself as the agent of Costa Rica, did not tarry here long after he sent off his famous dispatch. There was a certain Mr. WEBSTER in Nicaragua, who report says was envoy to the Penitentiary in New-York, whom Mr. WHEELER, the late Minister to Nicaragua, was very anxious to see. Whether there is any connection between the two gentlemen is not positively known.

The male applicants for office having been nearly all disposed of, the President has lately been besieged by the fair sex, principally of this city, suing for office for their sons, nephews and cousins.

The President's Mansion, during the Summer, is to undergo a thorough repair. The ceiling of the east room is to be repainted and frescoed, and everything put in order for a gay season next Winter.

Attorney-General BLACK, who has been telegraphed as being at St. Louis, and having a good time at the great rail road celebration, is hard at work in his office at Washington, not having been able to accept the invitation. UNO.

[FROM THE REPORTER OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Thursday, May 11

There was but a small attendance at the public meeting held here this afternoon. Resolutions were passed condemnatory of the invasion of the city by a band of lawless ruffians from Baltimore on election day, and commending the President, the zeal of the Mayor and the military, for their forbearance as well as for their effective execution of the orders given them on the occasion. The meeting quietly dispersed.

The Court of Claims will continue in session until the close of June, and in the meantime will hear any cases which parties may desire to submit.

Diplomatic Appointments—Utah Affairs.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

The President has been expected to make some diplomatic appointments during the absence of Gen. CASS. But he appears to be very slow in doing it. Those appointments announced, so far, since the 1st of June, were agreed upon before Gen. CASS left the city. His presence on here would not probably change the result. The expectants of diplomatic powers must have a large stock of faith and patience to endure the delays and disappointments to which they have been subjected.

The President stated, a month or more ago, that he was more pressed in behalf of individuals in South Carolina for missions than any persons in any other State. He has, it seems, settled this imbroglio by offering the Russian mission to Mr. PICKENS, after having previously offered him the mission to Spain, which he had declined. Mr. PICKENS was here in person some two months ago, and it was then understood that he sought either the London or Berlin mission. He has some chance for a seat in the United States Senate in succession to Judge BUTLER, and this he would prefer, no doubt, to a foreign mission. The vacant Senatorship will be offered to Gov. HAMMOND: that is, his friends will nominate and elect him, if he will consent to serve. This they offered to do heretofore, when Judge EVANS was chosen, but Gov. HAMMOND would not be brought out of his seclusion into active politics. Mr. PICKENS is on particularly confidential and friendly terms with Mr. BUCHANAN, and has been for a long time. This personal relationship has determined the choice of Mr. PICKENS for a foreign mission, in preference to Gov. AIKEN or Mr. PRESTON, who were also in view. On the score of political influence and popularity, in South Carolina, no one man is much ahead of another. No man, since the time of Mr. CALHOUN, has had any general popularity in that State. Col. BROOKS came as near to it as any one, in consequence of the Sumner affair, and might have succeeded his uncle in the Senate, had he survived him.

It may be doubted whether Mr. PICKENS will accept the Russian mission, and if he do not, I still think it will go to Mr. MCCLERNAND, of Illinois.

Col. W. A. RICHARDSON desired a first class foreign mission, and had determined to take nothing short of it. He was not qualified for it, but still he is better qualified for that than for the post of Governor of Nebraska, which really requires more ability than any mission, except that of England. But Illinois is to have one foreign mission, and the recipient is, no doubt, to be Mr. MCCLERNAND.

The President has not appointed a Governor for Utah yet.

Governor P. F. THOMAS, of Maryland, was to make up his mind, to day, whether to accept it or not. Two or three other gentlemen, within reach, have been named, and if any of them assent to take the place the appointment will be made this week.

Surveyor General BURR'S statements have stripped the Utah matter of some of its bloody horrors. He does not think that the Mormons will engage in hostilities against the Federal powers; and the small force of a thousand troops enough for the purpose of supporting the civil authority in the maintenance of the laws. The Case of the United States and State Authorities in Ohio.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, June 11.

The case of the State against the United States Authorities was resumed this morning. A number of depositions were read of a rebutting character, mainly substantiating the testimony of ELLIOT, previously given, to the effect that no excess was committed by the Marshal's posse. Some of the affidavits went to show that the first attempt at firing came from the Sheriff's party.

Attorney-General WOLCOTT, on behalf of the State and Sheriff, asked for an adjournment in order to take other depositions. This was objected to, and a compromise made to the effect that rebutting testimony might be introduced at a future day.

Senator PUGH then commenced his argument in behalf of the Marshal and others. He closed this afternoon, and was followed by Mr. MASON, for the defence.

The case will probably again be adjourned over in a day or two. No decision will be made for some time.

Military Operations Against the Hostile Indians.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, June 11.

Major SEDGWICK, with two squadrons of cavalry, left Fort Leavenworth on the 18th ult., and Col. SUMNER, with one squadron, left on the 20th. One squadron from Fort Kearney, and three companies of infantry from Fort Laramie, would join SUMNER, who goes against the Cheyennes and other hostile Indians. Major SEDGWICK was to unite his force to that of Col. SUMNER at Bent's Fort, in the Cheyenne country.

ALBANY, Thursday, June 11.

The following dispatches have been received here by the Canal Auditor:

ROCHESTER, June 11.—There was a tremendous deluge at Dansville, on the 9th instant. The Canal is in ruins for three miles from Dansville down the side cut. Three locks have given way. The Aqueduct remains, but has an embankment.

PENN YAN, June 9.—A severe freshet, this morning, caused serious damage along the whole line of the Crooked Lake Canal. There is a break in Culvert No. 2 from the Lake, near the Guard Lock, and another on the level above Dresden Locks; and as the levels are filled with mud and gravel navigation cannot be resumed before Saturday or Monday next. The storm was the most severe known here for many years.

CUBA, June 11.—The Oil Creek Genesee Valley Canal gave way this evening. The Canal is also somewhat injured.

RICHMOND, Thursday, June 11.

JEFFERSON RANDELL, who was sent away from Rockingham County for burning barns and plundering, returned, and was seized by a Vigilance Committee and hung on a tree on Tuesday. His son-in law was in custody, and was to be hung yesterday.

The Public Works of Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, June 11.

The hearing of the application for an injunction against the sale of the Main Line of Public Works has been postponed till next Tuesday, when the Supreme Court will meet here.

General Walker at Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI, Thursday, June 11.

General WALKER and suite passed through this city this morning for Washington, viâ the Marietta Railroad.

Amusements.

POSTPONEMENT.—Madame LA GRANGE'S concert was postponed last night, in consequence of the indisposition of the pianist or the piano, we forget which. There is a novelty in the cause of the postponement which almost reconciles us to it—pianists or pianos are so remarkably scarce in New-York. But to the disappointment of not hearing Madame LA GRANGE we cannot be reconciled.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—TALFOURD'S classic play of "Ion" is to be produced here to-night, with Mrs. J. W. WALLACK in the principal part.

MR. SOTHERN.—Few men have made more rapid strides in their profession than M. SOTHERN, of Wallack's Theatre. In a season or two he has placed himself in the front rank of light comedians, and given abundant evidence of very remarkable versatility. During Miss HERON'S engagement he supported her in tragic parts with an ability which astonished the frequenters of the Theatre. On innumerable occasions he has displayed the most admirable comic humor, (never more so than in the burletta of "Jenny Lind," produced here on the occasion of Mrs. HOEY'S benefit.) Thus he carries easily the two extremes of his profession. Our object in referring to these things is simply one of kindness, and because, in the hurry of criticism, we frequently think more of an artist than we say. Mr. SOTHERN is about to leave New-York. He has engaged the Halifax (N. S.) Theatre, and will probably confine his talents to that frigid sphere for some time to come. A willing and capable servant of the public deserves a good letter of introduction to a strange public, and we trust that this will be accepted as such. Mr. SOTHERN has, we are informed, engaged a very superior company.

Musical.

The Music Publishers have just held their Annual Convention in Philadelphia, and the wisdom of their trade regulations is becoming more apparent each year. The Board now consists of twenty-three publishing houses, nearly all of which were represented in the Convention. All the publishing houses of consequence in the United States, are now members of the Board, and under the fostering care of their regulations the musical resources of the country are becoming rapidly developed. We are even now far from being dependant on Europe for our musical works, and the time is fast approaching when the works of our standard American authors will be as eagerly sought after, for republication in Europe, as those of BAYER, ASCHER, LISLEY, GLOVER, D'ALBERT, &c., by American publishers. Already the music of WALLACE, WOLLENHAUPT and GOTTSCHALK is published simultaneously in all the principal cities of Europe. The ballads of FOSTER, THOMAS and ROOT have been issued in England with almost as much success as they have had here. These yearly meetings are assuming a sort of trade-sale feature, which will add still more to their interest.

One very important feature of public interest is the determination to print a trade catalogue, containing a complete list of all music published in the United States, with the names of the publishers. This was attempted last year, but some unforeseen difficulties intervened, which are now entirely removed. Mr. GEO. P. REED, of Boston, the first President of the Board, having retired from active business, was elected an honorary member, as were also Messrs. WEBB & PETERS, of Louisville, and Messrs GOULD & WINNER, of Philadelphia.

Mr. OLIVER DITSON, of Boston, was elected President for the ensuing year; Mr. GEO. WILLIG, of Baltimore, Vice-President; and Mr. JAMES F. HALL, of New York, Secretary and Treasurer. Their next meeting will be in Cincinnati, on the first Wednesday of June, 1858. We hope these gentlemen will bear in mind that the musical interests of the country are, to a great extent, in their hands, and that their course should be such as to foster our native talent, and further the cause of good music by a liberal and diffusive policy.

Obituary.

The late Com. STEVENS, whose death we announced yesterday, was widely known as the Commodore of the New-York Yacht Club. Mr. STEVENS was chosen Commodore of the Club at its formation, and remained so until he resigned, about one year since. About 1827, Mr. STEVENS started the first "Day Boat" on the Hudson River. The New Philadelphia made the trip to Albany regularly in twelve hours. Few now living remember that Col. STEVENS predicted, many years ago, that carriages driven by steam would run on a road along the banks of the Hudson, from New-York to Albany. Locomotives had not then been built, and it was over forty years after that prediction was published in one of our New-York newspapers before it was fulfilled. Col. STEVENS was the inventor of the first propeller. Within about a week after FULTON'S first paddle-wheel boat made her first trip to Albany, driven by an engine built by WATT & BOLTON, in England, a boat driven by a steam-engine and screw, planned by and built under the eyes of the father—ROBERT—with JOHN at the helm and ROBERT at the engine—crossed the New-York harbor between Hoboken and this City. That propeller is now preserved at Hoboken, and challenges the admiration of our mathematicians and mechanics of the present day by its curves and efficiency of form.

In 1830 the STEVENSES turned their energies to constructing the Camden and Amboy Railroad. At this time only two other railroads had been undertaken. It was constructed under great difficulties, but it was successful from the first. From the time of the construction of this Road to the present, JOHN C. STEVENS has been a large stockholder, a director and an active manager of it.

Mr. STEVENS'S taste for horses has aided much to improve the breed of these animals in the part of the country. His skill and knowledge of the points and condition of a horse, and his judgment in training, enabled him to bring his race horses to the stand on a race day in the best condition of which they were capable. This, with his self-possession and quick decision gave him great advantages during a race. He was the owner of several of the fleetest racers of his time. His challenge, by the offer of a bet of $20,000 on Eclipse against any southern horse, resulted in the great race between Eclipse and Henry.

Mr. STEVENS, married MARIA LIVINGSTON, and purchased a residence at Red Hook, on the Hudson River, where for many years he resided, and devoted himself to agriculture and the adornment of his county-seat. When he cultivated his farm he led his men in the harvest, and asked no one to cut more grass than he did himself. Ill-will to his fellowman was discordant to his nature.

During the last 15 years of his life he resided at South Amboy. Here he devoted much attention and money to the improvement of his country seat. It contains over 500 acres, and besides its productive fields, is possessed of many attractions which are the result of art. Upon a hill he formed an artificial lake covering about five acres of ground, which he stocked with choice varieties of fish. Extensive graperies also add to the beauty and value of the place. He had no children. Mr. STEVENS was a Whig in principle. He has recently been engaged, in connection with his relative, Mrs. CONOVER, in planning and erecting at their private expense at South Amboy a free Espicopal Church, a school building, a hospital, and a home for the indigent widows and orphans of those who have been in the employ of the Camden and Amboy Company, and others, in circumstances of need, who may seem worthy of favor. Last November Mr. STEVENS removed from South Amboy to Hoboken. About six months ago he sold his interest in the property of the Hobokan Land and Improvement Company to his brother, ENOS A. STEVENS, and retained in his own possession real estate amounting to only half of a block of houses in Hoboken. The amount of his property is probably $1,500,000.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met yesterday afternoon. The President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the chair.

NEW CITY HALL.

The resolutions restraining the Comptroller from paying bills for the erection of a new City Hall until authorized by the Common Council, was passed.

CLEANING THE STREETS.

The resolution authorizing the City Inspector thoroughly to clean the streets, and to advertise for proposals for cleaning the streets then came up, having passed the Board of Aldermen.

Councilman JONES objected to the system which left the control of street-cleaning in the hands of the City Inspector, or of any other executive officer.

Councilman BRADY urged immediate action. He was opposed to sending the matter back, or from one Board to the other.

Councilman JONES said that the imputation cast on the Board showed insincerity on the part of the last speaker. The Board had passed resolutions on this subject four weeks ago.

The question was taken separately on the first resolution authorizing the City Inspector to clean the streets. That was passed.

The second resolution, authorizing the Inspector to advertise for proposals, then came up, and was amended so that the discretionary power to enter into these contracts was taken from the City Inspector and vested in the Common Council. The resolution as so amended was passed.

The third resolution was then considered and carried, appointing a Committee of conference between both Boards to draw up ordinances and specifications. Councilmen FRANSWAY, COLLIER and WARNER were so appointed.

Councilman CAMPBELL said that these documents must be regarded as waste paper until passed on by the Board of Aldermen, and that delay was inevitable. How could the Inspector proceed forthwith Would not the Mayor proceed against him?

The President checked further remarks of that nature as out of order. This Board had done its duty, and knew nothing of the special relations between the City Inspector and the Mayor.

Several documents in reference to grading Seventy-ninth street and similar matters were referred to appropriate Committees. After which the Board adjourned to Monday.

The Lost Steamship Louisiana.

CORRECTED LISTS OF KILLED AND SURVIVORS.

From the Galveston Civilian.

Dead and Bodies Recovered.—Phillip Millhouse, Alabama, old man; Joel (Uncle Joe) Hamilton, Gonzales; M. G. Mills, Clinton, La; Col. Henry Bainbridge, U. S. Army; Elizabeth Travers, chambermaid; Mrs. Tschaeke, New Braunfels; German lady and (supposed) grand child, two years; another German lady, unknown: Henry ——, porter.

Missing and Certainly Lost.—E. J. Brown, bar keeper; a negro man of Cleveland, of Lavaca; Franz Tschaeke and three children, New Braunfels; Young Millhouse, Alabama; W. P. Dixon, Alexandria, Va.; Mrs. Mitchell, Chiolo, Texas or New Orleans; Senny S. D. Etter, ten years old, Indianola; E. C. Brenham, Columbia, Mo.; — Temps, discharged soldier, with Col. Bainbridge; Lacy Jones and lady; Aaron Clark; nine seamen—number not positively certain; six of negro crew, one belonging to Oscar Farish; three cooks.

Saved—Capt. Henry Shepard, Commander; Chas. H Hughes, clerk; S. D. Clark, first mate; Andrew Smith, second mate; John Driscoll, cabin boy; Richard Finn, first engineer; Michael Howley, Bryan Cowley, firemen; Samuel Walker, Christian Scharpff, pastrymen; James Brown, watchman; John Howley, fireman; A. D. Cleaveland, lady, child and servant girl, Lavaca; John E. Wheeler, Indianola; Daniel Sullivan, Lavaca; P. S. Miller, Moore W. Garrison, New-York; Geo. W. Grover, Galveston; negro boy of Millhouse, Alabama; W. R. Friend, Clinton, De Witt County; negro woman and man of Mr. Friend; Ross Kennedy, Texas; Mrs. Elizabeth Harr, Corpus Christi; Miss A. E. Frichie, Phelps, Ontario County, N. Y.; Dr. John F. Early, Charlottesville, Va.; Miss Tschaeka, 11 years, (her father, mother and three children lost,) Smith, Alexandria, Va.; Young Early, Va.; Slaughter W. Ficklin, Charlottesville, Va.; Dr. Arnold, Columbus, Mo.; Jno. Sanford, Texana, Tex.; Samuel Wills, Wisconsin; M. Well, Goliad; Frank V. D. Stucken, Fredericksburg, Texas.

The remains of Col. BAINARIDGE were committed to the care of Gen. NICHOLS—those of Mr. HAMILTON to that of his friend, JNO. HENRY BROWN. Both being Masons, received also the fraternal attention of the Order and their solemn rites of burial. At 6 P. M. Sunday, an immense procession, jointly by the Galveston Guards, Gen. MOLEON, commanding, (escorting the remains of Col. B.;) the Masonic Fraternity, and about twelve hundred citizens, with two magnificent bands of music—Messrs. Wm. T. Austin, J. E. Haviland, A. S. Ruthven, John N. Reed, H. B. Andrews, Sam. G. Powell, Stephen Kirkland and John Henry Brown, pall-bearers—moved from the Strand to the Episcopal Church, where Rev. B. EATON performed the solemnly-beautiful service of that Church; thence, by the silvery light of the queen of night, the procession passed on to the cemetery. Mr. JAMES SORLEY performed the mystic service; the brethren threw in the emblems, and Rev. Mr. SEAT fervently addressed the Throne of Grace. The service over, the subdued, stricken multitude slowly returned.

The effects of those recovered remain in the temporary possession of Dr. J. HANNAY, Coroner, who held the several inquests.

The remains of Messrs. MILLS and MILLHOUSE were taken on respectively to Louisiana and Alabama.

As near as we can learn, about thirty to thirty-five are not mentioned in our list. Of these we think six or eight are safe, but we have not their names.

The wreck sunk at 8 A. M. yesterday, in sixty feet of water.

The pilot-boat Lafayette, commanded by Captain WALTERS, was the first to go ont. She first picked up Dr. EARLY and transfered him to the Galveston. She took from the wheel of the wreck Messrs. FICKLIN, SANFORD and HOWLEY, and picked up the dead body of Col. BAINARIDGE and four others, and received another from the light-boat Sam. Williams.

There were 159 beeves an board and consumed. The fire originated between decks, and was beyond control before discovered.

Mr. HUGHES preserved no books or list of passengers.

We have not time to do justice to the noble conduct of Captain DENISON, the officers and crew of the Galveston. Their praise is on every lip.

Neither will our time allow of proper tributes to Capt. CORNELL, H. WILSON, WALTERS, and the officer of the Sam Williams, and several others. We defer it for a day or two. Let us say they did well.

Writing on Monday, with the latest facts before him, the editor of the Civilian thus more circumstantially narrates tha dreadful calamity:

"A little after I o'clock, ANDREW SMITH, second mate, was on tha watch. About twenty minntes after 1 he smait fire, and soon discovered smoka issuing through tha forward hatch and port holes. He called Capt. SHEPPARD from his room, and with him and another man, went below and found the fire was amidships below. Capt. SHEPPARD at once ordered the two hose to be rigged and put to work, and changed the course of the ship for the Bar. Mr. CLARK, first mate, and Mr. SMITH, endeavored to rig the hoes, but before they could do so—indeed, in a few moments—the flames burst through the upper midships, and rendered it impossible. Each mate then sought to prepare and lower the boats. Some 20 persons were lowered on the first one, (the ship moving 11 knots,) but she capsized. Only 8 of the number regained the boat (Mr. GARRISON being one) and held on to the bottom—two of the eight, however, afterwards drowned. The other six were saved by the steamship Galveston, after daylight.

Messrs. CLARK and SMITH then lowered another boat, in which Mr. SMITH, 2d mate, GEO. W. GROVER, Miss FRISBIE, Mrs. HART, CLEVELAND, lady, child and servant woman; W. R. FRIEND and negro woman, young EARLY and the negro man of Mr. MILLHOUSE, were secured. Mr. CLARK, (testifies Mr. SMITH,) while the boat was still held by the rope, instructed Mr. S. to hold on to the last moment, while he (CLARK) sought others to put in the boat. CLARK found none, and the flames spreading rapidly, he and Mr. MILLS cast her off—a block striking and stunning Mr. M. in its rebound, so that he fell overboard and was drowned. It was then that Mrs. CLEVELAND cried out—"Oh! God, my brother is overboard!" The boat reached the beach in safety at sunrise.

Mr. CHARLES H. HUGHES, tha clerk, could not swim. Captain SHEPPARD instructed Mr. FINN to save Mr. HUGHES. They threw down a hatch-door; FINN made HUGHES jump over, ha following, and as HUGHES rose to the surface, FINN seized his hair with one hand and swam to the door with the other; both were picked up from it by the Galveston.

JOHN DAISCOLL, cabin boy, THOMPSON, second engineer, and a German seized a ladder and held on soma time. Tha German first drowned; THOMPSON finding that he must go, too, drew to JOHN, affectionately kissed him, and sunk to rise no more.

Capt. SHEPPARD, there is no doubt, was the last person to leave the ship. He clung alone to a light armchair. His watch stopped in his pocket at half-past two, which was undoubtedly the moment he leaped into the sea. The chair was but slender aid to him, but he is a good swimmer, and sustained himself till 9 or 10 o'clock, when he was picked up by the revenue cutter, Capt. COZNELL, (Capt. H. WILSON being on board actively assisting.) He could not have lived much longer. James BROWN, the watchman, and SAMUEL WILTS, of Wisconsin, were picked up not very far from Capt. SHEPPARD—these three being further west than any others.

Those who were saved were thrown among us without a dollar and almost naked—in many cases with nothing but a shirt. The Mayor of the city, believing that he would but express the feelings of every citizen of Galveston, appointed Messrs. JAMES SORLEY, JAMES C. HURD and JAMES M. BROWN, a Committee to provide and furnish them with all necessary clothing at the expense of the city. He also had all the dead bodies (not otherwise provided for) decently interred.

The Herald thinks there were 104 souls on board.

CRICKET—ELEVEN ENGLISH vs. EIGHTEEN AMERICANS.—This match was commanced yesterday at 2 P. M., but was stopped by a heavy rain. It will be resumed to-day at 9 A. M. precisely. The score thus far, is, American side, 27 runs with three wickets down.

News from Mexico.

FATE OF THE CRABB FILLIBUSTERS—PREPARATIONS AT VERA CRUZ FOR A SPANISH INVASION—THE PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION—ROBBERY OF THE PUEBLA DILIGENCE.

From the N. O. Picayune.

The Mexican schooner Union, Capt. SABATIER, arrived last evening with advices from Vera Cruz to the 21st ult., and from the city of Mexico to the 16th. We learn from a passenger by the Union, who but recently had a conversation with RADBY HIVEN, Esq., the brother-in-law of Capt. CRABB, that our worst fears have been realized—that all the prisoners taken at Cahorca, Capt. C. among them, had suffered the extreme penalty of the Mexican laws, or been massacred, as Mr. B. expressed it. The State, however, does not seem yet to be at peace, as we learn from the Trait d'Union that more artillery and munitions of war had been sent thither.

Fifty-eight in number, the prisoners taken at Caborca, were all shot on the spot, as before recorded, "the life of one youth only being saved," says the official account, "as evidence of the national magnanimity." The names of the unfortunate individuals, except that of the commander, are not given.

The rumor prevailed at the City of Mexico on the 14th and 15th ult., that on the reception of this news in California, all Mexican citizens residing in that State, so far as they had fallen into the hands of CRABB'S friends, had been indiscriminately murdered. It had created great excitement at the capital, but the Trait d'Union had been unable trace it to any reliable source. It says:

"We do not know in what way this news could, by possibility, have reached the City of Mexico. We received nothing from San Francisco on the 13th, viâ Acapulco; and had it come by Manzanillo, it must have been brought by the courier of the day before, in which case we should have known more positively its source.

Unfortunately, however, this rumor is not without probability. In that country of bowie-knives and revolvers, anything is possible in a moment of popular excitement. In the eyes of certain people, of peculiar views of right and justice, these filibusters are heroes, and we should not be surprised if the merited fate of CRABB and his companions should be styled, on the other side of the frontier, assassination.

That the unhappy end of the filibusters has caused, throughout the State of California, a profound agitation we do not for a moment doubt; but we await fuller and more precise intelligence by reliable correspondence and the public journals.

In all probability, then, our next California mail will bring us exciting news. It will also bring, without doubt, the names of the unfortunate expeditionists.

We think with the Trait d'Union, however, that the rumor prevailing at Mexico had no foundation in fact. Our own dates from California are to the 5th ult., and is quite improbable, if not impossible, that they had later at the Mexican capital on the 14th.

The most extensive preperations are in progress at Vera Cruz, both at the fort and in the town, in anticipation of the threatened Spanish invasion. At the capital, also, as we learn from the Monitor, the same alarm prevails. A force of twenty-five thousand men, to be held ready for whatever emergency, is immediately to be raised, for which and other objects the Government was busy in getting together the necessary means.

The schooner James L. Day was still at Vera Cruz, under seizure for having run down a Mexican vessel.

The Presidential election returns were already coming in, and, as expected, were generally favorable to COMONFORT. Many of the Progressistas had declined to support Señor LERDO, that gentleman having refused to give to the public any further promises. He could see no good, but much harm, to result from such electioneering documents; besides a public man is best judged by his character and his antecedents.

The Supreme Court of Mexico sustains the decision of the Congress of Arbitration in the celebrated Barron case, in favor of Ex-Governor DEGOLLADO. The Trait d'Union mentions a rumor that the English squadron will soon make its appearance on the coast to support that claim.

The inhabitants of the city of Mexico were very much alarmed at the prospects of an inundation. Heavy rains had fallen, and the Trait d'Union thinks their fears were not without foundation. The difference in altitude between the grand plaza of the city, and the lake Chalco was, on the 11th, but 72 centimetres, or about 28 inches. The high water was believed to be due in part to the large number of Artesian wells, 166 as officially stated, sunk in the district, many for the purpose of irrigation. The water had showed signs of receding on the 16th, our latest date.

Sr. CALVO, chief of the San Luis rebels, has been condemned to ten years' exile or imprisonment; Gen. SANCHEZ, the same; Capt. CORTAS has been let off with five, and CONTRERAS with two years' exile or imprisonment.

The Siglo states that General OSOLLOS has been set at liberty. M. MARTIN RUI had also been set free.

The Puebla diligence was attacked by bandits and robbed, on the night of the 7th. Six passengers lost all they had, not only their money, but spare clothing. Other robberies on the same road are mentioned, and much insecurity was felt because of the inefficiency or connivence of the patrols. The famous bandit GUEVERA, and fifteen others, engaged in previous robberies, had been arrested.

The schooner Mary Taylor, from San Francisco to Ventosa Bay, Tehuantepec, with passengers and merchandise, was wrecked on the Pacific coast the 19th ult. The cargo was lost, but all on board saved. A correspondent of the Siglo attributes the accident entirely to the negligence of the Captain.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bitts, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us, that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES.—IN BUYING such an article as a sewing machine the truest economy is to buy the best. Those who purchase SINGER'S machines always get what they want, and use them with satisfaction and profit; while they who buy any of the cheaper and inferior machines in the market are sure to suffer disappointment, vexation and loss.

A LOVELY DRIVE.—THE MOST BEAUTIFUL drive in the vicinity of New-York is, beyond question, that on the line of road leading from Hoboken to Paterson, and recently opened by the PATERSON AND NEW-YORK PLANK-ROAD COMPANY. This road has a plank and also a gravel track and for smoothness of surface, easiness and uniformity of grade, leaves nothing to be desired by those who can appreciate the enjoyment of a quiet rural drive, with a light or heavy vehicle, along a road free from dust, and combining some of the most enchanting scenery to be found anywhere. The splendid view from the East side of the hill, about a mile and a half from Hoboken, is unrivaled. On the western slope of the same hill the prospect, so varied and extensive, yet so different, is not less to be admired; while the track beyond the Hackensack River, a perfect level of over two miles, is indeed equal to any race course. Again, in going through the gorge at Shawbank, a scene of quiet loveliness breaks at once upon the sight, formed by the secluded village of Acquackanonk; at Paterson, with its magnificent "Falls of the Passaic," the ride terminates; in passing along and enjoying the beauties of nature, those "creature comforts" so necessary to sustain both man and beast, are not found wanting at the various places of entertainment along the line. Those of "COLLINS & COLEMAN," beyond the third mile post; WINANS, at the Half way House, seven miles out; COSTNER'S, on Berry's Hill; EVERSON'S & VAN ORDEN'S in the Village of Acquackanonk, and last, though not least, BRADY'A, at the Passaic Falls, are alike distinguished, as well by the excellence of their refreshments, as by the quiet, gentlemanly attention of their hosts.

Boats leave Christopher-st. at the hours and half hours. Canal-st. at the quarter hours.

ROGERS & RAYMOND (LATE ROGERS & CO.) open the Summer season with a stock of gentlemen's and boys' clothing, of unusual magnitude, and intend always to keep even with the market in the freshness of their styles, and below it in price. Call at the warehouse corner of Fulton and Nassau sts., and see the Summer fashions.

AUCTION SALES.

E. H. LUDLOW, Auctioneer.

POSITIVE SALE OF CLEMONT, THE ELEGANT COUNTRY SEAT OF THE LATE MONTGOMERY LIVINGSTON AT CLERMONT, COLUMBIA COUNTY, N. Y., AT AUCTION.—E. H. LUDLOW & CO. will sell at auction on WEDNESDAY, July 1, 1857, at 3 o'clock P. M., at the Mansion House on the premises,) in pursuance of a judgment in partition,

The property consists of about 300 acres of land. On it is a mansion house built of brick and stone in the chateau style, of architecture. The rooms are celebrated for their beauty and proportion. The property is so well and favorably known, having been the residence of Chancellor Livingston and afterwards of Mr. Robert L. Livingston, that a particular description is unnecessary.

The lawn is bounded on its eastern side for a distance of nearly half a mile by the Hudson River, along the river bank; clumps of fine old forest trees break the river into a variety of picturesque landscapes. On the opposite side of the river and in the back ground of several pretty villages, are the Catskill Mountains. The view of these mountains from this place is surpassingly beautiful and perfectly healthy.

Its lawns (for it has three,) avenues, and trees, (it is believed,) are unequaled in this country.

The soil is of the very best. The garden excellent; a gardener is now working it.

It lies about 1¾ miles north of the railroad station at Tivoli, Dutchess County, to which the trains run in about three hours, and where the trains stop.

The library consists of some 2,000 volumes of choice works, (a list of which will be sold at M.

The celebrated Gobelin tapestry hanging in the drawing-room will be sold immediately after the property.

Persons can leave New-York by one or more trains in the A. M., and attend the sale or inspect the premises and return in the afternoon.

PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY.
$10,000,000.
MORTGAGE BONDS CONVERTIBLE.
$3,500,000 FOR CONSTRUCTION. $6,500,000 FOR REDEMPTION OF FUNDED DEBT.

Date, January 1, 1857. Principal payable January 1, 1887.

Interest at seven per cent., payable July 1 and January 1.

PRINCIPAL AND INTEREST PAYABLE IN NEW-YORK.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 468 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept. 1, 1858, and July 1, 1875, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which these three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which 2,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER of New-York, covering the Company's Road of 468 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depot grounds, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depot grounds of great value in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund.

The Redemption Bonds will remain under the control of the Trustees, and be issued only from time to time, as they can be exchanged for, or are required to be sold to redeem the outstanding Bonds of the three Companies consolidated, and the privilege of such exchange is now extended to holders of those Bonds, and their attention is especially invited to the advantages that will accrue to the Consolidated Company and themselves by such exchange.

The Construction Bonds are offered for sale to provide means to finish the Road between Plymouth and Chicago, 82 miles, and to ballast it and equip and furnish it with a full stock of Rolling Machinery, Engine-Houses, Shops, Station-Houses, &c., the estimates for all of which are nearly $3,000,000.

The Capital Stock of the Company is fixed at.. $18,000,000
The present cost of the Road is about..... 13,000,000
The paid Capital is nearly..... 6,000,000
The Funded debt secured on the Road is..... 6,638,000

The earnings of the Road, mainly from local traffic, since the consolidation, from the 1st of August, 1856, to the 1st of May, 1857, eight months, have been over $1,350,000. The net earnings for that time are at a rate of over 7 per cent. on the entire cost of the Road. They are the earnings of an unfinished and but partially ballasted and equipped road.

The earnings for 1857 are estimated at $3,000,000.

The Road is connected for 332 miles, from Pittsburg to Plymouth, Indiana, where its business passes to and from Chicago over another more circuitous route of different gauge.

The 82 miles between Plymouth and Chicago are in progress of construction, and far advanced toward completion. Four thousand tons of American iron are purchased. 40 miles of track can be laid this season, and the whole work completed within the next twelve months; after which the earnings will increase, as is believed, with the development of the business of the road, to a permanent income of $4,000,000 per annum.

The guarantee of this result are believed to exist in these facts:

1. The road has immense resources for local traffic in passengers and freights. It connects by the shortest line Pittsburg and Chicago, and passes through 24 counties and 15 county towns (including the termini,) the valuation of whose property for taxable purposes in 1855 exceeded $150,000,000—the counties embracing some of those the best developed and most productive in Ohio and Indiana, and the towns being among the most important centres of trade between Pittsburg and Chicago.

2. The road has over 15 lateral railway connections, bringing it in communication with the whole Western Railroad system—these connections conferring marked advantages to the road as a route over various and large portions of its line from Chicago to Toledo, Cleveland and Buffalo, and from Pittsburg to Indianapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, &c. A reference to a map will more fully illustrate this point.

3. The Road is a single line, without branches, and the longest continuous railroad in the United States, and for a whole length of 468 miles, part of a great central route, in connection with the Pennsylvania Railroad, of 818 miles from Philadelphia to Chicago, and of 906 miles from New-York to Chicago, viâ Philadelphia, and on completion of the Allentown Road in Pennsylvania, of 885 miles only from New-York to Chicago, thus saving from 52 to 72 miles in distance viâ Philadelphia, and from 73 to 93 miles viâ Allentown, as compared with the great route through New-York—making also the shortest route, of 798 miles viâ Harrisburg, between Baltimore and Chicago. In alignment and grades the entire line from Chicago to Philadelphia has marked advantages, no grades existing between Chicago and Philadelphia, going East, over 52 feet per mile. Between Pittsburg and Chicago no grades occur exceeding 47 feet per mile, and for 335 miles there are no grades over 26 4-10 per mile, and for more than that distance the route is practically a straight line. The Road, therefore, must become one of the most important, if not the most important, PERMANENT AVENUES of American commerce, and its traffic will be limited only by its capacity.

4. The Road will be completed at a low cost, as compared with other leading through lines, and has corresponding advantages in grade, alignment, &c., for safe, speedy and economical operation, and easy and cheap maintenance.

A full Exhibit of the history, condition and prospects of this Road, with copies of the Bonds, Mortgages, Articles of Consolidation, &c., has been prepared and will be furnished for the information of parties desiring to invest in the Bonds.

The Company solicits a full investigation of the merits of this loan. It is offered as one in every respect worthy the attention of capitalists, and applications are now invited for the Construction Bonds, $150,000 of which have already been sold.

A subscription for $1,500,000 of the Construction Bonds, conditional on that amount being taken, with the option to subscribers of taking $2,000,000 at the same rate, is open at the office of the Company, No. 37 William-st., (2d floor,) where all needful information will be furnished.

Office of Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Company, No. 37 William-st., New-York, May, 1857.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 2, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the installment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 12 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

BANK NOTICES.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 60 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending

THE POLICE.

Turning out and Putting in—Both Boards at Work—Stephen H. Munn (D. S.) Appointed in Place of Captain Dilks (N. S.)—The Eighth Ward Force Defines its Position.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners made new appointments on the Police yesterday. The names of those so appointed are:

John Washburn,	Robert Latte,
S. Sherwood,	Samuel B Lynt,
D. B. Albertson,	Elijah Procter,
John P. Girard,	J. L Macgown,
James Forten,	Justus Hawks,
Wm. Van Duser,	Enoch Jones,
Peter T. Smith,	Peter Duffy,
G. Bradford,	James McCloud,
Thomas Utter,	Gerardus C Glass,
C. W. Delahant,	Peyton Herbert,
Hewlett Smith,	Robert Stinson,
W. A. Russell.

The first nine are for the Ninth Ward. The others are divided between various Wards.

Nearly 200 notices were issued yesterday to members of the Department who have failed to recognise the new Board. These parties will be tried on Monday. The new Commissioners will proceed to fill up all vacancies in the Department without delay.

The old Board are doing the same, and yesterday a large force was sworn in to fill the vacancies in the Municipal Watch in almost every Ward.

If any burglaries or other violations of law are now committed, it will not be owing to a lack of a sufficient preventive force.

In only one instance, thus far, has any collision occurred between any of the rival forces in relation to the arrest of a prisoner. Officer McCONNELL, of the Metropolitan Police of the Third Ward, arrested, on Wednesday, one of the parties suspected of the robbery of the Spaniard, LA VEGA, in Walker-street, and was proceeding with him to the Station-house, when Officer McCLOSKEY (a detailed man belonging to the Municipal force) interfered and took the prisoner out of the hands of his fellow-officer's) hands, and fetched him to the Police Office. McCLOSKEY was specially reported to arrest the prisoner which McCONNELL had, and did so, when he found him in charge of a Metropolitan policeman.

Sergeant HUTCHINGS, of the Third Ward complains of the act on his returns yesterday, and Recorder SMITH, on being made aware of the affair, issued a warrant for McCLOSKEY's arrest, but up to 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon it had not been served. Mr. McCLOSKEY says he will not resist any warrant coming from the Recorder.

Letters and documents, of all kinds, continue to pass from and to both Boards, and all their officers.

LETTER FROM POLICEMAN KING.

NEW-YORK, June 11, 1857.

HON. FERNANDO WOOD: At 1 o'clock P. M. this day I received a summons, signed ALEX. MING, to appear before the late Police Commissioners at 2 o'clock P. M., to answer to a charge of insubordination. Since I have been connected with the Police Department, I have always taksu pleasure in obeying the orders of my superior officers, and no charges have ever been preferred against me, as the records will attest. I would gladly respond to your request, could I consistently violate existing laws. The Legislature of this State, at its last session, amended the Police law, vesting the appointment of members of the Department in Commissioners, other than those prescribed by the late law. The Supreme Coort has decided that law as constitutional and as his Honor the Mayor, immediately subsequent to the passage of the Maine law, in an address, declared it the duty of all officers, as well as citizens, to obey existing laws, until their constitutionality was settled by the Courts, I find myself compelled to concur in the opinion them so clearly expressed. How can I, then, by obeying your present orders, carry out the instructions which you then gave to the members of the Police Department? I think I cannot, and therefore feel constrained to decline your request.

With a determination faithfully, as ever, to discharge my duty as a member of the Police Department, I remain very truly yours,

RICHARD KING.

We have received the following from the Municipal Captain of the Twenty-second Ward:

A NOTE FROM CAPT. WITTES.

SIR: Please correct the published statement that twenty-three of my command declared, last Saturday, for the Metropolitan Police Commissioners. But six of the force in this the Twenty-second District,—one lieutenant, four patrolmen and one doorman,—have given in their allegiance to the new Board.

DANIEL WITTES,
Captain of Twenty-second Police District.

IN THE EIGHTH WARD.

The question now or old was put last night to the Police force of the Eighth Ward. The result was, for the old Commissioners—30. For the new Board, Capt. TURNBULL and 27 men.

Both the Lieutenants, STAGE and KONLER, declared for the old Board.

Everything passed off quietly.

Doorman CUMMINGS, when asked how, answered: "For the ould shtock to the last, be jabers—how else dy's suppose? How in the d—l else?"

Capt. TURNBULL and the force for the new Board surrendered their stars and caps, and went to a new Station-house at Merritt's Hall, No. 185 Spring-street.

The old Board have not appointed any Captain yet.

The old Board, among many other things which they did yesterday, appointed Sergeant STEPHEN MUNN, of the Sixteenth Ward, to the captaincy of the Fifteenth Ward in place of DILKS, removed for "insubordination."

A man giving his name as JAMES QUARRY, and his residence at No. 20 Amity-street, called at the Mayor's Office, and at Chief MATSELL's Office, also, and declared his willingness to act as Captain of the Fifteenth Ward without pay. His patriotic offer was appropriately declined.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

The Slave-Trade—Case of the Ellen.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—JUNE 11.

Before Judge Betts.

The United States vs. The Brig Ellen, her tackle, &c., and her cargo.—This case, which is a suit brought to forfeit the vessel on a charge of being fitted out for the slave-trade, was commenced to-day. Mr. McKeon and Mr. Joachimssen conducted the prosecution. Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohne appeared for the claimants of the vessel, and Mr. Black for the claimant of the cargo.

The libel and answer being read, the District-Attorney put in evidence the Register of the vessel, a clean bill of health in Portuguese, and a clearance for Loando, the manifest of the cargo and the shipping articles, by which the voyage appeared to be from New-York to Ambris and posts on the west coast of Africa.

Capt. Fownes, of the revenue cutter, was the first witness sworn. He was first examined as to his interest, and it appearing that he was one of the informers, and as such entided to a share of the forfeiture, he executed a release of his interest on the spot, and then proceeded to testify as follows:

I know the Ellen; my attention was first called to her on the 25th or 26th of April; she was then lying off the Battery; a hermaprodite brig of about 150 tons; I know Capt. Van Vechten, her master; I have known him some years; some years ago I boarded with him in Atlantic-street in Brooklyn; the vessel was in the stream on the 29th of April; sailed on the 30th; I seized her on that day about half-way between Governor's Island and Robbin's Reef, while being towed out by a steamtug; I went on board; Van Vechten was on board, Mr. Ahruja also; we found a large bundle of papers on board in possession of the Captain; among them was a power of attorney from Mr. Weeks to Capt. Van Vechten, dated April 22, and a blank bill of sale, signed by Weeks, and dated the same day; I saw Van Vechten that day, and had a conversation with him; he told me he was bound to Ambris, on the West Coast; the vessel was there to take on board a cargo of negroes and proceed to the South Coast of Cuba; he said it was optional with him whether he went in her or not; this was two or three hours before she sailed; upon this I acted in seizing her.

Cross-examined—This conversation took place in the Marshal's office; I believe he was there as a witness; I don't think I was there as a witness, though I might have been; I don't know that it was generally understood that there was a warrant out against the vessel; I believe there was one however; I had had my attention called to the vessel at least a week before; I did not look after her save from my vessel; she was watched, but I did not watch her; the first that Van Vechten said was that the vessel was ready for sea; I asked him where he was bound, and he said to Ambriz; I think Van Vechten told me he had been a witness before the Grand Jury; I think he told me that it was optional with him whether he went to Cuba; he did not say what his intentions were about it; don't know that he had been joking or "blowing" about the Marshal's office.

It was there admitted that there was a letter of instructions on board, but Mr. McKeon said it was missaid, and he would consent that a copy he read.

A letter found on board was read, addressed to Mr. Dalrymple, at Loando, signed by Mr. Weeks, speaking of the affair of the Panchita, announcing that she had been discharged, but that no satisfaction could be got for the stoppage of the vessel, outrageous as it was, and hoping to hear from Mr. Dalrymple by return of the Panchita and of the Ellen.

Redirect—Capt. Van Vechten called my attention to the Ellen some two or three weeks before her seizure; that was at my boarding house; he called upon me in company with his brother Junius; he stated the Ellen was bought for the Slave-trade, and was going to be fitted out for that purpose; that was the substance of it.

Recross-examined—This was at No. 100 Clinton-street, Brooklyn; it was for the purpose of having me stop her; I think she was at pier No. 57 then; I did not watch her personally after that, or tell any one else to do so; I knew she was watched; he did not claim to own the vessel, and did not intimate that he was going to put her in the slave-trade; I should infer from his coming there on that business that he intended she should be stopped; I never examined her cargo; he told me the Ellen was going and gave me the names of several other vessels that were fitting out; he came to see me twice or three times; that was about the substance of the conversation each time; I think I said something about this to the District-Attorney; I think his brother came with him twice, and I think he came alone once; it was not my intention to stop her up to the 29th without a special order.

A letter of instructions to Captain Van Vechten, about the riggermen on board, dated April 3, was then read.

Robert Donnelly, sworn: I am connected with the Marshal's office; I went on board the Ellen before she sailed, on the 29th of April: two or three persons went with me; they were deputized; she lay over near the Jersey shore; Mr. Weeks went with me: I examined the manifest and the cargo as far as I could; was there about half an hour; Weeks paid me $150 before I went from his place of business at No. 38 South-street; I examined the trunks of the parties on board after she was seized; we found considerable money in the trunk of the supercargo, Mr. Abruja; I think it was about $1,200 in gold; the gentleman opened the trunk and took a little parcel out, which he said was money, and belonged to him; I did not take the money myself; I recollect the District-Attorney being there, and asking him to whom it was to be delivered in Africa; he said he would not tell; found nothing else in his trunk particular; no arms; found in the bags of the men a great many pistols and dirk-knives.

Cross-examined—I don't recollect whether I had a process against the Ellen at the time of the search; I had no ordere then to seize her; I heard there was a process issued; should think I heard it a week before; in the morning of the 29th I went down to Mr. Weeks' office; did not find him in; went there by reason of a letter directed to the Marshal from Mr. Weeks, requesting him to send some of his Deputies down; I don't know where the letter is now; Mr. Nevins went with me; I met Nevins opposite Mr. Weeks'; we went up to the Custom-House with Nevins, and he pointed out Weeks to me; then we went down to Weeks' place again; there were one or two in the office when we were talking with Weeks; he wanted some of us to go down to see if the cargo agreed with the manifest; I did not know what the examination was for, except for that; the owner furnished a tug for us to go off; the Marshal was there; it was understood that I was to have a compensation; the Marshal told me in his office, I was not to render services to these slavers or catchers of niggers except for pay, and that if I saw anything on board to excite suspicion I should seize her; that remark of the Marshal did not excite any suspicion in my mind; in my own mind she was a slaver; I found nothing that I would seize her upon; there was no request to me not to do my duty.

Junius R Van Vechten sworn: I am a brother of Captain Van Vechten; have been a clerk in the Custom-House for eight or nine years; my brother is a lawyer by profession; he has been to sea, and might be said to be a rover; I reside in Brooklyn; I received a letter then addressed to my brother and had conversations with my brother about the time; he was captain of the vessel at that time; I so understood him; after those conversations I went first to the Collector; the Collector gave me a letter to the District-Attorney, and I made statements to him; my brother was in port, out of employ, and a note was brought for him and left with me; he read it, when he came and handed it to me; I think I handed it back to him, and told him to have nothing to do with it; the thing went on several days and I did not see him; when I did see him he told me he had seen the parties; he told me he was employed; I had a conversation with him about the Ellen; he told me she was going to Africa to take a cargo of slaves; I said "It is not possible, Phil., that you are sunk so low as that;" I told him if he succeeded in it I would follow him as long as he lived; it led to a good deal of feeling between us, but he finally acquiesced in what I said; I told him I should go to the Collector and have her stopped, and would go to Capt. Faunce, whom I knew, and tell him about it; I went further than that, I told Mr. Weeks that I should stop the vessel, and that he must discharge my brother from the vessel; this vessel did not sail at the time Capt. Van Vechten first said she would; the Clara B. Williams was stopped at the Custom-House about that time; my brother told me Mr. Weeks had nothing whatever to do with the Williams; he told me the cargo of the Ellen, out, was to be nothing but a regular assorted cargo; that there were to be two Spaniards or Portuguese going out, and some money, about $18,000 I think; I think he said he had not seen the Spaniards; he told me that there were o lot of small chains going on board also; I don't know whether they did go; he told me they did not; I don't like to say that he gave me reason why or not; my impression is that he said they did not, owing to the course I had taken in the matter; he told me the passengers would not go or the specie; that that would go in another vessel; he said they would notify the District-Attorney and the Marshal that the vessel was loading, that they might have some one there to watch the cargo; that the object was that the vessel might pot be stopped; he said he was to get $1,000 in cash, and $5,000 at the end of the voyage; I can't say whether he was married then; he is now; I think my wife was present at these conversations; I think my brother was admitted to the bar here in 1852 or 1853; he was in partnership with John W. Lafson; he has been in the army too—is now a deserter from the United States Army, but I believe a pardoned one.

Cross-examined—The conversation was subsequent to the note; it was in consequence of my suspicions; I thought he had got into some bad expedition; I afterwards went to see Mr. Weeks, but not till four or five days after I saw the District-Attorney; he came to me when I sent for him; he denied that the vessel was a slaver absolutely; I went to his office and he showed me the papers, the charter, &c., and told me she was going on a trading voyage; he did not tell me who owned the cargo; I was then satisfied that she was not going on a slave voyage, but my suspicions were again aroused, and then I made an affidavit in the matter; afterwards my brother was away for a day or two and Mr. Weeks came up to ask me where he was; I told him I did not know; I think I told him that I had made the affidavit; he again denied that she was going on a slave voyage; he went with me to another of my brothers and talked it over and I was then satisfied that so far as my brother was concerned he was going on a legitimate voyage; then I went to Weeks' office and he showed me the papers; I saw a charter party; it was to Mr. Aruja; I did not attempt to see Aroja; did not ask where he was; I told them I was satisfied and should offer no impediment; should go to the District-Attorney and withdraw my affidavit; I did so; Mr. Weeks did not show me a statement of the cargo; I told Weeks that my brother was one for whom I had been guardian and who had given me a great deal of trouble, and I was afraid if he went to the Coast of Africa he would forget all the dutiee he owed to society and his fellow men; my fear was founded on what I knew of his character,

SUPERIOR COURT—TRIAL TERM—June 11.

Before Hon. Justice Bosworth.

DECISIONS.

Moffatt vs. Moffatt and wife—The plaintiff has failen to establian any cause of action stated in his complaint, and the material allegations of the defendants' answer are proved to be true. Judgment is ordered in favor of the defendants. The form of it will be settled by either party to the other.

Peter G. Evans vs. Chas. Ilins—The plaintiff is entitled to recover of the defendant $4,792, being the amount of the bond sued upon, with interest from its date to the present time.

Griffin vs. Judson & Cranston—Order settled.

MARINE COURT.

Before Hon. Judge McCarthy.

BUYING A HORSE—AN EXPENSIVE OPERATION.

David R. Lee vs. Charles L. Gilpin.—This was a suit for services rendered by Thomas K. Battelle, Reporter of races in the office of Porter's Spirit of the Times, in purchasing a horse for the defendant, and negotiating the purchase of two trotting mares. The claim was assigned to the plaintiff, and Battelle testified to the correctness of the items in the bill rendered; for commissions, expenses, &c., in negotiating the purchase of the trotting meres Maud ood Iola, and of a brown horse. The defendant had agreed to give $3,000 for Iola, and $4,250 for Maud, but the bargain was not consummated; he, however, gave $800 for the brown horse. For his agency in these transactions, in the course of which he had the horses' speed tested on the race course by Hiram Woodruff, and disbursed $20—the bill of the assignor claimed $125.

The Judge gave the plaintiff the amount demanded, with an allowance of $12 and costs.

THE PRICE OF A FALSE ACCUSATION.

Michael Sullivan vs. Owen O'Connor.—The defendant, on the 12th of May, went before Justice Osborne and preferred a charge of assault and battery against the plaintiff, whereupon a warrant was issued for the arrest of the latter, and he was confined for twenty-four hours, at the end of which time he was brought before the Justice for examination, and the defendant failing to appear against him, was discharged. He brings this suit to recover $500 damages sustained in consequence of this malicious accusation. The defendant denied generally all the allegations of the complaint. Judgment for plaintiff $100, and $12 allowance and costs.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

LONG ISLAND.

More Wife Murder—A Drunken Woman Murdered probably by her Drunken Husband—A Living Child Found in Bed Nestling by the side of her Dead Mother.

On Wednesday evening officers BRANNAGAN and WILSON, of the Third District Police, Brooklyn, upon information received from the neighbors, that a man had nearly or quite killed his wife, entered the apartments of SAMUEL KEYES, in a tenement building in Hoyt-street, four doors from Butler. Here they found Mrs. CATHARINE KEYES dying, apparently from violence received at some ono's hands.

There was o severe wound upon one of her temples, and various other indications of violence about the head and body, which were covered with blood. When discovered, she was lying upon a bed in a cramped position, and it is supposed must have been placed there after the injuries were inflicted. The circumstances warranting it, the officers arrested KEYES upon suspicion, and he has since been committed to jail, to await the result of the Coroner's investigation, which commences to-day. He denies having caused the death of his wife, and says that the injury upon her head was caused by falling upon the sidewalk. But his story is not believed. A little boy says that KAYES came home about 6 o'clock Wednesday evening, and, finding his wife inside with the door locked, he put him (the boy) through the window to unlock the door. The wife was then in the room, drunk, and KAYES, who had also been drinking, commenced beating her. This statement is corroborated, in part, by several parties in the vicinity at the time, who say that they heard cries of distress, and supposed he was beating his wife—a not uncommon occurrence, if the neighbors and police are to be believed.

Sergeant PRESTIN, of the Third District Police, took charge of the body until the arrival of the Coroner. It is shockingly bruised. The accused is a plasterer by trade, and was married to his second wife about four years ago. By her he has two children—the eldest a little girl nearly three years old, who was found in bed covered with blood, at the side of the dead mother. The youngest is but six months old, and when the Police entered the premises, was in a cradle, crying. The place occupied by this family bore every appearance of the drunkard's home. The deceased has often complained of her husband for ill-treatment and intoxication, and on Wednesday morning she went before Justice BLATCHLEY, to have him arrested for beating her, but did not obtain it, as the Judge was busy at the time. In every instance when arrested upon her complaint, she has relented when before the Court, and has usually succeeded in begging him off, at which she appears to have been an adept.

KEYES is represented, by all who know him, to be a drunken worthless fellow, always in difficulty on account of his brutality. Only a few weeks ago he was arrested for assault and battery upon a respectable citizen, and while before the Captain of the District, he knocked the Captain and witness down.

A post mortem examination was made of the body yesterday, and to-day Coroner REDDING will commence the inquest. The two children spoken of above have been properly cared for.

TORNADO.—A tornado on a small scale passed over a portion of Long Island yesterday afternoon, about 3 o'clock P. M., leveling fences, bending sturdy trees to the ground, and doing other miscellaneous damage. A shed near Riley's Hotel, not far from the Union Race Course, on the macadamized road, was thrown down just at the instant a gentleman with a top wagon was driving under it for shelter; he had two young ladies and a child in the wagon, the child was slightly cut in the temple, but the others escaped unhurt; the wagon was broken to pieces, but the horse was not injured. Mr. RILEY also had a wagon under the shed, which was broken up and ruined. Hailstones of the size of nutmegs fell in abundance, and all travel was for a time suspended. The storm passed from S. W. to N. E. Rain in the City fell in torrents.

☞ The Kings County Board of Excise held another meeting yesterday, and granted a few licences, received more applications and adjourned.

THURSDAY, June 11—P. M.

The Canada, at this port this morning, from Liverpool Saturday, May 30, brings three days' later news from Europe, and two weeks later from China, than the previous accounts. The changes in the London and Paris Money markets, after the sailing of the Ericsson, were unimportant. The Funds worked pretty steady, 93⅝@93¾ for Consols; 69.30 for the French Rente. The former for the July account were selling as high as 94½ ₱ cent. The telegraphic advices by the last overland mail from China, had caused a renewed brisk demand for Silver. The London Grain market was firm at an advance of 1s.@2s. the quarter on Wheat. At Liverpool, the extreme prices of the previous market day were barely sustained on Friday. The Cotton trade dull at Manchester, and a fraction lower on the sales at Liverpool, which for the week amounted to 40,000 bales. Provisions are quoted dull. In American Stocks a moderate business doing in London. The speculative demand for the repudiated Mississippi Union Bonds had carried up the price to 28 ₱ cent. Illinois Central shares are quoted by this packet ex privilege and ex dividend, at 20 ₱ cent. premium, the equivalent of which, including exchange, is 139½@140 here on the old stock, dividend on. The private letters advise that all new negotiations in American Securities are at a stand on account of the continued dearness of money. The return from the Bank of England for the week ending the 23d of May, gives the following results, when compared with the previous week:

Public deposits	£6,[illegible]5,5C3.. Decrease..	£96,358
Other deposits	9,088,6[illegible].. Decrease..	500,616
Rest	3,391,9[illegible].. Increase...	11,685

Other securities	17,668,853.. Decrease..	776,818
Notes unemployed	4,501,835.. Increase...	151,970

The amount of notes in circulation is £19,031,480, being a decrease of £212,445, and the stock of bullion in both departments is £9,804,827, showing a decrease of £48,782, when compared with the preceding return. The following table will show the fluctuations in Consols since the 22d inst.

Our own Money market is without alteration from yesterday as to rates. The Domestic Exchange houses are employing more money to-day in buying funds on the adjoining, which will return in a few days, partly in Gold. Money-lenders who hny paper are asking higher interest on bills having over 60 days to run, say 8 to 9 ₱ cent. for prime names, three to five months. Short paper of the best class is still well absorbed at Bank at 7 ₱ cent. The Sub-Treasury is now down to about twelve millions, with the prospect of a further reduction to $10,000,000 before the close of the month. The receipts to-day were $84,606; disbursed $180,149, leaving at the close $12,083,647.

There was renewed depression at the Stock Exchange this forenoon, followed by a recovery of ¼@1 ₱ cent. at the Second Board. After the list was printed, weaker prices were again made, and the general market left off unsettled. The buyers of Reading to-day took the stock freely at 78@78¼ ₱ cent. cash, and 77@76¼, seller 60 days, and a firm demand was also shown for Illinois Central and Rock Island. Galena, Toledo and Pittsburg were lower by 1@2 ₱ cent., with only a moderate business in each. The principal interest, besides Reading, was manifested in New-York Central, Erie, and Michigan Southern. The first two were ¼@1 ₱ cent. lower than on Wednesday, while the last fell from 44¾ to 42 ₱ cent. in the morning, and recovered to 43¼@43 at the Second Board. The transactions of the day in Michigan Southern were over 5,000 shares. The rapid fall in the stock, particularly since it left 50 ₱ cent., excites more street discussion than the ordinary operations of the Bear speculators, and notwithstanding the card of assurance of harmony in the management and continued confidence in the integrity and capacity of the property which appeared a few days since from the Directors, there are renewed rumors of want of cordiality inside the office, which have undoubtedly damaged the credit of the Stock—unjustly so, as far as the condition and prospects of the Company are concerned. In regard to these we are quite sure the late card of the Directors may be taken by the Stockholders in perfect good faith, and as to any personal heart-burnings, if any such exist, for the use which has been made of them in the Street, we are equally sure that they have no countenance from the great body of the City shareholders, nor any portion of them, so far as we are advised.

News from California.

THE CROPS—WAGON-ROAD MEETINGS—THE MINES ANOTHER INDICTMENT AGAINST THE STATE TREASURER—MISCELLANEOUS NEWS.

In California few events of more than ordinary interest have occurred during the fortnight ending the 20th ult.

Frequent showers throughout the State have been of immense benefit to the growing crops, and although the yield this year will be far below the average, still they are by no means ruined, as was feared they would be a few weeks ago. Fruits and vegetables have suffered little from the drought. San Francisco markets are supplied with an abundance of strawberries, raspberries and cherries, all of which may be obtained at reasonable prices.

Conventions have been the order of the day during the fortnight. Wagon-road meetings have been held in Sacramento, in Calaveras, in Yuba, and in Shasta Counties, all of which declared in favor of different routes for a wagon-road across the Sierra Nevada to intersect with the great overland national highway. The Conventions were all well attended, and much interest evinced. Committees were duly appointed to collect subscriptions to aid in constructing the several projected routes.

A Convention of the Episcopal Church of the State was held at Sacramento on the 12th. From the annual report of the Bishop, it appears that two new churches were consecrated during the year. The Masonic fraternity have held a Convention at the capital, and the Odd Fellows another in San Francisco. Both of these orders are in a very flourishing condition.

The mines, as usual, continue to yield up their golden treasures. Fewer accounts of "big strikes" are chronicled, as time advances, but the diggings generally are paying quite as well as ever. Much more confidence prevails relative to quartz mining, as is evidenced by the increasing capital being invested in this branch of mining enterprise.

Still another indictment has been found against Dr. Bates, the defaulting State Treasurer, now under arrest in Sacramento. It is alleged that he has embezzled $41,000 of the State monies, which is over and above the missing $124,000. In default of bail in the sum of $50,000, he was ordered into custody. He is said to be very ill—so much so as to be unable to leave his bed. An officer constantly guards his room.

The trial of Ned McGowan was to take place at Napa, on the 22d ult. The prevailing impression is that he will, this time, get clear of the gallows.

No further disturbances have taken place amongst the Indians in the northern part of the State, although their enmity to the whites continues unabated. Great numbers have been sent from Sierra and Fimmas Counties to the Nome Lackee Reservation, in Tehama County.

Amusements of all kinds have been well patronized throughout the State, during the fortnight.

The seventh anniversary of the See Francisco Baptist Association was held at the Washington-street Baptist Church, San Francisco, on the 9th ult. Nineteen Churches are embraced in the Association, ten of which were represented. The following Churches applied for admission, and were received: Vallecito Baptist Church, Mariposa; Tabernacle Baptist Church, San Francisco; Unionetown Baptist Church, El Dorado; Mount Pleasant Baptist Church, Solano County; Siloam Baptist Church, Sacramento; Marysville Baptist Church, Marysville; Vaca Valley Baptist Church, Vaca Valley. The following gentlemen were elected permanent officers of the Association: Rev. J. Lewis Shuck, of Sacramento, Moderator; Brother J. F. Pope, Clerk; A. Gordon, Treasurer; R. B. Baikely, Corresponding Secretary.

News from Oregon.

HOSTILITIES BY INDIANS—FEARS OF ANOTHER INDIAN WAR—ARRIVAL OF GEN. LANE—REPUBLICAN TERRITORIAL CONVENTION.

Advices from Portland, O. T., are to May 9.

The Oregonian of May 23 says: We have reports that a delegation of Yakima Indians recently visited the Indian reservation at White Salmon on the Columbia, above the Cascades, and demanded that the Indians there should join the "hostiles" in a war against the whites, under the penalty of death. It is also reported that the Indian women and children on the reservation have been sent away, or left and gone to the Cascades. It is the opinion of all well-informed army officers that the Indian war will be recommenced as soon as the proper season opens.

The Northern Indians are also as troublesome as ever on the lower part of Puget Sound and Straits, committing robberies, etc. Fears are entertained that they will make open warfare upon the settlements. At Bellingham Bay the citizens are forted up in block-houses, and have organized a volunteer company to aid the military in case of an attack by these savages.

A British vessel recently left McDonald's Island with a large cargo of spars for the English navy, being the fourth cargo shipped from that place within a year for the English, United States and French navies.

On the 20th of April a drunken row occurred at The Dalles, in which Wm. Lambert was killed by Cornelius Welch. It seems that Lambert followed Welch, wanted to fight and assaulted Welch, and that Welch to keep him away from him, struck Lambert on the head with his fist and death ensued. Welch was examined before a Justice's Court and acquitted.

The Democratic Standard of April 28, says the arrival of Gen. Lane was hailed by the firing of cannon; a committee was appointed on the part of the citizens to provide for him quarters at the Metropolis, and to escort him thereto. During the day he received the salutations of his friends at his rooms. He appears hale and hearty. While the salutes were being fired on the Columbia, one of the mates of the vessel had his hands shot off by the accidental discharge of a cannon while he was loading.

Congressmen had been called by the Republicans, in many of the counties, to elect Delegates to the Territorial Convention, to be held at Olympia on the 18th inst.

Massacre in Utah.

Our correspondent at Great Salt Lake has already given us account, of the assassination of Messrs. Parrish and Potter. They were published exclusively in this journal several weeks ago. We find confirmatory news of this massacre in the California papers. The mail from Salt Lake, says the Los Angeles Star, arrived here this week, bringing intelligence of another horrible massacre having been committed in Utah Territory. The circumstances, as they have been related to us by gentlemen who came here from San Bernardino, where the mail-carrier from Salt Lake stops, are as follows:

Mr. Wm. Parrish, his son, a young man about 17 years of age, and a Mr. Potter, started from the city for the purpose of coming to California. They had proceeded but a short distance, when their bodies were found dead. Mr. Parrish's throat was cut from ear to ear; the others had been shot. Their bodies were found at a place called Springville, about fifty miles from Salt Lake City.

It is not known by whom the outrage was committed. Rumor has it that Mr. Parrish had a difficulty with the authorities about removing his property, which he had previously "consecrated" to the Church. We give the rumor as we heard it. It is also said that the massacre was perpetrated by Indians. The intelligence of this murder caused the greatest excitement in San Bernardino, where part of Mr. Parrish's family reside, as well as generally throughout the country.

We hope an investigation by the Government authorities will be made into this massacre, and the guilty parties made to feel the heavy arm of the law. These outrages are of so freqnent occurrence, that it behooves the local authorities to take steps to bring the perpetrators to punishment.

News from the Sandwich Islands.

THE WHALING FLEET—BRITISH WAR VESSELS EN ROUTE FOR CHINA—ANOTHER GRAND EXPEDITION.

Dates from Honolulu are to the 16th of April. The news is eot at all important.

The wante of the whaling fleet for this season have been few, and business, therefore, correspondingly light. The great decrease in the number of ships in the North Pacific this, compared with former years, tells on the business of the island; and merchants, anticipating a steady decrease of the fleet year after year, are themselves going into the whaling business with a right good will.

On the 10th of April arrived at Honolulu H. B. M. S. (propeller) Tribune, from Callao, bound to China. She took in a stock of coal, (about 150 tons,) a few provisions and small stores, and sailed the following Monday for China. The Esk and Pearl (propellers) were overdue, both to bound to China.

H. I. M. S. Eurydice had sailed for the Leeward Islands for a short cruize, having Hie Mejsety and suite on board; she would be absent a month.

Another guano expedition, under command of Capt. Paty, is being prosecuted. The vessel sailed on the 16th of April, bound to Bird Island, (one of the Hawaiian group,) as we are informed, under the head of "By Anthority," in the Polynesian of March 28, 1857, "and all reefs, banks, and rocks contiguous thereto," etc. That there are myriads of birds in the vicinity of said Island is a fact, and it is reasonable to suppose there must be some deposits of the materials of which guano is composed; but is more than probable the heavy rains that fall there frequently have totally destroyed its value.

The Captain of the Dolphin reports that the sloop built and owned by the Mormons, had been wrecked on Niihau. She is reported a total loss.

The Fate of the Crabb Expedition.

FULL PARTICULARS OF THE DEFEAT AND EXECUTION OF HENRY A. CRABB AND NINETY OF HIS PARTY AT CAVORCA, SONORA.

From the San Diego Herald, May 6.

In our last issne we published a rumor of the entire destruction of Henry A. Crabb's party, numbering about 100 men, by the Mexicans in Sonora. By the following statemeet of the facts, kindly furnished us by a gentleman just arrived from Fort Yuma, it will be seen that the rumor has been confirmed. He says:

The expedition into Sonora, under the command of H. A. Crabb, has had a most disastrous end.

Late in March Crabb's party left Sonolta, Sonora, and marched to Cavoroa, a small Mexican town near Point Lohos, on the Gulf of California. The first intention was to have proceeded to Altar, hut news of its partial fortification and susceptibility of a strong defence caused the diversion on Cavorca. On the morning of the 1st of April the party of Americans entered the suhurbs of the town. They were met by a body of Mexican troops, commanded hy Ronaioues. It is said Rodriguez advanced to speak to Crabb, when the Americans opened fire and killed the Mexican commander and several others. The Mexicaes immediately retreated—some to the mountains, but the majority to the church, which had been placed in a state of defence, and had at the time Crabb entered the town a number of beeves roasting whole in front of it, to feed the Mexican troops.

It appears that here occurred Crabb's first and fatal mistake. Instead of at once charging and taking the church, which would have given him the town, he occnpied several houses on the corner of the Plaza, in front of the church.

The Mexicans at first deserted the most of the town, hnt gradually being emboldened returned, and gradually hemmed the Americans in. Fighting continued eight days, with a loss to the Americans of twenty-five killed. The Mexican loss is reported by themselves to have been twenty five, hnt is supposed to have been much greater, as high as 200. On the eighth day an attempt was made by two of Crabb's men to blow up the church, hy placing a keg of powder under the portico and firing it. The devoted men who attempted this both were killed, and Crabb is said to have been wounded in seperintending it. It is said an offer was made hy Crabb to retire if the Mexicans would allow it. He had refused to retire when the offer was made him, after the fighting had continued two days, and now the Mexicans, confident of his weakness and their triumph, refused. The Americans were gradually but surely caught in a snare, from which they saw no escape.

By breaking through the walls of the adjoining houses the Mexicans forced Crabb and his men into the corner huildings, which they repeatedly set on fire, hut which the Americans as often extinguished. At last a Papago Indian shot into the roof of the main huilding, occupied hy the unhappy filihusters, a lighted arrow. The flames caught the roof, and in a few moments the fire was dropping in great fiskes upon the heads of the doomed men within. Worn out with constant fighting, exhausted with anxiety, famished hy probable days of starvation aed thirst, and without ammunition, Henry A. Crabb and fifty-eight men marched out of the hurning house, with a white fleg before them, laid down their arms and surrendered. It is supposed unconditionally. This was in the night or towards morning. They were immediately tied, their hnnds behind them, taken to a corral near the Alcalde's offics, where they were kept until morning, when they were taken out in squads of 5 and 10 each and shot. In the first executions it was found that the calmness of the Americans discomposed the executioners and they shot too high or too low, in many cases only wounding their victims. The backs of the fated men were then turned to the troops, and then they succeeded in aiming with better effect.

McCoun, (may he rest in peace,) owing to his great stature, was saved this torture, a hall struck him full in the hreast at the first fire, and he fell dead. Crabb alone was reserved for a solitary death. He was taken to the Alcede's offies, questioned, allowed to write a letter to te his wife, and to have an interview with a Dr. Evans, a prisoser in the hands of the Mexicans, who had been in confinement some weeks, on suspicion. The hour for his execution having arrived, he was led out, his hands streached above his head, and tied to a post in front of the building he had occupied, his face to the post, and his back to the executioners. At the command fire, at least an hundred balls were fixed into his body, and all that was mortal of Henry A. Crabb hueg dead, swingieg hy his tied hands. A Mexican stepped forward, and with a large knife severed his head from the body—the warm blood spirting half way across the street. The head was placed on a table in front, or in the office of the Juez, exposed to the jeere of the populace. It was then placed in a jar of mescal, for preservation.

Is there not something peculiarly terrible in such a fate for a man who has once coetrolled almost the destiny of a great State like California?

Two of the Ainsa's (brothers-in-law of Crabb) are said to be killed, and also Rasey Biven. My Informant, an intelligent man and an eye-witoess of these horrors, says Crabb died as a gentleman should, as calmy and quiotly as if he were going to a pleasant home.

Four men, sick, had heen left at Sonoita by Crabb. They occupied the house owned hy E. E. Dunbar, Esq., on the American side of the line. On the 19th April, at night, a party of 25 Mexicans came up from San Juan, went to Dunbar's house, took these poor sick men out of bed, tied them, and at dawn of day carried them to the foot of the hill, shot them like dogs, on American soil, and left them to rot. A party of Papago Indians, more merciful, buried them, and four solitary mounds now appear, lone witnesses of a beastly crime, to the American Government for revenge. Will such an appeal go unheard?

Mr. Dunbar just escaped massacre, having left Sonoita on the afternoon previous. The Mexicans were furious at his escape, although he had nothing to do with the party except to offer shelter, an American soil, to four sick men, in his own house.

A party of about thirty recruits, under Capt. Grant Otey, started from Tucson to join Crabb at Cavorca. When within fifteen miles of the latter place they were attacked hyj about 200 Mexicans. Capt. Otey retreated, fighting, and regained the American line with n loss of only four killed. The Mexican loss was about forty. Capt. Otey deserves great credit for his ekill. At every watering place the Mexicans attempted to check him and subdue him by thirst, hnt he routed them on every occasion. The last eight miles was a continued running fight, and his fourch man lost was killed just at the line. Another party, of the same strength, which left Tubac, has not yet been heard of. It is believed if Grant Otey had been with Crabb a different result might have been anticipated. All was had management, want of experience, and a clear rushing upon a deadly fate.

Crabb entered Cavorca with 84 men. All these were killed except the youngest, said to have been spared by the Mexican commander, Garcia. The name of the survivor is unknown, but he is said to be a boy of sixteen or seventeen.

The Mexicans at Cavorca were about 500 strong.

Major Bob Wood and Major Tozer are safe. They were with Capt. Otay's party. Col. R. N. Wood, late Fillmore elector, is among the dead.

San Francisco Markets.

From Coleman's Market Review, May 20.

Our market, with respect to the greater proportion of imported goods, has undergone few changes during the past two weeks, and, in the main has been dull. In some of the leading staples, however, the transactions have been of an unusually important character, and prices materially higher than our previous quotations may be stated to rule at the close. We have, however, to note one exception to this remark, which is in the case of Adamantine Candles; some of the large holders having put their stocks upon the market within the last week, and sold for the best price obtainable, the result has been a decline to as low figures as ever before realized in this market, when the corresponding value on the other side be taken into consideration. The cause of the utter prostration of an article so largely consumed as are Adamantine Candles, and, at the same time, all things considered, one of the best adapted for speculative operations, are, briefly, the same of which we have spoken every fortnight for six months past, viz.: an enormous stock and excessive supplies all the time arriving. Hence, when large holders have forced their goods upon the market, buyers could not be found, except at 10 @ cent. less than last quotations at New-York for, be it remembered, that money is worth 2½@3 @ cent. upon the best security, as we write, and parties who have levested in Candles look for nothing more than a fair interest upon their capital within from three to six months, and it is very certain that they will not realize that unless shipments from the East during the Summer months are either greatly diminished or wholly suspended.

During the past fortnight the movement in American Spirits, to which we alluded in our preceding review, was resumed, and operations to a large extent, both here and to arrive, have been consummated. Holders, however, have met the wants of buyers with a good deal of alacrity and without loosing upon prices which had they asked, would have at once brought the movement to a dead halt. For this reason it is that transactions of so heavy a character have not resulted, as is usually the case in this market, in prices pushed up precipitately to a point where considerations of stocks would not sustain them.

Shortly after the departure of the last mail, by the arrival of the Archer from Hong Kong, with dates to March 27, we were advised of the loss of two cargoes of Raw Sugars destined for this market, one of which was coming to the Sugar Refinery here. This news, in connection with the fact that three arrivals from China latterly have brought but insignificant additions to stocks, tended to materially improve the prospects for both Raw and Refined Sugars, and buyers at advanced rates have been in the market since.

Provisions have been in moderate and steady demand during the past fortnight, with the exception of Eastern Butter and Cheese, the stocks of both which are, at the moment, and likely to be for some months hence, a perfect superfluity, as the product of our own dairies is meeting the entire consumption of the State. The market for Cured Meats and Lard has been well-sustained, and Prime Hams in particular have been in active request at slightly better rates.

The depression in the country for goods during the past fortnight has been at no time active.

Money has tended easier during the past fortnight, owing to a diminished demand, rather than any increase in the supply. The mercantile people are finding out that their business will not permit them to borrow money at the high rates ruling, and accordingly there is a general disposition to curtail operations to a point more nearly controllable by individual resources independent of borrowed aid.

TWO WEEKS LATER FROM NEW-GRANADA.

The Dispute with the United States—The American Minister Preparing to Leave—Gen. Mosquera's Proposition for the Protection of the Isthmus—Settlement of the Difficulty with Great Britain—Miscellaneous News.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

Panama, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

An extra session of the State Legislature was decreed for the 1st June, hnt on calling the roll, only six or eight members answered to their names. Fourteen were necessary for a quorum. It appears the Liberal members had no fancy to be driven out again at the point of the hayonet, as they were last September—exiled and their houses searched, as was the case with the two Goitias and the President, Don Mariano Arosemena. In the meantime, there is not a dollar in the treasury to pay the expenses of the Government or to protect the Transit. The sooner the United States assumes the mastership here the better for all concerned.

The Centinda, the Spanish paper here, says it would be a humiliation and an infamy for New-Granada to initiate new negotiations, after she has so peremptorily refused the ultimatum of the United States, and thinks new propositions will come from the United States! From this it may easily be inferred that the Editors are better posted up on the rules of chicken-fighting than they are on the rules and etiquette of diplomacy.

Our dates from Bogota are to the 9th May. The administration of Ospina remained perfectly dumb on the American question. Mr. Bowlin writes under date of May 8, that, satisfied that no propositions will be made to him, he shall leave Bogota on the 20th for the United States. The United States sloop-of-war Cyane, it is understood, is at Carthagena, for which port she sailed about ten days since, and may be expected daily with onr Minister.

Gen. Thomas C. Mosquera, formerly a merchant or Broker in New-York, but now member of the Bogota Senate from Sahanilla, has started some silly propositions in Congress. He wants one thousand men to be sent to Panama, to protect the Isthmus against the Yankees, it is to be presumed. After having lived seven years in the United States, and knowing ou strength as he does, his proposition for resistance only be regarded as a dsmagogical one, to enhance some political purposes of his own. He also proposes to send forty New-Granadian officers to Costa Rica, to instruct the people of that country in the art of war, so that they may whip the fillihusters. This proposition will be considered more stupid than the other when it is known that there is not a single educated military man in New-Granada—and very few, Gen. Mosquera incinded, who knew a ditch from an embankment, or a war-horse from a horse-pistol.

The regular session of Congress having ended on the 1st May, the President immediately convoked an extra session for the 2d, "to take into consideration certain projects of law." It is rumored that Ospina will ask Congress to give him power to settle the American dispute, but I can trace the report to no reliable source.

The British Mackintoch claim has at last been settled on the terms proposed hy Great Britain, save that New-Granada pays $560,000 in paper, instead of cash. Diplomatic intercourse has been resumed.

The Panama Railroad Company have laid down their magnificent bridge over the Chagres River at Barbacoas. It rests on solid stone abutments and piere of beautiful and durable workmanship. The cost exceeds $200,000.

The U. S. steam frigate Wabash remains at Aspinwall. At Panama we have the Independence, St Mary's, and Decatur, and expect the John Adams soon. The officers and men are in general good health.

INTERESTING FROM NICARAGUA.

Further Facts in Regard to the Capitulation at Rivas—Motives that Induced Commander Davis to Intercede for the Fillibusters—Has Walker any Friends among the Native Nicaraguans—Walker's Despotism—The Remnant of the Fillibusters in Nicaragua—New Presidential Election—Nicaragua to be Occupied by the Four Central American States.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

Panama, Wednesday, June 3, 1857.

No communication having been allowed by Commodore Mervine with Walker and his officers the two days he was on board the St. Marys in this harbor, I could get hut few particulars and incidents of the capitulation at Rivas, save the summary of official notes I sent you. I was obliged to go to Aspinwall and take advantage of the few hours when the passengers were getting on board the steamer, in order to procure a copy of Henningsen's statistics, as well as to gather the greater portion of the information I did send you.

Now that Walker and so many of his officers are among you, I presume your readers, by the time they get this, will be nearly surfeited with tales of fillihusterism—nevertheless I am in possession of some facts that may not be in your possession, in regard to the capitulation, and which may not prove uninteresting. I think I said in my last that there could scarcely be a doubt that Commander Davis, in his acts at San Juan del Sur, and his mediation at Rivas, acted under authority of the Pierce Administration. Henningsen asserts, in his report to Gen. Walker after the capitulation, that Commander Davis informed him that in what he was doing "he was acting on instructions from his superior officer, from the Commander-in-Chief; that since the last Administration, instructions had been received, which contained nothing to alter the course he intended to pursue, but he preferred I should consider this as unsaid." In a conversation with Commander Davis, he flatly denied the truth of these assertions of Henningsen. He says he had no instructions whatever from his Commodore or from Washington, and of course he never could have told anybody he had. He relates the following incidents as having decided his interference at the time, to save the lives of Walker and his deluded followers.

In the latter part of April, a man by the name of Teller came on board the St. Mary's, apparently half frightened out of his wits, and threw himself upon a sofa. He said he did not belong to Walker's force, hut had come down to see how he could get himself and wife and child out of the country. On his way to San Juan del Sur, he said he had been chased by a squad of the Allies, and came near being captured. He had not been on board long before General Estrada, in command of the force occupying San Juan, sent to Com. Davis to say that he had reason to believe Teller was a spy. Com. D. replied that if proof could be produced to that effect, he would deliver Teller over to him for punishment. On going on shore Commander Davis learned that Teller had come down with a guide, who reported that they had a secret despatch for somebody, which, Teller getting frightened, buried on the roadside. The guide went out and brought in the letter. It was without signature, and simply addressed "Dear Mac"—McDonald, agent of the Nicaraguan steamers. It was in Walker's hand writing, and recounted the strait to which he was reduced, completely hemmed in by a numerous enemy, without provisions, and the men daily thinning out by desertion. Walker prayed McDonald for God's sake to work some plan by which he could get possession of one of the Lake steamers, or to fix some other way for his escape. Upon reading this missive, Commander Davis determined to act at once. In his first interview with Henningsen, the latter commenced by saying that Walker was perfectly comfortable behind his fortifications—had plenty of men, ammunition and provisions, and could cut his way out of Rivas whenever he should choose. To this Commander Davis replied, that if that was the disposition with which he was to be met, he would respectfully take his leave. Whereupon, Henningsen got down from his high horse, and the capitulation was the result.

Henningsen also says in his report that Com. Davis assured him previous to the capitulation, that he should take possession of Walker's war-schooner Granada, and it was this assurance, more than any thing else, that induced the capitulation. I do not know whether Com. D. gave any such assurance or not. But if he did, he acted with great inconsistency—for there was no reason existing on the 30th April why Com. Davis should take possession of the Granada that did not exist in March, when the Commander in his letter to Gen. Kinney expressly recognized her as belonging to a legitimate party to the revolution in Nicaragua. Henningsen talks nonsense, however, when he says Walker could and would have cut his way to San Juan and got on board the Granada. Walker's officers often, in their own quarters, discussed the chances of Lockridge' joining them, which was their last hope. They had fully made up their minds that in case of any reverse to him to hold an open meeting on the Plaza, and then to inform Gen. Walker of their full determination to surrender. This I am assured of by an officer of high rank who marched out of Rivas with Walker on the 1st of May. It is barely possible that out of his two hundred fighting men, one quarter or one-third might have got to San Juan del Sur (where they would have met another force of the allies) but Walker's men did not love him well enough to lose their lives in a vain attempt to save him—and they knew that hy surrendering they would be well treated, and probably sent home.

Henningsen further says that they did not surrender to the Costa Ricans. This is a quibble, hnt does not amount to much either way. He would do well, however, before insisting upon the point to cast his eye over the fourth article of the agreement of capitulation; in which the following words occur: "Captain Davis undertakes to obtain guarantees," etc.

Several of the officers have told me that if they had succeeded in getting a comparatively secure footing in Nicaragua, Walker would not have been their commander two months thereafter. He had alienated from him almost every man and officer in his force by his cruel and despotic conduct.

Judge Weir, one of Walker's civil officers, arrived here in the bark Victor the other day. He says there is much distress among the women and children at San Juan del Sur. There were about thirty women waiting to get away, who were all living at the Pacific Hotel, a house owned hy the United States Consul. The Judge says their expenses are paid by the United States—but I presume Costa Rica foots the hill.

General Walker persists in the great error he has fallen into, that a large portion of the population of Nicaragua are in his favor, and would prefer his rule to any other. Henningsen, in his report to his Commander-in-Chief, on the evacuation of Rivas, sets down the number of native troops in the force at 40. This small number would be proof sufficient that the lower classes did not sympathize with the fillihuster cause, admitting that there were 40 native troops in Rivas. But there were not. These forty men were servants, cooks, hostlers, &c., staying upon compulsion. In February last, Walker had only three natives enrolled in his army—one of them, Capt. Sandoval, a cattle thief, was given a commission on account of his expertness in that line, and the two others were used as scouts. I saw, while at Rivas, how Walker obtained even the few natives he had about his camp as servants. One day, driving down to St. George with his Quartermaster-General, that officer rode up to the door of the Alcalde, a native. The Alcalde was engaged in business with two or three Secretaries, but immediately came to the door, bowing most obsequiously. "Where are the five men I ordered you to send me yesterday?" inquired the Quartermaster in a very severe tone. "Your Excellency," replied the Alcalde, "as soon as the people heard of your order they all ran away from the village." "They did—did they? Well, now I want you to understand distinctly that if you do not send me five men hy to-morrow morning at 9 o'clock, to take care of my mules and horses, I will send a guard down to St. George, and take you and your Secretaries for the service."

As regards his friends among the better classes, I think he could not name half a dozen true ones, in all Central America. The sacking of the churches and the burning of Granada were not calculated to make his cause popular; and certainly the confiscation of nearly all the estates where he held military occupation, made him no friends. His hinck-mail system, and that of his officers, could not have taught the people to love him. I will give you a specimen of his manner of levying money. On a fine hacienda, not far from Rivas, lived an old man, the owner, named Eva. Col. Eva, his son, was in the service of the Allies at St. George. Señor Eva had two daughters, one about 25 years of age, who lived on the estate, and the other was married to an American gentlemen, of New-Orleans, named Stansbury. Col. Bauso Von Natemer, Walker's Commissary-General, had an idea that the young lady on the estate had money; and either he or his superiors concocted a plan to get from her $2,000, A man hy the name of Curran, belonging to the Commissary's Department, was dispatched to flag, loaded or loading with guano, under VIVANCO contracts, at the time VIVANCO's fleet abandoned the Islands. In all, there were 23 ships loading under these contracts. Among them I noticed the American barks Emily Banning, Evadne and Huntington, and one, two or three American vessels that have changed their flags, all with Chili charters. The guano is estimated to net the Government about $36 the ton register. I know of one case in which VIVANCO sold a party in Valparaiso guano at $8 ₰ ton register, to the amount of $50,000, for an advance of money to this amount. Besides, this speculator loaded several ships, the tonnage of which he set down at only one-half, and some at only one-third of the real measurement; thus, in fact, getting the guano for from three to four dollars ₰ ton register, or say two to three dollars for the actual ton! As guano brings $55 ₰ ton in the United States, and freight costs only about $20, a very pretty thing will be made out of the $30,000 capital.

A Lima correspondent of the Panama Star, under date of May 12, gives the following important information:

"The Convention here closed their secret session last night on the question of an English and French protectorate of the Chinca Islands. They vote this day, and may have done so at this moment, as it is expected, favorably. If so, the decision may be in time to send to Europe and the United States by this mail."

The Comercio of Lima, of April 29, has the following:

"We are assured from a respectable source that LOMER & Co., of Lima, hold an obligation signed by the revolutionists, by which this firm are to have 10,000 tons register of guano, free of cost, in compensation for their services, and which is at their disposal whenever they choose to receive it. The same firm have a contract with the revolutionists, in case they triumph, to supply, without limitation, the Western Isles with guano, expressed in such a manner that they can transport to the aforesaid islands the guano, and sell it in countries where it may be most convenient for them. This contract is in the names of LOMER & BROTHER, L. GUSMAN and SAMPSON & TAPPAN, of Boston.

The same paper, of May 9, says: "Gen. VIVANCO has issued an order at the Chinchas that all the vessels dispatched for the United States shall be consigned to Mr. TRACY, instead of BARNDA & BROTHERS."

This latter firm will feel rejoiced that they have "saved their bacon" by the downfall of VIVANCO.

Business is represented to be brisk in Lima and Callao with the interior, and on orders for the South and Bolivia since the revolution was considered as being finished.

BOLIVIA.

There is nothing of consequence from this Republic, except that the yellow fever, which has been raging in La Paz for several months, has increased in virulence, and is spreading to other districts.

CHILI.

Señor ASTABURUAGA, formerly Chilian Secretary of Legation to Washington, has, ere this, set out on his voyage in the national war-brig Ancud for Costa Rica, where he goes as Minister. The precise object of his mission has not transpired, but it is supposed to agree upon a plan to strengthen the ties between the Spanish-American Republics, in order to stem the tide of fillibusterism.

"The ultra-Catholic reaction, more or less felt in all Christian countries," the Mercurio says, "has aroused the opponents of the exaggerated pretensions of the Church in Chili. Discussions in regard to Church abuses are assuming a greater freedom than has ever before been known; religious toleration is openly advocated, and even a separation of Church and State is hinted at."

In the island of Calloé, the magnificent convent of the missionaries, including the furniture, ornaments and private property of the fathers, was destroyed by fire. The convent was built from private donations, and was endowed by Government. Loss, $150,000.

The secret military trials, for conspiracy against the Government, at Santiago, were not concluded. The public persist in believing the Government is attaching too much importance to a senseless plot.

The Government expedition of Mr. COX, to explore the Rio Negro, in the hope of discovering an easy interoceanic communication, has failed, it not having been organized on a sufficiently large scale.

Don MATIAS COUSINO was about to undertake the navigation of the river Maule, by an iron steamer, 120 feet long.

Two prolonged, though not severe, shocks of earthquake were felt at Valparaiso and Santiago on the 27th and 28th April.

Coin continued to be extremely scarce in Chili, so much so, that the most stable merchants find it difficult to make regular payments, and sales are paralyzed by the scarcity.

Flour, which had been dull at $9@$9 50 for 200 lbs., went up on the news of the rise of Wheat in the South, and the further news of the high rates in California, to from $9 50 to $10 50. Holders now ask $11 and $12—stock small. American drills obtained better prices than in the previous fortnight. Sales were made in unbleached, at 9½c. and 10c.; in white, at 10½c. and 10½c.; and in blue, at 12c. the inferior, and 13c. to 13½c. the better class. All the three classes are scarce, and the white is in the hand of a single holder. Woolens, linens and silks are dull of sale—stock sufficient. Carolina Rice, $7 50@$8—stock small. Powder, $16 ₰ quintal. Chilian Guano is worth $14@$15. Peruvian sold at auction for $31; the Emily Banning sold one cargo for $30. Silver, in bars, $10 50 ₰ marc, cash. Copper, $22@$23 50. Saltpetre at Iquique, $2 50@$2 62. Hides, $22 50 for first class; $19 50 for second. California Pine, 140,000 feet sold for $11 ₰ M. There is nothing from the River Plate Provinces or from Australia. LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

THE DOCTOR'S LETTERS TO DEMIS HUBBARD.

What he Writes of Mrs. Cunningham.

Evidence for the Claimant Commenced.

DR. STEPHEN MAIN TESTIFIES AS TO THE DECLARATIONS OF REV. MR. MARVINE, AND AS TO DR. BURDELL'S WHEREABOUTS IN OCTOBER—THE DOCTOR PROVEN TO HAVE BEEN IN SARATOGA ON OCT. 31, AND IN BROOKLYN ON THE EVENING OF OCT. 28.

SURROGATE'S COURT—FRIDAY, June 12, 1857.

At the meeting of the Court yesterday morning, Mrs. Burdell took a seat beside her counsel, accompanied by a lady friend, Mrs. Wilt. As usual, her appearance was a signal for a rush to the doors, but by the aid of two police officers the room was kept tolerably clear. Not being able to gain admittance, the crowd formed about the windows outside, and seemed, from the patience with which they occupied their position, to derive profound satisfaction from even this dim view of the proceedings.

TESTIMONY OF DR. MAIN.

Stephen A. Main, dentist, residing at No. 32 Bond-street, testified that he was acquainted with the late Dr. Burdell for a number of years; was present when Rev. Mr. Marvine was examined at the inquest, at No. 31 Bond-street; he asked the witness if the body had changed; and said he could tell the man he married as soon as he would see him; he spoke of the man's beard being long, down on his breast, about two inches below his cravat; witness asked Mr. Marvine, after he saw the body, if he recognised the Doctor; he made no reply, but shook his head; on one occasion, in the Winter, the Doctor spoke of going to Europe some time in May, and said he expected to be gone somewhere about six months; he had a paper in his hand, and spoke of what his trip would cost him; would not be positive as to the amount mentioned, but think it was under $1,000; he said nothing about having incumbrances; witness's house faces No. 31 Bond street; could see into the windows of that house from the windows of his, when the blinds were open; not more than about two feet into the room, through the glass; has seen the family in the third-story front room, at the windows, since November; saw different men there at different times; could not say how frequently; was not positive as to the hours of the day; could not say who they were; could not say that he saw one man there in particular, for he was not accustomed to look into other people's windows; did not recognise any of these men as Dr. Burdell.

Cross-examined—Remembers Mrs. Cunningham for about a year; when she came there the Doctor told him she was a rich widow; saw the Doctor leave the house with a lady, but did not know her. Witness recollects the case of Warner vs. Griffin, in reference to a patent for composition gums, in the United States Court; Dr. Burdell was there as a witness; recollect that the trial was put down on a preceding day for trial, and was postponed; introduced the Doctor to counsel (Judge Dean) on the steps of the Court-house; could not fix the day of the introduction, but recollects the Doctor finding fault with the adjournment, and calling it another "squizzle," at the time witness introduced him to counsel; from this circumstance, knows it was on the occasion of the postponement of the trial; it was on the first Sunday of the inquest that witness saw Rev. Mr. Marvine; the house was full, and every one was talking; every one was saying that it was Eckel that Mr. Marvine married; did not hear Mr. Marvine say that there were strong points of resemblance between the body and the man he married; could not fix the time when he had the conversation with the Doctor about going to Europe; did not hear him say anything about having ladies to accompany him.

DR. BURRELL IN SARATOGA ON OCT. 31.

Adam Snyder, residing at Saratoga Springs, and clerk of Congress Hall, testified that he was stopping at the Marvine House, in Saratoga, in October last; knew the late Dr. Burdell, having seen him very frequently at Saratoga; saw him in Saratoga on the 31st of October last; he came there in the evening train; he arrived on Friday, and left in the morning train on Monday; he had more whiskers than than during the Summer, but they were short on the sides of his face; at that time think his whiskers were shorter on the chin than they appeared in the daguerreotype, but did not notice particularly; they were of a lightish brown color, interspersed with gray; the doctor was quick in his speech and quick in motion.

Cross examined by Mr. Dean—In Summer, 1855, saw Dr. Burdell at Saratoga with Mrs. Cunningham and her daughter; the entry of these ladies' names in the register was made in Dr. Burdell's handwriting; saw them sitting together at table; did not know of their walking out together. In 1856 Mrs. Cunningham did not stay at the same hotel with Dr. Burdell.

To the Surrogate—When the Doctor came to Saratoga on 31st of October last, he said he came from the West; he came to drink the water and not for business; when the Doctor came in, witness accosting him said, "Dr. this is late for you to be at Saratoga—where do you hail from?" He said, "I come from the West now," and he added that he thought he would stop at Saratoga for a few days and drink the water before returning to New-York. [Witness fixed the date by producing the leaf out of the Register of the Marvine House, on which was the entry under date of Oct. 31, 1857: "Dr. H. Burdell, New-York, Room 76."]

CORROBORATION OF MRS. WILSON'S TESTIMONY.

Phœbe Lipper, a little girl aged 14 years, residing in the village of Herkimer, daughter of Catharine Lipper, testified that she was acquainted with Mrs. Wilson of that place, and had lived with her for three years; was in Brooklyn, at Carroll-place, at the house of Mrs. Williams, sister of Mrs. Wilson, last Fall; while there in the Fall they expected Mrs. Wilson there from Herkimer, on a Tuesday morning; she did not arrive on that day, but did on the following Thursday; witness could not fix the week or date; did not remember any one being at Mrs. Williams' the evening Mrs. Wilson was expected, until Dr. Burdell came to the door in the evening; witness let him in about seven and a half o'clock, and he went into the parlor.

Cross examined—Could not remember the day of the week she left Herkimer to come here; had often let Dr. Burdell in at Mrs. Williams' before, generally on Sunday evenings; could not mention any other particular night that she let the doctor in; remembers this one because it was ironing day; saw the doctor in Herkimer last Winter; thinks it was the night witness and Mrs. Wilson got there from here; they got there in the morning, and the doctor in the evening; Miss Brown and Demis Hubbard were there on that evening.

HANNAH DENISON'S TESTIMONY.

Miss Hannah Denison, a young lady of 14 years, residing with her father, Mr. Theodore Denison, in Jersey City, testified that she lived with Mrs. Williams, in Brooklyn, last Fall; lived with her from the time she was three years old until she was twelve; then left her a year and returned, and staid there until last February; remembered Mrs. Wilson being expected there from Herkimer, last Fall; she was expected to arrive on Tuesday morning; she did not arrive until Thursday afternoon about 4 o'clock; witness was in the house when she arrived; it was after dinner; Mrs. Wilson said her husband would like to come, but he wanted to vote; she had been expected on the Saturday preceding the 25th of October, which was witness's birth-day; it was Mrs. Wilson's birth-day too; they were to have had company that evening, if she arrived; on the Tuesday evening when she was expected, witness was in the basement; Dr. Burdell came there that evening, and Phœbe let him in; witness saw him in the parlor; he staid about three-quarters of an hour; he came after supper; it could not have been an hour, for he never staid an hour; Mrs. Williams came down staire after the Doctor went, and said that the Doctor said Mrs. Wilson was not ready to start, and could not come until Thursday.

Cross-examined by Mr. Dean.—Last came to live with Mrs. Williams in the Spring of 1855; did not know the month; had lived there nine or ten years without leaving; could not say when she left; returned there in the Spring of 1855, and staid until last February; last time she saw Dr. Burdell alive was the day after New-Year's, at her father's store, in Cortlandt-street; was at Mrs. Williams' the Sunday before his death; did not remember that he brought any daguerreotype there that day, or that he was there that day or evening; never heard he was there the Sunday before his death; witness was home all day on that Sunday, and knows he was not there that day; was there on the day of his death, all day, and the Doctor was not over there that day; saw the Doctor at Mrs. Williams' after the 28th of October, some time when Mrs. Wilson was there; thinks it was on a Tuesday, or it was ironing day; within a day or two after the Doctor's death, Mrs. Williams mentioned that the Doctor was there on the Tuesday evening in October, and that Mrs. Wilson came on the Thursday after, and she asked witness if she remembered it.

TESTIMONY OF MRS. WILLIAMS.

Lucy Ann Williams, widow, residing in Carroll-place, Brooklyn, testified that she was a cousin of the late Dr. Burdell; Mrs. Wilson, her sister, came from Herkimer to visit her on a Thursday afternoon, in the last of October, 1856; thinks it was the 29th or 30th of October; had expected her on the Saturday morning previous; received a letter on that day saying she would not be able to come that day, but would on the Tuesday following; she did not come on that Tuesday; the Saturday she expected her was her adopted daughter's birth-day, and her sister's birth-day also, the 25th of October; was very anxious that her sister should arrive then, for she had business with her on the 1st of November, and is sure it was the last week in October; Dr. Burdell came on the Tuesday evening, when she expected her sister, and said that he had been to Herkimer, had seen her sister, and she could not come that day; he said he had just returned that morning, and that he had gone up there the Friday or Saturday previous; I think he said he came by the boat; he said he had seen my sister, and had gone to church with her on Sunday: he said they were making a great ado about the elections in Herkimer, raising a liberty pole there.

Cross-Examined by Judge Dean—Dr. Burdell was in the habit of visiting witness once a week, or in two weeks; usually in the evening after tea; he had been there the Sunday before going to Herkimer; he next came on the Tuesday evening, and on the Thursday evening Mrs. Wilson came; thinks he was there also on the next Sunday; did not recollect seeing him again until the evening before her sister went to the country; he was then talking of going to Herkimer again, and said he thought he would meet Mrs. Wilson at the boat; he spoke of bringing Demis Hubbard down to New-York, to spend the Winter with his sister, Mrs. Louis Burdell; thinks he was at witness' house the last time a day or two before Christmas; that witness saw him; Mrs. Louis Burdell told witness that he was at her house the Sunday before his death, but she was in Newark and did not see him; he was not at her house the day of his death; witness was at the inquest the first Monday after the Doctor's death; the Coroner did not ask her any questions as to the Doctor being at her house on Tuesday, October 28; in February, 1856, Mrs. Wilson came to live with witness, because her husband was insane for a few months; the letter she received from her sister on Saturday, October 25, has been torn, one half only remaining; that she believed to be the first half; first became acquainted with Mrs. Cunningham in August, 1855; met her at the Doctor's office; the Doctor brought her to her house in October or September of that year, in the afternoon; she came perhaps ten or twelve times, altogether, after that, not always in company with the Doctor, but generally; she had been there of evenings with the Doctor; witness met her two or three times at Mrs. Meers' receptions, and at a party at Mrs. Frazer's; met her there in company with the Doctor; had not seen Mrs. Cunningham but once since February, 1856, except once in September; did not visit her since February, 1856; Mrs. Cunningham introduced to the witness Mr. Vail, member of Congress for New-Jersey, about the 1st of October, 1855; the Doctor had his hair and whiskers dyed; commenced doing so about a year or a year and a half ago; on one occasion Mrs. Cunningham dyed his hair for him; witness noticed his hair, and the Doctor told her Mrs. Cunningham had dyed it for him.

To the Surrogate—On the Tuesday evening (Oct. 28) when the Doctor visited witness, he told her that he wished Mrs. Wilson to take the house; that he had been greatly deceived in Mrs. Cunningham; that she had given him a great deal of trouble, and he should get her out of the house if he had to pay her for going. In the last interview witness had with him, he said he had been sued for breach of promise by Mrs. Cunningham; witness asked him if he had ever promised to marry her; he said he had not—that it was all a scheme to get money out of him; he said he was going to have her taken up for stealing a note, and she was glad to settle the matter; he spoke of how he was deceived in Mrs. Cunningham; he spoke in very decided terms about her; said she either listened at the keyhole herself, or had some one there constantly; that she watched him all the time; that he had pulled Helen down from the bath-room window, where she had been listening; to witness's questions he said, "Why, Mrs. Williams, you have no idea what kind of a woman she is—she is a perfect fiend—she would dirk a man in the street as soon as not—that she had made him a great deal of trouble;" he said he had not been out with her for a long time, and neither eat nor drank in the house; he said, in relation to marrying Mrs. Cunningham, that she had given up all idea of getting him; that she had a lover in the house; he said she would shortly be married, and added "in fact I do not know but she is married;" he mentioned his name, but I do not recollect names well; he said he was a man 42 or 43 years old, and he believed was in pretty good business; in October he said he should get her out of the house, and that she had promised to go; he said nothing about suits then, and did not until the last interview.

Cross-examined by Judge Dean—Had heard of the suits before this from her cousin, Mr. Jesse H. Cunningham; witness first spoke to the Doctor about them, putting the question directly to him if it was a fact that Mrs. Cunningham had sued him; said it was; he did not state when they were settled; up to June, 1856, had heard the Doctor speak well of Mrs. Cunningham; he said she was a very smart woman, and that she told him she was worth $100,000 in Brooklyn; he said afterwards that he thought that was not true: witness had no difficulty with Mrs. Cunningham; Mrs. Cunningham told witness that Mr. Vail had given her an anonymous letter; witness wrote to Mr. Vail to inquire if it was so, and Mr. Vail replied that he had not shown her any such letter nor told her the contents of it; that he had received such a letter, but had never shown it to any one; witness then understood where the plot originated; Mr. Vail was a widower, and witness was corresponding with him; after this witness dropped Mrs. Cunningham's acquaintance, because she felt she had been deceived in her; this was prior to the time she had heard the Doctor speak disparagingly of Mrs. Cunningham.

Q.—Did you advise the Doctor to marry Mrs. Cunningham, the first year of your acquaintance? A—Mrs. Cunningham asked me to use my influence with the Doctor to get him to marry her, and on one occasion left me in the office to ask the Doctor; I asked the Doctor if he intended to marry her, and he said he did not, and never had.

Q.—Did she promise you, if you would use your influence for her with the Doctor, that she would use her influence for you in another quarter? A.—She said something of the kind, but I told her I would not have any such underetanding with her; this weakened my confidence in Mrs. Cunningham a great deal; in December, the Doctor said, on our last interview, that Mrs. Cunningham was a dangerous woman—that he was afraid of her—that she was plotting then—that she had got round his office-boy, and now she was getting round his lawyer; he said he had given up Brady, and the lawyer he now had was Clinton—[laughter]—that he was a very smart young man, [renewed laughter,] but that she had got into his good graces; he said she had a young lawyer in the house for four or five weeks, writing—that it was to injure him; he further said that when she found he would not marry her, she wanted to get his money, and that was her reason for bringing the suits.

Mr. Perry C. Smith, of No. 1,024 Broadway, clerk in the "People's Line of Steamboats" office, testified that the steamboat New World left Albany on the 29th of October, 1856, and reached here at twenty minutes past two o'clock P. M. on the 30th; she was delayed by being aground at Castleton; the name of "Wilson" appears twice in the register of the ladies' cabin for that trip.

Henry L. Bogardus, aged 21 years, residing in Fifty-seventh-street, testified that he was at No. 31 Bond-street during the inquest, when Rev. Mr. Marvine was there; Mr. Marvine said then that he could not identify the body of Dr. Burdell as that of the man he married; that, judging from the size of the corpse, he did not think the man he married was as large as Dr. Burdell; he said the man he married to Mrs. Cunningham had large, heavy whiskers, which he thought were false.

Cross-examined by Mr. Clinton—This was the same time that Mr. Johnstone (examined yesterday) was present; he may have heard some of the conversation I did not, and I may have heard some he did not; I judge it was the first week of the inquest; I addressed no questions to Mr. Marvine; only heard the conversation; he spoke to Mr. Johnstone and an elderly gentleman; Mr. Johnstone asked me if he could recognize the body as it lay, and he said there was a discoloration about the cheek which might make a difference; I think he had short whiskers, and I do not recollect whether he had any beard: I think he had; I do not recollect whether he had a moustache; cannot recollect the color of his hair.

WHO WILL CALL DR. BLAISDELL?

Mr. Tilden said he wanted to identify a larger daguerreotype, than that produced, of Dr. Burdell.

Judge Dean—Is that the one you got from Dr. Blaisdell?

Mr. Tilden—Yes.

Judge Dean—Then call him to prove it.

Mr. Tilden—Do you call him as your witness?

Judge Dean—No, we certainly will not. You have had him here, and can call him.

Mr. Tilden declined, and so Dr. Blaisdell seemed to be dropped by both parties.

Counsel for the contestants here rested, reserving the right to examine the Public Administrator as to state of Dr. Burdell's papers; to identify the daguerreotype; to identify certain letters as in the handwriting of Dr. Burdell; and to examine Recorder Smith, in regard to the testimony of Augusta Cunningham at the inquest.

The following are the letters put in evidence by counsel for the contestants:

DR. BURDELL'S LETTERS TO DEMIS HUBBARD, AND WHAT HE WRITES OF MRS. CUNNINGHAM AND SPICER.

No. 31 BOND STREET, NEW-YORK, Oct. 10, 1856.

COUSIN DEMIS: I received your letter two days since. You say you are ready to come to New-York whenever I say the word. Mrs. Cunningham is about to take some steps to injure me, I think. Hold yourself in readiness to come to this City at a moment's warning. Perhaps I may go out after you, but if things go on quietly you had probably better stay where you are.

Spicer came down here and quarreled with me, and it is my impression that she and him have some way joined to injure me. Mrs. C. has slandered you and Lucy of the worst kind, and Spicer joined in slandering you.

If I do not go out to Sackett's Harbor in a few days I will send you some money. I am, in great haste,

Yours, &c HARVEY BURDELL.

31 BOND STREET, NEW-YORK, Oct. 15, 1856.

COUSIN DEMIS: I wrote to you a few days since in great haste. I stated that if I did not go out to Sackett's Harbor, I would write in a short time, and send you some money. My rents at the Port have not been paid yet this quarter, which was due the first of this month, but Rehl's, which is due and will probably be paid on the first of November. The property at the Port has increased in value considerably.

Our Bank is now in the most favorable condition. I am a director, and have a good deal to say about matters. I send you fifteen dollers, which is all that I can spare at present.

The trouble I expected with Mrs. Cunningham may not take place, in which case you had better stay where you are for the present. I shall go out to Sackett's Harbor this Fall or the fore part of Winter. Spicer took your furs and shawl out to you when he left here. I really pitied poor Spicer, for when he got here he was like a "cat in a strange garret." He thought, as I had money and lived in good style, I ought to divide with him. He looked so much like an old scarecrow in a cornfield that he actually frightened my customers; and because I scolded a little at him, (something as I used to scold you,) he got into a terrible passion and threatened all kinds of things; and as I and Mrs. C. were bad friends, he joined her and tried to make a time of it. But Spicer's personal appearance was so much against him that Mrs. C. did not think proper to take him under her wing.

As you and Mrs. C. were not on good terms, he joined her in abusing you, but what he said had no more effect on me than the braying of an old worn-out jackass. I was disappointed in poor old daddy long-legs Spicer.

They say he has a bad name wherever he has lived. He is, according to his own admission, a very bad man among women, and no woman can be seen with him without being suspected—so his friends say; but the poor old fool is not worth noticing.

Write as soon as you get this letter. Give my respects to all the folks at S. Harbor also, to your sister Julia, and the big and little daughters.

I am in excellent health and hope you are the same. Excuse the small amount I send you.

In great haste, yours, &c., respectfully,

HARVEY BURDELL.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Nov. 1, 1856.

COUSIN DEMIS: I left New-York yesterday for this place to stay over Sunday, and expect to return on Monday morning.

I received your last letter acknowledging the receipt of the money I sent you. I think that I should not have had any trouble with Mrs. Cunningham if it had not been for Spicer, who joined her in her attempt to injure me. I was much disappointed in Spicer. But all trouble is now at an end I think. She is a designing, scheming, and artful woman. All her designs were to get me to marry her; but the old hag has failed and damned her old soul to hell. I would sooner marry an old toad than to marry such a thing as she is. Sam. Weller says, "beware of the widders," and I think he was right.

You may expect me out at Sackett's Harbor some time this Fall or Winter.

Dinner is now ready and I must close with wishing you all well and happy.

In haste, yours &c.,

HARVEY BURDELL

P. S.—I send you a paper at the same time I send the letter.

No. 31 BOND-STREET, NEW-YORK, Nov. 13, 1856.

COUSIN DEMIS: I wrote to you last from Saratoga. I then stated that I might go out to Sackett's Harbor in a short time, but I have concluded not to leave the City at present. There is no trouble now between me and Mrs. Cunningham. I think Mrs. C. will not make any more disturbance, and that she will be quiet and leave No 31 Bond-street as soon as she can with a good grace.

If you would like to come to this City, I have no objections, but it would not be proper to come to No. 31 Bond-street, as long as the old "she devil" stays here—that is to live here. If you are well situated at Sackett's it may be the most advisable to stay there. Mary and Lucy would like to have you stay with them at Brooklyn, if they conclude to keep her house open this Winter, otherwise Mary will live at Herkimer, where she would like to have you stay with her. Here are the facts: I shall certainly get rid of Mrs. Cunningham by Spring, and I may get rid of her some very soon, and when this monstrous b—h of Hell leaves I would like to have you come at once to New-York. I assure you, as soon as I can get her out of my house I shall, and may the old devil take her to himself in the infernal regions.

I will send you some more money in a short time, as I am in arrears of what is due to you from Elizabeth Port.

My respects to all. Write me on the receipt of this.

In haste, yours, &c.,

HARVEY BURDELL.

No. 31 BOND-STREET, NEW-YORK, Nov. 19, 1856.

COUSIN DEMIS: I have finally concluded that you had better come down to this City. My proposition is this: for you to start from Sackett's Saturday morning, the 29th day of November, and go directly to Herkimer, where I will meet you in the afternoon or evening of the same day. I have made arrangements with Mary, at Herkimer, for you to stop there, the same place, Aunt Denison's late residence.

I write early so that I can get an answer before I leave here for Herkimer. If you had rather stay where you are this Winter, you can say so in your answer to this. Mrs. C. has not left No. 31, and, for the present, after you get back here, you can stop with Lucy, or at the Graham's, who would be delighted to have you with them, (as a boarder, and not as a visitor.) Your income from the Port is exclusively yours.

I am very well, and hope you are the same. Respects to all. I will send you a $10 bill on the coming Saturday or Monday, out of which pay your fare to Herkimer. I think Mrs. C. opened one of your letters, therefore direct to Dr. A. T. Smith, No. 31 Bond street, on the outside envelope; inside of this direct to me properly sealed. Smith works for me. He will get the letter, open it, and find one inside sealed to me, which he will hand to me, and all will be right. Do not neglect this.

I will send you the $10 my way, whether you conclude to come or not. In great haste, yours, &c.

HARVEY BURDELL.

I send you the Sunday Dispatch.

EVIDENCE FOR THE CLAIMANTS.

After the recess, Rev. Dr. Snodgrass was the first witness called for the claimants. Had been a minister of the Presbyterian Church for thirty years and upwards; had been acquainted with Mrs. Burdell since '24 or '25. Witness, in reply to a question of Mr. Clinton, said that in his opinion his wife was not fit to give evidence here now, on account of ill health. On 25th of October last exchanged pulpits with Rev. Mr. Marvine; have a memorandum of the fact; returned to Goshen on the next Tuesday; was informed by his family that Mrs. Cunningham had been to his house in Goshen and spent Sunday, returning on Monday. [Counsel on the opposite side objected to this part of the evidence as hearsay.] Was introduced to Dr. Burdell by Mrs. Cunningham; saw them together on two or three occasions; nothing especially peculiar in the demeanor of Dr. B. towards Mrs. C.; it seemed to be appropriate under the circumstances: saw nothing to savor of unkindness.

To the Surrogate—Was introduced to Dr. Burdell on the 18th, 14th and 15th of December last; his visit at No. 31 Bond-street lasted from Saturday morning to Monday evening or Tuesday morning.

To Mr. Tilden—Knew Dr. Burdell previously, but had not spoken to him; witness and Mrs. Snodgrass went to Savannah about the 20th of November; called at No. 31 Bond-street on their return; while there, occupied the third story front room; never visited in that house at any other time; did not know whether Mrs. Snodgrass had; staid at a friend's house in Eighth-street at the time of preaching for Rev. Mr. Marvine; had three sons living in New-York; none of them kept house at that time.

To Mr. Clinton—Had preached in this City fourteen years; was not aware that Mrs. Cunningham knew where he was stopping when he exchanged with Mr. Marvine; Miss Helen Cunningham was at witness' house in Goshen about the 1st of January; staid two or three days; Mrs. Cunningham became a member of his Church in January, 1846; was acquainted with her former husband.

To Mr. Tilden—Knew Mr. Cunningham in 1845, when his family took a pew in witness' Church.

Mr. Clinton now desired counsel for contestants to produce their other witness, as the scope and plan of the defence would depend upon where the case for contestants was rested.

The witness not appearing, Mr. Clinton called

Frederic A. Potter, a clerk, residing at No. 248 Broome street—Knew Mr. Grant who was on the stand the day before; had known him in Buffalo and elsewhere; would not believe him under oath; had a bad reputation for veracity; was considered a perfect liar by those who knew him.

To Mr. Edwards—Knew him in 1847, '48, '49, 50, and '51; was in a lawyer's office during most of that time; was in the Post-office in 1850; then went to Grant's store as a hook keeper; he did not turn witness away; Grant was then in the carpet business; was acquainted with Mr. Grant before 1851; boarded with him in '49; witness is an Englishmen by birth; is a printer by trade; has not done any business in the last year and a half, with the exception of a month or six weeks; had not met Mr. Grant since 1851; heard a particular friend of his and Grant's, a Mr. Joseph Forsyth, say that Grant had tried to swindle him; also heard a Mr. Brue talk about him; Brue is a foreman in Holmes & Co.'s sash and blind making establishment in this City; when witness came to New-York in 1851, he went to New Jersey, and bought a farm in Essex County; has since sold it to his brother-in-law; read Mr. Grant's testimony of the previous day in the paper, and came to testify of his own accord.

To Mr. Clinton—Had heard something of Mr. Grant's character before he went to live with him; left because he found him worse than he thought.

The Surrogate here remarked that as the counsel for contestants had not yet produced their witness, they must now rest and bring forward any additional testimony this morning.

Elias O. Taylor, of No. 29 Hester-street, a tailor, next called by Mr. Clinton, was a brother of Eli Taylor, who keeps the hotel at Herkimer; his brother came here on the 25th of October last; went with him to Greenwood on the 27th; went to visit the grave of his daughter, who died on the 3d; saw Dr. Burdell the same week that his brother left.

Mr. Thomas Picton, discount clerk of the Artisan's Bank, was the next witness called: Dr. Burdell was a Director of the Bank from its opening to the day of his murder, from the 2d of September last; Alexander Fraser was Vice President of the Bank up to the 24th or 25th of October; at the meeting of the Directors when Mr. Fraser's resignation was presented, Dr. Burdell was present; knew the fact from the memorandum on the offering book; next saw Dr. Burdell on the 28th; saw him come to the Board at 9½ o'clock, and leave when it adjourned; had a conversation with him on the 28th; declined saying what it was; had conversed with him about going to Europe; told him that a gentleman of his wealth should travel abroad; gave him some information about traveling; witness had lived abroad several years; this conversation was, he thought, in December.

To Mr. Edwards—Had not been a banker's clerk before going to the Artisan's Bank; previous to that was one of the editors of the New-York Sunday Mercury; had been editor of Sunday Era, New-York Sachem, and True American; was a relative of Lieutenant-General Sir Thomas Picton, of the English Army, who fell at Waterloo; had had the honor, or dishonor, of being a counselor-at-law, practicing in the Supreme Court of the State of New-York; has been a writer for the Spirit of the Times; has contributed to the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES, Express and London Times; was not in the habit of being present when the Bank Directors were in session; they did not sit as late as twelve o'clock.

To Judge Dean—Dr. Burdell said he proposed going to Europe in June; said he would go in company, or have a companion along.

John Smith, of No. 54 Great Jones-street, watchmaker, was next called: In the Fall of 1856 sold a bedstead bookcase to J. J. Eckel; had been exhibited in Crystal Palace prior to that; delivered it to him on the 28th of October; (bill shown, dated 28th, which witness identified;) it was paid by a check handed to him by Dr. Burdell; the check was signed by Mr. Eckel, and drawn on the Market Bank; the check was paid; it was between five and six o'clock in the afternoon when he delivered the bedstead; when they were getting it in Dr. Burdell came to the door and told them to be very careful about striking the wall; that he should charge him $5 for every knock the wall received; Dr. Burdell helped put it up; witness was there about twenty minutes to half an hour; it was put up in the small room; Mrs. Burdell and one or two of her daughters were there; they examined it after it was put up; had known Dr. Burdell for some time; had been in his house several times before; his whiskers were black; at that time; they came down about to his cravat; were pretty heavy round the side, and bushy; the door leading to the room adjoining that where the bed was put was not open; there was a settee before it; the gas was lighted about the time the bed was put up; Mr. Douglass engaged the bedstead for Mr. Eckel; after the bed was put up Dr. Burdell went into the front room and soon came out with the check. Witness here introduced a very shrewd puff of his cabinet manufacture.

To Mr. Tilden—Was positive the bill was not made the day before; is always particular when he makes out bills to give the date the same day as when delivered; remembered looking at his clock to determine the day of the month; the Doctor had dark clothes on that day; had known Mrs. Cunningham for ten or twelve years; got acquainted with her through his wife; Mrs. C. had been at his house; came on one occasion to see about taking a room; that was two or three years ago; Dr. Burdell, when witness saw him on the 28th of October, was very nicely dressed; thought his clothes were black; Mr. Eckel came in just as witness was going out; Mr. Eckel was introduced to him in the last of October, at the Crystal Palace; Eckel was in company of a niece of his, a daughter of Mrs. Van Ness; thought it must have been about a quarter to six o'clock when he left Dr. Burdell's house; remembered the hour more particularly, because he had made an appointment to be there at five o'clock; Miss Augusta, he thought, had on a dark silk dress; neither her nor her mother seemed to be more than ordinarily dressed; Mrs. Van Ness' business is dress-making.

To the Surrogate—Saw Dr. Burdell at his house two or three times before the 28th of October; called at such times to see Mrs. Burdell about making the bookcase.

Wesley W. Hall, Superintendent of the La Farge Hotel, was next sworn.—Dr. Burdell boarded at the hotel last Fall; only took meals; commenced, according to register, on the 23d of September, 1856; left on the 31st of October, or rather that was the time he paid his bill; that appears by transient cash-book; he returned on the 16th of November, according to the register; Mr. and Mrs. Fraser went there to the La Farge to board about the same time; the Doctor was very regular at his meals.

Dr. Walter B. Roberts, dentist, of No. 55 Bond-street, was the next witness: Knew Dr. Burdell; had been acquainted with him for three years last April; had done a great deal of business with him in the last three years; were in the habit of mutually indorsing notes; on 11th of October indorsed a note for $7,000 for Dr. Burdell; saw Dr. B. nearly every day from the 17th to the 31st, when he went to the country; on the 18th or 19th of October had a conversation with him in relation to the settlement of the breach of promise suits; the Doctor was in the habit of coming into witness' office in the morning, and on the 24th told him that Mr. Fraser had that day resigned his office in the Artisan's Bank; Dr. Burdell told witness that he was going to the bank on Monday or Tuesday morning to try to get resolutions passed complimentary to Mr. Fraser; he was in the habit of leaving information when he went out of town; he said he was going to Herkimer to get some money to meet the note of $7,000, coming due on the 19th of December; this note was given in payment of stock of the Artisan's Bank; the Doctor was not absent from the City between the 24th and 28th of October to his knowledge; became acquainted with Mrs. Burdell on the 19th of August, 1855, at Saratoga, where he was introduced to her by the Doctor; Dr. Burdell at this time spoke very highly of Mrs. C., and represented her as worth $75,000 or $100,000.

At this point there was a great pressure of the crowd about the open windows, and the Surrogate said he would adjourn then, and at the next session have deputy sheriffs enough to keep the crowd back. It was 6¼ o'clock when the Court adjourned.

United States Court of Claims.

Before Hon. Justices Blackford and Scarburgh.

UNITED STATES STATUTES OF LIMITATION, SO CALLED—THEIR EFFECT AS TO CLAIMS FOR OFFICERS' "HALF-PAY FOR LIFE."

Robert H. Gray, Administrator, &c., vs. The United States.—(On argument.)—This was a claim, by an administrator, for the half pay for life of Francis Gray, a lieutenant of infantry in the Virginia Continental line, during the Revolution, who served through the war, and died in 1827. Lieutenant Gray became entitled to half-pay under the resolution of Oct. 21, 1780, which carries interest at 6 per cent., according to the decision in Beird vs. The United States, in this Court.

As no evidence was available to show the presentation of this claim under any of the resolutions or acts of Congress, called acts of limitation, it was assumed to come within the decision, quite recent, (reported a few days since in the TIMES,) of the Court in Chamberlin et al., vs. The United States, and, therefore, to be barred and precluded from allowance.

The acts and resolutions in question are as follows: 1. The Resolution of March 27, 1785, (Journals of Congress, vol. 4 p. 493,) which required "all persons having unliquidated claims against the United States" to de hours, and went to New-Orleans together, and staid there two or three days, and stopped at the St. Charles Hotel.

Mr. Aruga was then recalled for cross-examination through an interpreter.

I have business with Africa—trade in the products of Africa; have no interest in any vessel; but am charterer of the Ellen; I have been in business here for about a year; it does not require any establishment here; I pay commission to those who buy and sell for me—deal with Figueiere, Reis & Co.; came here from Lisbon as a passenger; have crossed the Atlantic several times; have been in Brazil at Pernambuco; my father was a captain: I was very young then; I have been on the Coast of Africa; was there in 1851; never have been a clerk of Figaniere, nor of D'Abranches; have been supercargo from Lisbon to Africa four voyages; never have been in New-Orleans nor in Cuba; don't understand about sailing a vessel; Figaniere, Reis & Co. were my agents to buy the cargo; paid for it part cash and part credit; about ten thousand dollars on credit; the whole cargo cost nineteen thousand dollars; the credit is nearly a year; I saw Mr. Reis in Africa, at Ambriz, I think; saw him two or three times.

Recrossmined—I have about eight hundred tons of cargo waiting for me on the Coast.

The evidence was here closed on both sides and the Court adjourned till Monday for the summing up.

THE TIMES LIBEL SUIT.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice Clerke.

Alonk Blaisdell vs. Henry J. Raymond et al.—The facts in this case were published in full some days since in the TIMES. This morning Judge CLERKE rendered his decision, denying the motion to strike out certain parts of the complaint. We give the following short abstract of the opinion:

CLERKE, J.—This is an action for an alleged libel published in the DAILY TIMES, of which the defendants are the proprietors. The defendants move to have certain passages struck out of the complaint, on the ground that they consist of innuendoes not properly framed, and not supported by the published article containing the supposed defamatory matter.

The defendants' counsel refers to authorities, which he maintains are irreconcilable, on the subject of innuendoes in a complaint in this description of action; some of those authorities, he insists, deciding that an answer taking issue on an innuendo is bad; while others decide that its truth or falsehood can be determined by the jury, and that, therefore, an answer taking issue on it is proper. To avoid the perplexity and danger to their defence, which these supposed conflicting decisions occasion, the defendants ask, either to be released from the necessity of answering these passages in the complaint, by having them struck out, or, if they should answer them, that they may do so under the sanction of the Court.

On the first glance, the decisions, to which the counsel for the defendants refers, appear to be inconsistent; but it will be found, I think, in carefully considering those decisions, that their apparent disagreement arises from some want of perspicuity in speaking of the nature and purpose of innuendoes, and from confounding them with what are, in reality, only propositions, affirming the meaning of the supposed defamatory matter.

An action for spoken or written defamation is somewhat sui generis; and it is not always easy to distinguish between what should, on the trial, be decided by the Court and what should be left to the jury.

When a publication is so indirect and ambiguous in its terms, as that its libelous tendency is not apparent on its face, extrinsic circumstances must be averred, and the connection pointed out by an innuendo.

The office of the innuendo is to explain the application of the words, employed in the offensive publication, by connecting them with the intrinsic circumstances previously set forth in the inducement. This is strictly its only purpose. The design of the innuendo is well illustrated by the familiar example, (4 Co. R. 20,) taken from an old case, where the libelous words were, "he has burnt my barn," with the innuendo, "meaning a barn with corn." An innuendo here was necessary, because, burning a barn, at the time the action in that case was commenced, was not a felony; but it was held to have been improperly employed as it was not supported by introductory facts. If it had been averred, by way of inducement, that the defendant had a barn full of corn, and that in a conversation respecting that barn the words were uttered, the innuendo would have been good; and, by its connecting the libel with the inducement the sense would have been complete. This rule, requiring the preliminary statement of extrinsic facts to support an innendo, prevents obscurity and confusion, and is as indispensable now as under our former system except for the purpose of showing the application to the plaintiff of the defamatory matter out of which the cause of action arose,—it being sufficient for this purpose to state generally that the same was published, "of and concerning the plaintiff"—(section 164 of the code)—but, where the words do not convey a direct slanderous imputation, it is still necessary to state extrinsic facts for the purpose of showing the defamatory tendency of the words themselves—as in the case from Coke, to which I have referred.

I repeat, then, that the office of an innuendo is to connect the published words with persons, or facts, previously named, and being merely explanatory, cannot enlarge the sense of words, or supply or alter them, where they are deficient. Any defect, therefore, in the innuendo, such as that it is not supported by the prefatory extrinsic facts, or that it enlarges their meaning, or alters them, or substitutes other words in their place, is a defective statement of the case, on the face of the pleading, and, under the old system, could be taken advantage of by a special demurrer;—under the Code, as demurrers to complaints are abolished as a remedy for any formal defect, except for the improper joinder of causes of action, it can, I presume, be taken advantage of only by motion—as the defendants have endeavored to do in the present instance.

But are the passages in the complaint, to which the defendants take objection, innendoes in the proper sense of the term? Nothing is more certain now than that it is the province of the jury to determine the meaning of the libel:—it is merely the duty of the Court to define what constitutes it, referring to the jury the consideration of the particular publication, and allowing them to say whether it is comprised within that definition or not. If this is so, assuredly allegations in the complaint that the publication imputed certain crimes to the plaintiff—in other words, asserting the meaning of the words complained of—is only asserting a fact, the truth or falsehood of which the jury have to decide. The passages which the defendants move to have stricken out are obviously not inserted for the purpose of explaining extrinsic facts, previously set forth in an inducement, or for the purpose of connecting the offensive words with those facts. This would be a question of form exclusively for the consideration of the court, but they are an assevoration of the import of the publication itself, which, if the plaintiff is right, constitutes the injury for which he demands redress. The passages there sought to be stricken out, present the precise points upon which the jury are to pass. In short, although bearing the semblance of innendoes, they are allegations of issuable facts founded, according to the theory of the plaintiff, upon the matter contained in the published article set forth in the complaint.

Motion denied without costs.

Deniny Convicted and Sentenced.
COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Yesterday was the third day of Deniny's second trial. The Court room was densely crowded, the result being anxiously looked for. Mr. Busted commenced his closing remarks at 11¼ o'clock, and spoke till 3 P. M. He made an effective appeal on his client's behalf, but claimed that the prosecution against him was got up because he was, to use Mr. B.'s words, "one of that tainted class—known as Irishmen." He was very severe in his denunciation of the witnesses for the prosecution, and the Court itself, by innendo, came in for a share of his sarcasm and acerbity. The points where the evidence for the prosecution seemed to fail were mercilessly exposed, and every pimple of testimony that could be brought to bear in behalf of the prisoner, was enlarged to the dimensions of a cloud-capped mountain. Deniny did not lose his case for lack of an energetic counsel.

The District Attorney replied temperately but emphatically. He also reviewed the evidence, and showed that the prisoner, and the prisoner alone, had the motive and ability to commit the crime.

Late in the afternoon the Recorder began his charge, the Court and Jury having taken no recess. His Honor commenced by alluding to the great importance of the case. The life of a human being was at stake. They (the Jury) were supposed to be entirely unprejudiced and unbiased, except so far as they might hope that the party charged before them with crime might be innocent, and until by the force of the testimony placed before them, they were compelled to abandon that view, that hope should control them. The Court was responsible for the law of the case—the Jury for the facts. If any opinion should escape from the Court relative to facts, it should not be noticed by the Jury. In the former indictment found against the prisoner, since set aside by another action of the Grand Jury, there had been a count charging him with an attempt to defraud the Bowery Fire Insurance Company, but this charge did not appear in the new indictment, now under their consideration, in which the prisoner was only charged with setting fire to an uninhabited dwelling-house. It was therefore unnecessary for them to notice anything that has taken place in the course of the trial having reference to the Bowery Fire Insurance Company. They must simply confine themselves to the fact that it was a dwelling-house. And the questions for them to consider were: Was it a dwelling-house? Was it set on fire in the night time? Did the prisoner set it on fire? If these questions were proved in the affirmative, then they must find him guilty or Arson in the first degree. If they found that the premises were set on fire by the prisoner, being an inhabited dwelling-house, but not in the night time, then it would be Arson in the second degree. Again, if being so set on fire in the night time, the wood-work were not burned, but merely blistered, that would not be such burning as in law would justify a verdict of Arson in the first degree, but only of an attempt at Arson in the first degree.

In all cases where crime is charged, it is necessary that some motive should exist. Having ascertained a motive, the next thing was to see if the person on whom suspicion rested had opportunities to commit the crime. The evidence in this case, relied on by the prosecution, is that the prisoner had the motive, and that the motive was gain, and that the circumstances were such as to show fully that he had the ability to commit the deed. The model of the premises that had been exhibited, showed that with the exception of the store door, there was no way of communicating with the store except through the living room of the prisoner. This store door, when the fire was discovered, was firmly locked, and the officers had to use great force to break it open. When broken open, the fire was found burning so briskly that water thrown upon it only seemed to add to its fury. Now, time must have been required to arrange all the materials that were prepared for the conflagration, but the person making those arrangements must have passed into the store through the sleeping room of Deniny and his wife, and it was for the Jury to consider whether, if not done by him, it could have been done without his knowledge.

There was fire, also, in the cellar below, and it was claimed that, as that cellar had a door communicating with the street, which was unfastened, it might have been kindled by some outside person. But, however that may be, there was evidence that the fire below had not communicated to the store above. The fire below and the fire above were separate. That the fire above was kindled by some person was unmistakable. Who did it? That question they (the Jury) were to pass upon, and, in passing upon it, they were to cast aside every extraneous circumstance, for, whenever that time shall come when jurors shall forget the solemn oaths they have taken, and substitute mere statements of counsel, or appeals to prejudice, or nationalities, or sectionalities, among the causes that influence their verdict, we might cease, indeed, to look for justice, or the hope of justice. The Jury were to weigh the circumstances well, and, if they found them to point to the defendant—no matter what the consequences might be—they did not make the law—it was their duty to find him guilty.

In all trials, if the party charged fails to produce testimony that he might produce, the law says that such omission shall be held against him. It was charged by the prosecution that the stock of the prisoner was insured for $800, and that two days previous to the fire there was a good amount of goods in the store. How then was the small stock at the time of the fire to be accounted for? As merchants, they might, perhaps, be able to say whether Insurance Offices ever insured goods at much more than their value. There was the evidence before them, that chests of tea had been carried away at a very early hour in the morning.

They must not be influenced by anything outside of the evidence. The crime with which the prisoner was charged was the very worst in all the annals of crime. It was worse than murder, for there was no revenge to gratify, and one against which human ingenuity cannot possibly guard. The moment that a jury allows itself to be influenced by sectional prejudices, by questions as to the class or country to which a prisoner belongs, that moment we must bid adieu to anything like protection, or security to life or property.

Mr. Busteed offered several points for his Honor to charge upon, some of which he refused to charge. Mr. Busteed then excepted to most of the principal points in his Honor's charge, giving notice that he should prepare a bill of exceptions.

The Jury retired at 5½ o'clock, having taken no refreshment since they quitted their homes.

At 8 o'clock they sent to the Recorder to inquire if they could find a verdict of guilty of an attempt at arson in the second degree? The Recorder replied that they could do so, if they thought the evidence warranted it. In half an hour they appeared in Court, and rendered their verdict: "Guilty of an Attempt at Arson in the second degree, with a recommendation to mercy."

Deniny was then summoned to the bar and asked what he had to say why judgment should not be pronounced upon him. He made a rambling address, from which all that we could gather woe that Mrs. Brown, from whom he obtained the policy of Insurance on the premises, owed him money.

The Recorder proceeded at once to pass sentence. His Honor observed that everything that human ingenuity could devise had been resorted to in his favor by the counsel engaged for him. There was not a Juror admitted into the box who was not rigidly challenged to show that he had no knowledge of his case, and no bias against him. He had very nearly had to forfeit his life. Only once, during his term of office, had it fallen to his (the Recorder's) lot to sentence a man to death, and he trusted he never should have to pronounce that sentence again. He was glad, therefore, that the Jury had not convicted him of the capital charge. As it was, the punishment that could be inflicted upon him was imprisonment for the term of his natural life; but the recommendation of the Jury should be taken into consideration, and the lowest term which the law allowed should be awarded him. The sentence of the Court was that he be imprisoned, to herd labor, in the State Prison for TEN YEARS.

The Court-room was well-filled with spectators, many of them friends of Deniny, during these proceedings. The prisoner made no remark when the sentence was pronounced. Mr. Busteed will immediately prepare a bill of exceptions, on which he expects to obtain a new trial.

From the time of Deniny's first arrest in September last, until the present time, his wife has been constant and devoted in her attention to him. In connection with this unwavering fidelity, there is a touch of pathos mingled with the recent history of this unhappy man.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS—JUNE 10.

Before Justices Osborne and Connolly.

A great many cases were dismissed, the complainants failing to appear.

John Dolan stole three dresses from Julia Ann Cordez. She caught him going off with them from her room in the house No. 57 Spring street. Justice OSBORNE recognized him as an old offender; he was constantly on the island and before the Courts. Sentenced to six months in the Penitentiary.

John Mansfield and Edward Nugent were charged with a riot last Sunday. Counsel wanted to adjourn the case; the prisoners had no notice. "It is notice enough to a man to be in prison, I should think," said the Judge. The prisoner was remanded, however.

A rough-looking man, named Barney McGafnay, with some friends, were abusing a woman, and Johanna Vail went and got some Policemen, when they ran off. The next time Barnard met her he struck her with his fist, knocked her down and kicked her. He pleaded guilty to the charge which she preferred against him, and was sent up to the Penitentiary for thirty days.

Ellen Condon was going along South street, she said, with another woman, and on passing a tobacco store the latter said, "You're fond of tobacco," and put her hand into a box of it and took about twenty pounds. The testimony showed that Ellen was the real offender and it also showed her the way to the Penitentiary. She was sent up for three months.

A Chinaman entered a complaint of assault and battery against John Toule and Henry Seymour, good specimens of that class of dock hands who are met with daily on South and West streets. The prosecutor spoke English imperfectly, and the Judges could not understand him, so the prisoners were remanded until Saturday, so that an interpreter might be procured.

Owen Garvey pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a quantity of male wearing apparel, and was sent up for six months.

Daniel Marten, a common dock thief, stole a sailor's coat from on board a canal boat, and was sent to the penitentiary for six months to reflect upon the wickedness of his conduct.

Thomas Burns was brought before the bar with a hunged eye, charged with interfering with Officer McKenna, of the Sixteenth Ward Police, and assaulting him while he was trying to make an arrest. He was a rough-looking customer. Judgment, guilty; sentence suspended.

Wm. Meyer stole a shawl and umbrella from the room of Mr. Chase, a boarder at the Astor House. Michael McNamara, one of the porters of the hotel, followed him down Barclay-street and arrested him with the property in his possession. He was adjudged guilty and sent up for two months. He was an exceedingly sleek, genteel looking person, a perfect type of the hotel thief.

Lawrence Peters "took" 3 bags of sugar, value $15, from the bark Titania, at Pier No. 5 North River. The mate of the vessel testified against him, and only wanted him kept in prison until the vessel sails. Justice OSBORNE could not commit him to accommodate the mate unless the charge was substantiated. He was acquitted.

James Williams was charged by Jacob Beller with stealing a pair of Congress boots worth $2 from No. 111 Liberty-street. He was a hard-looking little boy and an old offender. He was sent to the House of Refuge.

Joseph Lipinskie knocked a man down. The man was willing to let him off, and he was discharged.

William Raymond, a clerk in the store of J. B. Williams, was sent by his employer to collect some bills. He followed his instructions beyond their strict letter. He collected the bills but put the money into his own pocket, and the prosecutor had not seen him since. He was charged in two complaints, and was sent to the House of Refuge.

John Baxter, on a similar charge, was not prosecuted, and went off rejoicing.

John Feeny, charged with stealing some gold coins, was let off in the same way.

John Soule, brought to the bar for stealing three locks and one door-spring, in the absence of witnesses was discharged.

Wm. Martin and Wm. McHenry, each charged with assault and battery, got off the same way.

Edward McDonald was drunk one day with a friend, and walking along the street met Michael Leo, an old man, quietly returning from his work, with a pipe in his mouth. Without any provocation McDonald struck him in the face with his fist, broke his pipe in pieces, and knocked him down, "and my head knows the difference for it now," said the complainant. The prisoner was accompanied by his wife and baby. Judge CONNOLLY sent him to the City Prison for ten days. "I am determined to put down these street rowdies," said the Judge.

Jacob Silber was prosecuted on a charge of embezzlement. William Deikenback, his employer, at No. 111 First-avenue, testified that money which a customer had paid the prisoner was not given to him as it should have been. The accused said he put it in the counter and went home; that he told his employer so.

Judge Osborne—(to Prosecutor)—Did he?

Prosecutor—No; he's a regular liar.

Prisoner—Don't you say I lie.

Prosecutor—Yes he.

Judge—Stop that.

The boy was remanded till Saturday.

John McNolan was charged with assaulting and beating his wife. She did not appear, and he was discharged.

"Thomas Munson to the Bar." Officer Loftus saw the prisoner (a negro) drop nine black brooches in West Broadway, and then run. The officer gave chase and arrested him, and it was afterwards ascertained that he had stolen them. The Judge asked the prisoner where he got them. He said another boy handed them to him. "Oh, yes," said Judge OSBORNE, "of course. You'll have to invent some new story, you thieves—that's worn out. Give him four months."

Michael Rafferty was adjudged guilty of stealing some bank bills, and remanded till Saturday to give him time to procure witnesses to his previous good character.

Henry Kuger charged John Williams and James Thompson with stealing $6 worth of copper coin from No. 143 First-avenue, but did not appear to prosecute, and they were discharged.

Phillip Warren and Thomas Brady were brought upon a charge of assault and battery. It seems Brady had hired the premises, No. 543 Water-street, of Thos. Kershan. The latter on the night of the 28th of November was in possession, and while in bed he heard Brady and Warren in the house, having entered with the key of the former. Kershan got up and ordered them off; Brady ordered him off, claiming that he was the rightful occupant of the house and when he refused to go the prisoners committed the assault on him. It had already been decided in a civil suit that the complainant was the rightful occupant of the premises, and the charge was dismissed on the ground that he had a right forcibly to eject every one who had no business there if they refused to go peaceably.

Charles H. Fleming was charged with stealing $3 worth of paint from Mrs. Mary Parmlee, No. 36 Howard street. He was employed to paint the house, and she furnished the materials. She had paid him $15 for services rendered; he claimed $5 more; she wouldn't give it, and he took the paint-box, and held it security for the balance claimed. Judge OSBORNE said that if the original complaint had been made before him he would have dismissed it. Fleming was acquitted.

John Haffnagle prosecuted Ditman Cordee, on the ground that he kept a disorderly house. Officer Gleason was called as a witness, and knew nothing relevant. A German woman, called to testify, was equally ignorant of anything tending to criminate the accused. "This is not the place to manufacture testimony," said the Judge. It appeared that the complainant occupied the lower part of the house, and the prisoner the upper, and this charge was made to procure his ejectment. The complaint was dismissed.

Several cases were postponed to Saturday.

Charles Miller was found guilty of an assault on Officer Burden, of the Eighteenth Ward Police, while in the discharge of his duty. Sentence was suspended.

MARKET REPORTS.

Markets—Carefully reported for N. Y. Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 12, 1857—6 P. M.

ASHES—Were salable and firm. Pearls, $7 75; Pots, $8 12½@$8 25, ₰ 100 lbs.

COFFEE—Is rather quiet, yet stiffly held. Java, 15½c.@16¾c.; Laguayra, 12½c.@13¾c.; Maracaibo, 12c.@13c.; Rio, 9¾c.@11¼c.; St. Domingo, 13¾c.; Bahia, 10½c. ₰ lb.

COTTON—A limited demand exists for lots here, but lots, in transitu, are in request. Prices have not improved in any respect.

NEW-YORK CLASSIFICATION.

	Upland.	Florida.	Mobile.	New-Orleans and Texas.
Ordinary	12	12	12	12
Middling	13¾	13⅞	14	14⅛
Middling Fair	14⅜	14⅝	14¾	15
Fair	14⅞	15	15⅛	15⅛

FLOUR AND MEAL—State and Western Flour is brisker and dearer, with less offering. The Hudson River boats brought down only 5,000 bbls. the past twenty-four hours. The sales since our last comprise about 12,750 bbls., in lots, mainly at the prices within the annexed range:

Ordinary State	$6 50@$6 70
Straight State	6 70@ 5 90
Extra State	7 00@ 7 20
Common to Good Indiana and Upper Lake	6 65@ 6 95
Common to Good Superfine Ohio	6 75@ 7 05
Fancy Michigan	6 75@ 6 95

Extra Ohio	7 25@ 9 00
Fancy Genesee	7 40@ 7 60
Extra Genesee	7 75@10 00
Extra Missouri	8 00@10 50

Canadian is unchanged. Sales have been reported of about 500 bbls., in lots, at from $6 70@9 for superfine to very choice extra ₰ bbl. Southern is in lively request, at higher and rising prices. The transactions since our last comprise about 3,000 bbls. low Mixed to choice Extra, at $7 75@$10 ₰ bbl. Rye Flour is scarce and needed, at $4 50@$6 50 for Fine to Superfine ₰ bbl. Corn Meal is dull and heavy, at $4 10@$4 20 for Jersey, and $4 40 for Brandywine, ₰ bbl.

FRUIT—Sales by auction, 2,034 boxes Messina Lemons at $1 75@$2 25; 2,412 boxes do. Oranges at $3@$3 25; 1,808 boxes Sicily Oranges at $3 00@$3 50; and 619 boxes Palermo Oranges at $1 90@$2 60 ₰ box.

GRAIN—Wheat is quite scarce and is in demand at advancing prices. Sales, 12,500 bushels,—including very choice Canadian White at $1 97½; and good ordinary Western Red (Club) at $1 86 ₰ bushel. The Hudson River boats brought down only 2,500 bushels of Wheat the past twenty-four hours. Rye was purchased to the extent of 7000 bushels, Pennsylvania, Jersey and Northern, at $1 1@$1 25—closing with little, if any, of any kind, procurable under $1 25,—while many factors quote Northern up to $1 30 ₰ bushel. Barley and Barley-Malt remain as last noticed. Oats are heavy and languid at 67c.@70c. for Western, 62c @66c. for State; 61c.@65c. for Canadian and Jersey; 58c.@61c. for Pennsylvania, and 55c.@58c. for Southern ₰ bushel. Corn is plentier and cheaper,—with a moderate home and a limited export inquiry. Sales—36,000 bushels at 95c.@96c. for mixed; 98c.@$1 for yellow, and 98c.@$1 01 for White, ₰ bushel. The Hudson River boats brought down 10,000 bushels Oats and 8,000 bushels Corn the past 24 hours.

HONEY—A report of a sale, effected yesterday, of 33 hhds. and 17 tcs. Cuba in bond, at 84c., cash, for export, was crowded out of this morning's paper, as likewise most else of our Commercial matter.

LEAD—Has not varied.

LIME—Rockland, 85c. for Common, and $1 20 for Lump, ₰ bbl.

PROVISIONS—Pork exhibits no new features. Sales 730 bbls., at $23 50 for Mess, and $19 20@$19 30 for Prime, ₰ bbl. Cut Meats are in demand, and are firm at 11c. @11¼c. for Hams, and 10c. for Shoulders, ₰ lb. Bacon is scarce and quiet at 11¾c.@12¾c. ₰ lb. Lard is moderately inquired for, and is firm. The transactions since our last reach about 350 bbls. and tcs., mostly fair to prime, at 14¾c.@14½c. ₰ lb. Beef is in fair request at full prices. The transactions since our last consist of 450 bbls., at $14@$15 for Country Mess; $16 50 @$17 for repacked Western Mess, and $17 50@$18 for extra Western do., ₰ bbl. New Prime Mess Beef, 42c@$31 ₰ tc. Beef Hams, $23@$23 50 ₰ bbl. Butter is plenty and in very moderate demand, at 15c.@ 20c., for new Ohio; 18c.@23c. for common to very good new State, and 24c.@28c. for prime to choice do., ₰ lb. Cheese is dull and heavy at 6c.@11c. ₰ lb.

RICE—Is in fair demand, and is worth from $4 50@ $5 37½ for ordinary to strictly prime, ₰ 100 lbs.

SUGARS—The large and increasing quantity here does not weaken the confidence of holders; these show no disposition to make any concession, and buyers purchase very sparingly at the nominally prevailing rates. The sales reported since our last have been confined to small lots of Cuba, &c., in bhds., at 10¼c.@11c.; Melado, at 7¾c.; and Havana, in boxes, at 11¾c.@12c. ₰ lb.

TALLOW—Sales were reported of 35,000 lbs. prime, in lots, at about 11½c.@11¾c. ₰ lb.

TOBACCO—Is in moderate supply, and quite stiffly held, hence it is inactive. Sales since Tuesday last: 82 hhds. Kentucky and Maryville 13c.@20c.; with 400 bales Havana for export, and 80 bales Yara on private terms; and, by auction, 10 cases Florida 15c.@18c.; 12 cases Seed Fillers 11½c.@12½c.; 77 bales and 10 cases Cuba and Sagua 22c.@24c.; and 10 bales Havana 32c.@33½c. ₰ lb.

WHISKY—There were 375 hhls. Ohio and Prison procured, chiefly at 34c. ₰ gallon.

WOOL—Is quite dull and heavy in this market. The London Colonial Wool Sales—which terminated on the 29th ult.—we find noticed in the Circular of Messrs. Sonthey & Son, thus:—

"The first series of sales of colonial wool of the season commenced the 30th ult., and concluded this day, comprising 15,320 bales of Sydney, 31,569 bales of Port Phillip, 8,252 bales of Van Dieman's Land, 9,025 bales of South Australian, 398 bales of New-Zealand, 35 bales of Swan River, and 7,604 bales of Cape; making a total of 62,143 bales, besides 1,016 bales of East Indian. The extreme prices paid in the early February sales had a very prejudicial effect at the time on both the wool and woolen trades, and, notwithstanding the giving way afterwards, it soon became apparent the established rates at that period checked consumption in the manufacturing districts, dull markets having prevailed for many weeks. Under such disadvantages, together with continued high rates of discount, these sales opened. Our home buyers made most determined efforts to start prices at a material reduction; this was checked by the great support given at the early sales by buyers on foreign account, who secured nearly 50 ₰ cent. of the wool offered at the early sales. In the second week, owing in a great measure to slackness of foreign demand, prices declined a little, but soon recovered, and proceeded to the end with increasing firmness. The general decline on the closing prices of last sales may be quoted at about 1½d. ₰ lb. Many superior marks in high condition, both from Sydney and Port Phillip, were supported by all classes of buyers, and sold very nearly at February prices. The wasting condition of a large portion of the wools from Port Phillip and Portland Bay accounts for prices per catalogue appearing below the above reduction. These sales contained a considerable quantity of lambs' wool; it sold only at moderate rates. A portion of the abundant supply of Cape sold in February being still in stock, the demand for the Wool of this colony was on the present occasion, as we expected, not very active. Fortunately, the arrivals have been limited; prices were about 3d. lower than the average of last sales. It is estimated that 25 to 30 ₰ cent. of the whole quantity of Wool at these sales were bought for shipment. The few East Indian Wools offered reached former prices."

FREIGHTS—Were depressed and rates were somewhat irregular. For Liverpool—Cotton, 3s @3s. 6d ₰ bale; Flour, 6d.@9d. ₰ bbl.; Grain, 3d.@3d. ₰ bushel; Beef, 6d.@1s. ₰ tierce; Resin, 6d.@9d. ₰ bbl.; and Heavy Goods, 10s.@15s. 6d. ₰ ton. For other ports, proportionate quotations.

ELECTROTYPING AND ELECTRO-PLATING.—A large assortment of BATTERIES AND OTHER MATERIALS used in the above arts; also, SOLUTIONS FOR DEPOSITING ALL THE METALS AND THEIR ALLOYS. For sale by RIVERNETT & SMITH, Chemists, No. 344 (old No 4) Canal-st., near Centre, New-York

New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, SATURDAY, JUNE 13 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The United States Mail steamship George Law, with the California mail of May 20 and $1,920,376 in treasure, arrived at this port yesterday afternoon. We received by the Law late and interesting news from California, Oregon, the Sandwich Islands, New-Granada, Central America, and the South Pacific.

The intelligence from California presents no feature of special importance. There had been frequent showers of rain, which would greatly benefit the growing crops. Though the general yield will be far below the average, the crops are not ruined as was at first feared they would be by the dronth. Various meetings had been held throughout the State in favor of different routes for a wagon road across the Sierra Nevada. Another indictment has been found against Dr. BATES, the defaulting State Treasurer. It is alleged that he has embezzled $41,000 of the State moneys, which is over and above the missing $124,000.

From Oregon we learn that the Indians are again menacing hostilities. It is the general opinion in well-informed quarters that the Indian war will be recommenced as soon as the proper season opens.

There is scarcely an item of news, by this arrival, from the Sandwich Islands. Several British ships of war had stopped at Honolulu to coal on their way to China. Another guano expedition had started for Bird Island, one of the Hawaiian group.

We find in the San Francisco papers confirmatory intelligence of the murder of Mr. PARRISH and another gentleman near Salt Lake City. Our correspondent at Salt Lake sent us some particulars of this horrible occurrence, and they were published in this journal several weeks ago. The accounts in the San Francisco papers are substantially the same.

We have received and publish elsewhere, full details of the defeat and annihilation of General CRABB and his Sonora filibustering expedition. The battle, of which we previously had a brief account, took place at Cavorca, a small Mexican town of about 1,000 inhabitants, within one day's march of Lobos, on the Gulf of California, where CRABB's recruits and supplies were to land. This town consisted of one long street, quite closely built, with a church at its upper end, which was filled with Mexican troops. CRABB and his party occupied houses on the left side of the street. The fight lasted eight days, by which time the Americans, from ninety, (their original number,) were reduced to fifty-eight. At length the house which they were defending was fired, and they were forced to make unconditional surrender. The next morning they were all taken out and shot. One account states that the Mexican authorities were extremely brutal in dealing with their prisoners. General CRABB was calm and composed to the last. He died, as he lived, a man of great nerve and courage. The Californians were much moved at the fatal termination of this expedition, and many who would not sympathize with its members as filibusters, have still feelings for them as American citizens.

From New-Granada we have no news whatever in relation to our pending dispute with that republic. The Administration of President OSPINA remains dumb upon the subject. Mr. BOWLIN had intimated that,—satisfied that no proposition would be made to him,—he would leave Bogota on the 20th inst. for the United States. The British Mackintosh Claim has been settled. New-Granada pays $560,000 in paper instead of cash. Diplomatic intercourse between the two countries has been resumed.

We have received some intelligence from Nicaragua since the departure of Gen. WALKER and his staff. Two hundred sick and wounded filibusters—the remnant of WALKER's army—had arrived at San Carlos in the steamer of the same name. They were all on their way home, and are described as being in a most pitiable condition. The men left in Rivas have probably gone to Costa Rica, where there are already some three hundred deserters from WALKER's army. Nicaragua was tranquil, and an election was to be held on the 15th of June. The Republic would be occupied by the four Central American States until its Government was firmly established

From Peru we learn that the revolution under VIVANCO is at an end, and has proved, as we always anticipated, a complete failure. All the revolutionary ships had surrendered except the Apurimac, 44 guns, and by arrangements with her officers, she was to be delivered up to CASTILLA within a week. It is not believed that the troubles of Peru will cease with the reëstablishment of peace. Serious questions, we learn, will arise with Chili and the United States in relation to the guano. Large quantities were sold below the legitimate rates by VIVANCO, and the Peruvian Government is now about to claim the difference. The Republic of Chili has sent a special minister to Costa Rica for the purpose, it is supposed, of agreeing upon some plan by which the Spanish American alliance can be strengthened, and the advance of Anglo Saxon filibusterism effectually checked.

The Empire City arrived last evening from New-Orleans and Havana, having left the latter port on the 7th. The news is unimportant. Sugars were dull, and prices were unchanged.

DANIEL CLARK, of Manchester, Republican, was yesterday elected United States Senator by the New-Hampshire Legislature, over JOHN S. WELLS, Democrat, by 190 votes against 125.

Gen. WALKER and suite arrived in Washington yesterday. He denies that his object in visiting that city is to see the President, and says that his business is more especially in New-York.

The Committee of Arrangements for the reception of Gen. WM. WALKER, had a meeting last evening at the "Pewter Mug," in Frankfort-street. They appointed some Sub-Committees, but did nothing of any special import.

There was a balloon ascension at Newark, last evening, at 6 o'clock. Professor MURAT, a Mr. CRAMPTON, and a lady, a cended in the car. It passed over Bergen Heights at 6½ o'clock, and, when last seen, was pulling up Long Island Sound.

All was quiet down to last night at Seguine's Point. The builders are doing well by their shanty, and the Police by their quoits. The stuff for the new wharf went down yesterday without having ignited on the route.

One hundred and fifty additional members of the Police Department were summoned yesterday to appear for trial before the Metropolitan Commissioners. One hundred and thirty-five insubordinates were then removed from the Department, after which the Board adjourned till Monday. Mayor WOOD and City-Judge RUSSELL continue also to dismiss and appoint, but they transact their business in private, and keep secret the names of those whom they appoint. MCCUSKER, of Mayor WOOD's Police, who, on Wednesday last took a prisoner from a Metropolitan officer, appeared before the Recorder yesterday, and gave bail to answer in the sum of $1,000. Police-Justice CONNOLLY ordered two Metropolitan officers, who had been detailed at the Lower Police Court, to "clear out," as he did not recognize them as Policemen. Some of the old force detailed at the General Sessions, who refused to heed their dismissal by Recorder SMITH, and who attempted to prevent the new men from entering the Grand Jury Room, received a note from the District-Attorney, informing them that their services were no longer required about the Grand Jury Room. Still undecided, one of them locked the Jury-room door, put the key in his pocket, and went for advice to the Mayor, who desired him to return and surrender the key to the District-Attorney. This, of course, was done.

The obsequies of Mr JOSEPH S. TAYLOR, the late Street Commissioner, took place yesterday at St. Stephen's Church, Broome-street, where the funeral service was read by Rev. Dr. PRICE, who also preached an appropriate sermon. The Mayor, Common Council and Heads of Departments were present. After the ceremony the body was interred in the Second-street Cemetery. The flags on the public buildings and hotels were at half-mast throughout the day.

The funeral services of Dr. VACHE took place yesterday morning at the Church of the Transfiguration, Twenty-ninth-street. Several members of the Common Council were in attendance. An impressive discourse was delivered by the pastor, Rev. G. C. HOUGHTON.

The U. S. Coast Survey schooner Bowditch, Capt. MITCHELL, lies at anchor in our harbor, and will sail on Tuesday for Nantucket and Vineyard Sounds, under charge of Prof. HENRY MITCHELL, for the purpose of carrying out his tidal and current observations on that part of the coast, establishing tide-guages, &c. This department of the Coast Survey Service in our waters has for a long time been under the supervision of Prof. MITCHELL, who has established greatly-improved tide-guages of his own construction at various important points. After the completion of his trip eastward, he returns to carry on his operations about Sandy Hook and the Lower Bay.

An evening paper, whose circulation runs largely to editions, stated yesterday that a slave schooner had been captured at 4 o'clock in the morning outside of Sandy Hook, by the Washington cutter, (meaning doubtless the cutter Washington,) and that she was sent up in tow of a tug, in custody of Federal officers. As the cutter Washington did not leave her anchorage in this harbor until about 10 o'clock yesterday morning, and had not returned at night, and as the United States Marshal, who ought to know what slavers are captured in our waters, pronounces the story baseless, and that neither he nor FAUNCE knows anything about it, we take it that no slaver was captured. Still, if the United States officers were half as lively as our reporters were yesterday, after reading the statement, the news, if republished a week hence, we suspect, might prove eminently true.

The trial of the brig Ellen on a charge of being fitted out for the Slave trade was continued yesterday and the testimony closed. The owner and the charterer and the master all tell a straight story as to the employment of the vessel, and her preparation for the voyage was certainly made in the most open manner possible, and every opportunity offered to the authorities to test their suspicions by investigation. The main interest was in the examination of Capt VAN VECHTEN. He accounted for his statements, or, rather, inuendoes that the vessel was going on a slaving voyage, by saying that his brother had interfered improperly with his business and insisted that he was going on a slaving voyage, and he therefore allowed it to pass in that way, and that his statements to Capt. FAUNCE and Mr. MCKEON were equally unfounded, and some of them made in jest. It will prove rather an unprofitable affair for Capt. VAN VECHTEN's owners, even should the Court now accept his testimony that he knows nothing whatever of the vessel's being intended for the Slave trade. Perhaps Capt. VAN VECHTEN himself will learn that it is not well to admit guilt hereafter where there is none, even in jest. The case will be summed up on Monday.

Yesterday, in the Burdell Estate case before the Surrogate, the evidence was closed for the contestants. Dr. MAINE testified as to Rev. Mr. MARVINE's declaration that he could not recognize Dr. BURDELL as the man he married. Mrs. WILLIAMS and other witnesses were examined to prove that the Doctor was in Brooklyn on the evening of the alleged marriage—Oct. 28. Some letters written by the Doctor to DEMIS HUBBARD in October and November last were introduced, in which he speaks of Mrs. CUNNINGHAM as a "she devil" and "old hag"—with like expressions, not common to a happy bridegroom in his honeymoon. Evidence for the claimant commenced by the examination of Rev. Dr. SNODGRASS, who proved that Mrs. CUNNINGHAM had called upon him to perform the marriage with Dr. BURDELL.

The trial of DENINY was brought to a close yesterday in the Court of General Sessions. The whole day was occupied with the speeches of counsel for the defence and prosecution, and the Recorder's charge to the Jury. After being absent nearly three hours,—a much shorter time than was expected—the Jury found a verdict of guilty of an attempt at arson in the second degree, accompanied with a recommendation to mercy. The Recorder promptly sentenced DENINY to ten years' imprisonment, with hard labor.

WM. SHEHAN, the sailor who was stabbed on Tuesday afternoon in Cherry-street, while engaged in a squabble with two negroes, died at the New-York Hospital on Thursday night. An inquest was held upon the body yesterday afternoon by Coroner CONNERY. The verdict rendered by the Jury was, that the said WM. SHEHAN came to his death from the effects of a stab inflicted in the abdomen on the 9th inst., in Cherry-street, at the hands of STEPHEN PINKETT, and that SAMUEL WATKINS was accessory to the fatal deed. The accused were then remanded to the City Prison.

Yesterday, in the Supreme Court, Judge CLERKE denied the motion made on the part of the proprietors of the TIMES, in the suit brought against them by Dr. BLAISDELL, for an alleged libel, to strike out certain parts of the complaint. This decision does not affect the ultimate question, whether the publication complained of was libelous or not.

On the first of July the new tariff takes effect under which foreign liquors are subject to only thirty per cent. instead of one hundred per cent. ad valorem duty as heretofore: this will account, in part, no doubt, for the three cargoes of schnapps which have lately arrived here from Rotterdam and gone into bond for a single dealer in this line.

The Temperance Alliance has appointed Messrs. BENNETT, LEIGH, GREELEY, CAPRON, WARREN, SNOW, LLOYD, TRALL, SNODGRASS and WISEBURN to represent the Alliance in the State Temperance Convention in Albany, on Tuesday next, 16th inst.

The Fire Underwriters yesterday adopted some stringent regulations concerning bonded warehouses, intended to guard against any more such losses as were suffered by the fire in Baxter's building.

The body of an unknown man was found yesterday, at the foot of Fifteenth-street, East River. He appeared to have been in the water about ten days, and was about 30 years of age. An inquest was held, and a verdict of "Found drowned," rendered.

A young Scotchman named DOUGLAS P. REID killed himself with landanum, on Thursday, at No. 618 Sixth-avenue, where he resided with his parents. He was a graduate of the University of London, and was highly accomplished.

On Wednesday night, SNYDER & VANDEMARK's store, at Stone Ridge, Ulster County, was broken open, and a large quantity of valuable articles of merchandise and $150 in money were stolen. There is no clue whatever to the discovery of the robbers.

The disappearance of a young lady from Ashland, Greene County, has been accounted for. It turns out that she eloped with a married man, whose disappearance was also noted about the same time. The man left behind him a wife and several children.

The A 1 sloop yacht Emily, fifteen tons burden left Thorne's Dock, Brooklyn, at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, with some twenty persons on board, for a pleasure trip to Seguine's Point. Among the passengers were Deputy Superintendent of Police FOLK, Sergeants STEWART and SMITH, and officers VAN WAGONER, RAYNER, FAOST and ROGERS, all of the Metropolitan Police force, Brooklyn; DANIEL L. NORTHRUP, DAVID K. SEAMAN, and other citizens. The party started off in excellent spirits and a strong breeze, and when off West Banks, about 1 o'clock, through some mismanagement or mishap the yacht struck upon the Banks, and almost instantly rolled over, spilling all on board into the water. Fortunately all clung to some portion of the boat, and soon after the steamer City Island came to their assistance, when an attempt was made to get the boat off, but the hawser parted. About this time Pilot Boat No. 7 came up and took off all but five of the passengers, and landed them near Fort Hamilton, when they made their way to the City, which they reached about 4 o'clock. Some various hats, boots, and other articles of clothing which happened to be scattered about the boat at the time she capsized were lost. Several of the passengers remained behind to take charge of the yacht, and the City Island was to return last night and tow them off the Banks.

The Coroner's investigation of the Hoyt-street (Brooklyn) wife-murder reveals some horrible low-life secrets. The neighbors testify that repeatedly they found the drunken mother with her babe, two years old, drunk in her lap, and once it rolled from her lap to the floor. For the presumed murder of this drunken mother, the drunken father is now under arrest.

New-York "Peoples" and Gen. Walker.

"Three tailors of Tooley-street" on a certain memorable occasion issued a proclamation, emanating from themselves, and themselves only, commencing—"We, the people of England." In the great filibustering meeting held on Thursday evening, to concoct a welcome for the inestimable WILLIAM WALKER, "the people of New-York" were represented very much in the same manner. We have unfortunately always at hand a large number of professional spouters, not only to say for us what we wish to say, but also what we never dreamed of saying. Strangers must think us the oddest people on the face of the earth. There is no subject on which "the people of New-York" does not hold sentiments diametrically opposed at one and the same time. We are Pro-Slavery and Anti-Slavery, Pro-Liquor-law and Anti-Liquor-law, Pro-Filibuster and Anti-Filibuster. Our political line is so curious, that we seem to be of two different colors at once. The people of New-York, speaking through the mouth of Alderman WILSON or Mayor WOOD, certainly appears a very different people from that which speaks through Dr. CHEEVER or HENRY WARD BEECHER, and yet there are not two peoples of New-York, but one.

The explanation of this apparent paradox is very simple. We are surrounded by impudent and audacious imposters, who, taking advantage of our absorption in business, present themselves to the world as our mouthpieces, and father upon us all their own folly and absurdity. To repudiate their bombast would be almost as ridiculous as for the three Estates of England to have disowned the three tailors of Tooley-street, but there are, nevertheless, occasions in which these pretendors deserve, for the sake of the community at large, something as like a rebuke as we can afford to bestow on a body of which "WILLIAM WILSON" is one of the leading members.

At the meeting in the National Hall on Thursday evening, representing as it professes to have done "the people of New-York," the said people proved themselves—with all respect, be it spoken—as great asses as any people of the same position and attainments in either ancient or modern times. The only good purpose the demonstration has served, is to show to the world what fountains of nonsense some of the military and legal luminaries of this metropolis have at command. Mr. BLANKMAN, for instance, thought there was no apology necessary for his appearance whenever the subject of liberty and humanity was under discussion.

What, we should like to know, is there so contemptible about "liberty and humanity," as to render it unnecessary for any blockhead who undertakes to speak about them to ask pardon of the public for his presumption? Mr. CREIGHTON, who followed in his footsteps, has entitled himself to the gratitude of posterity by giving to the world his notions of generalship and statesmanship. His great General is a man who begins a campaign with a thousand men and the resources of a whole State, and ends it with one hundred and fifty men, two streets of a small town, three mules and a horse, and makes his escape to avoid hanging. His great statesman is a man who starts as elected President of a flourishing Republic, and in eighteen months has the whole population in arms against him, and has to seek safety in flight. From ANDREW JACKSON PLUMB we have some most interesting particulars regarding General WALKER's early life, which, for his own sake, we are sorry he has made public, as some future biographer would, no doubt, have paid him handsomely for them. It appears—and our hand trembles with excitement, as we write the words—that he knew Mr. CREIGHTON's greatest captain and greatest statesman of modern times, when "he kept a law office in Marysville." As a mere matter of curiosity, it is a pity the gentleman contented himself with this simple fact. Mr. CREIGHTON has not thought it necessary to afford us any further information, but he has done better. He has assured us that ever since that eventful period, he has been "watching WALKER." Now when a man like CREIGHTON watches a man like WALKER, the world may well hold its breath. Something is sure to come of it, and from CREIGHTON's vigils, have resulted CREIGHTON's opinion that WALKER had shown "the elements of a General and statesman." What these "elements" are, or in what portion of his person, WALKER is in the habit of carrying them, Mr. CREIGHTON does not vouchsafe to inform us; but vague and meagre as the Intelligence is, its importance cannot be overrated. Mr. CREIGHTON has also discovered that KOSSUTH, rousing his own countrymen against Austria, furnishes an exact parallel to WALKER's leading American adventurers against a foreign nation, with which his own government was at peace. CREIGHTON himself is in one respect like GOETHE, who, we may mention for his information, was a well-known German philosopher and poet. GOETHE had a horse and so we presume has CREIGHTON; but we fear the parallel could not be extended much farther.

The great speech of the night, however, was from Colonel FABENS of filibustering notoriety, and a very great speech it was. He dealt out to all hands an ample allowance of figures and tropes. He tore passion to rags and tatters, and was as pathetic as a filibuster could reasonably be expected to be. It appears, according to him, that WALKER is not the only person who has gone to the wall within the last year. There has been a distribution of disaster and calamity all round, made upon the stinted principles of justice. The great chiefs of the Democratic party are pining in obscurity, and suffering the tortures of a reproving conscience. WALKER, after his two years of generalship and statesmanship, led out of his dominions a forlorn band, of whom only himself and another were able to pay their passage home, and is now reduced to such a pitch of degradation that his reputation has to depend for its lustre on CREIGHTON's reminiscences and FABENS' eloquence. W. L. MARCY, after all his clever diplomacy, is, it seems, "a stranger in his old house," from which we conclude all the people in that neighborhood died out or removed during the ex-Secretary's four years absence. CALEB CUSHING is, says Colonel FABENS, in much the same position as HESTER PRYNNE when she wore the scarlet letter on her breast, and is obliged "to parade his own infamy" before his fellow-townsmen. This mysterious statement we hope does not convey any imputation upon Mr. CUSHING's general morality.

The Colonel is never so eloquent as when he begins to tell us about the feelings of the people of this State—whom he divides into "blacksmiths, farmers, weavers, sailors, schoolboys and maidens"—with regard to WALKER's doings in Nicaragua. None of these people, it appears, think of anything, or see anything in WALKER's career but his "noble heroism, his self-denial, his voluntary hardships, and his patience in adversity," &c., &c. We beg to assure Colonel FABENS that these are just the classes upon whom WALKER's strong will and brute courage make least impression, and upon whom his heartlessness, cruelty, and ambition make most impression. It is only the trading politicians and demagogues of the City, who fatten upon public delusions, and foster gross iniquities, who are dazzled or pretend to be dazzled by the battles and sieges of the great Nicaraguan War. The blacksmiths, weavers, and farmers of whom the real people of this State are composed, who live by honest toil, and call a robber a murderer, and nothing more, care no more about WALKER than about any other buccaneer, ancient or modern; and as to the maidens, to use the touching language of Colonel FABENS, "whose throbbing breast and glistening eye told where her truant heart is wandering," we would not advise either General WALKER or any of his gallant companions in arms, to flatter themselves that their great deeds will cause many maidens' hearts in this part of the country to wander in their direction, let their eyes glisten, or their hearts throb ever so much, on account of any of their martial performances in Central America. The telegraph informs us that Gen. WALKER has arrived in Washington, and it is not unlikely that he will come to this City to receive the welcome that awaits him from at least two classes of the "peoples" of the commercial metropolis.

The Tammany Hall Imbroglio.

The old stagers of the City Hall purlieus, who have ruled in the land of the Tammanies so long, are in much perturbation lest the reform movement, initiated by Messrs. DILLON, COCHRANE, SICKLES & Co., should go so far as to replace with something like order the confusion which prevails in the Democratic City organization. The question naturally arises what would become of the back-door politicians of the Wigwam if primary meetings could no longer be bought and sold; if the market price for voters should go down, and General Committees be elected by the people, instead of being gouged into place by Mayor WOOD's policemen, to whom he once issued an edict prohibiting their interference at elections? Alas for the palmy days of Tammany, if the faust-recht dynasty end, and the Wilson-Small Committee should be found to have no place excepting on the Park-row sidewalk. Even the spoils of the Street Commissioner's office will scarcely console them for the necessity which will henceforward exist of voting honestly, and refraining from the ballot-stuffing Primary elections.

The set of regulations which were adopted at Tammany Hall on the 4th inst., by a majority of 73 to 8, as a basis of Democratic union and reform, appeared in the columns of the TIMES on Wednesday. They commend themselves to the approbation of the community, and are creditable to those who framed them. The names of the gentlemen who voted for the Report of the Reform Committee, include a more respectable array of talent and influence than we had been accustomed for some months past to see in connection with the action of Tammany Hall. The Mayor is, of course, opposed to the transfer of power in the party from his natural allies to the individuals who will hereafter preside over its action. On the other hand, the Corporation Counsel, and all of those Federal officers of the Government whose names appear in the Report, favor the reformation of existing abuses.

The Ward organizations, suggested by the reform plan, will hold their first elections on Wednesday next. Meanwhile the Wilson-Small Committee have expelled all of those of its members who have failed to recognize it by attending its meetings. The partisanship therefore of the anti-Tammanyites will, henceforth, be unbroken, while the regular organization will probably be unanimous in supporting the measures which were adopted on the 4th inst. Where the imbroglio will end, can only be surmised; but whatever promises to decrease the disorders which have so long prevailed will certainly meet with general sympathy, as well from those who are inside as outside of the Democratic party.

STRAWBERRY WEATHER.—We had, yesterday, an entire day of sunshine, the first pleasure of the kind we have enjoyed in a fortnight. It was particularly needed to sweeten the strawberries which were coming to market in great abundance, but as sour as cranberries. It was fine strawberry weather, and henceforward, until the season for this delicious fruit comes to an end, they will improve in flavor and abundance. The bright sun will also encourage the roses to open their buds, which have been perversely closed during the wet weather.

The End of the World.

Why should not this world come to an end to-day? That for some fifty thousand of our fellow-mortals the world will come suddenly and decisively to an end between the rising and the setting of the sun, past experience and the inexorable voice of the Statistical Society compel us to believe. Why not, then, for the rest of us? What reason have we for supposing that the depopulation of this globe of ours will go on forever, after the gradual fashion that has been so long in vogue?

The movement of mankind from one part to another of the "round terrestrial ball" has been singularly irregular. Intervals of general quiescence have been followed by ages of impulsive and uncontrollable excitement, when the fever of exodus possessed the tribes of men, and whole nations, displacing themselves like glaciers on the mountain-sides, went drifting off to other lands. Why may not the accounts of the race be suddenly closed, then, by one grand wholesale catastrophe which shall transfer us in a body to other seats and other spheres? These are questionings to which no philosophy can give a satisfactory answer. Analyze the matter as subtly as you may, you will find it impossible to determine why, if Smith or Jones may be unceremoniously knocked out of his comfortable or his uncomfortable cell in the great hive without a summons or a warning, the mighty multitude of us, the innumerable myriads of the comfortable and uncomfortable men and women that swarm in the same busy, bustling, troubled, vexatious, incomprehensible abode, may not be trundled off as unexpectedly, as decisively, into the limbos of space.

If Jones or Smith were never called away until he had visibly done the work which appeared for him to do, and lived out the life of which he seemed to be capable, then we might indeed hold the sudden termination of the world's great life to be a vague chimera. For clearly that vast and ingenious entity mankind has by no means as yet put the best face upon itself, its affairs, and the earth that we inhabit. There is a vast deal of work, of dirty work and of clean work, too, still to be done beneath the sun. The Russian war has ended, but the Chinese war has just begun—Kansas is in a way of pacification, but rebellion mutters menacingly in Utah—President PIERCE has expired by limitation, but JEFFERSON DAVIS is making eyes at the Gulf of Mexico—peace begins to reign at Seguine's Point, but the streets of New-York are yet uncleaned. Think of the terrible questions yet to be solved; of the future of France and of Europe, trembling in the uncertain breath of one bold, bad man; of the fearful possibilities and the odious certainties of our own Slavery question undecided, inexpiable, pressing passionately upon our attention. Think of the social difficulties yet to be made smooth—of pauperism and crime festering in the crowded heart of civilization—of the premature misery of millions of children, and of the hopeless degradation of adult millions more. Think, too, of the splendid opportunities yet to be improved—of the magnificent unsettled regions, teeming with undeveloped plenty and unrealized happiness for vaster generations yet than the earth has ever seen. Truly the world, if it vanish to-day in the fiery rush of the as yet undiscovered enemy whom the multitudes have scented afar off, can claim no euthanasy as having done its work and fulfilled its many chances.

But, as we have said, this thing cannot possibly be a guarantee of safety to us when we look around upon the perpetual flux and disappearance of incompleted Joneses and of unfulfilled Smiths whisking off into outer darkness and the silence from which no answer comes.

And so it is, that in all ages the masses of men have been in a flutter of uneasy anticipation whenever any extraordinary natural phenomenon seemed to threaten an unusual uproar in the elemental world. Plagues, pestilences, the Aurora Borealis, earthquakes, waterspouts, famines, inundations have each and all made themselves responsible, at one time or another for frightening mankind out of their senses with the notion that the "end of all things was at hand." But above all other strange and dolorous things, your comet has been the favorite herald of the final woe.

It does not matter that fifty comets have come and gone, leaving still adjourned the solemn settling day. The fifty-first shakes shuddering horror over all the weary world; and now, in the middle of the nineteenth century, more men than would care to own it will feel a little uneasy in their minds between the midnight of the twelfth of June and the morning of the fourteenth. To-morrow's breakfast will be eaten with a sense of great inward renewal by numbers of sufficiently intelligent people—while among the ignorant millions of both continents we may be sure that there will be almost as general a drawing of the long breath that follows danger as there was when DEAN SWIFT looked with sad and scornful eyes on the terrified piety and the reassumed blasphemy of London streets a century and a half ago—for after all, we do not believe the world will end to-day.

Monsieur BABINET's comet—which, be it observed, is not Monsieur BABINET's comet, as that distinguished savant has distinctly disowned it, if it comes at all will come "as gently as a sucking dove," or as HORACE WALPOLE's London earthquake which was so mild, "you might have stroked it." Nothing will end but the 13th of June, and the life of this current week. And on Monday it will all begin again. Would we might believe that the world in general, and any one of us in particular, would be much the better for the pause which the undying superstition of a thousand years will have offered to us for thinking upon that true, final and altogether inevitable end of the world whereof neither Monsieur BABINET nor the newspaper nor the almanac is like to give us timely warning!

CRICKET—AMERICANS vs. ENGLISH.—This match was concluded yesterday at 7 P. M., the result being a defeat of the American players. The bowling and fielding of the Americans was very good, but not equal to that of their opponents, who were a very strong eleven. The result was anticipated, as most of the Americans were comparatively young players, whereas the English had professional cricketers in their eleven.

The score summed up for the Americans at their first innings 55, at their second 58. Total, 113. For the English, first innings, 94; second, 20. Total, 114.

From Washington.

ARRIVAL OF GEN. WALKER AND SUITE—THE CABINET AND UTAH AFFAIRS—MAIL CONTRACTS.

WASHINGTON, Friday, June 12.

Gen. WALKER, Colonels LOCKRIDGE and WATERS and Captain FAYSSOUX, arrived here at 11 o'clock, from the West. They are quartered at Brown's Hotel.

A number of gentlemen were introduced to Gen. WALKER during the day in his private department. He denies that his object in coming to Washington is to see the President, and says that his business is especially in New-York, for which City he will leave in a day or two.

The attention of the Cabinet was occupied by Utah affairs to day. The arrival of Ex-Governor PHILIP FRANK THOMAS, of Maryland, who has been designated for the Governorship, is daily expected. In the event of his non-acceptance the indications are that Col. CUMMINGS, who having once declined but is now an applicant, will be appointed. It is not improbable that an entirely new set of officers for the Territory will be sent out; the Surveyor General included. The three Judges will be appointed from the West or Northwest, and the Marshal from Mississippi. Several days will elapse before answers can be received from those to whom these appointments have been tendered. The corps of officers will travel to Utah with the military forces.

The Postmaster-General has concluded the contract for carrying the mails between San Antonio and San Diego, with JAMES E. BIRON, of California, at the rate of $150,000 per annum for the semi-weekly service.

The report that the contract for conveying the overland mail to California has been given to Messrs. BUTTERFIELD, FARGO & Co., of the American Express Company of New-York, is incorrect.

GENERAL SCOTT AND THE BUNKER HILL CELEBRATION—LOSS OF THE SHIP SQUANDO.

BOSTON, Friday, June 12.

Much regret is felt in consequence of an announcement, said to be reliable, that General SCOTT will not be able to attend the Bunker Hill celebration.

The ship Squando, of Thomaston, is ashore at Beaver Island, between Halifax and Cape Canso, and will prove a total loss. Her keel is knocked out, and her rudder unhung. She is full of water, and has been stripped. Her burden was 1,100 tons, and she was built in Rockland in 1855. She was valued at $72,000, and was in ballast, from New-York for the Gulf of St. Lawrence. She is insured $9,000 in Rockland, and $5,000 in Thomaston, Me.

Daniel Clark Elected U. S. Senator for New-Hampshire.

CONCORD, Friday, June 12.

At the Republican Caucus, held here to-night, DANIEL CLARK, of Manchester, was nominated for U. S. Senator on the first ballot. The vote stood: CLARK, 110; THOMAS M. EDWARDS, 44; ICHABOD GOODWIN, 23; and AMOS TUCK, 8. Mr. CLARK's nomination was subsequently made unanimous.

BOSTON, Friday, June 12.

The New-Hampshire Legislature on joint ballot elected to-day DANIEL CLARK, of Manchester, Republican, to the United States Senate by 190 votes to 125 for JOHN S. WELLS, Democrat.

The Albany Disputed Mayoralty.

ALBANY, Friday, June 12.

A communication signed by 118 citizens, without regard to politics, has been presented to ELI PERRY and Dr. QUACKENBUSH, requesting them both to resign their claims to the Mayorship.

Convictions Under the New Liquor Law of Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, Friday, June 12.

Two convictions were obtained to-day under the new law, which declares grog shops nuisances. The cases were carried up to the Supreme Court on a bill of exceptions.

Wallack's Theatre.

TALFOURD's tragic play of "Ion"—the most chaste and beautiful of all modern efforts at the purely classic—was produced here last night, with Mrs. J. W. WALLACK, Jr., as the hero. It was the good fortune of Mrs. WALLACK to receive the commendation of Baron TALFOURD for her impersonation of this character, and from a source so sincere, just and appreciative, merit has nothing better to desire. The play, notwithstanding its literary excellencies, is not, and never has been, a popular one. It exceeds its models in dramatic action, but notwithstanding this, it is for modern appetites dull and heavy. The plastic grace with which Mrs. WALLACK interprets the emotions of the hero, is full of the spirit of ancient poetry. Physically weak in voice, she speaks more plainly to the common understanding, than mere power, even where discreetly used, could possibly do. Her performance was excellent, and justifies her claim to a high position in the profession to which she belongs. The Clemanthe of Mrs. HOEY was also an admirably limned picture. Mr. DYOTT as Adrastus, deserves all the remaining honors of the piece. This excellent actor needs opportunities of this kind to show what he can do.

We are troubled about the scenery at this house, and must unbosom ourselves once more. When a piece is revived for a single performance it is not to be expected, although it is much to be desired, that the scenery will be perfect in every respect. But in life, and in scenery, it is necessary and philosophical to make both ends meet with as much seemly propriety as possible. This fact does not appear to be fully appreciated at Wallack's Theatre. The conglomeration of ancient and modern scenery which was thrust on the stage last night says very little for the judgment of the gentleman whose duty it is to attend to the matter. In the third act we had the spectacle of Adrastus sitting beneath an arch of questionable style, surrounded by gay Venetian casements on one side, gouty gothic tenements on the other, and a Moresco-Italian street at the back. In the last act we were regaled with an elegantly green papered apartment. These things are gross, but not to be compared with a custom which has obtained here of patching up a scanty scene with other scenes of a totally different character. Last night an incipient "interior" was placed on the stage supported by a fragment of forest on the left, and a slice of street on the right. A peculiarity of the "wings" may also be referred to. In olden times they used to make their appearance in a prompt and decorous manner. Now they come on leisurely like distinguished artists, one at a time; sometimes in a most extraordinary way too, like dancers, capering on their toes with a nimbleness wonderful to behold. We refer to these things because they need reform, and because we desire to consult the true interests of the best place of amusement in the city.

To-night Mrs. J. W. WALLACK, jr., takes her benefit. "London Assurance" is the attraction selected for the occasion, with Mr. H. PLACIDE, Mr. BLAKE, Mr. LESTER, Mr. WALCOT, Mrs. W. W. WALLACK, and Miss MARY GANNON in the principal parts.

Later from Havana—Arrival of the Empire City.

The Empire City, Capt. JOHN MCGOWAN, left New Orleans on the 5th inst., at 8 A. M., and made the run thence to Havana in 55 hours.

There she transferred her California mails and passengers bound onward to the steamship Granada, S. P. GRIFFIN commanding, which latter vessel entered the harbor just after the Empire City.

Captain GRIFFIN reported his ship as having left Aspinwall on the 3d inst. at 5 P. M., to be followed shortly after by the George Law for New-York.

The French steamer Alma, Captain BOCANDE, arrived at Havana on the 4th inst., from Cadiz viâ the Canaries and Porto Rico. The regular steamer was to leave Havana for Cadiz on the 12th.

There is little new at Havana. SANTA ANA is still "the coming man," and is looked for daily.

There is as yet no epidemic disease at Havana, either ashore or among the shipping, malicious reports to the contrary notwithstanding.

Sugars are quoted dull during the past week, with prices unchanged. Freights are still no better. Exchange is heavier: on London, 7@7¼ premium; New-York and Northern cities, 4¼@4½ discount.

The Empire City brings 781 passengers; of these 56 are from Havana and 20 from Aspinwall. Likewise, on freight from New-Orleans, $147,000 in specie, consigned as follows: $100,000 to Bank of America; $47,000 to BERRI & Co.

William H. Van Duyne, M. D., sworn: I reside No. 315 Gold-street; I made a p s' mortem examination of Mary Keyes, in Hoyt street, yesterday, fourteen hours after death, in company with Dr. McGrath; in viewing the body externally there was one large contused wound on the outer edge of the left eyebrow, one small contused wound nearly opposite, over the right eyebrow; very large contused wound about the centre of the right cheek; also a small contused wound at the edge of the left lip another midway o the clavicle, or collar bone; there was a scratch about an inch to the left of a me ian line to the chin; there were three slight scratches about an inch and a half to the left of the median line to the neck: one directly across the median line of the neck; two slight scratches upon the posterior portions of each elbow shaved the head carefully, but found no contusion about the scalp or trunk; in making an incision through the scalp, there was about three ounces of extravasated blood escaped; between the dura mater and the brain there was half an ounce of extravasated blood on the left side, and about three ounces of blood on the right side, and about four ounces at the base of the brain; the organs of the chest, thorax and abdomen were all healthy; she died from compression of the brain, the result of extravasated blood between the membranes of the brain and the brain; there was no fracture of the skull or of the jaw; compression of the brain would be the result of such injuries as I have described on the head; think the injuries to the right were made by a blunt instrument or a fall—a boot would make such wounds.

To Jurors—She might have received some of the wounds by falling; the neck was black and blue at the collar bone, about midway; cannot say whether she was intoxicated or not at the time of death; examined the stomach, but found nothing to indicate it there.

Edward C. McGrath, sworn—I reside corner of Amity and Court streets; assisted Dr. Van Duyne at the post mortem examination, and fully concur with his testimony.

John Branegan, sworn—I reside in Bond-street near Warren; am a policeman; knew deceased; on Wednesday evening was going down Baltic-street towards Smith, about six o'clock, when two women (Mrs. Gormley I think was one) met me and said, "Well, officer, we have been looking for you, a man down here has nearly beat his wife to death;" went to the house and one of the women shoved the door open and said, "there he sits;" deceased was lying in the corner of the room, her legs bent up and her arms extended; one of the women told Keys that he had murdered his first wife and now he wanted to kill this one; asked deceased if she could speak, and she shook her head; one eye was closed; I said to Keys, who was sitting in the front room, "You have got yourself into a nice scrape, you have killed that woman;" he replied, "She be d—d, she should have been killed long ago;" some one said a Doctor should be brought; Keys asked if he should go after one; witness told him that he was under arrest; he showed me a bottle of liquor which he said he had taken from his bed at noon; told him to come to the Station-House, when he asked for permission to remain long enough to dress the child; Keys appeared to have been drinking, but didn't think he was intoxicated then.

To Jurors—He said that his wife had been out all the night before with a man; when I went in Keys was rocking the crib containing the baby; Mrs. Keys was at the Station-house the morning before for a warrant for him; when I was in the house Officer Wilson was with me; he said to Keys that his wife said she was dying of the horrors then; on the way to the Station-House he said his wife had fallen upon the sidewalk and hurt herself

Mary Gorman, sworn—I reside in Baltic-street, between Hoyt and Smith; knew deceased; on Wednesday evening a peddling woman told me that Keyes had nearly killed his wife; went to the house, and the children in the vicinity said that Keys had killed his wife; went into the house, and saw Mrs. Keys in the bedroom, and thought she was dead; then Keys was in the bedroom.

Lewis Berry, sworn—Live in Baltic street between Bond and Hoyt; knew Mr. and Mrs. Keys; day before yesterday, when going to school about one o'clock, heard Mrs. Keys screaming; went and looked into the window, and saw Mr. Keys over her; the window was up, I believe; did not see him strike her; he did not say anything, but she commenced to scold him.

To Jurors—They were in the bed-room; she called him names; could not see her; Jimmy King called me to the house; looked in at the window under the stoop; it was not very light in the room.

Catherine King sworn—Resides in the same house as Keye. This witness testified that, on Tuesday night, about eleven o'clock, deceased came to her room, with a child in her arms, and asked to be permitted to stay all night, as Keye was drunk and had a knife and would kill her if she went in; she let her stay all night; the next morning, about nine o'clock, they started out together for fuel, when they met Keyes at the door; Mrs. K. stopped then, and witness went out alone. Witness proceeded: When I returned the child, three years old, was drunk; Mrs. Keys said that her husband had given the child liquor; that he brought home two pints of brandy, and that she had drank considerable herself, and felt high; went out again, and when I came back she had a black eye; towards night Mrs. Keenan came to me and said Mrs. Keys was dying, but I did not dare to go in; I was afraid of Keys.

To Jurors—Have heard deceased say that Keye often beat her; she was not drunk Tuesday night; saw him beat her three years ago; when I came into the house the mother and child, two years old, were both drunk; the child fell from her lap to the floor, and blood flowed from its nose; thought I heard them quarreling about five o'clock; could not hear what was said, or distinguish the voices; he was very quarrelsome.

Catharine King, daughter of the last witness, about six years of age, was called to the stand, but not sworn. She said: "Keys came home, and found the door fastened, and he put me into the window, to open the door; witness opened the door, when Keys commenced beating his wife; he put a chair upon her stomach, and then jumped upon her, kicked her on the head, and then took a broomstick, and beat her about the head: Mrs. Keys was drunk on the bed, and Mr. Keys said that he would have the life out of her before six o'clock; this was about one o'clock; he beat her again about five o'clock, when Keys sent her off with the little girl.

William Wilson sworn, policeman of the Third District—Was in the house with officer Branegan about 6 o'clock; saw the crowd at the house, and went in; testimony corroborates that of the other officer; Keys said that his wife ought to have been dead long ago; witness told him that it was an awful thing to beat his wife so, and he replied that she deserved all she had got.

William Curtough sworn—I reside corner of Hoyt and Butler; knew deceased; saw her Wednesday morning, between six and seven o'clock; came into my place and wanted a sixpence worth of liquor, and said that her husband was going to work, and she wanted to give him something good; about half past ten o'clock, Keys came in and said, "If my wife comes in don't give her any liquor, as she was drunk then, and had fallen upon the sidewalk and hurt her head;" did not see her after that; saw Keys about two o'clock P. M.; he appeared much excited, and I thought him drunk; he wanted me to go and see his wife, and see the condition she was in, as her friends would blame him; witness did not go.

To Juror—Mrs. Keye got only a gill of liquor from me that day; Mr. Keye did not carry any away; at two o'clock he was very pale, and much excited; knew that deceased had requested a brother of hers to take her away to Quebec, because she was afraid to live with him; never knew that deceased drank much; he said that he did not get any of the liquor purchased in the morning by Mrs. Keys.

Anna Marland, sworn—Resides at No. 117 Butler-street; knew deceased; saw her on Wednesday evening last; saw Mr. Keys same time; saw their little girl in the street crying, with her apron all bloody, and carried her into the house; Keys was sitting there, and Mrs. Keye was on a bed on the floor; he asked me "what he could do with the woman;" I did not say anything in reply; the child is not two years old; the baby was in the crib in the house, when I went in.

To Jurors.—Keys was in the same room with the deceased.

The Jury considered the testimony sufficient to hold the husband of deceased to await the action of the Grand Jury, and no more witnesses were examined.

The Jury rendered a verdict that Mary Keys died from compression of the brain, caused by blows inflicted by her husband, Samuel Keys.

REV. MR. GUION STAYS.—The congregation of St. John's Church having had information that their Rector, the Rev. T. T. GUION, had received a call to a church in the City of New-York, convened Wednesday evening, under an almost spontaneous impulse, and unanimously made an earnest expression of repugnance to the threatened severance of the tie, which, for about five years, has existed between them and their pastor, and adopted, in connection with others, the following resolution:

Resolved, That our Rector be affectionately and earnestly solicited to decline the call which he has received to a Church in the City of New York, and to continue his present relation to St. John's Church.

The action of the meeting was forthwith communicated to Mr. GUION, who, to the gratification of the Committee which waited upon him, assented to the request which they presented.

BOSTONIANS VISITING OUR "INSTITUTIONS."—Eight members of the Joint-Committee on Ordinances of the Boston Common Council, have been visiting the Institutions on Blackwell's and Randall's Islands, during the last two days, under the guidance of EX-Governor DUER. Heretofore each of the charitable and corrective institutions of Boston has been under a separate board of direction, but the Massachusetts Legislature has lately passed an act consolidating them and placing all under a Board of Ten Governors to be elected by the Common Council, empowering the letter to drew up an ordinance specifying the duties of the Governors. The object of the Committee in visiting the New-York Institutions was to obtain such information of their practical operation as would assist them in the organization and management of their own.

On Thursday they visited Blackwell's Island, going leisurely through each establishment, and, Yankee-like, interrogating freely as they went. The arrangement and architecture of the buildings, the method of letting out the contracts for prison labor, the duties and powers of the Governors, and in fact everything was minutely inquired into, and all eliciting unbounded admiration.

Yesterday a portion of the Committee passed a pleasant time at Randall's Island with the children. Mr. RIPLEY, with his youthful army welcomed the visitors,—the boys, to the music of their own hand, going through military evolutions creditably, and adding to the novelty o the occasion. Gov. DUER and Mr. THAYER, a member of the Committee, addressed the little fellows, and one of them, EDWARD RYAN, handsomely replied. By the way, Mr. RIPLEY intends to take a delegation of the boys to Boston, to attend the celebration at Charlestown, of the inauguration of the Statue of Gen. WARREN, on the 17th inst., when Master RYAN will probably deliver an address. The Bostonians expressed great pleasure in all they saw, and seemed well satisfied with the success of the consolidated system in operation here. Two of the Committee stated that they came much prejudiced against the centralization of power, but they are thoroughly converted and feel their institutions will be improved by the adoption of a system similar to ours.

BONDED WAREHOUSES IN THE HANDS OF UNDERWRITERS.—The Board of Fire Underwriters (composed of the officers and agents of the different Fire Insurance Companies) held a meeting on Thursday afternoon, to consider the matter of insuring storage, stores, and bonded warehouses. The following resolutions were offered and adopted:

Resolved, That no building shall be hereafter considered a bonded warehouse, in which are kept any other than bonded goods.

Resolved, That an inspector be appointed to visit at least once in each month, all bonded warehouses and all storage stores, and to report the condition of each promptly to each Company.

The appointment of an inspector was referred to the Standing Committee. Regulations were also adopted with reference to all storage stores, requiring that no smoking be permitted on the premises; that no open lights be allowed; that no egress be permitted except through the office, and other provisions tending to render such buildings more secure than formerly from the effects of spontaneous combustion, carelessness or design.

The destructive fire which occurred last week in GEO. W. BAXTER'S storehouse in Furman-street, Brooklyn, which was caused by the ignition of a bundle of hay, of which a quantity was stored in the building, and which occasioned a loss of nearly $200,000, was the immediate cause that roused the Insurance Companies of the City to guard against the recurrence of similar losses. By the new regulations, no company will insure bonded warehouses at the former low rates, unless the proprietors of such establishments guarantee that only bonded goods are stored in them. Taking into consideration, in connection with this, the fact that the Secretary of the Treasury at Washington requires a certificate from all bonded warehouses, that they are first-class buildings, and are insured at lower rates than ordinary stores, it gives the bonded warehouse-men no alternative but to comply with the regulations of the insurance companies.

MEETING OF THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS.—The Commissioners met in the Common Pleas Court-room, Part First, as usual. Present, Commissioners WM. JAY HACKETT and ROBERT D. HOLMES. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved. Applications for licensee were presented by JOHN B. LAFORGE, Esq., from ALBERT CLARK, No. 11 Fifth avenue, (Brevoort House.) PETER GILSEY, No. 697 Broadway; STEPHEN JOHNSTON, Jr., No. 342 Fourth-avenue, grocer; NATHANIEL BLOODGOOD, No. 4 Pine street, storekeeper.

Applications were also received from BOHLKE LUERSON, No. 76 Duane-street, and JAMES A. POWELL, No. 62 Varick-street.

The Board passed the following resolution:

Resolved, That on Saturday the 12th inst., the Commissioners will grant licenses to John H. Babcock, George W. Mesereau, Joseph McKee & Son, Henry A. Kerr, Wm. S. Corwin & Co., Peter Gilsey, Albert Clark, Shepherd Johnston, Jr., Nathaniel Bloodgood, Bohlke Luersson, and James A. Powell, and the fee to be paid by all of the said applicants is fixed at $30

The Board adjourned to meet to-day at the same place, when the above licenses will be granted.

FRIDAY, June 12.

Commissioner HASKETT took the Chair at 10 A. M. in the Common Pleas Court Room, Part First. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

HENRY A. KERR, of No. 746 Broadway, through JOHN B. LAFORGE, Esq., his Counsel, presented an application with the necessary papers, for a storekeeper's license.

THOMAS HOPE & Co., of No. 132 Chambers-street, applied for a storekeeper's license; also, WM. S CORWIN, No. 639 Broadway.

The Board adjourned to meet to-day at the same time and place.

The Colored Home—Seventeenth Anniversary Celebration.

The friends and patrons, and those connected with the "Colored Home," in Sixty-first street, below First-avenue, celebrated its Seventeenth Anniversary on Thursday afternoon. The weather was unfavorable, but notwithstanding that, there was a very good attendance. A number arrived late in consequence of the very heavy rain that began to fall at the hour for the commencement of the anniversary exercises. Rev. Mr. MCFARLAND commenced with the reading of a portion of the Scriptures; and after singing by the meeting, Mr. RAY offered a prayer. He was followed by Rev. Mr. WELLS, who read the annual report, by which it appears that during the past year, the Home has enjoyed a large amount of prosperity. Until recently the City of New-York has paid 70 cents per week for the support of each person sent thora by the authorities. Now the city pays 80 cents, or $41,60 a year each. Pensioners are received from private families and from any part of the State at the rate of $50 per annum. The remainder of the funds for the support of the Institution are contributed almost exclusively by private charity.

Number remaining May 1, 1856	293
Number received since May 1, 1856	357
Number of births	17
Total	672
Of these have died	82
Discharged pro forma, or dismissed	287
Total	369
Leaving now in the Institution	303

Of the deaths 37 were males and 48 were females.

The total amount of subscriptions for the year were $501 00

Amount of Donations $451 29

Received for Board of Pensioners 232 00

The total amount received during the year was $12,420 35, of which $84 48 is still in the hands of the Treasurer.

After the report had been read 15 of the children sung, and appropriate remarks were made by Messrs. WELLS, REACH, THOMPSON and others.

ONE CLEAN STREET.—Broadway is clean from Bowling green to Union-square. Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, Mr. SMITH has fulfilled his engagement with the merchants so far. The machine-sweepers, two of them, in the course of four hours swept up such windrows of dirt, that, with all the carts they could get, it took 18 hours to cart it away. Three hundred tons, at least, were moved off in this way, while how much the rain swept away into the sewers no one can estimate.

Not Arranging for Walker.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 12, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I desire to state, through your columns, that the use of my name as Secretary of the meeting held last evening for the purpose of making arrangements for the public reception of General WALKER, was unauthorized by me, and that I do not approve of the objects of the meeting. EDWARD COOPER.

The Ohio Fugitive Case—The State to be Defended.

The Columbus State Journal says:

"We understand that Governor CHASE, at the earliest possible moment after reaching the city yesterday from Cincinnati, had an interview with Messrs. MASON and GOOD, who represent the Prosecuting Attorney of Clarke County, in the case before the Federal Judge at Cincinnati, involving the right of the State to enforce her own criminal laws within her own jurisdiction, against violators, whether Federal officials or others; and that he immediately telegraphed to Attorney General WOLCOTT to appear in the case on the part of the State, in conjunction with these gentlemen."

The Cleveland Herald adds:

"Attorney-General WOLCOTT passed through this city yesterday, on his way to Cincinnati, to attend to the case in behalf of the State. With such a Governor and such an Attorney General, the dignity of Ohio and the supremacy of her laws will be in safe keeping."

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB ONE OF HERRING & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that no more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall the iron be sent down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

KARTHAUS.—At Rheinstein, his seat, near Arnheim, Holland, on Saturday, May 16, FREDERICK WILLIAM KARTHAUS, a native of Westphalia, in the 69th year of his age.

He emigrated to this country in the beginning of this Century, and passed the early years of his manhood in Baltimore. From 1812 to 1819 he was extensively engaged in commerce in this City. Subsequently he removed to Amsterdam, Holland, and soon became a leading partner of the late eminent house of Karthaus, Hasenclever & Co., of that City. As a merchant, Mr. Karthaus had enlarged views, remarkable industry and energy of character; with occasional infirmities of temper, superinduced by a chronic affection, he combined a benevolent feeling and great goodness of heart, which endeared him to all who knew him best. He leaves a widow, with many relatives and friends, to mourn his loss.

N. B.—Where a sufficient quantity of work is offered, forms will be carried both ways, free of charge, by his own express.

"A WOMAN'S TRICK."

The capital joke related in yesterday's Express, of an English lady training her little pet poodle Bibi to jump into ladies' laps at balls and parties, and while the sweet creatures are in the act of caressing the perfidious villian, it unpaints their cheeks with its false and vigorous licking, does not apply, if it be distinctly understood, to Dr. FELIX GOURAUD'S inimitable LIQUID VEGETABLE ROUGE. The rouges which the said how-wow-wow regaled itself with licking off, are the common rouges, unctuous in their nature; independent of this they are objectionable also from the fact of catching and retaining the dust and other floating matter with which the air is loaded, and especially so if the weather is very warm. GOURAUD'S LIQUID ROUGE, on the contrary, has all the permanence of a stain, and cannot be disturbed by the most violent friction or licking, except by washing with soap and water. It contains nothing unctuous, and the rich roseate hue it imparts to the cheek or lip is such an exact imitation of nature that the utmost scrutiny will fail to detect that the coloring is artificial. This celebrated ROUGE is in great demand throughout the Union, and is manufactured and sold by Dr. GOURAUD at his old established Laboratory, No. 67 Walker-street, first door from Broadway. The depot also of the world-renowned ITALIAN MEDICATED SOAP. Agents—Mrs. HAYES, Brooklyn; CALLENDER, Philadelphia; BATES, No. 129 Washington-street, Boston &c., &c.

DENTISTRY.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT INVENTION IN DENTISTRY.—Dr. LEVETT, Dentist, No. 12 Waverley-place, near Broadway, has a new process of constructing artificial teeth, possessing all the advantages of our natural teeth, from its perfect adaptation, its durability, strength, &c. When connected with his peculiar atmospheric pressure plates, is for ever unapproachable by any other method. M. LEVETT having the right of use of Blandy's patent chloroplastic process, urges those requiring artificial teeth to examine his application of this process before engaging elsewhere. Established 1835. The public should be cautious of base imitators and infringers of the above patent.

NEW INVENTION OF ARTIFICIAL TEETH WITHOUT METAL PLATE OR CLASPS.—Dr. S. B. SIGESMOND, Dentist, No. 651 Broadway, invites the public to call and examine. The teeth are 75 lighter than the porcelain, and can be inserted without extracting any roots, and prevent the nervous sensations.

D. N. B. GRIFFIN, NOS. 253 AND 253 Fulton-st., Brooklyn, is inserting his beautiful mineral teeth on his improved atmospheric plates, with or without extracting the roots. Full or partial sets on fine gold, $8 per tooth; silver $2.

OFFICE OF THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY.—NEW-YORK, April 2, 1857.—Notice is hereby given, that the Directors of the ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY have resolved to increase the Capital Stock of the Company, from One Hundred and Seventy Thousand Shares, to Two Hundred and Fifty-five Thousand Shares, which new shares will be allotted to the holders of the present stock, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next, and to such persons as may become stockholders by the conversion of Optional Rights, which expire on the 1st day of January, 1858, in the proportion of one share of new stock, to two shares of the old stock.

The Transfer Books will be closed on the 20th day of June next, and reopen on the 1st day of July next.

The holders of the present Stock are required to receive one-third the number of shares to which they may be entitled on the 1st day of July, 1857, and to pay an installment of $30 per share thereon. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds will be issued—one-half convertible into the stock of the Company, on or before the 1st day of February, 1858, and the remainder on or before the 1st day of July, 1858; such installments as may then have been called in, on the present Stock to be paid to the Company at the time of conversion.

Those persons who shall become stockholders by the conversion of the present Optional Rights into Stock, on or before the second day of January, 1858, and after the first day of July next, will be required to receive, and pay for one-third of the new stock to which they may be entitled, at the time of such conversion. Optional Rights for the remaining two-thirds of the new Stock to which they may be entitled, will be issued to them, of the same tenor as those issued to parties who shall appear as stockholders, at the closing of the books on the 20th June next.

Parties converting Optional Rights will be required to pay to the Company all accrued interest on the installments from the time that interest shall have been paid on the installments to the holders of the present shares.

All stock which is not applied for before the 10th day of July next, and the installment paid thereon, will be forfeited to the Company, together with all rights which attach thereto.

The Directors have resolved to extend the time for the conversion of the existing Optional Rights, which, by their terms, expires on the 1st of January, 1858, so as to include the 2d day of January, 1858.

Interest will be paid, as usual, upon the Stock of the Company, on the 1st of July next.

By order of the Board of Directors,
J. N. PERKINS, Treasurer.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 29th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered, (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Directors of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of Association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The offers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books of subscription, and receive subscriptions, on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 2 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be payable on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

W. T. HOOKER, President.
B. F. WARNER, Cashier.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fon du Lac Railroad Company propose to sell to Stockholders their Eight per Cent. 25 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to voice pro rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.

The subscription price for said Bonds to be 80 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.

The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 13 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

PROGRESS OF THE POLICE QUESTION.

The New Board Summons One Hundred and Fifty-nine Incumbrancers to Appear for Trial, and Dismisses One Hundred and Thirty-five—The Old Board Continues to Try, Dismiss and Appoint, but Refuses to Allow the Names of the Appointees to be Published—Police Justice Connolly and the New Law—McCosker held to Bail, &c., &c., &c., &c.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners met at their office in White-street at the usual hour yesterday, and designated 159 members of the Department, whom they authorized their clerk to summon for trial. They also dismissed 135 of the old force, and then adjourned to Monday.

The Mayor continues hard at work in weeding the Department of all who deny his authority or give countenance to the Metropolitan Commissioners. He made a great many appointments yesterday, but the names of all his appointees are studiously withheld from the reporters. They are all declared to be "sound," however, and of the "right Democratic stock." Nearly all the "boys" are now decorated with municipal stars, which can be had almost for the asking.

The Ward returns were all very barren of news yesterday. Capt. TURNBULL, of the Eighth Ward, says, in his report to the Deputy Superintendent:

In compliance with your orders, I last night called the roll at the new Station-house, No. 185 Spring-street. Lieutenants KEELER and STAGE, Sergeant BURR, fifteen patrolmen and nine detailed men, and both door-men were absent—they refusing to recognise the orders of the Commissioners. Sergeants LENT, GLENNY and QUINN, and 24 patrolmen promptly reported for duty and covered the District, this being within eight men of my usual number of patrolmen. I scarcely missed the others. GEORGE PERKINS, a detailed officer, reported to me this morning, making a total of 29 for the law.

CHARLES S. TRUMBULL,
Inspector of the Eighth Precinct.

Officer MCCOSKER, of the Municipal force, who took a prisoner from Officer MCCONNELL, of the Metropolitan Department, on Wednesday, appeared yesterday before Recorder SMITH, and gave bail to answer in the sum of $1,000.

POLICE JUSTICE CONNOLLY AND THE NEW POLICE LAW.

On Thursday, Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER detailed officers LATTA and GARDENER for duty at the First District Police Court, at the Tombs. They reported themselves at once to Police Justice WELSH, who was on the bench, and their names were entered on the Court roll for duty. They appeared again at Court yesterday morning, when Justice CONNOLLY, who presided, inquired their business. They replied that they had been ordered to report themselves for duty there, by the Deputy Superintendent, and that they were obeying the order. Justice CONNOLLY thereupon informed them that they would not be permitted to any duty about the Court while he was on the bench. I do not recognize you as policemen, he said, nor the right of Ex Captain CARPENTER, nor Ex-Recorder TALLMADGE, nor any of the gentlemen who keep an office in White-street, to send you here to do duty as Policemen. I believe the law under which they claim to act to be unconstitutional. But, even admitting it to be constitutional, they are allowed only two clerks, by a vote of the Supervisors, while they have already appointed more than ten times that number. I am not animated by any personal feeling in this matter, gentlemen. Many of the gentlemen connected with the Metropolitan Commission are personally known to me, and personally I respect them much. As a good citizen I believe it my duty to act as I do in this matter. There is no necessity of your coming here. There are now men enough and good men detailed here for police duty. If you are sent here by your superiors that a test may be had, why then I am willing to meet it. In a word gentlemen, I will not permit you to remain here—you must go.

The officers addressed declared their intention to remain, and one of them was heard to remark that the Court of Appeals was not situated in the Tombs, and that however competent a man might be to send a vagrant to the Island or a drunkard to the cells for ten days, he might not be equally competent by law or intellect to settle a question of Constitutional law upon which the most eminent men in the State appeared to differ.

Justice CONNOLLY did not hear these last remarks or if he did he paid no attention to them.

LATTA and GARDENER remained about the Court until it was adjourned for the day.

AT THE COURT OF SESSIONS.

The Municipal detailed men at the Court of Special Sessions die hard. Some of them who declared that they would not obey the order to vacate and make room for the Metropolitan men, become slightly ob, streperous yesterday, and attempted to prevent the new officers from entering or performing their duties about the Grand Jury room. This fact being brought to the notice of the District-Attorney, he wrote a note to the removed men, informing them that their services were no longer needed about his office, or the Grand Jury-room. One, still stubborn and douhtful, locked the door of the jury room, (there was no one inside,) put the key in his pocket, and went to Mayor Wood for advice. The Mayor ordered the man to return forthwith and deliver up the key, which of course was done.

AN INDIGNANT LIEUTENANT.

Second-Lieutenant HITCHMAN, of the Nineteenth Ward, having received a summons to appear before the New Commissioners for trial, replies in a note to Deputy CARPENTER, which concludes thus:

"And not wishing to place myself with such notorious men under surveillance of the Municipal Police, I most sincerely hope the "august body," composed of Messrs. DRAPER & Co., may act in accordance with their every wish, and dismiss all hut their "Partisan Martyrs" from the Department which they are pretending to control, and thus have an opportunity of conferring place and power upon their faithful and pliant tools."

Another Candidate for the Gallows—Death of William Sheban—Coroner's Inquest.

WILLIAM SHEHAN, the sailor who was stabbed in the abdomen in Cherry-street, on Tuesday last, while engaged in a squabble with two colored sailors, died of his injuries on Tuesday night, at the New-York Hospital. Coronor CONNERY held an inquest upon the body yesterday afternoon. The facts elicited by the evidence did not vary materially from those concerning the matter already published in the TIMES. SHEHAN, who was a native of Ireland, and but 21 years of age, was intoxicated on the afternoon in question, and wilfully stumbled against two negroes (the prisoners) who were passing along; one of them resented and struck SHEHAN in the face. SHEHAN then pursued the colored men and stopped their progress, whereupon the one who had given the blow, turned about and drawing a knife from his pocket, opened it and thrust its blade into the abdomen of SHEHAN, who staggered and fell. Both negroes were thereupon arrested by some citizens and given over to the police. The transaction occurred between 2 and 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and was witnessed by several persons. The prisoners are both young men,—one is 23 and the other is 21 years of age. One was born in Virginia and the other in Maryland. Both entered a plea of "not guilty."

After an examination the Coroner's Jury retired, and soon agreed upon the following verdict:

"That the said WILLIAM SHEHAN came to his death from the effects of a stab inflicted in his abdomen, on the 9th inst., in Cherry-street, at the hands of STEPHEN PINKETT, and that SAMUEL WATKINS was an accessory to the fatal deed."

The accused were then placed in the hands of officers of the Fourth Ward, who conveyed them to the Tombs to await the action of the Grand Jury.

BURGLARY AND PISTOL SHOOTING IN SING SING.—A daring attempt at burglary was made early Wednesday morning upon the Mt. Pleasant Academy Sing Sing, in which, through the recklessness of one of the burglars, Prof. MAURIER, of the Institution, came near losing his life. Prof. MAURIER had been to Tarrytown, and on his return at 2 o'clock in the morning was surprised at hearing the sound of footsteps in the hall as he was passing up stairs. He called out to know who the persons were, and directly a pistol was fired at him, the hall of which passed through his coat, vest and shirt on the left side, and grazed the skin sufficient to draw blood. The parties, two in number, at once made a rush for the front door and escaped. An immediate alarm was raised, but the vagabonds have not yet been discovered.

RUTGERS COLLEGE.—The examination of the Senior Class took place last week. The commencement exercises will take place on Wednesday, July 1, at New Brunswick.

BRAINS.—Physicians know that MIND is a potent agency in the aggravation and cure of diseases. PHRENOLOGY would greatly aid in their diagnosis. Examinations, and written descriptions of character, by Professor FOWLER, No. 308 Broadway.

WHO'S YOUR HATTER?
The countryman just come to town,
Espies its riches and renown;
He gazes round with vacant stare,
And feels bewildered by despair.
The busses, cabs, the shops, the boys,
The busy din, incessant noise;
Amid the pavement's patter, clatter,
He hears the question, "Who's your hatter?"
"My hatter? why ask this of me?"
"Just wait a moment, you shall see.
You prize appearances, you say,
And would unto the world convey
By outside garb, your claim to be
Respectable as those you see,
Although your trousers, coat and vest
Be neat in form, of make the best,
We do not care a straw for that,
If you pnt on a shabby hat.
If you would follow in the van,
Know 'tis the hat that makes the man,
A proper cover for the head,
In fashion's form shows you well bred."
"But how, amidst the various styles
Of fashionable natty tiles,
Shall I select one to attain
This object and keep out the rain?"
"Just step to KNOX'S on Broadway,
The first of hatters we can say,
And there you, to your heart's content,
Will find your money not ill-spent.
Then as you walk throughout the town,
You'll carry on your head renown;
And then it surely will not matter
If any ask you "Who's your hatter?"
Oh, no, you'll own with pride 'tis KNOX,
Whose customers are seen in flocks."
KNOX may be found on any day,
Corner of Fulton and Broadway,
And all our friends we recommend
To KNOX the fashionable's friend.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 12—P. M.

The California arrival is a highly satisfactory one; $1,920,376 in treasure for this port, and favorable accounts of the continued productive richness of the mines. In addition to the New-York manifest, the steamer on the Pacific side brought down to the Isthmus $485,000 for Europe direct. The shipment altogether is full $250,000 ahead of the previous packet. The mining and financial news is thus summed up by one of our San Francisco cotemporaries:

"The accounts from the miners are all of an encouraging character, and from the heavy deposits of snow in the mountains, the probabilities are that the miners will have a good supply of water throughout the entire year. This will to a certain extent interfere with the river washings in the Fall, but the loss will be far more than compensated by the increased steady yield of the tunnel and hill claims.

The money market gives less trouble this mail departure than usual. The receipts of dust from above have been large, and the discount facilities of the banks extended somewhat more freely. Rates, 2½ ₱ cent., are unaltered. Bars for shipment are in full supply, and 870 is quoted at par. There has been a good inquiry for Spanish dollars, and sales for the East Indies have been made at 12 ₱ cent. premium. The export duty in Mexico having been raised to 6 ₱ cent., even this figure does not pay the cost of importation.

During the fortnight, the arrivals at this port have been thirteen from foreign and Atlantic ports, and thirty-two coasters, viz: from China, ships Kate Hooper, Archer, (Br.) Hamilton; from New-York, ships John Milton, Electric Spark, Asa Eldridge; from Boston, ships Charger and Noonday; from Tahiti, Haw. brig Suerte; from Australia, (Br.) schooner Sea Witch; from Honolulu, schooner Gen. Morgan; from Manilla, bark Rebekah and schooner Wanderer.

Our own Money Market to-day is quiet, and the Street supply easy. The Domestic Exchange Brokers are buying a considerable amount of funds on the neighboring cities, and nearly all the interior exchanges are in favor of New-York. The ease in Money here, and the advices of continued high rates on the other side, are inducing the Bankers to remit freely to England and France in Bullion. The Havre and Bremen steamers to-morrow will add about $600,000 to the shipments of the week. The Discount Brokers quote higher rates for paper over 60 days, but the offering of first-class names is not excessive. Short dates are scarce, and almost the only choice acceptances offered are drawn against West India Sugars, of which the stock on sale and in public store is very large. The Sub-Treasury disbursements to-day were $254,909, against only $58,635. The balance is down to $11,887,373.

The low prices quoted on the Stock list this week are attracting some outside orders, and the market to-day gained a little strength, although against a pretty determined opposition to a recovery in prices from the Bear speculators. The Western Railroad list was 2½ ₱ cent. higher on Galena, 1½ on Rock Island, 1 ₱ cent. on Southern Michigan, and ¼@1 ₱ cent. on Toledo. It was 1 ₱ cent. weaker on Illinois Central, and 2@3 ₱ cent. lower on La Crosse. Some of the supporters of the last named Road have made themselves conspicuous as Bears against Milwaukee and Mississippi, and a slight measure of retribution is not unreasonable. The two New-York Roads were better to-day; Central sold for 81¾ cash, and Erie for 32 ₱ cent. The former is the special object of attack at present, and contracts were put out at 80 ₱ cent. on six months' option. There was quite an excitement in Reading. Very large sales at the early Board as high as 78⅞, but immediately after the adjournment a rumor was circulated that one of the tunnels on the line had fallen in, and upon this there was a rush to sell at 77⅛@77 ₱ cent. No Philadelphia dispatch of which we could find trace advised serious damage, and we presume none has followed the accident; but the stock here was too firm, as against the short sellers, to suffer any chance to escape to weaken the price. The Railway Bond list was weak. Illinois Central 7s have fallen off to 97 ₱ cent., and Michigan Southern Sinking Funds to 70 ₱ cent.

THE FOREIGN TRADE.

From the New-York Tribune.

From official tables made up at the Treasury Department, Washington, it appears that the imports and exports at the six principal collection districts, namely, Boston, New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, New-Orleans and San Francisco, for the first three quarters of the fiscal year, ending March 31, were as follows:

FOR THE NINE MONTHS ENDING MARCH 31, 1857:

	Aggregate Exports.	Aggregate Imports.	Total.
Boston	$19,628,768	$33 041,213	$52,669 979
New-York	90,437,416	178,376 320	258,813,736
Philadelphia	5,806,557	13 260,469	19,067,038
Baltimore	10,290,590	7,563 227	17,853,817
New Orleans	63,198,419	17,302,521	85,496,949
San Francisco	10,869 990	6,979,200	17,849,1 0

Of the $17,670,4[illegible] worth of foreign merchandize exported during the three-quarters, $7,398,072 were free and $5,347,410 dutiable.

Of the imported foreign merchandize, amounting to $246 422,950, there were $24,158,187 free and $212,264,767 dutiable.

Of the exports $192 661,178 was of domestic produce. The above figures show an excess of imports of about $40,000,000, which has been met by the exports of gold.

This is a very imperfect as well as incorrect view. The Specie export is included in the return from the six ports. But there are 68 other ports, of which nothing is said, and the bulk of whose Foreign Trade is on the Export side. Let us take the six, as above, for three quarters this year, and the 68 for the last year, assuming the latter net to have increased their trade:

Exports of 6 ports, 1857	$205,331,660
Total	$289,565,970
Imports 6 ports, 1857	$246,422,950
Resulting difference favor Exports	$12,476,702

The Great Railway Opening.

From the Special Correspondent of the New-York Daily Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sunday, June 7, 1857.

DEAR SIR: The newspapers will furnish you through their general correspondence, abundant accounts of the festivities marking the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad opening. Upon that score I could add nothing. Perhaps, however, you would like to hear from one who has no individual interests to warp or color his judgment, some suggestions as to the advantages of this great work in point of location; in relation to the character of its construction, its probable durability, cost of working and repairs, and its prospect of developing a valuable way-business in both passengers and freight. Upon all these points I am free to say that the Ohio and Mississippi road will compare most favorably with any in the United States over which I have traveled,—and I am quite familiar with the principal railroad lines in the Northern, Eastern, Middle and Northwestern States. Of course I do not mean to say that the travel and traffic over this road is to become immediately as great as over any other; but I do mean that it passes through a country so fertile, and brings into prompt and the most direct communication points of such great commercial importance, that of necessity their speedy development under the stimulus and encouragement of this railroad enterprise, is an inevitable necessity, carrying with it a career of prosperity in the future for the road itself, which can scarcely be over-estimated.

The road between this point and Vincennes, Ind., has been in operation for some time, and its advantages you probably know all about. It passes in an almost air-line over beautiful rolling prairies, plentifully interspersed with groves of timber, and watered by many small streams. Between Cincinnati and Seymour, also, the road is not altogether new. Here it winds its way along the margin of some rather crooked rivers, but the curves are easy, and generally the grades are light. Everywhere the land over which it passes is exceedingly fertile, holding out irresistible invitations to its speedy cultivation and development. This is true of nearly every mile of the route. Scarce an acre not easily susceptible of improvement is visible, if we except those covered by forests, the timber in which is valuable, and must furnish profitable employment for an army of industrious woodsmen. Indeed there is no comparison between Northern Indiana and the southern portion of the State, traversed by this road, so much does the latter surpass the former; and when the "Egypt" of Illinois shall be developed by the population sure to follow in the track of the locomotive, the boastful counties comprising the northern tier will need look to their laurels.

From Seymour to Vincennes—a hundred miles or more—the road is new. Here we expected to dance by car-loads to the music of the steam-whistle, as we were whirled along over a rough and uneven track. Never were we more disappointed. Although the road is but partially ballasted, the universal testimony is that the running was smoothor, steadier, and freer, from jolting than that over the New-Jersey and Camden and Amboy railroads, long as the latter have been worked. This is owing in part, doubtless, to the broad guage adopted by the Ohio and Mississippi Company, but it is due still more to the great care which has been taken in grading and solidifying the road-bed, in laying the track, and in the firm elasticity of the material of which the bed is composed. It is not often that these qualities of solidity and elasticity are so admirably combined. A very small proportion of trestle work has been found necessary throughout the entire line of this road,—the bridges are not numerous, but very substantial, and the construction in all respects gives promise of great durability and very moderate cost for repairs, as there is little opportunity for land slides, washing away of the road-bed, or any of the other accidental incidents which often enhance so largely the cost of keeping a road in order. It will readily be seen that the advantages enumerated—light grades, easy curves, long stretches of straight track, solidity of the road bed, and non-liability to suffer from rains or floods—combine to promise a cost of working the road rather below than above the average. Fuel is abundant and cheap,—to be had indeed in any quantity for the cost of cutting. Already the stream of paying travel begins to pour through this avenue of communication just opened between the Atlantic seaboard and the Mississippi,—and all along its line the farmers are anxiously awaiting the hour when they can transport their produce over it, and receive the supplies of light lumber and other staples required from abroad. Perhaps you may deem me enthusiastic in my depiction. If so, I can only answer that I have expressed, in terms quite inadequate, the general and spontaneous convictions of myself and fellow-travelers, who kept our eyes open in going over the road for the express purpose of learning its character and judging of its probable future. I know nothing personally of its managers, save their liberality towards their guests upon this festive celebration; but if the affairs of the Company are conducted with anything approaching the skill and prudence which we may expect from those who had the enterprise to carry so great a work to completion, I shall rely with entire confidence upon the not distant future to vindicate every word that I have here written.

In closing let me add a tribute to the management of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, over which I have frequently passed, and always with new pleasure. It would be difficult to say anything novel of it,—for the fame of its grand scenery, and of the engineering triumphs it illustrates in climbing and crossing the Alleghanies is world-wide. Its line is completed at last by the opening of the branch road from Grafton to Parkersburg, Va.—a road which, instead of threading the valleys and winding a devious way around the spure of the mountains, strikes boldly across the ridges, dives through countless tunnelled hills, and opens up a rugged country as rich in mineral resources, probably, as any east of the Ohio River. Throughout the entire line and branches the management is as nearly perfect as can be. Certainly, regularity, economy and safety are everywhere apparent in its operations. Every officer seems thoroughly conversant with his duty, and ready to discharge its lightest detail with unerring fidelity; while each employe is engaged apparently in a laudable rivalry to emulate the example thus set by his superior. But my letter is already too long and I must bring it abruptly to a close. J. W. S.

From the St. Louis Leader.

THE NEW-YORKERS.—At a meeting of citizens of New-York, held at the city of St. Louis, June 5, 1857, on motion of JOHN P. CROSBY, seconded by Captain COMSTOCK, of the steamer Baltic, CHARLES TRACY was chosen Chairman, and OLIVER DE FOREST GRANT, Secretary. On motion of ERASTUS BROOKE, seconded by CALEB O. HALSTED, it was

Resolved, That the thanks of the citizens of New-York, present at the Railroad Celebration in the city of St. Louis, this day, be gratefully tendered to the President and Directors of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company, for their courtesy and kindness to us, and liberal provision for our comfort and gratification during the excursion; and that we congratulate not only the Company, but the East and the West, and the whole land, upon the successful achievement of their great enterprise.

On motion of SILAS BROWN, seconded by HENRY T. VAIL, it was further

Resolved, That our heartfelt thanks be tendered to the authorities and citizens of St. Louis, for their bountiful hospitality which we have enjoyed during our sojourn in their beautiful and prosperous city.

On motion of ROBERT H. MCCURDY, seconded by Capt. MORGAN, of the London Line of Packets, it was Resolved, That the foregoing resolutions be published in the newspapers.

The Unadilla Bank.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

Inasmuch as there has been a paragraph circulating through the public prints, to the effect that the Unadilla Bank had failed to redeem its notes, we thought it due to the public to state a few facts.

Since April, 1856, the Metropolitan Bank has been endeavoring by every means in its power—such as demanding coin, and hoarding up the notes until the accumulations amounted to upwards of $60,000, and even as high as $90,000—to force the Unadilla Bank into a system of redemption different from that required by law. The first presentation was in July, 1856, of $50,000. A few days subsequent $40,000 were presented. Drafts were offered in payment for these notes, and accepted for all but $10,000, which were protested, and returned to New-York, to test the law of 1851, as their agent said. City bank bills were tendered for these protested notes, and, after some hesitation, accepted. From that time to the present the notes have been held until $50,000 or $60,000 had accumulated, when they would be presented at the counter of the Bank. In this manner there has been redeemed upwards of $497,000. All this was unprofitable to the Metropolitan Bank, but they hoped to reimburse themselves when they should have succeeded in forcing the Unadilla Bank into a system of redemption similar to that imposed on a majority of the country banks of the State. The last presentation at the Bank amounted to $57,000. Drafts similar to those that had been accepted all along before were tendered for these notes; $47,000 were accepted, while $10,000 were again protested, to test the law. This law, so much referred to, embraces a clause to the effect that fifteen days shall be allowed a country bank to provide itself with specie. This clause was inserted solely for the protection of country banks against maliciously-inclined City banks. For the $10,000, bills, under protest, were offered, the same and no better than the drafts before refused. They were accepted by the Metropolitan Bank, but no reference made to testing the law above referred to. The Metropolitan is now gathering up the notes again, and Mr. WILLIAMS, the President, says he shall protest the whole amount on the next presentation. Drafts, accompanied by an affidavit, if required, will be offered in payment of these notes.

The Unadilla Bank always has and always will redeem its circulating notes, agreeably to the banking laws of the State of New-York.

The whole thing resolves itself into this—that the Metropolitan insists upon coercing us into redeeming our notes from them in New York at one-half less than the law allows, and it is owing to our refusal to accept their dictatorial terms that they have pursued this aggressive course towards the Unadilla Bank.

We have acted on the defensive from the begin

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

THE CITY NEVER IN BETTER SPIRITS

The False Report of the Yellow Fever in Town.

THE TRUE STATE OF THE CASE AND WHERE THE YELLOW FEVER REALLY IS.

Why the Bark Mary is Quarantined and why the Lucy Heywood is sent to the Infected Anchorage.

THE LATEST FROM SEGUINE'S POINT.

The Shipping Interest Plotting a Dodge.

Interesting to Staten Island Tax-Payers.

The City health remains unusually good; the deaths last week were only 353, 19 less than the preceding week, which was a great improvement upon the week still previous. The deaths from small-pox which were 14 for the week ending June 9, were only 1. The reduction in scarlet fever is almost equally agreeable: this week the deaths were but 16, while the week before they were 30. Not a case of death from cholera, yellow fever, or any epidemic, has been reported, notwithstanding the exceedingly foul state of the streets and the universal state of preparation into which every dirty nook and corner of the City has put itself for the first thing of the sort that can possibly arrive. There was some excitement caused on Saturday by the publication of a statement to the effect that a man was lying sick with yellow fever at No. 103 Cherry-street, from on board a vessel that was lying in Atlantic Dock. An investigation of the case shows that there was no one at the place named nor at any other in the City or its suburbs, so far as can be learned, suffering from that disease. What was the basis of the statement may be gathered from the following facts carefully substantiated by one of our reporters:

The Yellow Fever and the Case of the Bark Mary.

The bark Mary, Capt. GIBBS, of New-York, arrived on Friday in 20 days from Trinidad, having two Spaniards on board as passengers, one of whom, it seems, had been sick for half the passage with what the cook supposed to be yellow fever. The cook also complained of being quite unwell, but with these exceptions the crew were in good health. On her arrival at Quarantine Capt. GIBBS reported to the Health Officer "all well on board," shutting the sick passenger in a state-room where the doctor could not see him. By this dodge he passed Quarantine with only the usual detention incident to a visit and inspection, and came up to Atlantic dock; but the cook having left the vessel, found his way to his old boarding place, No. 103 Cherry-street, when he told the story of the sickness of the Spanish passenger, and the manner in which the Captain had concealed the fact from the Health Officer.

Our reporter on hearing this statement called on JOHN STEWARD, the cook of the Mary, at No. 103 Cherry-street, and after listening to his story, accompanied him to Staten Island, where he stated the same facts to Dr. WALLSE, who sent him to the Hospital. On Saturday afternoon Mayor POWELL and Dr. CLEAVELAND, the Health Officer of Brooklyn, paid a visit of inspection to the bark Mary, in company with one of the Health Wardens, to inquire into the facts of the case. Our reporter was also present. Capt. GIBBS was not on board, he having gone away, as the mate stated, with the two passengers to send them to Portland. The mate informed Mayor POWELL and the Health Officer that the sick person referred to was only sea-sick, and that there was no yellow fever about him; he was some mysterious person whom the captain had taken pity on and brought away from Trinidad to save him from certain death; whether he was a criminal, a deserting soldier from the army, or a slave-trader, the mate did not know, but the captain, shortly after sailing, told him (the mate) that the life of the man would not be worth two cents if he had been caught in Trinidad, and he had brought the fugitive away privately because he could get no passport. He admitted the man had been sick on the passage, and that he had frequently bled at the nose but denied the cook's statement, that he had ever vomited blood. One of the chairs in the cabin was found to be bespattered with blood upon the legs and rounds, but, upon close inspection, Dr. CLEVELAND decided it was fresh blood, and could not have been thrown from the stomach. The fact that the sickness of the man had been of some ten days' duration, and that, as the mate alleged, he had gone ashore without assistance, and carried his own baggage up the dock, was pretty conclusive proof that the case was not one of yellow fever. The Mayor left word for the Captain to call for his permit to land the cargo, at which time he will be questioned more fully about the affair.

The cook complained of being struck, knocked down, and abused by the mate in Trinidad; and from the admissions of the mate, the cook's statement was no doubt correct, though the mate stated, by way of excuse, that the cook was "wrong in his head," and that he chased him with a carving-knife round the deck, and he was afraid of being stabbed by him.

Thus far, there has been but one case of yellow fever landed at Quarantine—that was a week ago Sunday last—and was a mild case, the patient having soon recovered.

THE BARK MARY—THE YELLOW FEVER STORY DENIED.

From another Reporter.

The Health Officer boarded the bark Mary, from Trinidad de Cuba, on Friday last. The Captain reported all hands on board well, and that they had not only been free from any pestilential disease during the passage, but perfectly free from such disease while in Trinidad, their port of departure. At the time of the vessel's examination, all persons on board of her appeared well. On Friday afternoon a story became current, coming from the mouth of the cook, who had gone to Cherry-street to his boarding-house, that the Captain of said bark had given a false statement to the Health Officer; that instead of there having been no sickness on board of the vessel, there had been several cases of Yellow Fever during the passage, and that one person thus sick was secreted in a closet, at the time the vessel and her crew were examined at Quarantine. This story found its way to the reporters of the City papers, but only the Tribune ventured the alarm that the publication of the statement must create, without having taken the trouble to look up the facts, and see if the story could be verified. On Saturday the Health Officer dispatched his Deputy and an officer to board the bark and to examine her captain and crew, with an order, if there should appear to be a shade of truth in the story, to bring the bark and crew forthwith to the Quarantine anchorage. The deputy and officer on visiting the vessel, found no one on board of her from whom they could glean the slightest information, all the officers and sailors being absent, and she being in case of some dock watchman. Under such circumstances, the officer, acting under the direction of the Health Officer, secured the services of a tug and with it towed the bark to Quarantine, where she is now lying at anchor.

When the facts of the bark Mary were investigated by an examination under oath of the first officer, he swore that the statements made by the cook were wholly false; that there had been no sickness whatever on board of the bark during her passage and while in her port of departure, except sea-sickness. The mate further stated that the cook, who started the rumor, had fought with him and quarreled with the captain during the passage and on their arrival at this port; and that he had no doubt but the quarrel induced the cook to slander the captain and his vessel. This affidavit was made and duly verified. It is as follows:

OFFICER BEYANT'S AFFIDAVIT.

PORT OF NEW-YORK QUARANTINE, STATEN ISLAND,
HEALTH OFFICER'S OFFICE, June 14, 1857.

THOMAS BEYANT, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he has been mate of the bark Mary since November last; that he was mate of the said vessel during her last passage from Trinidad to this port; that while at Trinidad he heard of no cases of yellow fever at that port, either on land or among the shipping; that there has been no case of yellow fever on board of the bark Mary since he has known the vessel, nor any case of sickness which confined the patient to his berth an hour, except from sea sickness; that there was one person on board of said bark during her passage to this port, who was not a sailor, and who was taken sick in about 8 days after sail vessel left Trinidad, when she got her first rough weather; that his complaint was sea sickness; that his symptoms were such, and such only, as persons have who are troubled with sea-sickness; that he was ill of this complaint, and none other, from the time the rough weather set in till we arrived in this port; that he was always able to rise from his berth and wait on himself, visit the water-closet, &c., without the assistance of anybody; that his symptoms were retching and bleeding at the nose—the nose bleeding only during or immediately after each effort at retching. The deponent further swears that he never said that the person above referred to had yellow fever, nor did he ever hear the captain of the said bark, or any other person, express such an opinion. And further the deponent saith not. THOMAS BRYANT.

THE BRIG LUCY HEYWOOD.

Among the arrivals Friday was brig Lucy Heywood, of Bangor, Captain SWETT, (late SWETT, deceased), from Gonaives, (St. Domingo), twenty-four days, with coffee and logwood to ROLKER & MOLLMAN; vessel to master. May 15, at Gonaives, Capt. THEOPHILUS SWETT, of the Lucy Heywood, died of yellow fever. He was a native of Bangor, Me. May 28, at sea, lat. 23° 50', lon. 72° 45', JOHN R. BARKER, the second officer, of Bangor, Me., died of yellow fever. May 29, at sea, lat. 25° 46', lon. 72° 50', Captain BURRILL R. RICH, of Bangor, who had taken charge of the brig at Gonaives after the death of Captain SWETT, died of yellow fever. Also at the same time and place, and of the same disease, JAMES CAVENAR, seaman, of Boston. The cargo consists of 435,500 pounds of logwood, 2,000 bags of coffee, 76 sacks of cotton, 76 crotches mahogany to A. ROLKER & MOLLMAN. Dr. THOMPSON, the Health Officer, ordered the brig to the lower Quarantine anchorage where she was towed by the steam-tug Rattler, Friday forenoon. There was no one sick on board this vessel upon her arrival. The vessel had been to St. Thomas where it is said the Captain contracted the fever, and which gave rise to the three other cases, which terminated fatally. There is no sickness at Gonaives.

BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH—IMPORTANT TO SHIP-OWNERS.

The Brooklyn Board of Health held a meeting Saturday morning. Quite a number of nuisances were ordered abated.

Alderman PRESTON offered the following:

Resolved, That if his Honor, the Mayor, concur, this Board declare and decide, that no vessel from any foreign or domestic port, be permitted to land or discharge her cargo, or any part thereof, upon any part or portion of the wharves or landings connected with the city of Brooklyn, unless said vessel shall have first obtained a permit so to land her cargo, from this Board of Health.

The resolution was approved by the Mayor, and adopted.

This resolution was adopted to prevent a recurrence of the scenes of last year, when the Health Officer at Quarantine, in many instances, refused to permit vessels to land their cargoes in New-York, but granted permits for the same cargoes to be landed in Brooklyn. Alderman PRESTON said that one case had come to his knowledge where the Health Officer permitted a cargo to be landed in Brooklyn, after refusing to allow it to be landed in New-York, and from this vessel five persons were taken to the hospital sick with the yellow fever, four of whom died. Under this resolution it is proposed to examine every vessel before a permit is granted to land cargoes.

The rumor of there being a vessel at the Atlantic Dock, with yellow fever on board, was pronounced to have no foundation in fact.

The other vessel referred to, brig Lucy Heywood, was not in the Basin on Saturday. Mayor POWELL, and Dr. CLEVELAND, Health Officer, made a thorough investigation of the rumor on Saturday afternoon, and found nothing to excite any uneasiness in the public mind whatever.

New Quarantine Matters.

FROM SEGUINE'S POINT.

Our reporter returned from the Point Friday evening, reporting everything quiet. The work of laying the foundation of the new Hospital is progressing as fast as the unfavorable state of the weather will permit. On Friday the materials for the wharf were sent down and landed without any spontaneous combustion. Immediately some 75 men will be set to building it—a cob dock, 150 feet long south, with an L westward, near to the line of the property, of 70 feet.

The Police do not anticipate being further molested at present, if at all. "They do not wish to die, any more than we do," said one of the Policemen. "Do they consider it a question of life and death, then?" "Certainly we do," said he, "if we are attacked. We are here to protect the workmen and the buildings, and if they are attacked either we or the assailants will have to die. We are not anxious, however," he added, "for a mass, and we presume they are not. They want the privilege of digging their oysters too much to jeopardize it by any further violence."

Our reporter conversed extensively with the inhabitants in the region of the new Quarantine, and found not one sentiment prevailing in relation to the subject, and that was that Seguine's Point was not a fit place for a Quarantine, that the Commissioners were actuated by selfish motives in locating it there, and that it shall not stand. On this latter point there is a unanimity and determination which augurs ill for the future peace and quiet of the Island. They say that no further opposition will be made until the new Hospital is finished, and then it will be burned down, as the other buildings were, except that the next attack will be made in the day-time. They say they do not intend to kill anybody, or hurt anybody, but no building that may be put up by the Commissioners shall stand twenty-four hours after it is completed. There is no use in arguing with them upon the subject; they believe they are right, and any one who spends three days among them, as did our reporter, will be convinced that they are bound to go ahead.

Old Quarantine Matters.

DOMINICK RAGANS.

DOMINICK RAGANS is around loose again, having given bail to answer in the sum of $300 each, upon three separate complaints that he violated the Quarantine regulations by boarding vessels at their anchorage. His friends assert that the prosecution will fall to the ground (upon the last complaint, at least) that the vessel he held communication with at the time of his arrest, held a clearance from the Health Officer. This story doesn't seem very probable, as it was upon the order of this officer that he was arrested. The Quarantine Officers have great hopes, if the penalty of the new law is inflicted upon RAGANS, in event of his conviction, if the New-York Courts do not play with the case, that there will be an end, henceforth, to one great source of infection to the people. There were several large passenger vessels lying at Quarantine, yesterday, but there was not a land-shark to be seen on the anchorage.

THREATS TO BURN THE PRESENT QUARANTINE BUILDINGS.

The rumor is aboard, and they have reached the ears of the Commissioners of Emigration, that a well-known gentlemen, RAY THOMPKINS, Esq., son of Governor THOMPKINS, had said that the time was near at hand when a large party would apply a torch to the present Quarantine Hospital and other buildings; and that when said time arrived, he would head the gang, irrespective of the high crime of arson, which he and his associates would thereby perpetrate.

A friend of Mr. THOMPKINS assures us that no such assertion has been made by Mr. THOMPKINS, but that the following were his words: "When the people of this town decide that this Quarantine is a nuisance and must be removed, and to a man are ready to act—in the day-time, and without masks—I will apply the first torch." But the Commissioners of Emigration, believing the statement ought not to go unnoticed, have sent the following communication, through their President, to the Sheriff of Richmond County:

COMMISSIONER VERPLANCK TO THE SHERIFF OF RICHMOND.

To Abraham Lockman, Esq., Sheriff of Richmond County:

Please to take notice that the Commissioners of Emigration have been apprized of the following facts:

That threats have been made to burn, injure or destroy the hospitals and other buildings within the Quarantine inclosure, in the town of Castleton, in your county, held by said Commissioners.

That such threats have been made by Mr. RAY TOMPKINS, a resident of your county, and that he has declared that he would lead or head a party, or persons, or people, to burn the said hospitals or buildings.

This notice is given under the provisions of an act of this State, entitled "An act to provide for compensating parties whose property may be destroyed in consequence of mobs or riots," passed April 12, 1855.

Yours, &c.
G. C. VERPLANCK, Pres. Com. of Emigration.
BERNARD CASSERLY, Secretary.
Dated New-York, June 11, 1857.

It is said that Mr. THOMPKINS, to prevent accidents, has been qualifying himself for the position of Deputy Sheriff, by which, in case of the sickness of the Sheriff, will make it convenient for Mr. THOMPKINS one of his probable duties.

The act alluded to above has not been published before. It holds out a pleasant prospect for Staten Islanders, and if the doctrines of the Seguine's Point people increase in popularity, taxes are likely to be a matter worth considering by persons who think to escape their burden by flying from New-York. Following is the act:

An Act to Provide for Compensating Parties whose Property may be Destroyed in Consequence of Mobs or Riots—Passed April 18, 1855.

SECTION 1. Whenever any building or other real or personal property shall be destroyed or injured in consequence of any mob or riot, the city or county in which such property was situated, shall be liable to an action by or in behalf of the party whose property was thus destroyed or injured for the damages sustained by reason thereof.

SEC. 2. Such action or actions, may be brought and conducted in the same manner that other actions may be prosecuted by law, and the judgment may be appealed from in the manner now provided for appeals in civil action, the Treasurer of said city or county shall upon the production and filling in his office, a certified copy of the judgment, roll, pay the amount of such judgment to the party or parties entitled thereto, and charge the amount thus paid to said city or county.

SEC. 3. No person or corporation shall be entitled to recover in any such action, if it shall appear upon the trial therefor that such destruction or injury of property was occasioned, or in any manner aided, sanctioned or permitted by the carelessness or negligence of such person or corporation; nor shall any person or corporation be entitled to recover any damages for any destruction or injury of property as aforesaid, unless such party shall have used all reasonable diligence to prevent such damage, and shall have notified the Mayor of such city, or the Sheriff of such county, immediately after being apprised of any threat or attempt to destroy or injure his or their property, by any mob or riot, of the facts brought to his knowledge—and upon the receipt of such notice, it shall be the duty of such officer to take all legal means to protect the property attacked or threatened; and any such officer or officers who shall refuse or neglect to perform such duty, shall be liable to the party aggrieved for such damages as said party may have sustained by reason thereof, provided said parties shall elect to bring his action against such officer instead of such city or county.

SEC. 4. Nothing in this shall be construed to prevent any person or corporation whose property has been injured or destroyed by any mob or riot, from having or maintaining an action against each and every person engaged, or in any manner participating in such riot or mob.

SEC. 5. No action shall be maintained under the provisions of this act, unless the same shall be brought within three months after the loss or injury.

SEC. 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

Quarantine and the Shipping Interest.

From inquiries made among the importers along South-street, it is evident that there is a strong feeling of opposition to the Quarantine regulations, and that some movement will be adopted to escape its delays and losses. The complaint is that there is not proper discrimination made between vessels perfectly healthy and those that are infected.

During the long detentions in Quarantine an organized system of pilfering is carried on in boats that float carelessly down stream in the afternoon, their occupants crying "Old rope!" but bring up alongside of vessels in Quarantine, where they drive a brisk trade, and put off with their plunder before daylight. At Yellow Hook, and all along shore a regular high 'Change was held last season, upon the fruits of this contraband trade. In some cases old beds were brought ashore and sold to the marines at Fort Hamilton.

There was a shrinkage of from 10 to 15 per cent., in many cargoes of sugars and molasses while anchored in the Lower Bay. These gentlemen assert that a great saving can be made by sending their vessels to some of the Eastern ports, where they will enjoy the advantage of their local markets; will get possession of their goods, and have their vessels released to make another round trip, while they would be fumigating in the lower bay. The expense of freight from these points to New-York will not generally exceed the charge for lighterage from below. New-Haven, New-London, Newport, Providence, New-Bedford, Boston, Portsmouth and Portland, will be glad to have this trade, they affirm, without imposing onerous restrictions in the form of quarantine; and at least, they will make enlightened discrimination between healthy and infected vessels. Letters have been received from Eastern merchants already, asking the direction of vessels to their care. How far these plans may be adopted it is not possible to determine at present, as, so far, there is no concerted movement on the subject. We have already shown why it is not likely to be an eminently profitable undertaking even if concerted.

THE LATE REGATTA.—The Committee of the late Yacht Regatta have reported their decision upon the affair. It concludes as follows:

First—That yachts Julia and Una did not, as claimed by the protests, conflict with the purpose of the sailing regulations, viz., that of passing to the eastward of a buoy on the West Bank, whereby an advantage might be had in running out of the set or strength of the tide.

Second—That the protests against the Favorita and Minnie being withdrawn, the remeasurement of the sails of the Luckey showing their area to conform to that under which she entered, and the charges against the other yachts not having been formally substantiated, that their claims to be placed in the Regatta are in no wise forfeited.

Finally—That the prizes in the several classes were respectively won by the Julia, Rowena and Luckey, and that the Widgeon is the winner of the prize for the schooners of the first class.

In conclusion, the Committee recommend to the Club, that in future sailing regulations, for the same course, that the buoys of the West Bank be specified by numbers, as Nos. 11, 13 and 15; and that all yachts entering for a Regatta shall be provided with two pieces of canvas, on which shall be painted, in red, their number on the list of entries, one of which their owners be required to secure on each side of the mainsails of their yachts.

STRAWBERRY TRADE.—Captain ARROWSMITH of the Keyport steamer, brought to this City, on Saturday last, 832 barrels of strawberries, (about 15,000 baskets;) they were sold for more than $6,000. One basket contained only three berries that measured three and a quarter inches each in circumference. The season has only just commenced. Next week we expect to hear that they are sold for one and a half cent a basket, and sugar 15c. per pound!

THE POLICE.

Great Excitement in the Eleventh Ward.

Two Men Supposed to be Fatally Wounded.

Policemen of the Eighteenth Ward Coming Over to the New Board—Dr. Kimbark Dismissed, &c.

The Eleventh Ward was in a state of great excitement Saturday night. A collision took place between some of the Metropolitan and Municipal Police. Two of the latter—one of them badly cut in the head—were arrested by the former, and conveyed to the new Station-house in Sixth-street, from which they were subsequently released on bail by Judge ANDERSON. During the excitement Officer OLIVER LAFLIN, of the Metropolitan Police, was dangerously stabbed in the abdomen with an ice-pick, a portion of which broke off and remained some time in the wound.

The trouble began in Ninth-street, near Avenue D, about 7 o'clock, and originated in the arrest, by some of the Metropolitan force, of a man for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. The prisoner resisted this arrest, denied the right of the Metropolitan men to interfere with him, demanded to be shown their badge of authority, and declared that he would recognize only the Municipal Police who had stars. No attention was paid to his protests, and despite his struggles he was being taken along in the direction of the Sixth-street Station-house, when Policeman MALLEN, of Mayor WOOD's force, rushed among the crowd. The prisoner on seeing him said: "Here is a man whose authority I recognize. I will go with him to the Station-house." At the same moment MALLEN seized the prisoner and hurried away with him. He had not gone far, however, before he was overtaken by the Metropolitan men, who retook the prisoner, and also arrested MALLEN for interfering with them in the discharge of their duty, and in rescuing a prisoner. MALLEN, too, struggled to escape, but was tightly gripped. A great crowd had by this time collected, and many seemed determined to assail the officers and rescue the prisoners. They were kept at bay, however. In a moment afterwards Policeman CASTINE, of the old force, appeared, and rushed in with the intent of rescuing his companion MALLEN. He was stoutly resisted, and during the conflict that ensued CASTINE received a blow on the head from a club which knocked him down. He, too, was picked up and also carried to the Metropolitan Station-house.

News of the affair spread with great rapidity, and soon the most intense excitement prevailed. Capt. SQUIRES sent for aid to the Inspectors of the Fifteenth and Seventeenth Wards, and in a short time detachments from both these wards were on the ground to assist in maintaining the public peace. Deputy-Superintendant CARPENTER was also sent for, and he too was present without delay.

By this time an immense throng had collected about the Metropolitan Police Station, and many of the mob suggested that an attack should be made on the Station and the prisoners released. For a time it seemed as though such a suggestion would be acted upon, and every arrangement to repel the attack was made by the officers inside. After a time, however, Civil Justice ANDERSON appeared, and opening Court in the Station-house released MALLEN and CASTINE on bail to appear for examination before him on Wednesday next.

The crowd without cheered the liberated Policemen and three cheers were given for FERNANDO WOOD and three groans for the Black Republicans.

At a late hour officer LAFLIN, of the Metropolitan force, was attacked on the corner of Eleventh-street and Avenue C, by a gang of men who knocked him down, beat him badly, and then thrust into his abdomen an ice pick, a portion of which broke off, and remained in the wound, until taken out by Dr. KIMBARK. The wounded man was conveyed to his home, where he now lies. The Doctor is of opinion that the wound will not prove fatal, unless mortification should set in. The assailants were not arrested, and are not even known.

About the same time a citizen named JOSEPH TASS, while walking quietly home, through Avenue B, with a market basket in his hand, was struck on the head with a stone and felled senseless. He was conveyed to his home, corner of Avenue C and Tenth-street, when his skull was found to be fractured. He is reported as doing well. The person by whom the missile was thrown has not been arrested.

Towards morning all became quiet again, and the police from the other Wards proceeded to their respective stations.

In relation to the above far different versions are given. The stories of the respective officers—Municipal and Metropolitan—are not exactly alike. Sergeant CAMERON, of the Eleventh Patrol District, reports the affair to the Deputy Superintendent as follows:

"It is my painful duty to report a collision between some of the officers of this command and two of the old force. The facts of the case are as follows: ALEXER, TILDEN, HALLETT and CREMS of this command had arrested a prisoner for being drunk and disorderly, and while on the way to the Station-house, they were attacked by MALLEN of the old force, and a mob that had collected, who rescued the prisoner. They then arrested MALLEN, and during the conflict with him and the mob, assistance was sent from the Station-house, and on the way CASTINE, of the old force, ran in and attempted to rescue MALLEN, when he also was arrested, and both of them were brought to the Station-house. News of the collision spread with great rapidity, and the most intense excitement prevailed. Our force being small, we made a requisition on the Seventeenth and Fifteenth Districts for additional help, which was quickly responded to. Captain SQUIRE also sent for the Deputy Superintendent, who was present without loss of time. Judge ANDERSON soon afterwards appeared and opened Court in due form, when the two prisoners were admitted to bail to appear at the corner of Clinton and Grand streets on Wednesday for examination. After this the excitement ceased, and the crowd dispersed.

At a later hour another of the officers of this command, by the name of OLIVER LAFLIN, was attacked at the corner of Eleventh-street and Avenue C, and very nearly killed. He is shockingly bruised and beaten, and received a stab in the abdomen with an ice-pick, which entered the cavity of the abdomen to the depth of six inches. The instrument was extracted from the wound by Dr. KIMBARK, who was immediately called. Whether the wound will prove fatal or not it is impossible to tell as yet. At a late hour of the night, the men from the adjoining Districts were dismissed, and all remained quiet during the remainder of the night."

Capt. CRAFT, of the Municipal or old force, tells the affair thus, in his report to Chief MATSELL:

"At 8¾ o'clock, as Officer MALLEN was standing on the corner of Avenue D and Tenth-street, a man by the name of VANORSDALE called his attention to a row in Ninth-street. The officer ran as speedily as possible. When arriving there he saw several citizens belonging to the Black Republican Club lately organized in Sixth-street, near Avenue C, attempting to arrest a man on a charge of disorderly conduct. This man asked them to show their authority, saying that if they did not he would not go with them. MALLEN pushed his way into the crowd, when the prisoner remarked, 'There comes an officer—I will go with him to the Station-house.' At the same time the members of the Sixth-street Club let go of the man, and Officer MALLEN was conducting him quietly along, when eight or ten of these persons assuming to be so-called Metropolitan Policemen, rescued the prisoner from MALLEN and immediately seized that officer and conducted him to the Club room. Officer CASTINE, seeing the crowd, he being stationed on Eighth-street, asked what was the row. Scarcely had he uttered the words, when one of them struck him a severe blow on the head with a club, which knocked him senseless to the ground. And they took both officers to their club room, and made prisoners of them. Justice ANDERSON, hearing of the occurrence, about 12½ o'clock A. M., went to this crib and opened Court; took the complainant's charge, and he liberated the officers on bail to answer the charge at his Court on Wednesday next.

During the excitement hundreds of citizens collected round the place of meeting, and at one time it was feared that they would rescue the officers by force, but after some persuading, they quietly dispersed, giving three cheers for Mayor WOOD and three groans for the Black Republicans.

During the first excitement a man by the name of OLIVER LAFLIN, formerly a member of the Police Department, but who lately left and joined the parties assuming to be Metropolitan Policemen, was very badly stabbed in the abdomen by some person unknown with an ice-picker, about four inches of which broke off and remained in his body, until he was carried home and it was extracted by the doctor."

Capt. CRAFT also notes on his return: "About 10 o'clock P. M., Mr. JOSEPH TASS, residing at the corner of Avenue C and Tenth street, was, while walking up Avenue B with a basket of meat, when near Fourth-street knocked senseless by being hit on the head with a stone thrown by some person unknown. He was conveyed to his home, and a physician called. On examining the wound the doctor informed us that his skull was fractured. His wound was dressed, and he is doing well."

The affair caused a good deal of excitement about town yesterday, but the Ward remained quiet during the way. Fearful that some further difficulty might arise last night, the police force was considerably increased. But up to a late hour the disturbance was not renewed, neither was there any fear that there would be.

IN THE EIGHTEENTH WARD.

On Saturday, in the Eighteenth Ward, First-Lieutenant BENNETT and thirteen men, declared for the Metropolitan Commissioners, left the old Station-house and went to a new Station-house, at No. 119 East Twenty-second street. The affair passed off quietly. Speeches were made to the men by Capt. WINES and Lieutenant BENNETT.

DR. KIMBARK AND THE POLICE.

Mayor WOOD has appointed Dr. TRUMAN NICHOLS Police Surgeon, in place of Dr. E. H. KIMBARK, dismissed. In relation to the dismissal of Dr. KIMBARK we have received the following:

NEW-YORK, Saturday, June 13, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

DEAR SIR: On the 11th of June I received a note from the Mayor's Office, of which the following is a copy, and am induced to offer it, together with the reply returned, with the belief that it may possess some interest to at least a portion of your readers.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, June 11, 1857.

Dr. E. H. KIMBARK—Sir: You are hereby notified that a complaint has been preferred against you by Dr. STEPHEN HASBROUCK, for inanhordination. You will appear before the Commissioners of Police, this day, at 2 o'clock P. M., to answer.

Yours, &c., ALEX. MING,
Clerk Com. Police.

To this, the following reply was returned, no other attention of course, being paid to it.

ELEVENTH POLICE PRECINCT, June 12, 1857.

Hon. FERNANDO WOOD—Dear Sir: In answer to your note of the 11th, (which, by the way, was not received till some hours after the time fixed for trial, or more properly, perhaps, execution,) I have simply to say, that a recent law of the State, changing the administration of the Police Department, withdrawing the control thereof from yourself and associates, and placing it in other hands, having gone into effect, of course I cannot, as a law-abiding citizen, to say nothing of my oath of office, do otherwise than obey the new Commissioners thus created. This I shall do, and therefore I must, with all due deference, refuse to recognize your authority, or to obey your high mandate. I know of but one Board of Police Commissioners, of which Mr. GEO. W. EMERY, and not "ALEXANDER MING," is chief Clerk.

Respectfully yours,
E. H. KIMBARK, M. D., Surgeon Police.

P. S.—Since the above was written, another similar communication has been received from His Honor the Mayor, informing me that one "Captain WM. D. CRAFT" had preferred a complaint against me for insubordination. As I do not know any "Captain WM. D. CRAFT," of course I cannot tell whether my accuser is a man of might, or a myth. But let the above note suffice as a response to all complaints of that sort, thus far, and to say that may come hereafter; for as that "Board of Commissioners," of which "FERNANDO WOOD" is the Alpha and Omega, is a sort of revolving concern, it is impossible to tell how many more charges may remain unexploded.

E. H. K.

WHO OWNS IT?

The following, signed by Capt. MANSFIELD, appeared yesterday on the return from the Seventeenth Ward sent to Mr. MATSELL's Office: "At sunrise this morning, as policeman HENLY was patrolling his beat a gentleman came to him and handed him a light Kossuth hat, which he says he found alongside of a man who was drunk or asleep on a stoop in Broadway. He tried to wake him up but could not. He took the hat,—which had a hand on it lettered—Metropolitan Police, No. 168, and gave it to the officer. The owner can have it by calling at the Seventeenth Ward Police Station.

RECEPTION OF GENERAL WALKER IN NEW-YORK.

Arrangements of the Committee—Selection of Orators—Directions to Military and Civic Organizations.

Gen. WILLIAM WALKER will arrive in this City, at the foot of Pier No. 1, at about 7 o'clock on Tuesday evening. The Committee appointed at the recent meeting to decide upon the manner of his reception, have progressed in their arrangements, as published below. The formal reception will take place in front of the City Hall soon after his arrival. The following is the report of the Committee:

THE COMMITTEE'S ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE RECEPTION OF GENERAL WILLIAM WALKER.

The Committee of Arrangements appointed at the Meeting of Citizens held at National Hall, met on Saturday evening last and organized by the appointment of Capt. JOHN CREIGHTON as Chairman, and ALEX C. LAWRENCE, Esq., Secretary. A Committee of reception was appointed to proceed to South America to meet the President of Nicaragua, and escort him to the City. On the appearance of the steamer, one hundred guns will be fired at Pier No. 1 North River. The Military and Civic procession will then escort their guest to the Park, where a platform will be erected and a welcome to New-York will be made by Judge PHILLIPS in behalf of the Committee. The President will then be escorted by the procession to his Hotel. The cavalcade will be marshaled by Col. GEO. B. HALL, with Captains FARNUM, WALTERS, O'KEEFE, CRUGER and Major WELDON as his Assistants.

Military companies, associations and citizens generally, who desire to take part in the demonstration, will please report to Col. HALL, the Grand Marshal, without delay at his Head-quarters, No. 347 Broadway, room No. 12. Gen. WALKER will arrive in New-York at 7 o'clock P. M. on Tuesday next. The members of the Committee of Arrangements are requested to attend the final meeting at GEORGE SHERWOOD's, corner of Worth-street and Broadway, this (Monday) evening at 8 o'clock, without fail. Full particulars will be given in the NEW-YORK DAILY TIMES to-morrow.

GEORGE CREIGHTON,
Chairman Committee of Arrangements.
ALEX. C. LAWRENCE, Secretary.

The following order has been issued:

INDEPENDENT BATTALION—RYNDERS GRENADIERS.—Order No. 17—The officers and members of this organization are notified to meet this (Monday) evening, at 8 o'clock, at National Hall, Canal-street, for the purpose of making arrangements for the reception of General WILLIAM WALKER in this City, on Tuesday, at 7 o'clock P. M.

Punctual attendance is required.

By order. GEO. B. HALL, Colonel Commanding.
F. B. O'KEEFE, Acting Adjutant.

Meeting of the Excise Commissioners.

The Board met Saturday, at 10 A. M., in the Common Pleas Court-room, part first. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The following communication was received and filed:

To the Commissioners of Excise:

GENTLEMEN: The subscriber respectfully states to your honorable Board that he is engaged in the business of distilling and refining alcohol, which he uses himself and sells to others, for no other purpose than the preparation of homœopathic remedies. The amount of his sales in quantities less than five gallons is so small that the profits would not justify him in paying $30 for a license; yet to be forbidden to sell any in small quantities would be a great damage to the subscriber, and a serious incouvenience to his numerous customers, and as he means to obey strictly the law, he asks information from your honorable Board in reply to the following questions:

1. Does alcohol of the purest quality and highest proof belong to the class of spirituous liquors?

2. Would the sale of such alcohol, in small quantities without a license, for the purpose above named, be a violation of the law?

3. Can a license for such sale of alcohol be obtained for a less sum than thirty dollars?

An answer to these inquiries will enable the subscriber to decide whether he shall apply to your honorable Board for a license.

Respectfully submitted by your obedient servant,
JOHN T. S. SMITH, No. 434 Broadway,
By C. G. WARREN.

NEW-YORK, Friday, June 13, 1857.

Mr. JOHN B. LA FARGE presented the application of THOMPSON & PURCELL, No. 734 Broadway, for an increase per's license.

The application of JOHN B. COZZENS, of the Brandreth Building, Broadway, corner of Canal street, was presented, and a resolution passed that it be granted on the payment of a fee of $50.

Mexico among the public, in the press, and in the Congress. In the Congress the paragraph in the answer to the speech from the Throne was drawn up by M. GONZALEZ BRAVO (this Spanish Minister in England) in a much stronger tone than the corresponding passages in this speech; but it would appear that even this does not satisfy the Deputies, and an amendment will probably be moved to make the paragraph more bitter still. It is certain that the Government is just now exceedingly weak, from the many fractions into which the majority is split, and, as the Mexican question is the readiest and easiest of all means of opposition, Marshal NARVAEZ and M. PIDAL are becoming every day less free agents in the matter. Besides the natural feeling in the public to triumph over the imbecile ce of the old colony, an artificial irritation has been excited by persevering efforts and a lavish expenditure of money on the part of persons holding Mexican bonds to a large amount, and who think that nothing short of hostilities will obtain for them the payment of their more than doubtful claims. It is to be regretted that M. LAFRAGUA did not arrive in Madrid some time before the meeting of the Cortes. The Government feels that the Deputies, although for the greater part its own nominees, are growing unmanageable now that they are elected, and with ungrateful hardihood presume to make a show of independence. There is now an outcry against Mexico, which people persuade themselves and others, is patriotic—that unhappy adjective which is so dreadfully prostituted in Spain. On the whole, I fear that Lord HOWDEN and M. DE TURGOT may be working, not for Queen ISABELLA, but, as they say in France, "pour le Roi de Prusse"—that is, for nothing.

The Atlantic Telegraph.

From the Liverpool Albion.

We learn that Her Majesty's ship Agamemnon left Sheerness at 5:30 A. M. on Friday, for Liverpool, and may therefore be expected here hourly. She has been specially fitted for carrying and laying the Atlantic Telegraph cable, and is as well suited for the purpose as if she had been expressly built with that object. Her draught being situated nearer to the stern than is usual enables the cable to be stowed almost amid-ships, so as to preserve the trim of the vessel. A large hold, capable of receiving the cable in one coil, of this form which has been found by experience to be the best, has been cleared out, and a flooring laid over the kelson. The size of this division of the hold fitted for the cable is about 50 feet square, and the coil of 1,250 miles of cable will be about 11 feet high. At present she draws only 19 feet of water, her armament and superfluous stores having been removed; when the cable is on board this will be increased to 25 feet. A guard, or cage, of wrought-iron has been placed over the propeller, so as to avoid any chance of the cable getting foul of it. The machinery for paying out the cable, which is being made at Manchester, is of the most complete character, providing for every possible emergency; the precise strain borne by the cable, the exact amount delivered, the rate at which it is payed off, and other important particulars, being indicated during the whole process. The peculiar arrangement of the apparatus is such as to provide for every contingency which experience has pointed out as possible to occur in the paying out of either light or heavy cables. Frigates' masts have been fitted to the Agamemnon, in place of the heavier gear usually carried by her, to render her more suitable for the operation. Her engines, which are by PENN, are considered to be equal, if not superior, to anything afloat. They are nominally of 800-horse power, but have been worked up to 2,250. This power will not be needed in this case, for it is not to be expected that the cable will be laid at more than four to five knots per hour. 1,100 miles of the cable have now been completed by Messrs. NEWALL & Co., at Birkenhead, out of the 1,250 miles to be made there. This is laid in four coils, of about 25 feet diameter, and will be shipped in suitable vessels and coiled into the Agamemnon, in the Sloyne. Much as it is to be regretted that Liverpool has not been favored with the anticipated visit of the United States' steamer Niagara originally intended to take on board the cable at Birkenhead, it will be seen from the forgoing that the sudden derangement of the plans previously designed is not likely to cause delay in carrying out this great enterprise, through the measures which are being so promptly taken by the Government to provide so additional ship to compensate for the very great disappointment which has been so generally felt at the peculiar construction of the Niagara unfitting her for this particular service, although so splendid a specimen of naval architecture in other ways. Mr. CHARLES BRIGHT, the engineer of this great undertaking, has been in Liverpool during the last week making the necessary arrangements for coiling the cable on board of the Agamemnon. She will lie in the Sloyne, in consequence of her broadth not allowing her to enter the Birkenhead Dock, and the cable will be carried to her in other vessels. Mr. BRIGHT expects that his plan will allow of the Agamemnon leaving here on the 15th of July, to meet the other ships at Cork on the 18th, so that we may expect the cable to be laid in the first week in August, which is the period of the year most free, on the average, from wind and fog, and therefore best calculated for the completion of the undertaking.

From the London Times, June 2.

The United States' paddle-wheel steam-frigate Susquehanna, Capt. JOSHUA SANDS, after saluting the Grand Duke CONSTANTINE'S flag, as noticed in our report of His Imperial Highness' visit to Osborne, proceeded to Gravesend. The following particulars with reference to the construction of this frigate may be of interest to our readers: She has four tubular boilers fitted sth wert ships, with upright tubes, the water lying around them. These boilers were constructed on a new plan by the Chief Engineer of the United States' Navy, and were made at Baltimore; this is the first ship, with the exception of the Merrimac, which has been fitted with them. Her average consumption of coals (of which she stows away 1,000 tons) is about 35 tons for the 24 hours, which amount produces an average speed of 10 knots an hour under steam alone. Her cylinders are 6 feet in diameter, 10 feet stroke, carrying from 12 pounds to 18 pounds pressure of steam, 15 pounds being the average; average revolutions, 15 or 16. She has several officers on board, who have come over to this country to render their assistance in laying down the great Atlantic telegraph cable.

The Agamemnon, Master-Commander CORNELIUS T. A. NODDALL, reported as having left for Birkenhead, was recalled when between the Great Nore and the Mouse, in consequence of a telegraphic dispatch from the Admiralty, ordering her to remain at the Nore until further orders. She is to take in that portion of the cable intended to have been taken by the Niagara, and the St. Jean D'Acre is to proceed (when ready) to Birkenhead.

The Cyclops, paddle wheel steam-frigate, Lieutenant-Commander JOSEPH DAYMAN, left Sheerness on Saturday last, for the purpose of taking soundings of the line along which it is proposed the great Atlantic telegraph cable should be laid down.

From the Times, June 3.

Admiralty instructions were yesterday issued to Captain NODDALL, in command of Her Majesty's screw steamship Agamemnon, cancelling her recent order to proceed to Birkenhead, and directing that the former order to ship the Transatlantic cable from East Greenwich shall hold good. The United States' ship Niagara having been inspected by Mr. DALLAS, the American Minister, it was decided that the necessary arrangements should be entered into by the shipwright department of the dockyard, so as to adapt that vessel for the reception and transport of her intended portion of the electric cable from Liverpool.

Startling Increase in the Cuban Slave-trade —The Removal of Gen. Concha and his Reported Successor.

Madrid (May 25) Correspondence of London Times.

General CONCHA'S open opposition to Government renders his brother's removal from the command of Cuba even more certain than it was before. I have grounds for believing that this lucrative viceroyalty, the great point of ambition of every Spanish general, and the nomination to which is equivalent (besides the honor and glory of the post) to the grant of a large fortune, was recently offered to General ROS DE OLANO, who, however, felt himself compelled to decline it, on account of the implied condition of supporting the Government. It is said to have been thrice offered to him, until at last he declared that he should consider the application an insult if renewed. He informed CONCHA of what had passed, and the knowledge that his brother was as good as dismissed perhaps contributed somewhat to the decined opposition the Marquis DE DUERO last week showed to the Government in the Senate. It is thought here that the scandalous manner in which the Slave-trade has lately been carried on at Cuba, with the connivance and to the profit of JOSE CONCHA, and the representations of England on the subject, have also in some degree moved the Spanish Government to change the Captain-General. It is probable that General LERSUNDI will succeed him, in which case I suppose Senor GONZALEZ BRAVO will take the Ministry of Marine, as NARVAEZ is desirous of having him in the Government.

It is not to be expected, however, that because a new Captain-General is sent out the traffic in slaves will diminish. It may do so for a short time, just for appearance sake, and until the papers have trumpeted forth the vigilance and probity of the new man; but, after that, as he has only three years to serve there, and considere it a duty to himself and his family not to return home without a large fortune, we may be quite sure that he will tread in the steps of his predecessor. The English Government may make representations, Lord HOWDEN may multiply his notes and obtain fair promises from Pidal, but these are not worth the foolscap on which they are written, so far as potting a check to the evil goes. If it is really desired to stop the Slave-trade, now so active in Cuba, let a sufficient force of gunboats be sent out to stand sentry over the Cuban ports, and keep a bright lookout about the nooks and creeks in which slavers would be likely to run what portion of their wretched cargo the horrors of the middle passage may leave alive. As for remonstrances to the Spanish Government, it is just so much waste of large paper and big seals. I do not know if British philanthropists, who have contributed to Anti-Slavery funds and wiped their eyes over Uncle Tom's Cabin, imagine that the Slave-trade is really defunct, but they are mistaken if they do. For a deceased institution it is extremely lively, and it is much to be doubted whether any amount of diplomacy and red tape will suffice to confine it within narrower limits. A few shreds of British bunting flowing about Cuban coasts would be of much more efficacy. I cannot but think that, if the Yankees had the same interest and had made the same sacrifices to do away with the Slave-trade that John Bull has done, Spanish slavedealers would not find the traffic quite so easy, and captains-general would not make large fortunes quite so rapidly. The American would have acted while we have been complaining and notifying.

Madrid (May 28.) Correspondence of the London Times.

The recall of General CONCHA is still talked of as certain, although some persons think that the Government may, perhaps, in pursuance of the conciliatory policy announced by General NARVAEZ, avoid dismissing him, and wait his resignation, which is expected as a consequence of some severe communications that have been made to him. The time at which his period of office in Cuba expires is now so near that peremptorily to recall him might be taken for an act of vengeance, provoked by his brother's hostile demonstrations against the Government. In truth, however, there are abundant and valid motives for dismissing him, even with disgrace. As you may suppose, we are here kept minutely informed of what goes on in Cuba by numerous letters and frequent arrivals from that island. Recent accounts give details of the scandalous manner in which DON JOSE CONCHA, Marquis of the Havannah, has encouraged, for his own advantage, the importation of negroes. In the early days of this (his second) command in Cuba he pursued the slave-trade with extraordinary rigor and activity. Cordons of troops were established on all sides, and frequent domiciliary visits were made in the plantations. When this vigilance and severity had produced their effect, and that, owing to the rarity of the article, the value of negroes had nearly doubled itself, the Captain-General suddenly relaxed the rein, and connived at importation, on condition of receiving four ounces per head of negroes, instead of two, with which his predecessors had contented themselves. It is estimated that 100,000 slaves have been brought into Cuba during his command there, and that he has made about $800,000 by the transaction. To this enormous sum must be added, it is said, others also very considerable, received in the form of pots de vin—in other words, bribes for preferences and protection granted to particular enterprises. So that General JOSE CONCHA, who is noted for his parsimony, will return to Europe with a princely fortune. Not being on the spot, I, of course, cannot guarantee the correctness of these particulars, but I give them to you on the faith of accounts from Cuba, trustworthy, as I believe; and, it may be added, that they accord with reports long current, with the frequent complaints lately addressed to the British Government, and, through Lord HOWDEN, to that of Spain, and also that they seem generally credited here. If they be true, this sole quality that appeared to render General CONCHA eligible for the supreme command in Cuba—namely, his probity—melts away and disappears. Of the possession of superior abilities, and especially of administrative knewledge, I believe he has never been accused.

Great Popular Excitement in Brussels.

From the London Times, June 1.

Brussels was on the afternoon of Wednesday the scene of a popular turmoil, which at one time assumed the features of a serious political demonstration. The incident arose from the warmth of political feeling excited by the debates in the Chamber of Representatives on "charitable institutions," and particularly by the attitude of the Opposition in the sitting of Wednesday. M. FRERE, a member of the latter, laid the foundation of the subsequsut disorder by characterizing the guarantee offered by Government for the production of the accounts of monastic institutions as an insulting farce. Loud cries from the Right of "We know nothing of the kind" interrupted the speaker, who was requested by the President to retract his words. M. FRERE replied, in a stentorian voice: "When, some days ago, I denounced the conduct observed towards some young girls, lace-workers in a religious institution, a voice in this chamber taunted me as an infame." This sentence was received with applause by the strangers in the gallery, who commenced yelling and stamping. The President gave orders to the Huissiers to clear the gallery, and the public slowly withdrew. The allusion of M. FRERE to the lace manufacturers is explained by the following article in the Précurseur of Anlwerp.

"The Observateur published in one of its late numbers a fact so incredible that in the expectation of an official contradiction we have until now hesitated to lay it before our readers. In consequence of the silence of the clerical journals and of the persons interested we can no longer doubt the correctness of the account given by that journal. It is, therefore, now certain that the religieuses of the lace school of Liederkerke caused the hair of the heads of ten young girls who worked in their manufactory to be cut off, because, on the Sunday of Lakermesse, these poor girls had taken part in a dance."

After a few minutes had elapsed, and before the excitement created among the members of the Chamber by this incident had subsided, a great number of men with their hats on forced their way into the galleries, and it was necessary to have recourse to the troops on guard to clear the Chamber, and orders were given to strengthen the military posts outside. Half an hour after this second disturbance the President resumed his seat, and the discussion recommenced. Meanwhile the public, after having been expelled from the House, assembled in noisy and agitated groups in the space which separates the Park from the Chamber. Above a thousand persons, belonging to respectable classes of society, congregated round the steps of the Chamber, and awaited the close of the sitting. No sooner had the proceedings terminated and some members of the Right departed, than a storm of hisses and yells arose from the crowd. The Apostolic Nuncio, Monsignor GONELLA, who was leaving at the same time, misconstrued the attitude of the crowd into a personal attack upon himself, and withdrew into the Chamber. But the Minister of Foreign Affairs and M. DEMOOS, a Liberal member, hastened to acquaint him with his error, and, offering him their arms, they left the Chamber, and accompanied the Prelate to his carriage. The groups made way with respect for the Nuncio, and many persons took off their hats to the representative of the Church. It appears that the crowd had in the first instance mistaken the latter for the "Chanoine de Haerne," a most unpopular person, a fact which explained the hostile manifestation. The members of the Left were received by the crowd with enthusiastic cheers. M. ROGIER, on appearing on the steps, was the object of a particular ovation, but he retreated before the welcome which awaited him, and left the Chamber by a private gate. The crowd, after waiting in vain for M. FRERE, proceeded to his residence, where it sang the "Brabançonne" under his windows, and indulged in innumerable "vivats." The crowd next proceeded to the residence of M. VERHAEGEN, and favored him with a similar manifestation; it then dispersed in the utmost order. During the above scenes the troops were ordered to remain in barracks, ready to act should circumstances unfortunately demand their interference. At the commencement of Thursday's sitting of the Chamber Vicomte VILAIN XIV., Minister of Foreign Affairs, rose, and thus alluded to the events of the preceding day:

"GENTLEMEN: A circumstance to be regretted occurred yesterday. The Apostolic Nuncio to the Court of Brussels was seriously insulted. This incident took place yesterday at 5 o'clock, and at 5¾ o'clock the Minister of Foreign Affairs, in uniform, proceeded to the residence of his Excellency and offered excuses to him in the name of his Government, which the Nuncio would have been justified in demanding had he had time to draw up his representations. From the residence of the Nuncio I proceeded to the Chateau de Laecken, where I rendered an account of my conduct to the King. The King approved it, and has charged the Grand Marshal to express this morning to the Papal Nuncio the regrets of His Majesty. I consider the incident is terminated."

This brief speech was received by the Chamber with general approbation. After the sitting, the Cabinet Ministers proceeded to Laecken, where a Council, presided over by the King, took place. The Ministers remained to a grand dinner given at the chateau, where the Royal Family, the dignitaries of the Court, and several strangers of distinction were present.

From the Times, June 3.

We have received the Belgian papers of Monday.

Tranquility appears to be restored, but a portion of the Civic Guard is still under arms at Brussels, and troops are ready for any emergency. Some 70 individuals had been arrested, but the greater part of them have been set at liberty.

At Liege, where the windows of the Bishop's palace were smashed by a volley of stones, the excitement is also subsiding. The reports from Mons, Ghent, Antwerp, and other towns in the provinces are also of a tranquilizing nature.

The Mormon Question.

From the London Times, June 3.

* * * The United States' Court, having been suppressed by force, and a formal act of rebellion against the Federal Government having been committed, it would appear that there was only one course for the Federal Government to take, and that that was to dispatch a military force to Utah, suppress the present territorial Government, and carry on the laws by means of magistrates of Federal appointment, acting under the protection of the military, until such time as another territorial settlement could be effected. If the United Government is true to itself it can have no choice in the matter, because the very principle of the federation is denied by this Mormonite act. The Federal law has been virtually superseded in Utah a long time, and the Mormouite juries have refused to convict upon the plainest evidence. But this is an open and a definite act, and, though not done by the real instigator, BRIGHAM YOUNG, in person, is not cancelled or punished by him; so that the state of things is this,—that the Federal law is suppressed, and that, in the absence of any effort on the part of the territorial Government to reëstablish it, the Federal Government must itself step in and defend its own authority. The United States' Government were, perhaps, wise in giving the Mormons rope, and waiting till an act about which there could be no mistake was committed; but now, at any rate, the opportunity is given.

We may hope, then, now for something like a break-up of the Mormonite establishment. At present the sect profess to live under a kind of theocracy, which identifies Church and State, and places the Priesthood and civil Government in the same hands. There must be a considerable drooping of the Mormonite mind when these two authorities are fairly severed, and the Church finds itself one fine morning only—if we may so abuse the word—a religious communion, under a temporal government administered by "Gentiles." How deeply the union of the two estates enters into the Mormonite "idea" we see from these very facts, which are simply the result of impatience of any temporal power independent of and not included within the Church. When, then, the union has been formally severed by the reduction of Mr. BRIGHAM YOUNG from the King to the Priest simply, a great blow will have been struck at the system, and we hope that such a crisis will open the eyes of many a convert.

It is, indeed, lamentable to think how many of our own countrymen have been fascinated by this monstrous delusion. According to the calculation of Mr. CARVALHO, who was the companion of Colonel FREMONT in his journey over the Rocky Mountains in 1853, and spent several weeks among the Mormonites, "nine-tenths of the population were the peasantry of Scotland, England, and Wales." We cannot account for such a strange infatuation, except on the supposition of a remarkable union of motives and stimulants from different quarters which have conspired to favor it. There has been the emigration movement. The Mormons took advantage of this new tide in the popular mind. It took a great deal to shake the passive and stationary temper of the rural population, to rouse it from its lethargy, and give it the emigrant impulse. When that impulse, then, was once given them, it implied a kind of excitement of the popular mind, and the manœuvring from an old anchorage. The Mormons adroitly availed themselves of this excitement, and turned it to their purpose. Their arguments and pictures were addressed to a mass that was already on the move both in mind and body. Then they appealed to the superstitious element in the popular mind. We know from recent facts how strong that is, and to what an extent the lowest and coarsest impostures takes with our poor,—nay, even with a class above the poorest. That morbid deference to prestences to supernatural knowledge which sends our poor to the "wise woman," and, which sustained such gentlemen as Mr. HARRISON, had only to take another turn to follow the Transatlantic "prophet;" and, with a morbid religion, discontent and cupidity easily mingle. The time of distress which just preceded the great emigrant movement was exactly the time at which the highly colored picture of peace, comfort, and prosperity in a new land, drawn by the Mormonite missionary, would tell most powerfully upon our own people, pinched by low wages and tempted to look upon their own country as a scene of immoveable hardship, inequality, and oppression. It is but justice, too, to our poorer classes, to state that the worst features of Mormonism were studiously kept out of their sight. The missionaries from Utah received strict orders to conceal the whole fact of polygamy; they were even furnished with a false book, called Doctrines and Covenants, pretending to give, among other things, the marriage ceremonial in their communion, which only acknowledged one wife. A union of causes thus fevored the Mormonite movement. At no time, probably, in our history, were circumstances so much on its side. Travelers who have visited Utah, and even long residents there, assure us that the greater part of the Mormonite emigrants went over without any knowledge of the system, and simply under the influence of a vague belief in some new prophet that had risen up. It was a half religious, half-worldly dream, which led them out in quest of a sort of earthly paradise, where, under a theocratic rule, peace, plenty, and comfort reigned without interruption or decay. Even so long ago as 1851, however, the progress of Mormonite conversion in this country had reached its climax, and we trust now we shall soon look upon it as an event of the past.

THE CHINA WAR.

Interesting Exposition of the state of Affairs in China—The Expected Campaign—Injury of Delaying Operations against Canton—Successes of the Rebels—Intercepting Chinese Dispatches—Frightful Murder—The Emperor—Important Rumor.

Hong Kong (April 15) Correspondence of the London Times.

The situation remains the same; but our hopes of a change for the better are considerably increased by the news of the successes in Pereia and the proclamation of a peace with the Shah. This will liberate some 10,000 men and their attendant transports at Bushire, and 10,000 men will suffice to put an end to the Chinese puzzle.

But they must soon come. The Shanghai mail, which came in yesterday, brought some serious advices from the North. All the way from this, northward to our "furthest," it appears to be the general impression among these best qualified by experience to judge, that the delay in the Admiral's operations against Canton, caused by the perhaps very proper resolution to await the arrival of reinforcements, is creating immense mischief in the interior, and giving warranty for the report, industriously circulated by the Centonese, that we have been defeated and driven away from the City of Reme (Canton.)

I do not know that the gravity of this intelligence from a quarter where hitherto the long animosities of North and South have wrought in our favor, by supporting the prestige of our fame and fortune, is much compensated by the tidings, which are also come to hand, of great and important advantages gained by the insurgent Emperor over his rival of Pekin. If the Nankin Government is not persuaded that Canton is not impregnable to the skill and valor of the barbarians, the fall of the Tartar influence within its walls will signify nothing for the purposes of our diplomacy. This Viceroy YEH has already shown us what sacrifices of private affection and hatred he is capable of making to the grand policy of keeping China to the Chinese Government. At the taking of Nankin his wives, his children, and all his house, were massacred by the Iconoclasts, who are now reigning there in the stead of his master, and the decapitation of some 70,000 "rebels" by his order, at Canton, attests the sincerity of his avowed love of vengeance. Yet their surviving brethren in arms and himself are now leagued in the common cause of "Canton and Cantoonese," and the Yellow Dragon of the "White Emperor" floats from the masthead of every war junk in the combined fleets on the waters of the "Pearl." It is but a transfer of allegiance from a "red" to a "white" Emperor which these have made. It will be but the converse transfer which those will make when Tai Ping's conquest shall have rolled onward to the gates of the Viceregal Palace; and what Chinaman ever refused to render that token of his acknowledgment to "the Divinely Appointed," whose commission from Heaven is attested by the people's desire and sealed by success?

Therefore, so far as we are concerned, I say of the late conquests of the Nankin Government, valeant quantum valere possunt. But they certainly have not been small. It is now confirmed—what before was vaguely rumored—that the rebels of Kiangsi are in possession of the Chang-Yub Shan Pass, which commands the only road from that Province into the fertile and rich maritime Province of Ché-Keäng; that the west ern part of that of Fukien is in their hands, together with the mountain passes which lead into Kiangsi: that Kweiling-fú, the capital of Kiangsi, so long besieged in vain by the "God-worshippers" at the beginning of their rising in that their native Province, has at length yielded itself, and become "a possession," and that two of their chiefs have actually established themselves in the north of Kwangtung itself, while a third, their formidable LE, at the head of some 60,000 men, who have followed him from Kwangsi into that Province, has taken several of its southern cities, and from the easternmost, Tekheng, now threatens a visit to Canton itself, the capital of the Province.

The intercepting of Chinese dispatches is the most curious and perhaps the most important incident of the last fortnight. On the 6th inst. Commodore the Hon. G. J. B. ELLIOT, under orders from the Admiral, proceeded on board of Her Majesty's ship Sampson, with Her Majesty's ship Hornet and the two tenders, Hongkong and Sir Charles Forbes, in company, to Deep Bay in quest of a fleet of war junks, which were engaged, as usual, in cutting off our supplies of market produce from the main. The water being too short even for the tenders to approach within five miles of a number of junks which were discovered in a river high up the bay, the Commodore, Capt. HAND, of the Sampson, and Commander FORSYTH of the Hornet, proceeded with the boats of the two last mentioned steamers, and five boats belonging to Her Majesty's ships Sybille and Nankin, up the bay and into the river, when the vessels, which proved to be the fleet they had come in quest of, opened a heavy fire, sustained by that of a large body of troops ashore, but which was soon silenced by the steadier and more accurate fire of the British. Every vessel in the fleet, consisting of eleven war junks and two well armed lorchas, lately captured from their European owners, was burnt and their guns sunk in deep water, it being found impossible to dislodge even the lorchas from the beach where they lay.

The loss of the enemy must have been great. A seaman wounded by the accidental discharge of his own firelock was our only casualty. A Portuguese who had been a prisoner of the Chinese took the opportunity to make his escape, and was brought off in safety.

It was on board of the "flag junk" at the end of this brilliant little affair that a quantity of Chinese manuscripts was found by the captors, and on examination these proved to be a series of dispatches, reports, edicts and memoranda by different members of the Sunoan District administration on the events of the last three or four months of the pending controversy. Much of the correspondence will not interest your readers, since it consists of a criticism of the characters of certain men, employed by the worthies of Kaulung to carry out their numerous plots against the "lives and safeties all" of this community. I shall, therefore, merely state the results, so far as I have been able to ascertain these beyond the possibility of doubt.

The "poisoning case" is referred to approvingly, but not so as to implicate the poisoners or to clear them, but the burning of the store of the Englishman who, after their arrest, bought the poisoner's bread and biscuit bakery, and accepted the contracts by which the "devil soldiery" are fed, is the subject of a dispatch approving the plan, and, when successful, of another avowing and glorying in it. Assassinations, kidnappings, capture of vessels, are in like manner planned beforehand, and hoasted of after execution. Attempts to commit them and other crimes—among which may be mentioned one to destroy a steamer, and several to blow up the buildings and magazines of Victoria with gunpowder, are freely talked of, and their failure or postponement fully explained. The pains which YEH, as you know, has been taking of late to soothe public feeling at Canton into a belief that the "devils are broken" and "rubbed down," and suing for "leave to ask pardon," are also explained. His exchequer is empty. From the beginning of these troubles he had been obliged to depend upon his "braves," as the "people and gentry" were disinclined to bear the brunt of the action. But the "braves" were not volunteers, and his donations were immense. Further, considerable sums had been lavished on the taking of heads, for the service was a perilous one. To meet all these demands, forced, or else voluntary subscriptions were offered to the choice of the discerning public; and the result was answerable, but only for a season. The money is all gone. The "Canton Committee" can no longer pay even for heads. In vain their economy; in vain the reduction of reward from 100 to 30 taels, and lower still; in vain their obstinate refusal to pay more for a service which the "braves" represent as too dangerous for a "brave" to undertake at less than double the amount!—they have been at length compelled to suspend their payments altogether; and the adroitness of YEH has been put in requisition to cover the act of insolvency with the cloak of magnanimous compassion for the woes with which the rude and obdurate barbarians have so long been punished. This inability or unwillingness to pay for a war which your Exeter-hall-ites pretend to consider a war pro aris et focis, is one great fact. The small force of "braves" is another. All the exertions in YEH'S power to make, when his treasury was at the fullest, only rallied in a body of 1,000 men—even if there be no Chinese exaggeration of number—to the defence of the town and district of Keulung, within sight and gunshot of our own harbor, although the scheme of defence was combined with one for the invasion of this island and the destruction of our community. And now even this force is, for lack of pay, on the point of being disbanded.

Crimes and attempts to commit them continue, notwithstanding the announced deficit in YEH'S treasury. Since I last wrote the Mandarin's son who, having gained admission as a coolie on board of the Guinare, induced the emigrants to make an endeavor, all but successful, to murder her officers and crew, and take possession of her, has suffered the last penalty of the law. His IT adherents, who are to be transported for life, begged on bended knee that they might die with him. Was this the superstitious influence of their secret association of blood? Or was it the mere outbreak of the Chinese spirit, ever reckless of life and impatient of servile labor? I incline to the former solution.

The oven handed justice of England within two days after their condemnation fell heavy on an European and his Chinese accomplices, who were tried and convicted in the same Court of some very gross and cruel treatment of a large body of Chinese coolies, whom, after deluding into a contract to go to Cuba, they thought proper to confine, against their wills, for some three weeks in a filthy tenement ashore. But I doubt whether the example has been of benefit to the malcontents. It is not possible for a Chinaman to believe in the purity even of a Court of justice. Certainly crime and aggression have not as yet diminished.

A most frightful murder has been committed upon one of the most respected and oldest members of the British mercantile community in China—the late Mr. MARKWICH. The old man was found dead in his bed at a very early hour in the morning, with his throat literally torn away by a violent hand. From the articles of spoil found scattered on the floor it is plain that the assassins dreaded a surprise, and fled before they had time to secure his head as a trophy. They were his own house servants, and had been with him many years. It was to "house servants" that an especial reward had been offered for the heads of their masters.

A questionable violation of territory has at the hour I am now writing effected the capture of one of the miscreants. The Hon. East India Company's ship Auckland, late in the day of the murder, was dispatched to Hâm-tin, his native place, in quest of him. The "eldere" were invited on board, and, on their hesitation to come, one half hour's grace was given them to reconsider their determination. At the end of that time one of the Auckland's 63-pound shot might be seen skimming over the village and kicking up a terrible dust beyond; whereupon the Hâm-tin mob were seen besetting the houses of the said "Elders," and compelling two of their number to yield themselves to the courteous invitation of Commander DROUGHT. They came on board, and to ransom their village undertook to surrender two of the assassins' relatives as hostages for himself, who, they said, had not yet arrived from Hongkong. The undertaking was fulfilled and the hostages delivered, and, upon an intimation that the assassin himself was arrived at Hâm-tin and in custody, the said hostages are to be reimbarked thither in a day or two in charge of the police authorities, there to be exchanged for the criminal.

There has been an unsuccessful endeavor to cajole a Yankee steamer within the clutches of the Mandarins, and a like endeavor upon a Portuguese armed lorcha, which has succeeded. We have also had an attempt to blow up the stores and magazines at the gun-yard. This discovery was made on the morning of the 5th inst., a few hours before it was put in execution. All the workmen were immediately discharged; but nothing transpired to lead to the detection of the real offender. By a happy inspiration, redolent of the Crimea itself, all the Chinamen on board of the Minden hulk, where no powder is stored, were also discharged, while all on board the kindred hulk Hercules, where are stored 40 tons of powder, they are still suffered to remain. The former were, for Chinamen, people of very high character; the character of the latter was, even for Chinamen, remarkably low.

The rainy season is beginning. There is much sickness. Some deaths among the persons poisoned three months since with arsenic are apprehended.

And what, you will ask, is the Emperor about? If we are to believe a late edict of YEH, he approves highly all that the "brave" Viceroy and his "braves" have done, and as highly of his proposal to give us peace, and "not be very harsh with us," if we "really and of our own accord come round," and cease to "dare to be perverse as of old." If we are to believe the Viceroy of the northern ports, His Majesty, neglecting YEH, and Canton, and all besides, has himself, really and of his own accord, come round to the traffic in opium, which by edict is now admitted at Shanghai on payment of "the duty of 12 taels per chest." It must not be forgotten that, in either instance, it is the remote Emperor speaking through a present Mandarin; and all which can with safety be affirmed is that such a peace is anxiously desired by YEH, and such a payment by his northern fellow-servant; and for the same sordid reason, no doubt.

At the moment of closing the mail I open this letter to communicate a piece of intelligence, which has just reached me through some Chinamen, this morning from Canton. They say—but who will vouch for them, albeit greatly confirmed by the facts above recorded?—that the Imperialist army there is in a state of mutiny for want of pay, the soldiers deserting in crowds, and the misery and disaffection of the population at the uttermost.

Later from Brazil.

By way of England we have advices from Pernambuco to the 1st of May.

Political intelligence is unimportant.

At Pernambuco large purchases of sugar had been made at 2,850 to 2,900 reis per arroba. A decline in prices was looked for in consequence of a scarcity of shipping. Cotton was quoted 7,500 to 7,700. Hides were selling at 346 reis ₱ lb. There was a brisk demand for manufactured goods at remunerating prices. Money for discounting was scarce, the Bank rate being 10 ₱ cent. ₱ annum. Exchange on London to the extent of £30,000 had taken place at 27¾d. for 90 days' bills.

Freights to the Channel were 50s., and to the Continent 55c. to 60s., with 5 ₱ cent. primage.

From a private letter we learn that the Bahia and Rio markets were largely stocked with American flour. Better prices would have been obtained had it not unfortunately happened that the Provincial Assembly had notified to the bakers that the law passed two years ago, ordering all the bakers to remove their ovens to the suburbs of the cities, would be put into force on the 30th June. There was some hope that the law would be annulled, but should this not be the case a great many failures might be expected, and dealers were consequently afraid to purchase.

Latest by Telegraph from Liverpool to Southampton.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday, June 3.

The Liverpool COTTON market is firm, but quiet and quotations are unchanged. Sales of the three days 17,000 bales, of which 2,500 were to speculators, and 2,500 to exporters.

The BREADSTUFFS market, owing to the favorable crop and weather, is heavy, and all qualities are depressed. FLOUR was very dull, at a decline of 1s. ₱ bbl. WHEAT is also in very trifling demand, and prices are fully 3d.@4d. lower. Quotations, however, are nominal. CORN is also very dull, and previous quotations are barely maintained.

The PROVISION market is dull. BACON is heavy, at prices fully 3s. lower. LARD is heavy, but without important change in rates.

CONSOLS close at 94@94¼ for money.

London Money Market.

From the London Times.

TUESDAY, June 2—P. M.

Immediately on the commencement of business to-day the Bank broker announced that the Bank will make their usual advances on stock during the approaching shutting at 6½ ₱ cent., and this, coupled with the news of the arrival of the Mexican steamer with £632,500, caused the funds to open with firmness at an advance of an eighth. A continued pressure for money then caused a relapse to 93¾, from which there was again a temporary recovery to 94@⅜. Ultimately the market had an inanimate appearance, a rather less favorable condition of the continental exchanges, consequent upon the recent purchases of silver, coupled with the receipt of desponding accounts from Paris, tending to create general dulness, and there were sellers at 94 for money while for the account on the 9th of July the last transactions were at 94⅜, or 93½ ex. dividend. Bank Stock left off at 212@214; Reduced, 93⅜@⅝; new Three ₱ Cents., 93⅜@⅝; India Stock, 221@223; India Bonds, 9s.@4s. discount; Exchequer Bonds, 98⅝@⅞; and Exchequer-bills, June, 2s. dis. @ 2s. premium; Meroh, 3s.@6s. premium.

The advances to be made by the Bank during the shutting will, as usual, be upon Government Securities of all kinds, as well as upon India Bonds. They will not be granted for a less period than 14 days, and must in every case be repaid on or before the 11th of July, beyond which date there will, it is believed, be no extensions.

The demand for Money in the Discount market as well as in the Stock Exchange continues with full force.

In the Foreign Exchanges there was no alteration of importance from the rates of last post, but the tendency was towards flatness.

Uninterrupted heaviness prevails on the Paris Bourse. The final quotations of the French Three ₱ Cents. this evening were 69f. 10c. for money, and 69f. 35c. for the account, showing a further decline of nearly ¼ ₱ cent.

Liverpool Markets.

By Steamer Vanderbilt to June 2 P. M.

The COTTON market closed with some little activity, and prices of all kinds are quite as dear as last week. The buying for speculation and export has been all in the good middling and better qualities of American. The sales were estimated at 5,000 bales. There is a better feeling in the Manchester market, both for YARNS and CLOTHS, and a trifling advance has been asked, which, though not obtained, shows an improvement on last week. Buyers are willing to give the prices of last week for all kinds of CLOTH. The improvement is partly attributable to the advices from India, but more immediately through the progress which has been made in the short time movement, and the consequent decrease in productive. Stockport has now joined the short time movement for one month, and besides the looms thus partially stopped in the District, it is estimated that at least 5,000 looms have been wholly stopped, either through the poverty of the owners and adverse trade, or through failures. In YARNS there has been a good demand for 40's mule for India, which is firmer in price. For Germany and the Mediterranean there is but little demand, and the stoppage of looms has occasioned a quieter market for some trade YARNS.

The GRAIN market has ruled very dull this morning; we had a few buyers of wheat from the midland counties, but scarcely any from the Yorkshire side, and with a cessation of Irish demand for the moment, sales in anything beyond retail quantity could not be made, without submitting to a decline of 2d. ₱ bushel, which was conceded upon American parcels ex-quay, and the several lots of Danish on board ship just arrived; holders in general, however, were not disposed to press sales at this reduction. Of farmers' WHEAT very few samples appeared for sale to-day, and being held firmly on some what higher terms, little was disposed of. FLOUR is rather neglected to day, and is obtainable at 6d. to 1s. ₱ sack and barrel less money. BARLEY 2d. ₱ bushel cheaper, with a slow inquiry. PEASE steady, but little doing in them. OATS support their value, and OATMEAL is taken to a moderate extent at an improvement of 6d. ₱ load. INDIAN CORN is not pressed on the market; the stock is now in comparatively small compass; still, with a limited inquiry, prices tend somewhat easier: yellow American, 39s. to 39s 6d.; mixed, 38s. 9d. to 39s.; white, 40s. to 40s. 6d. ₱ 490 lbs.

China Markets.

By Overland Mail, April 15.

At HONG KONG there is little doing in the way of business. COTTON, small sales at, for Bengal, $9 50@$9 75; and Bombay, $10@$10 75 ₱ picul. COTTON YARN—High numbers are wanted. Nos. 16 to 24, $26; Nos. 28 to 32, $24@$25; Nos. 38 to 42, $42@$44. SHIRTINGS there has been but little inquiry for. Grays, 6¼ catties, $2 05@$2 10; Nail Rod IRON, $4; LEAD, $3 75; TIN PLATES, $10@$10 50.

RICE has been in considerable demand, and prices keep high, owing to the continuance of dry weather. The quotation is $3 90@$3 20.

I could borrow from at any time and one to whom I was perfectly willing to lend; he was punctual in meeting his engagements of that kind; during last October and September his whiskers were as long as I had ever seen them—rather more bushy than in the daguerreotype; a person at first sight of the doctor would say he was round-shouldered, from a habit of stooping acquired in working over the operating chair; this inclination of the shoulders is common to dentists who work over the operating chair; he wore very thick-soled boots; on the Tuesday prior to his death, the Doctor called to my office, and said he would want $300 on the first of February to make up the balance in meeting a note; on Thursday he met me, and said he would want the money on the following Monday; he was a changeable man, some days very lively and others the contrary, depending on how he felt; he walked with his head a little inclined, looking at the pavement; the doctor told me he had made arrangements to go to Europe this Spring.

Q.—Do you know that Mrs. Cunningham had made arrangements to go to Europe this Spring? A.—Mrs. Cunningham asked me last Winter if I knew of a good school where she could put her children; for that she and Augusta were going to Europe this Spring; had heard her speak of it as early as the Spring before; along in 1856 the Doctor and she spoke frequently of going to Europe—the Doctor, Mrs. Cunningham and Augusta; in the Spring of 1856, when she took the house, they fitted it up very nicely; since Doctor Burdell's death I have been often in the front room, third story; there is a small oval window opening from that into a dark bedroom, between the front room and back-room; I have tried it and could see through that window anything going on in the front room; when the Doctor was angry with a person, no matter whether he was relative, friend, or foe, he would say anything to injure them; he would be very friendly afterwards; he was what I call a two-faced man; in conversation with me, he has never said anything derogatory of Mrs. Cunningham; he always spoke in the highest terms of her, and he was a man that never spoke well of a lady except she deserved it very well; I have heard him speak very highly of Miss Augusta; he said Mrs. Cunningham was a smart woman, who attended to her own business, and that she was worth a good deal of property; that he had seen the papers; he always introduced her to his friends.

Cross examined—My attention was called to the window between the front room and the small room, from the circumstance of Mary Donohue swearing that the window looked into the back room; the Doctor never told me that any papers were signed in the settlement of the suits; he said they were settled; the Doctor was a man who would say anything of another behind his back, and although I was on good terms with him, I do not know but he may have spoken of me; I suppose he has made me as much a confidant as any of his acquaintances; I have been acquainted with Mrs. Cunningham and her family since 1855; I have been accustomed to visit her and her daughters, and my relations are friendly with them; I have given Mrs. Cunningham all the information I possessed, to show that Dr. Burdell was here from the 25th to the 28th of October, because I believe as was here; I have visited that family as I have any other ladies of my acquaintance, and nothing more than that; I have taken the oldest daughter into society, believing her to be a lady, as I believe her still; there has been a rumor that I have been engaged to Miss Augusta; this is not so, and I have no more interest in this case than any other gentleman here, beyond eliciting the truth, for I believe a great deal that is untrue has been said about them.

Q.—How as to the Doctor's whiskers? A.—They were thick on the chin and about his mouth, not thin on the sides of the face; the impression on looking at him first would be that he had a very heavy beard; on the week of his death it was dyed blacker than I have ever known it; so black did it appear when in the coffin, that I might have been puzzled to recognize him; his declarations that he would never marry any one, I considered nothing but habit; in the Doctor's conversation about going to Europe, in October, he did not say who he was going to take with him; he had told me frequently before; was as intimate with the Doctor in 1855 as in 1856; he told me that his invariable rule for ten years was to spend the month of August out of town.

Q.—Were you in the house No. 31 Bond-street on the day of the murder? A.—I was all over the house; I was a good deal of the time in the room where the Doctor was killed; I was there when the body was stripped; I looked into the room as I went up stairs to see Mrs. Cunningham; Dr. Main met me below and said Mrs. Cunningham and daughters were up stairs fainting, and I had better go up there; I did so, and after putting Mrs. Cunningham on the bed came down again; I generally make the entries in my book on the day the work is done; sometimes I do not do it till after a day or two; I can't tell anything about my work except by the book; I was never a partner of Dr. Burdell; I have receipts from the Doctor for $7,000 since 1854; I went to the Broadway Theatre once with Dr. Burdell, in the Winter of 1855–'56; I went with Ellen, and he with Mrs. Cunningham; that is the only place of public amusement that I know of his going with her during that Winter; I heard him say he had gone other times with her; Mrs. Cunningham does not owe me any money, to my knowledge; she has borrowed money from me on several occasions; never much at a time—not over $10; I have fixed Mr. Barlow's teeth more than once, but not more than twice; the first time was on Sunday; I don't know who was present then; Dr. Burdell was never in but once when I was fixing Mr. Barlow's teeth; the only way I remember any difference between these times was the Doctor's presence.

Re-direct Examination—When the Doctor said he would never marry, his general expression was: "I am not a marrying man;" when I went there the day after the Doctor's murder, and went up stairs, I found Miss Augusta sitting on a trunk, crying; Helen had just come out of a fainting fit, and Mrs. Cunningham was helpless on the bed; I went up some time after and found them in the same condition.

The counsel for the claimant offered to prove the declarations of Mrs. Cunningham as to her marriage to Dr. Burdell at the time.

Mr. Tilden objected.

Objection sustained.

Mrs. Ann Eliza Taylor, wife of Elias Taylor, of Herkimer, (a former witness,) was called to prove that Mr. Elias Taylor was at their house about three weeks after the death of her daughter, which happened on the 3d of October.

Mr. Edwards (counsel for the contestants) said that as they had not formally rested they would, at this stage, call Miss Demis Hubbard.

Dr. Dean objected, contending that the other side had rested, with the exception of a few specified reservations.

The Court decided to admit the witness to testify.

The counsel for the claimant still urged their objections, calling it an unfair procedure, and claimed that the Court, as a matter of discretion, should exclude the witness.

Court—They would not say they rested if they entered the rest for them, and therefore I cannot exclude the witness.

Mr. Edwards—We intended to examine this witness yesterday morning, but she was not here, and so we will examine her at the first opportunity. Dr. Roberts has stated things in his evidence which are untrue, and we should like to have the witness examined. You know well what connection she has in this case.

Court—I think I should hear them. I entered the rest for them.

Mr. Dean—I think it will make a great difference in the time occupied.

EVIDENCE OF MISS DEMIS HUBBARD, DOCTOR BURDELL'S COUSIN.

I reside at No. 126 West Twenty-Eighth-street; am twenty-three years of age; am first cousin to the late Doctor Harvey Burdell.

Q.—Did Harvey Burdell ever promise you that he would not get married until you got married?

Counsel for claimant—We object.

Mr. Edwards—I put the question on account of something that Augusta Cunningham says in her testimony; she was asked, "What reason did he give why he would not get married?" She replied, "He said he had promised his cousin, Miss Hubbard, that he would not get married before she did."

Mr. Dean—That is to contradict the testimony of Augusta, and that cannot be done unless you can prove the Doctor did not say that to Augusta. There are three objections to the question: first, it is leading in form; second, it is collateral; third, the truth or falsity of the Doctor's statements cannot be inquired into.

Mr. Edwards—We claim a right to find out from this witness if Dr. Burdell ever made such a promise.

Court—I do not think the evidence is inadmissible.

The witness, on being asked the question, before the Court had directed her not to answer, did say, "No, Sir."

Mr. Tilden claimed that the fact of Dr. Burdell's having or not having said so would be important to the case, and therefore should be admitted.

The question was then put as follows:

Q.—How far has Dr. Burdell ever made any promises to you about his not getting married?

Counsel for Claimant—We object.

Court—I think that is objectionable.

Mr. Edwards—Then we withdraw the witness if your Honor excludes that question.

Mr. Tilden, to his associates, in a low voice—No, no.

Q.—State whether you ever saw that paper before? A.—I have; [the paper was the release of the house No. 31 Bond-street by Mrs. Cunningham,] it was the Sunday before the Doctor's decease; I saw it at Mrs. Graham's, No. 910 Broadway; the Doctor told me when he got it; he said that on the Saturday night before Mrs. Cunningham signed it; he received it that Saturday night; he said she had had it in her possession some time, and that they had some difficulty, and Augusta told him to go and get his dinner, and when he came back her mother would sign the paper; he said he was going to Brooklyn to show it to Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Frazer; he was going to keep it about him all the time; he dare not leave it in the room for fear Mrs. Cunningham would get it; then he asked me if I would not keep it; I told him I would.

Cross-examined—I wrote Mrs. Cunningham a letter once—never more; I received a letter from Mr. Phelan while I was at No. 31 Bond-street.

Q.—Did you receive this letter? [The counsel handed the witness an anonymous letter.] A.—No—I think I never received this letter.

Q.—Do you know the handwriting? [Question objected to. Allowed.] A.—I could not swear to the handwriting; I do not know who wrote that letter; I do not know the handwriting; it looks like Mrs. Cunningham's handwriting; it looks like hers, but I can't say that it is.

Q.—Do you judge it to be hers or not? A.—I would not like to say it is, or is not.

Q.—Did you receive that letter? [A second anonymous letter was here handed the witness.] A.—No, Sir—nor do I know the handwriting; the letter you now handed me is not my handwriting; I know Mr. Phelan's handwriting.

Q.—Is that his handwriting? A.—I can't tell merely by looking at the envelope; my name was Demis Verst; I saw Dr. Burdell for half an hour on the Sunday previous to his death; it was between twelve and one o'clock; I saw him on Wednesday and Friday; I saw him on Friday between two and three o'clock; I was at his office once on Friday; I stayed there three-quarters of an hour; I saw a tall gentleman there, Mrs. Cunningham, Mr. Stansbury, and others; I don't remember seeing Dr. Blaisdell there; I did not see Dr. Burdell that evening, anywhere; I never saw Dr. Blaisdell, to know him, till after the murder; I know Dr. Spicer; I have known him since last August; I first saw him then; I first knew him at Sackett's Harbor; I knew him up to the time I left there; I know Dr. Kimball, of Sackett's Harbor.

Mr. Edwards wished to reexamine the witness as to other points, which was objected to, as nothing new had been elicited on the cross-examination.

MARCUS B. BUTLER RECALLED.

I am in the Public Administrator's office; I examined the papers of Dr. Burdell, and found all his bills and important papers filed and well arranged.

Cross-examined—I found his name on his bills written Burdell, and also Berdell.

Mr. Edwards—I wish to bring a witness to show that the present claimant has been tried for the murder of Dr. Harvey Burdell and acquitted.

Objected and excluded.

EVIDENCE OF N. CROCHERON.

I keep the Philadelphia House in Philadelphia; I am fifty years of age; I kept that house last year, and have for over a year past; I know David M. Grant, a former witness; I knew him when he stopped at my house; it was from the latter part of May, 1856, till October; I know his reputation for truth and veracity; it is very bad; all who have had business with him, or know him at all, said it was bad; I have known him for fifteen years; hnt had no business with him till the 20th of May, 1856: I would not believe him under oath.

Cross-examined—I have heard John L. Hamilton speak against the character of Grant; he resides in Buffalo, and spoke to me about it last October; he said Grant tried to cheat him—lied to him; took property and sold it, that he had no right to, for he (Hamilton) had a mortgage of it; I cannot name any one else who I have heard speak against him, except this Potter, who was examined yesterday.

Re-direct examination—Q.—Have you heard Mr. Wright, of New-Jersey, speak about him? A.—I have: Mr. Wright told Mr. Grant that he was a liar to his face.

Re-cross-examined—This was at my house; Mr. Grant did not deny the charge; Mr. Wright said he would have Grant strung up.

EVIDENCE OF EDWIN H. STONE.

I reside at the Lafarge House; keep the books; am twenty years old; I was clerk of the Lafarge House last Fall; by turning to the cash book of the Hotel on the 31st day of October, I see Dr. Burdell's bill was paid up to that day; Dr. Burdell next began to take his meals on the 23d of next month; he always paid up his bills when he left, and then when he returned, opened his account again.

Cross-examined—We do not make any deduction when a man is absent for a day or two—not even when a man is absent a week; Dr Burdell paid $3 a week for his board; if he had any friends with him we put it in the bill; dinner was one dollar; other extras were also put in the bill; I don't know that he ever had any wine; there are other entries as follows; "28th of November, Dr. Burdell $16." "30th December, Dr. Burdell $23." Men sometimes pay before they leave, and sometimes after they do; the payments are put down in the cash book on the date of the payment; Dr. Burdell usually paid when he went away.

EVIDENCE OF MRS. CATHARINE DENNISON.

I reside in Brooklyn, No. 4 Carroll place; I am the wife of Theodore W. Dennisen; I was acquainted with Dr. Burdell over twenty years; I first saw the claimant, Mrs. Cunningham, a year ago last Fall, at 31 Bond-street; I was invited to see a cousin of the Doctor there who was sick, but I did not become acquainted with her till last Fall; I have had conversation with Dr. Burdell about Mrs. Cunningham; he spoke of her in the first place as being a very fine woman, a very able woman, and having a very fine family; this was before I ever saw her; he said he had been out with her; after he got so he traveled with her she paid her own expenses; he spoke of her last Summer as being a very fine lady, that she was going to move, to take her family and go into another house; with one exception he always spoke favorably of her; then he spoke about her listening to everything he said and watching him; he said she was then listening to him at the parlor door; he walked cautiously to the door and opened it, but she was not there; on Monday, before the Doctor's death I last saw the Doctor; I saw him on the stairs as I went in; he said Demis Hubbard was there; I went into the front parlor and Mrs. Cunningham came in; the Doctor came in afterwards and fixed the bracket; the Doctor spoke about an ambrotype he had taken; Mrs. Cunningham then said the girls had it up stairs; he asked her to go up and get it; we all went up stairs to the Doctor's room; I then had some conversation with him about a daguerreotype, but I wanted a better one and asked him where his double-cased ambrotype was; he said it was in his secretary; that he had all his daguerreotypes stolen; she said that everything that was stolen was laid to her, that she had stolen a likeness of him and then stole the case, &c.. I told him he was not looking well; he said he was out late the night before, and when he came in the door was locked; she said, "Harvey, the door was not locked, it only opened hard;" he said, "Yes, it was locked;" she went to his tool-case and was looking over his instruments; he said, "Let them alone;" she made no reply, but kept on; I said, "what are you doing?" she said, "I am looking for a pin;" she then went up to the Doctor and got him to pin her dress together on her breast; he said, "It looks suspicious when a woman could not keep her dress together;" the Doctor was not at our house late the night before—no later than 7 o'clock—but at that interview on Monday I noticed that the Doctor appeared very agreeable—more so than usual; I was at the party on the 14th of January; I saw the Doctor that night in his own rooms and in the parlor; I had a conversation with him; he said that afternoon, when he saw me, "Oh, I thought you were not coming;" I said, "I have brought Mrs. Cunningham some flowers;" he asked me if I was going home; I said I was going to Great Jones-street; he walked over to that street with me; on the way we conversed about the party; he said he was not going to the party; he had no clothes to wear; I asked him why he did not get himself some; he said he was not able; he seemed to be pleasant that night; he always spoke very kindly of Mrs. Cunningham and her family; he said she was a good mother and brought her children up well.

Q.—Do you know anything about an engagement of marriage between them? A.—Mrs. Cunningham told me before his death she was engaged to be married to him, but wanted me to keep it a secret; he spoke to me about going to Europe the present Summer; it was between the first of January and last of February; I asked him if he would take me with him; he said he would, if I would leave my children; he said he was going to take a lady with him, as gentlemen always fared better when they had a lady with them; Mrs. Cunningham never told me she was going to Europe; the Doctor paid me for the naturnl flowers that I took over to Mrs. Cunningham for the party; he did not sell on me on New Year's last; it was the first time he omitted it; I saw the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham together the day after the party; he opened the parlor door and told her he was going down to the bank, and he wanted her to send any one who called to see him up to Dr. Smith; she said she would do her best; I saw the Doctor the Sunday after New-Year's at my house, and the week after at No. 31 Bond-st.; a gentleman from Nicaragua was present.

The cross-examination elicited nothing new.

EVIDENCE OF MR. WM. A. BEECHER.

I am a brother of Rev. Mr. Beecher, of Saratoga Springs; live in New-York; Dr. Burdell brought a check of $60, to pay the bill of Mrs. Cunningham's daughter, then at my brother's school.

No cross-examination.

EVIDENCE OF MR. DANIEL R. TAYLOR.

I am a lawyer; my office is at No. 229 Broadway; I am 29 years old; was employed in the suit last Fall, Warner vs. Griffin, for the defence: Dr. Burdell was a witness in that case; I first spoke to you (Mr. Dean) about it; that case was called for the morning of the 27th of October; it was then adjourned till next day, as the defendant was not ready; I believe the trial did not actually begin till after the election: I saw the Doctor over here at the Court before the cause was tried, but am not able to say what particular day it was; Dr. Burdell was interested in the case.

Cross-examined—Nothing was done on Tuesday when the case was called, except to put it off rather indefinitely; my impression is that a long case was taken up on Monday, and was not finished till after Tuesday, so it had precedence over our case.

Adjourned till Monday morning at ten o'clock.

SUPERIOR COURT—GENERAL TERM.

Before Full Bench.

DECISIONS.

Jas. R. McGee vs. Robert Stewart, et al.—Complaint dismissed, with costs.

Elizabeth R. Blydenburgh vs. John B. Borst.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Jas. Maguire vs. The New-York and Harlem Railroad Company.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

Jas. Lovell vs. John Orser, Sheriff.—Judgment affirmed, with costs.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—June 13.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

THE FRENCH EXTRADITION CASE.

The Northern Railway of France vs. Charles Carpentier et al.—Some time since we gave a notice of an application which was made to have Auguste Parot discharged from the custody of the Sheriff. The adjourned argument was continued on Saturday.

Previous to the argument Mr. Marsh, for the Sheriff, objected to the affidavits which Mr. Townshend had given notice he would present, on the ground that they were only cumulative. His objection was overruled.

Mr. Spilthom, for the prisoner, read an affidavit of Mr. Townshend stating that Marshal Rynders had Parot in his custody, and held him on the authority of the United States, and that the prisoners were detained by no other authority. When deponent learned that the prisoner was in the Sheriff's custody, he was told that it was by Mr. Murrogh's orders. Deponent had never seen the warrant for the extradition of Greelet.

Mr. Marrogh read the affidavit of Marshal Rynders, stating, that in pursuance of an order from the Secretary, Greelet had been sent to France. Mr. Murrogh read an order of Commissioner Betts, authorizing the Marshal to take charge of Parot.

Mr. Galbraith claimed that the discharge of the prisoner from the custody of the United States, freed him from confinement, and that his subsequent arrest was illegal.

His Honor took the papers, and will render his decision shortly.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

Before Hon. Recorder Smith.

Recorder SMITH and Judge RUSSELL were both on the bench on Saturday to pass sentence on prisoners convicted before them. The following were sentenced:

James Bowen, for stealing wheat, State Prison two years.

Henry G. Feksier, for an attempt to commit a rape on his servant, Eliza Faber. State Prison two years.

Mathew Conlan, who pleaded guilty to forgery in the fourth degree, in passing counterfeit money. State Prison, two years.

Patrick Geraghty, for mayhem, in biting off the nose of James Lynch in a drunken fight, was allowed to go at large, the Court considering that Lynch was as much to blame as Geraghty.

Samuel Jones alias Moore, for robbing a Long Islander named Sydney Martin, at a den in Water-street. Five years in State Prison.

Charles Macomber, the man who bought four bottles of Kellinger's lineament at as many different druggists in the Eighth-avenue, paying for them with forged $5 bills on the Buffalo City Bank, and receiving good change, was sent to the State Prison for five years.

COURT OF SPECIAL SESSIONS.—June 13.

Before Justices Osborne and Connolly.

The prisoners' fold, in the corner of the Court-room, was filled with black sheep on Saturday. They were, as a general thing, less ragged and squalid in their appearance than usual, and several of them had an exceedingly genteel appearance.

The first prisoner brought to the bar was John Kane, arraigned on a charge of assault and battery committed on the person of Mary McDonald. Mary was going along Fourth-street by the Parade Ground on Thursday, in broad daylight, when this prisoner came up and spoke to her; she told him to go away, and he kept walking with her, and finally struck her and knocked her down.

Judge Osborne—What have you got to say to this, Kane?

Prisoner—I took her for another woman.

His father pleaded hard for his discharge. He was a hard-working mechanic in the Ninth Ward, he said. Toe Judge asked him if he knew his son had been locked up before. He knew it, but it was unjustly.

Judge Connolly—He's something of a rowdy, I guess. This was a decent married woman. If we let such men off, our wives and daughters are liable to be insulted in the street daily. He was sent to the City Prison for 60 days, and fined $25.

James Watts and Henry McManus were brought up on the instance of one of the conductors of the Eighth-avenue cars, who testified that they got into the car which he had charge of, June 9, and commenced carrying on, and when he remonstrated, struck him in the face with a whip, tore his clothes and injured him considerably. They were found guilty, but judgment was suspended at the request of the complainant, "but if you're caught here again," said the Judge, "we'll sentence you for this assault." They were not very rough-looking men, and promised not to be caught again.

Edward Nugent, John Mansfield and Thomas Downey were brought up on affidavits of John Wirth and James Harvey, charged with riotous conduct. It was alleged that on the night of June 7 they came to the dance-house kept by John Wirth, were quarrelsome and were ejected; that they then collected a crowd and commenced stoning the house, which was situated on Fifth-avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth streets. The complainant, a German, said, "They fired the stones same as snow." Judge OSBORNE said the trouble was that the parties were not fully identified. The prisoners were acquitted.

Judge Osborne—What do you say to this, boy?

Prisoner—A boy told me he found the board afloat in the dock.

Judge—O, yes. Guilty, House of Refuge.

The complaint against Edward Lynch, for an assault and battery on June 10, was withdrawn by Walter Walsh, who had preferred the charge.

Henry Seymour and Francis Quigley, tried for beating Guigin, the Chinaman, in a brutal manner, were found guilty, and sentence suspended.

Francis Caraber, a Fourth Ward Policeman, with his face a good deal scratched, appeared to prosecute Mark Gorham for an assault upon him while in the discharge of his duty. The prisoner was drunk at the time, and the officer requested that sentence might be suspended. He was found guilty and permitted to go.

The ubiquitous John Brown was sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months. He had stolen a silver watch and brass chain, value $17, from Lewis L. Walker, No. 96 Greenwich-street. It appeared that he was in the habit of going around to lodging houses and lodging in the same room with some one else, for the purpose of stealing from them. The larceny in this case was committed in this way.

John Gill, too, who had beaten a woman named Theresa Gehegan, was discharged at her request. "Go," said Judge Osborne, "but don't you touch her again." The first part of this advice was followed with alacrity. He went immediately.

Fabina Hoffman and Catharine McDonald, stole a pair of boots from James Reilly, shoemaker. The woman had been before the Court three times before.

The Judge asked the man where he got those boots, which were found in his possession.

"I never stole nothing in my life, Judge," said he. They were sent up for three months. "All right," said Catharine, as she went off into the prison. "All right," echoed the Judge, "Why did not you plead guilty then, and save us the trouble of examining witnesses? I'm going to look after these second and third offences hereafter."

Mary Lenahan and Mary Ann Kinney had both been here before. They went into the complainant's store and stole some corn beef worth 10 cents a pound. The counsel said one of them had five children.

Judge Osborne—I don't believe these stories about children. A woman here the other day said she had three children, and come to find out she had buried them all. Penitentiary for three months.

Samuel Wilson, a boy with a head of doubtful phrenological developement in the region of the moral sentiments, had stolen a clothes-basket from Eliza Moran, No. 27 Rose-street; the Judge asked him what he had to say. "A man gave it to me." "House of Refuge," said the Judge. He was 19 years old.

Mike Rafferty stole a bunk bill from Michael Corcoran, No. 42 Prince-street. He was suspected of thieving, a trap was laid for him and he was caught in the act.

Counsel—Here's his brother, Sir.

Judge—O, I suppose he knows him.

His brother gave him a splendid recommendation. He said he'd reform.

Judge—Well, we're disposed to try him.

Guilty, judgment suspended.

Jacob Silver charged with embezzlement was remanded.

Ignius Kuntz and John Scheniger, two Germans charged with mischief, were not very malicious looking individuals. They had loosed the basement of No. 49 Bowery from Robert C. Voorhees. A dispossessing warrant had been issued against them, and it was alleged before leaving the premises that they, on the 16th of March, injured the building purposely by tearing the paper from the walls, taking out the range, &c.; committing damages to the amount of $250. The case was postponed till Tuesday, when the Judges will render their decision.

Henry Grensell accused Adam Amman and John Guiree, alias Grammun, with assault and battery. It seems Greneell wanted to buy a horse from Amman. He was trying the horse, and some dispute arose concerning his treatment of the animal; and a row ensued, in which each claimed that the other was the aggressor. The prisoners were found guilty, and fined $10 each.

Permin Faulkhaber, charged with assault and battery, was discharged. It appeared, that with some friends about four weeks ago, he went into a German dance house, No. 80 West-street. He had a dispute with one of the girls, and while he was drinking some lager beer, at about 11 o'clock, Catharine Knack, proprietress of the place, coming out of her bed-room at the sound of the disturbance, took it into her head that was behind the counter, and struck him with it, when he let fly the glass he was drinking from and struck her in the eye, knocking her down. The blame was evidently hers in commencing the affray. Counsel pleaded for conviction, urging that it was unmanly to strike a woman. "Suppose it was your wife, Judge." The Judge was of opinion that it was not a supposable case. The Court disagreed concerning the judgment that should be rendered, and the defendant was discharged.

James G. Smith, who keeps a liquor store on the corner of Oliver and Water streets, complained of the house near by on Water-street. Frederick Kauffmann was the proprietor. Witnesses testified that the upper part was let to prostitutes, who were a nuisance to the neighborhood. A woman, Ellen Sampson, in that house, ran out and caught men, who were passing, around the neck. One woman there exposed her person indecently. The case was adjourned till Tuesday.

The case of Thomas Tuomey, charged with assault with a carving knife with intent to kill, was sent to the Court of General Sessions for trial.

William McAffee, charged with assault and battery, was discharged.

TALLOW—About 15,000 lbs. prime brought 11c.@11¼c. ₰ lb.

TEAS—Continue in lively request, especially such as have arrived recently, as full and buoyant prices. The tare on tea in the original packages, so long a source of trouble and disagreement among importers, jobbers, and dealers in this City, is henceforward to be determined by the following standard, which the majority of the trade approve of:

RULES FOR THE REGULATION AND ADJUSTMENT OF TARES UPON TEAS—Adopted by the Importers and Traders, to be retarded from the date hereof as binding upon all classes engaged in the trade.

First—It shall be the duty of the importer or receiver to have three packages of all chops of Tea of less than one hundred, and five packages of all chops of more than one hundred opened, and carefully tared by a sworn weigher, a regular return thereof made, (observing the usual custom with reference to fractions.)

Second—The return shall specify the cargo, shipping mark, and numbers of the chop tared, and where there are two or more numbers, some of each shall be opened to the extent required.

Third—The tare shall be made, in all cases, before the Teas are weighed.

Fourth—A copy of the return shall be furnished to the buyer when the chops are divided and the original retained, and signed on the by the seller for purposes of reference. When the entire chops are sold, the original may be delivered with the invoice, or copies, at the option of the seller.

WHISKY—Sales of 400 bbls. Ohio and Prison were reported to day, at 34c ₰ gallon.

FREIGHTS—Exhibited no improvement. For Liverpool—Cotton, 3s @3s. 6d. ₰ bale; Flour, 5d.@9d. ₰ bbl.; Grain, 2d.@2½d. ₰ bushel; Beef, 6d.@1s. ₰ tierce; Resin, 5d.@7d. ₰ bbl.; and Heavy Goods, 7s. 6d.@12s. 6d. ₰ ton. For other ports, proportionate quotations. The latest charters have been: A ship, from Antwerp River to Venice, 650 hhds. Tobacco, at 40s.; ship Enterprise, for Valparaiso, Callao, and intermediate ports, 500,000 feet Lumber, $11; a ship, from Liverpool to Calcutta, 25s.; and back to Liverpool, £4 5s.; a ship, from Rio to London, Deal, £4 5s.; two from St. John, N. New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, MONDAY, JUNE 15 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The United States mail steamship Vanderbilt, from Havre on the 2d and Southampton on the 3d inst., arrived at this port early yesterday morning. The news, which is four days later, is not important. We learn from Madrid that negotiations in relation to the Spanish-Mexican dispute have taken an unfavorable turn, and apprehensions of a war are once more revived. It is again asserted that, in consequence of his notorious encouragement of the slave trade, Gen. CONCHA has been recalled from Havana. Emeutes of a political nature had occurred in Brussels and other Belgian towns, but they do not seem to have been of much importance. At latest dates order was restored. The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE had visited Queen VICTORIA at Osborne. As the yacht which carried his Highness passed Cowes, she was saluted by the U. S. frigate Susquehanna with 21 guns. The British frigate Cyclops had left Sheerness for the purpose of taking soundings of the line along which it is proposed the great Atlantic Telegraph cable should be laid down. Details of late China news, which we publish in another part of this morning's issue, will be found very interesting.

The Canadian screw steamship North America has arrived at Quebec, bringing the same news as that brought by the Vanderbilt at this port.

Havana dates to the 10th inst. have been received. The Sugar market is reported quiet and firm. There is no political news.

Ohio is prolific of Fugitive-Slave troubles. On Saturday, four deputy U. S. Marshals arrested two slaves in Cincinnati—a man and his wife—when one of the marshals was stabbed dangerously by the negro, and another of the marshals shot the negro four times in the abdomen. The fugitives were then secured, though it is probable the man will die.

There appears to have been no ground for the statement that there was a case of yellow fever in town on Saturday. The bark Mary passed Quarantine on Friday, the Captain having declared that there was no sickness on board, and none at the port whence she sailed—Trinidad de Cuba. The cook, on arriving at his boarding place in town, however, said there was a man sick on board with yellow fever, who was concealed when the Health Officer boarded her. The mate's affidavit is in direct contradiction of the cook's story. The sick man, to whom some mystery seems to attach, has disappeared with the Captain. The vessel has been towed back to Quarantine. The brig Lucy Haywood, on board of which there had been four deaths during her stay at Gonaives, and on her passage hither, arrived with the balance of her crew well; but she was sent to the lower anchorage. The health of the City never was better; the number of deaths last week was only 353, 19 less than the week previous.

The Brooklyn Board of Health on Saturday last adopted a resolution requiring all vessels to obtain a permit from that Board before landing cargo in Brooklyn. This applies to vessels from Domestic, as well as Foreign Ports.

The New-Orleans Board of Health have issued a notice for the establishment of a very rigid Quarantine after the 15th inst. All vessels coming from ports beyond the United States, south of New-Orleans, where fever prevails, are to be detained in the river thirty days.

There was a collision in the Eleventh Ward on Saturday night between some members of the Municipal and Metropolitan Police. Two of the Mayor's men were arrested and locked up in the Station-house of the Metropolitan, from which they were afterwards released on bail,—one of them suffering from a severe cut on the head received by a blow from a club while resisting an arrest it seems. Late in the night, Metropolitan Policeman LAFLIN was assailed on his post by a gang of men, one of whom thrust an ice-picker into his abdomen, a portion of the instrument was broken off and remained in the wound for some time. A citizen named TASS, while proceeding through Avenue C, about the same time, was struck on the head with a stone, and had his skull fractured. Both men were doing well last night. Their assailants are not known. The affair created a great excitement in the Ward, and Policemen from other Wards were called in to prevent any further violation of the public peace. Steps were taken last night to maintain quiet, but there was no attempt to renew the difficulty. First Lieutenant BENNETT, of the Eighteenth Ward, and thirteen men, declared on Saturday for the Metropolitan Commissioners, and are now established in a new Station-house in East Twenty-second-street.

General WILLIAM WALKER will arrive in this City on Tuesday evening at pier No. 1. The Committee of Arrangements have decided to fire one hundred guns on the pier, and give him a formal reception in front of the City Hall, on which occasion Judge PHILLIPS will deliver "the welcome."

NEWARK, Sunday, June 14.

MONSIEUR MORAT, accompanied by JAMES COMPTON and ABRAM VAN WINKLE, of this city, made a balloon-ascension on Friday evening, about 6¾ o'clock, passing over New-York City, in the direction of Harlem, and along the line of the New-Haven Railroad, where it is reported the balloon was seen at dark.

COMPTON and VAN WINKLE are young men about 18 years of age, most respectably connected, and as they had engaged to telegraph their safety from the nearest telegraph station to the point where they descended, their friends are much alarmed as to their safety. MONS. MORAT is a young man, but has made a great number of ascensions, and is considered careful and prudent. It was his design to pass over into Connecticut or Massachusetts.

In another part of the paper will be found Prof. MORAT's journal of his voyage, by which it will be seen that the Professor and friends, whom the Newarkers are in such a bad away about, had a very comfortable time of it.

We continue to report the evidence before the Surrogate in the matter of the Burdell estate. On Saturday, the contestants were allowed to reopen, and call DENIS HUBBARD, but nothing important was elicited from her. The claimant proceeded with the examination of Dr. ROBERTS, and called Mrs. DENISON to prove the intimate relations between Dr. BURDELL and Mrs. CUNNINGHAM. The cash-book of the Lafarge Hotel shows Dr. BURDELL to have paid his bill there up to the 31st of October last, and to have resumed again on the 23d of the following month.

DANIEL D. CONOVER, Esq., Ex-President of the Councilmen, having received the appointment of Street Commissioner from Governor KING, attempted on Saturday to take the office, but Deputy CHARLES TURNER, who claims to be the present incumbent under the new Charter, refused to surrender.

The argument in the motion to discharge AUGUSTE PAROT from arrest was finished before Judge MITCHELL on Saturday. No decision was rendered.

JOHN NEWTON, son of Com. NEWTON, of the United States Navy, and formerly a midshipman in the United States Navy, died on Saturday last in Brooklyn, from injuries received by falling in the street.

The negro SALTERS, who was so unprovokedly shot in Thomas-street a few nights since by some strange men, died last night at the New-York Hospital.

RAGANS has been held to bail upon three separate complaints, for violating the Quarantine laws.

The Staten Islanders are having their attention called to the law of 1855, making the county liable for property destroyed by mobs, and the Sheriff personally liable if he neglects proper precautions in times of threatened danger. The Quarantine authorities have called the attention of the Sheriff to threats against the old Quarantine.

The Kansas Policy of the Times.

Our abstemious neighbor of the philosophic Tribune seems to have but little faith in the political integrity which pretends to be proof against the seductions of a dinner-party. He probably regards the story of Andrew Marvel and his leg of mutton as a myth to be accepted into authentic history only when the fabled legends of Hercules shall have been indorsed by the Gradgrinds of the public schools; and his reading of Shakespeare doubtless runs "In the midst of cakes and ale who can be virtuous?" For, while he assures us that he has never supposed the TIMES could be bought for a price, he finds an origin for what he chooses to regard as our halting policy, in the alleged fact that the Editor of the TIMES did one day "dine and wine" with certain unbelieving heathen of the Democratic faith.

It is really hardly worth while to controvert such a proposition as this, which, after all, can hardly have been seriously advanced; but, as we agree with our neigbbor in his notion that "short accounts make long friends" we avail ourselves of this opportunity to set forth a "short account" of the aforesaid Kansas policy once more, and as we devoutly trust, finally and once for all.

The "Kansas Question" was the leading topic of the Presidential conflict of 1856. The Free-State settlers of that Territory, upon whom the most atrocious wrongs had been perpetrated with the sanction, or at least, the connivance, of the Administration of Mr. President PIERCE, and who had hoped that a result of the contest for the Chief Magistracy in favor of Republican principles, and the Republican Party, would insure them prompt and perfect justice, found themselves disappointed in their hopes by the victory of the Democracy. It was but natural that before the heats of the conflict had begun to cool, and its passions to subside, multitudes of those who had opposed the election of Mr. BUCHANAN should regard the accession of that gentleman to the Presidency as involving the continuance of the deplorable state of things which had made the name of Kansas so miserably famous throughout the world. But to those who analyzed more calmly the conditions of Mr. BUCHANAN's success, and watched more narrowly the first indications of his policy, soon became convinced that whether as a President desiring to leave an honorable, a pacific, and a memorable reputation behind him, or a Democratic leader anxious for the preservation and prosperity of his party, it was in the highest degree improbable that Mr. BUCHANAN would lend any countenance to the schemes of the unprincipled politicians who had sought to annihilate American liberty, and that self-respect of American freemen which is the safeguard of liberty upon the plains of Kansas. For it was clear that a revival of anarchy in Kansas under his administration, or a violent and fraudulent usurpation of that Territory by the Slave-Power, could only result in the utter demoralization and destruction of the Democratic Party, and in the complete extinction of Mr. BUCHANAN's claims to present consideration or future renown. That Kansas was to be permitted to vindicate the undoubted wish of her people, and to take her place in the confederacy as a Free-State, soon became apparent to many persons whose devotion to the principles of American liberality may nevertheless, as we cannot but take the liberty to believe, have been quite as sincere as if they had persuaded themselves in the face of all facts and all arguments, that the administration of Mr. BUCHANAN meant to carry out the foolish and infamous policy of President PIERCE and Secretary DAVIS.

Such being the intentions of the Government, what course should the settlers in Kansas pursue? It was to be expected, of course, that men whose rights had been so violently invaded, and whose manliest instincts had been roused into such righteous indignation by the accomplices of the departing President, should be slow to manifest any degree of confidence in the disposition of his successor. But the case was plainly put before the leaders of the people of Kansas. The Government as a Democratic Administration, cannot possibly be expected to disown in toto the acts of its predecessor. The Executive and the Congress of the United States have sanctioned the usurping Legislature of Kansas as a legal body. But the Government will see to it that in the practical organization of the Territory the voice of the people shall be heard, and the will of the people executed. What, then, were the people of Kansas to do? Clearly two lines of policy lay before them for their adoption. They could either waive the past, and go into the election for a Constitutional Convention, conscious of their strength and determined to do themselves such justice as was pacifically obtainable, or they could repudiate the whole machinery of authority in Kansas, and continue to regard themselves as standing in an attitude hostile to the Administration, and prepared for a renewal of civil war. Either of these courses might fairly be considered an intelligent and consistent course. The TIMES and the National Era advised the adoption of the former; the Tribune and other papers advised the adoption of the latter course. What course has been actually adopted in Kansas? Certainly not the course proposed by the Tribune; nor does the Tribune continue to propose the course upon which it originally insisted. The Free-State men of Kansas, or at least a considerable proportion of them propose to abstain from voting in the election of members of the Constitutional Convention, with the intention of voting when the Constitution framed by that Convention shall be submitted bona fide to the people for ratification. This policy the Tribune advocates, and we hold it ourselves to be preferable to a blind policy of abstention, which involves but does not contemplate an ultimate resort to arms. But let it be observed that in voting upon the Constitution drawn up by the Convention, the people of Kansas will virtually recognize that Convention. Why not, therefore, begin where we proposed to end? We have a strong prejudice in favor of downright and manly proceedings, and we should infinitely prefer, therefore, that our fellow-citizens in Kansas should be advised and moved to accept their position frankly—or to repudiate it frankly. Our neighbor of the Tribune, some time since, called upon the people of Kansas to exhibit the spirit of the martyrs. We can understand such a call; but let it be remembered that the martyrs were apt to show their spirit less by words than by deeds—less by protests than by performance. We are heartily of the mind of the African Chief at his palaver with the Portuguese: "If you mean talk, talk—if you mean fight, fight!" But to talk about fighting is one degree more a weariness to the flesh than to fight about talking.

The upshot of our "Kansas policy," then, is simply this: We wish the voice of Kansas to be fairly heard. We believe that the people of Kansas mean to make of that Territory a Free State. We are convinced that the Administration is very far from being hostile to such a consummation. In our wish, our belief, and our conviction, we may be entirely wrong and profoundly deceived; but we submit that in advocating the practical policy which seems to us a natural consequence of our wish, our belief, and our conviction, we do not legitimately subject ourselves to the imputation of indifference to the cause of freedom, or to the suspicion of venality under temptation, whether that temptation roll vulgarly up to us in the plebian shape of palpable hard dollars, or more subtly insinuate itself under the dainty disguise of roast ducks and champagne, civil speeches and flavory compliments.

If the Tribune listens with incredulous ears to propositions savoring so strongly of a more than Spartan virtue, we have only to say that the constitutions of men are as different as their characters, and that some excessively enpeptic mortals do find it possible to digest a good dinner without sance of their own words, and to enjoy an exchange of opinions without a barter of convictions.

SANTA ANNA'S LAST MANIFESTO.—From his retreat at Carthagena, where time must hang heavy on his hands, ANTONIO LOPEZ DE SANTA ANNA, the exiled Mexican Dictator, has issued another manifesto. We received the document by the last mail from Aspinwall; we do not apologize, in the least, for its non-publication in our columns. The opinions of SANTA ANNA, when he really controlled the destinies of the Mexican Republic, were of importance; but now, he does not even represent a faction in the country from which he was so ignominiously banished. We should not have noticed this address at all were it not for the rumor, generally credited, that, in the event of carry out her projected invasion of Mexico, Spain intended to use the services of General SANTA ANNA. It may be that, inspired by the hopes of this new ambition, the ex-dictator has given publication to his opinions upon affairs in general and the condition of Mexico in particular. He has, however, only succeeded in making a pitiful exhibition of his own failing powers, and of that inordinate vanity and misguided ambition which, throughout life, have been the ruling traits of his character. We have seldom waded through a more tedious document or a mass of more unmitigated trash than this last—we trust it may be the last—of SANTA ANNA's harangues. He is candid, and doubtless sincere, when he says that reform has never been part of his political faith, and it is a pity he is not equally candid when he disclaims any unworthy ambition, and talks about having "voluntarily relinquished the pleasures of power when he might have silenced the cry of the Revolution." Every one who has the slightest acquaintance with Mexican history knows perfectly well how SANTA ANNA clung to the Dictatorship he had usurped long after he had alienated the affections of the people, and that at the last, when he was forced to fly from the country he had so wretchedly misgoverned, he could scarcely command sufficient aid for the protection of his person. Every one knows that, in impotent imitation of LOUIS NAPOLEON, he attempted to overturn the Republic and establish an Empire upon its ruins. For this disloyalty alone his punishment was most justly merited. And now, when with eager impatience he accepts the proffered bribe which the enemies of his country offer for his services, how dare this imbecile old man come before the world and prate about his patriotism! His harangue is filled with the most sickening egotism and self-adulation. With unblushing impudence he speaks of his own mighty "achievements," of his "triumphs," of his "popularity," of the "victorious laurels" that in times past "crowned his temples."

In alluding to the condition of Mexican affairs, he, of course, sides with Spain in the pending dispute, and with the Church in its rebellion against the State. He denounces the new Constitution to which the vast majority of the people have sworn obedience, nor does he lose the opportunity of riding once more his old hobby and giving vent to his abhorence of a free press and free institutions. The manifesto, altogether, and apart from its absurd egotism, is very ill-timed. It appears at a moment when Mexico, under the enlightened and popular administration of President COMONFORT, has emerged with honor from a severe domestic struggle. The Liberal cause in the Republic never achieved a more decided victory than in the promulgation of the new Constitution, and in the signal triumph of the Government over its enemies, lay and clerical. It is reaping its reward now in the strong support of the people. SANTA ANNA, if he has any self-respect left, had better remain sub silentio in his New-Granadian retreat, and, with unenviable reflections upon his past career as companions of his solitude, enjoy, if he can, his ill-gotten gains. As a public man he is dead, and must forever remain dead to his country and the world. He has always had the reputation of being shrewd and sagacious, and therefore, in common charity, we are willing to regard his last manifesto as nothing more than a peevish ebullition of age.

A GUBERNATORIAL COUP D'ETAT.—On Saturday last at 1 o'clock P. M. a bomb-shell suddenly exploded in the office of the Street Commissioner, which created great consternation and excitement in the neighborhood of City Hall. It was projected from Albany, and it came in the form of a command from Gov. KING to the acting Commissioner, instructing him to deliver up the papers and books of the office to Mr. D. D. CONOVER, whom His Excellency had appointed as the successor to the late incumbent. The Deputy refused, point-blank, to obey the Governor's demands, and holds on to his trust with a fearlessness of the higher powers which must be extremely gratifying to Mayor WOOD, if to no one else. His Honor was calculating on getting possession of the Street Commissioner's office without a struggle, and the assumption of the right of appointment by the Governor came upon him like a thunderbolt. All that can be safely said of the matter at present is that it will furnish profitable jobs for the gentlemen of the legal profession, and prove a new case of embarrassment for the Court of Appeals.

THE SONORA FILLIBUSTERS.—However much we may regret the fate of the unfortunate men who recently invaded Sonora, we cannot censure the Mexican officials for their conduct in the matter. They may have been unnecessarily harsh—and, indeed, the idea of taking some sixty men out in squads of five and ten, and shooting them in cold blood, is shocking to our sensibilities—but the provocation was greater than the punishment. Many of the fillibusters had borne high characters, and some of them had filled responsible positions in California. HENRY A. CRABB himself was a gentleman of ability and distinction. They may have been misled—let us do them every justice, and suppose they were misled, by false representations, to embark upon this fatal enterprise. Let us suppose they acted under the belief that they would be supported by a large native party—still, if we judge them solely by their own acts, there is no excuse, no palliation for their crime. It is difficult to understand the infatuation by which they were possessed. They seem to have rushed blindly to their destruction. When they found the whole population against them, why did not they retrace their steps? Did these ninety men think that, without ammunition or provisions—without any aid from within, or the probability of receiving any reinforcements from without, they could conquer the Mexican Republic? Their designs are fully proved by overt acts. Some of their number had the prudence to retire from the desperate undertaking before the fatal passage of the Colorado was made. The others, ninety in number, pressed on under the leadership of HENRY A. CRABB. They commenced hostilities at Cavorca by shooting a Mexican officer who sought a parley, and when, after two days' fighting, they were still allowed an opportunity to retreat, they refused to do so. Their object, wild as it may seem, was conquest; and for this they had declared, and were ready to wage war to the utmost of their ability. Their crime was a deliberate invasion of a country with which their own was at peace—a sister-Republic, whose citizens, free as themselves, had no tyrant to dethrone, and who neither asked nor desired foreign assistance in the management of their domestic affairs. Our fillibusters (for fillibusters they must be considered) thought that the weakness of a rich frontier State offered too good an opportunity to be neglected. They had only their own aggrandizement in view. They did not invade Sonora under any pretext of right, or excuse of expediency, but as freebooters, to kill, burn, destroy, and lay waste. They forfeited the protection of their own Government, and we do not see, therefore, that their friends can make out any case for retaliation against the Government of Mexico. The punishment of HENRY A. CRABB and his associates was severe, but just. To acts of such swift retribution Mexico is prompted by the instinct of self-preservation. We, of all people in the world, should not blame her for guarding, with jealous care, the integrity of her soil. We may, and do earnestly desire to, witness the legitimate expansion of American principles and American institutions, but, if our Continent can only be "Americanized" by such expeditions as those organized under WALKER and CRABB, it would be far better for our national honor, prosperity, and greatness, that the United States should remain forever within their present boundaries.

BOGUS ALARM ABOUT THE YELLOW FEVER.—Some of our cotemporaries are pursuing a very dangerous policy in respect to the sanitary condition of the City, and are doing all they can to spread the belief among our distant and rural neighbors, that New-York is already filled with yellow fever, cholera, and every imaginable pestilence; and that the cause of these devastating diseases is the filthy condition of our streets. The object of circulating these false reports is, of course, to inspire our City authorities with a wholesome terror which shall stir them up to doing something for the purification of the streets. But our City authorities are as indifferent to all such appeals as the brown-stone statue of WASHINGTON in front of the City Hall. Besides, they have eyes and they know perfectly well what the real facts are in regard to the streets; they know, too, that New-York was never in a more healthy condition than it is at this moment, and that the weekly reports of the City Inspector exhibit a gratifying decrease in the bills of mortality. But the distant readers of our City papers do not know these facts, and when the Tribune publishes a report, as it did on Saturday, with alarming type and inflammatory adjectives, to the effect that yellow fever had already made its appearance among us, the consequences must be naturally most disastrous to the interests of the City. There was not the slightest foundation for the reports published by the Tribune, except in the vague story of a black cook who had been discharged from a vessel which arrived here some days since. A vessel arrived from Gonaives on Friday last, whose Captain died of the fever before she left her port, and part of whose crew died on her passage. But, on her arrival, she was entirely free from disease; and the Health Officer, in conformity with the law, ordered her into Quarantine at the lower anchorage, where she must remain thirty days.

The streets are very dirty, it is true, and no expense should be spared in putting them in a cleanly condition; but to suppose that we are in the slightest danger of a pestilence from the accumulations of street mud, is in the highest degree preposterous. They were in a much worse condition all of last Summer, during the reign of the never-to-be-forgotten EBLING; but the City was free from disease, while the yellow fever was raging fearfully at the Narrows, the cleanest, breeziest, and most beautiful spot on Earth, and the victims of pestilence were the occupants of elegant villas, who lived embowered among roses and honey-suckles and in the midst of green lawns. During all the while that the inhabitants of that most charming of sea-side retreats were suffering from the yellow fever, the denizens of our closely packed and filthy streets were entirely free from the visitations of any infectious disease.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Gen. Walker's Expected Visit to New-York—Private Dinner Given by Tennesseeans—Walker's Speech—General News.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 14, 1857.

GEN. WALKER will leave for New-York on Monday, where preparations are making for another expedition to Nicaragua. He has had no intercourse with officials here, and did not bring his matters before the President.

The private dinner which he attended last evening was given by Tennesseeans chiefly—among them Senator JONES, Major HEISS, Major ARNOLD HARRIS and others. Senator JONES presided, assisted by Col. BURNETT, of New-York. Eighteen or twenty gentlemen were present. Col. WALTERS was present. Gen. WALKER's remarks, in reply to a friendly greeting by Senator JONES in behalf of the company, were substantially that he preferred the approbation of the people to that of the Government, and that he was confident that he had the mass of the people in favor of his movement. [FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Sunday, June 14.

Mr. GARRISON, the contractor for carrying the mails between New Orleans and Vera Cruz, assures the Post Office Department that the service will positively commence on the 1st day of July next.

The New Orleans mails of Monday last have been received. The newspapers contain nothing of importance.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 13, 1857.

The arrival of General WALKER and Staff here has created no little excitement and curiosity to see the great chief. Every one is surprised at the small figure of the man, and his mild, modest, and even bashful demeanor, while it is generally conceded that he is a remarkable man, of great talent and firmness. Capt. C. J. FAYSOUX, the hero of the schooner Granada, also attracts great attention, and being even smaller than Gen. WALKER, creates still greater astonishment. He is very boyish looking, with a fine, sparkling, black eye, and is more prepossessing than WALKER, though quite as modest and retiring.

It is said that General WALKER had an interview last night with the President, but the nature of it has not transpired.

Captain FAYSOUX paid his devoirs to the Secretary of the Navy this morning, but no conversation was had about Nicaragua. The following officers are also here who were with General WALKER—General HORNSBY, Col. WATERS of the Cavalry, Col. LOCKRIDGE, and Col. C. R. WHEAT.

A private dinner will be given to General WALKER this evening at 6 o'clock, by a number of distinguished citizens of Washington, after which he will be serenaded by the Marine Band. General WALKER will leave here on Monday afternoon, stay over night in Philadelphia, and arrive in New York Tuesday evening.

The steam frigate Minnesota will sail on the 24th inst., with Mr. REED, Minister to China, for the Celestial Empire.

The steamer Water Witch arrived to-day at the Washington Navy Yard, with the stores and four guns for the Cumberland.

The weather is intensely hot to-day, and we have had a succession of heavy rains for the last ten days.

Major BEN. MCCULLOCH does not aspire to be a candidate for the United States Senate, in opposition to General HOUSTON, as has been stated, though the Major has already served in the State Senate of Texas. UNO.

News from Havana.

NEW-ORLEANS, Friday, June 12.

The steamship Philadelphia, from New-York via Havana, has arrived here, with the California mails, and Havana dates of the 9th inst. The news from Havana is unimportant. Sugars were inactive.

CHARLESTON, Saturday June 13.

The sugar market was quiet and firm. The stock at Havana and Matanzas amounted to three hundred and thirty thousand boxes. Molasses was quiet, and the stock was reduced to six thousand hogsheads. Freights and exchange were dull. The island was generally healthy.

Fugitive Slaves Arrested in Cincinnati.

ONE OF THE U. S. MARSHALS STABBED BY A SLAVE, ETC.

CINCINNATI, Saturday, June 13.

This forenoon, as four of the U. S. Deputy Marshals were arresting a fugitive slave and his wife, the slave stabbed one of them, Mr. J. C. ELLIOTT, with a long sword knife, upon which another of the marshals shot the slave in the abdomen four times. The negroes were then taken into custody. The marshal's wound is dangerous, and the negro's is considered to be mortal. The affray occurred in a room in Vine-street, near the Post-Office, where the negroes were secreted.

Trouble with the Santee and Sioux Indians.

ST. LOUIS, Saturday, June 13.

Sir GEORGE GORE and suite returned here yesterday from a year's hunting expedition at the head waters of the Missouri. They report that the country was never in a worse condition respecting the Indians. The Santees and Sioux were committing atrocities against the whites, and since the removal of the troops from Forts Randall and Lookout the Indians in the neighborhood have assumed a hostile attitude. A party of troops had marched against the Santees.

News from Liberia.

BOSTON, Saturday, June 13.

The schooner Antelope, at this port from Monrovia, brings Liberia dates to the 5th ult. The extra session of the Legislature had adjourned, after admitting Cape Palmas as a County of the Republic on terms of equality with Mesurado, Bassa and Sinoe. The Cape Palmas difficulties with the natives had been settled. There was some scarcity of food, but the new rice crop was promising.

Fire at Paterson, N. J.

PATERSON, N. J., Saturday, June 13.

A fire broke out this morning about 2 o'clock, in the steam saw and planing establishment belonging to Messrs. VAN WINKLE and JOHNSON, and totally consumed it. The loss is estimated at $20,000, and there is no insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated from the furnace.

Execution of Ward, the Murderer.

TOLEDO, Friday, June 12.

RETURN J. M. WARD, who was convicted of the murder of his wife at Sylvania, Ohio, in February last, was hung in this city to-day. He confessed to the murder of two men and his wife.

Amusements.

WALLACK'S THEATRE.—Mr. MOSS, the polite, efficient, and popular Treasurer of this Theatre, takes his annual benefit to-night. He has provided for the occasion an entertainment of rare attractiveness, and has secured the services of a host of first-class talent. Provided the world does not suffer demolition by the comet before to-morrow night, there will be no better entertainment in the city than that offered by Mr. MOSS. The comedy of the "Belle's Stratagem" is the opening piece; followed by Mr. WALCOT's farce of "One Coat for Two Suits." Mr. WALLACK, Mr. BLAKE, Mr. WALCOT, Mr. LESTER, Mr. HOLLAND, &c., assist.

NIBLO'S GARDEN.—The highly successful comic pantomime of "Bianco," and "Nicodemus" are on the bills for to-night.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—The latest novelty "Life's Troubled Tides," and the burlesque of "Variety," are announced here for to-night.

BURTON'S THEATRE.—Mr. and Mrs. J. W. FLORENCE enter on the second week of their engagement to-night, playing in three pieces, "The Irish Lion," "Twice Married," and "Mischievous Annie."

BARNUM'S MUSEUM.—The stirring domestic drama of "Fraud and its Victims" will be played here during the week. In the afternoon, the "Two Galley Slaves" and other entertainments.

NATIONAL THEATRE.—"The Knight of Arva; or Connor the Rash;" "Pongo the Intelligent Ape," and "Wept of the Wish-ton-Wish," are the three attractive pieces at this house to-night.

BUCKLEY'S SERENADERS.—This is the last week of the season at this popular place of amusement. The burlesque of "Aladdin," and plentiful Minstrelsy, are the features of to-night's performance.

KANSAS.

Political Aspects.

[OUR SPECIAL KANSAS CORRESPONDENCE.]

LECOMPTON, K. T., Wednesday June 3, 1857.

In my last letter I intimated my intention to write somewhat at length, should the increased importance of the topics seem to demand it, on the condition of political feeling in this Territory, the relative positions and prospects of our different political parties, and the terms on which, substantially, a definitive adjustment of the difficulties in which the Territory has been involved for the last three years is likely to be effected.

The proximity of the period which has been assigned for the election of delegates to the Constitutional Convention which is to meet in September next, and the renewed interest in political affairs which has been thereby excited, warrant me in considering that the time has now arrived for redeeming my promise.

First, then, as to the state of political feeling:

Up to a very recent period—in fact, since Governor WALKER's arrival—the whole political sentiment of the Territory might be formulated into two expressions: Pro-Slavery and Abolition. The bitter and brutal warfare waged between the two parties who ranged themselves under these respective titles—is all matter of public history, familiar to everybody, and universally regretted. It is with the present condition and tendency of popular feeling I am now to deal; and that, I assure you, is a far more agreeable subject.

One of the most cheering premonitions of a new and peaceful era in the affairs of Kansas is furnished in the fact, patent to the most casual observer, that the two parties heretofore existing are being rapidly disintegrated, that the old political distinctions are gradually losing prominence, and that ultra notions, from a state of belligerent opposition, are rapidly softening down into a reciprocal concession of the principle of agreeing to differ. Here in Lecompton, for instance, which is regarded as the very focus of the Pro-Slavery party, there is a growing liberality of sentiment and regard for honest opposing opinion, which augurs the most happy results.

And over in Lawrence, which is considered as the concentration of the Abolition movement, there are to be found many discreet, sensible, moderate, upright and reliable men, from whose action in the approaching crisis the most favorable results are anticipated. And so it is all over the Territory.

Next, as to the relative strength and prospects of the different political parties. We are no longer divided, as I have said, into Pro-Slavery and Anti-Slavery—in other words, we no longer rally bodily under one or other of the cries of "Topeka Constitution," or "Bogus Legislature." Between these immense extremes has sprung up a numerous, powerful, intelligent, and determined middle party—a juste milieu, as the French would say—not absolutely committed to either and not absolutely opposed to either—a party which will vote against the Pro-Slavery party for a Free State and beat them, and vote against the Anti-Slavery party in recognition of and obedience to the laws, and beat them, likewise. And this is the party with whom the settlement of the Kansas question must ultimately rest.

It is true the leaders of the ultra Anti-Slavery men may hope, by calling spasmodic meetings, as they did in Lawrence a couple of days ago, to resist the assessors appointed under the Territorial laws, to fix the value of the taxable property of the citizens, and by issuing calls for the assembling of the Topeka Legislature, which will never meet, or if does meet, will do nothing—like the King of France, who (to quote hackneyism)—

"With fifty thousand men, Marched up the hill, and then marched down again;"

or, if it does meet, and does anything involving force, will, I apprehend, find General HARNEY "bobbing around" there in a most significant manner. It is true, I repeat, these people may resort to such means to arrest the dissolution, not of a party, but of the merest rump of a party, already in articulo mortis, but they will find, too late, perhaps, that they were very grievously mistaken. And so the extreme Pro-Slavery party may work themselves into a passion, and threaten, but they already begin to feel that the time for all that is now past, and that they must either calmly resign themselves to the tide of popular sentiment, or, like Mrs. Partington, when, mounted on pattens, she undertook with an old mop to sweep away the Atlantic, make themselves ridiculous by attempting to resist it.

The better sense of the community will not suffer itself to be influenced by effete cant, nor to be driven by senseless hectoring. That is now settled beyond peradventure.

Lastly, as to the basis on which the pacification of Kansas is to be effected. On that subject there can hardly be a difference of opinion among sensible men. The right of the people, the whole people, and nothing but the people of Kansas, to determine the character of the Constitution under which they are to live, through the agency of a free and honest exercise of the franchise privilege in voting for or against its adoption, is a right beyond question or denial, and must and will be extended to every man entitled to it, when the time for deciding the matter arrives. So Governor WALKER, backed by the instructions of the President of the United States and his Cabinet, has declared, and such is the trust in Governor WALKER's word, that nobody here attempts to doubt it. Here, then, is an immense point gained, namely, the restoration of public confidence, in the prospect of a speedy settlement of all difficulties, and an unswerving reliance on the firmness, determination and capacity of the Executive to secure the desired end.

Evidences of this change are accumulating every day. Many of the counties in which, owing either to the lassitude of the former executive functionaries, or to the inherent difficulty of the thing itself, no census had been taken, and therefore no election of Delegates to the Constitutional Convention provided for, have recently requested leave to elect Delegates notwithstanding.

A few days ago applications were made by the citizens of Anderson, Franklin, Wise, Breckinridge, and Madison Counties, setting forth the fact that no census had been taken in their respective counties, and that they earnestly desired to be represented in the Constitutional Convention. The letter which Governor WALKER wrote in reply, I have been enabled to see, and it was to this effect:

"You cannot desire more earnestly than I do that the whole people of the Territory shall be fairly represented in the body which is about to assemble for the purpose of framing a Constitution. If it were in my power, consistently with the law, to assign you a proper representation, I would not hesitate to do so.

Under the condition of things which you represent, inasmuch as peculiar circumstances have prevented the timely organization of your county and the proper performance of the legal prerequisites for representation in the Convention, I have no doubt the Convention itself will be inclined to admit such Delegates as the qualified voters of your county may elect. I therefore suggest to you the propriety of holding an election at the time prescribed by law, registering the names of the legal voters at the time of taking the vote. You will observe that the legal apportionment already made, the representative number is 154 legal voters for every Delegate.

It is proper for me to say that the Convention alone will have power to admit such delegates as you may elect. I have no power to do more than express my conviction of the justice of your claim to be represented in that body."

Such is the present aspect of affairs in this Territory, so far as I, who stand perfectly unbiased, can discover. That Kansas is now on the eve of a new but peaceful excitement which is to end in a thorough settlement of the questions at present dividing public opinion is obvious, and that that settlement will be in accordance with the will of a majority—the vast majority, I venture to say—of all her "actual, bona fide, resident settlers," is my warmest hope and highest expectation.

An item or two in conclusion. Gov. AIKEN, the distinguished member of Congress from Charleston, South Carolina, arrived here to day, and has expressed the most decided approval of Gov. WALKER's Inaugural, and that fact, doubtless, will have a most tranquilizing effect upon the few violent Pro-Slavery leaders who hold out against it.

It is now ascertained, I believe, that a large majority, even of the registered voters, are in favor of making Kansas a Free State, but, as the Democrats says, conservative and constitutional; and such, there is no doubt, will be the final result.

The more uncompromising of the leaders of the Anti-Slavery Party will, in all likelihood, oppose the plan of the inaugural, but before the vote comes on, the great mass of the voters, even of that party, upon the question of adopting or rejecting the Constitution will vote, notwithstanding all efforts to keep them from the polls.

It is supposed that a constitution will be framed and submitted to the vote of the whole people next Fall, and accompanying it, a separate clause to decide, in the same election, and by the same voters, whether Kansas shall be a Slave State or a Free State. On such an issue the majority for a Free State, it is believed, will be not less than five to one, which, I take it, ought to be deemed sufficiently satisfactory.

Convention of Registered Voters at Quindaro.

From the Quindaro Chindowan.

On Wednesday morning, June 3, there was a call for a Mass Convention of the "legal" voters in Quindaro, under the registration. The whole number consists of P. T. CONLEY, E. D. BUCK and JAMES TOWN. At 9 o'clock, the "sovereigns" began to assemble. It was understood that the Chairman would have to furnish the champagne for the convention, for being "legal" voters they must live up to the requirements of the Sons of the Blue Lodge.

At 9¼ o'clock two of the three voters had convened. Mr. COLBY nominated Mr. BUCK for the Chair and pulled from his pocket the proxy of Mr. TODD, by which he seconded the motion. By his own vote and proxy he carried the motion and Mr. BUCK was duly conducted to the Chair, when he thanked the Convention for the distinguished honor conferred upon him.

A motion to go into an election by ballot for a delegate to the Constitutional Convention was made and carried. There being no regular ballot-box prepared, a cigar-box was substituted, which was duly guarded whilst the ballots were being deposited. THOMAS WEBB, of Missouri, was put in nomination, and strongly indorsed in speeches as being eminently qualified to represent the views of the Convention. Upon counting the votes polled, it was ascertained that Mr. WEBB was unanimously elected.

A committee, consisting of Mr. TODD, was chosen to draught resolutions expressive of the sentiments of the meeting. The following is among the most important resolutions prepared:

Resolved, That the President, by his appointments in this Territory, has merited the gratitude of the "National Democracy," and we would most cordially recommend for any vacancy which may occur in the Federal offices of the Territory, the appointment of CHARLES FUGET, who, by his bravery in scalping a supposed rebel to our wholesome laws, contributed largely to the support and glory of the Administration, and consequent extension of Slavery over our fair domain.

The Convention concluding that enough had been accomplished for one session, took a recess, during which the Chairman ordered the champagne, and the two legal voters present proceeded to refresh themselves with the sparkling beverage.

After disposing of this interesting portion of business before them, they adjourned sine die, and both of them mounted one very small, very thin and very long-eared mule, and dispersed in the direction of Lecompton.

Personal.

THEODORE PARKER expresses his sentiments freely when occasion offers. A Boston paper having ridiculed the proceedings of an Abolition anniversary gathering, Mr. PARKER says that "if men control a newspaper who have only the instincts of adventurers and the principles of pimps—who expect to live by public lewdness—you must also expect them to lau,h at a black man because they think it witty; and to sneer at men too far above them for sympathy; you must expect such to lie—consciously, unmitigatedly and malignantly—and strike such as they think have no friends and cannot strike back again."

Mr. STRAKOSCH should feel greatly flattered by the "satisfactory" certificate of character he received lately in Detroit. While on a musical tour, the distinguished artist found a license necessary, and got it, thus:

"I do here Grant M. STRAKOSH A License and as all things is satisfactory. P. GALLAGHER
DETROIT, June 6, 1857. Cha'n Com. Lice."

Mrs. PATTEN, the woman who so heroically navigated the clipper Neptune's Car into California, after her husband lost his sight, is now dangerously ill in Boston with typhoid fever—consequent upon the fatigues and exposure incident to the voyage, and her untiring devotion to her husband. Capt. PATTEN has lost both his sight and hearing.

The Probate Court of Middlesex County, Mass. has declared the will of the late J. HUBD, of Malden, invalid, on account of mental alienation. By this will $6,000 was bequeathed to each of the New-England States, as a fund whose proceeds were to be applied to giving premiums for good sugar.

Signor BRIGNOLI was hissed on Wednesday night at the Boston Theatre for not answering an encore and singing his part in a concerted piece, and was indebted to the presence of Miss PHILLIPS on the stage at his appearance, for not being more severely dealt with.

KOHL, the noted traveler, has been in Boston, and has received many attentions. He will remain in that vicinity several weeks, for the purpose of examining the literary treasures contained in the public and private libraries of Boston and Cambridge.

Mme. GAZZANIGA has abandoned her idea of leaving this country for the present, and will sing at Philadelphia in the Fall. It is said she will spend the Summer at Long Branch.

Rev. Mr. SPURGEON concludes not to visit this country at present. His American publishers have forwarded $1,000 as the result of three months' sale of his Sermons here.

Captain NYE, who returned home in the Canada, has recently been making a tour through the most interesting portions of Europe—through France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany.

The man who sued an Eastern Railroad Company for pay for services as lobby agent has received damages to the amount of $648, besides $500 he had before.

Rev. Dr. TYNG has arrived in England in safety. It was his intention to leave for Jerusalem after the 17th of May.

EDWARD EVERETT will deliver the Academical Address to the students of Amherst on class-day, July 1.

FANNY KEMBLE and daughter have left Boston for their Summer retreat in Western Massachusetts.

Rev. Dr. VINTON, of Boston, has been elected Episcopal Bishop of Texas.

CHARLES FENNO HOFFMAN, the poet, now an inmate of the Pennsylvania Insane Asylum, suffers, it is said, under a hallucination of five senses—touch, taste, sight, smell and hearing. A letter from the editor of the Pittsburg Journal says:

"The most distressing indications of his disease are exhibited in his fancies that somebody is touching, or pressing, or pinching him; or that he sees persons and objects which trouble and disturb him. A trace of the aberration is apparent in his reminding me that our last meeting was many more than 16 years ago, and with sudden turn, forgetting the lapse of time, to make a polite inquiry after a young lady's health, as if he had parted with her but yesterday. The casual visitor will fail to detect traces of insanity in Mr. HOFFMAN, but will ordinarily be pleasantly impressed by his elaborate politeness and courtly demeanor. His intervals of perfect tranquillity are rare, but he is as rarely much excited, and never violent."

Rev. S. H. COX is highly indignant at the recent Anti-Slavery action of the Home Missionary Society, and writes a classical scoring thereat. He says:

"The new generation that has been since extemporized into being, and office, and experiments, may not be able to charge their memory with any of it—not so with me! I was defamed for its sake, blasphemed! hated, charged with things that I never did, could prove oblivion and alibi against them; and yet had to bear in my youth the yoke of calumny and infamy forged for my neck by others. But—I have only the more loved the cause and the Society. As to the late innovations, I entirely reprehend them! Woe to their authors, if splitting and bisection are again to result. Festina lente—non repentino—cave et fave—are mottoes that I would commend to them and to the General Assembly. Beware of Rehoboam's policy. He repudiated the counsel of old men, took that of young ones, split Israel—and the chasm was NEVER healed!"

A London correspondent notes the attendance of Mr. DALLAS, the American Minister, at the debates of Parliament, and adds:

"Since he has been amongst us, I think he has hardly missed an important debate, or, indeed, one occasion, either in or out of Parliament, for studying our institutions."

One of Gov. SLADE's school-ma'ams has got into a place out West where the children never heard prayer or preaching. So, one day, when she commenced her school with a prayer, one of the youngsters went home and reported:

"You never did see such a school-marm! She got down on her knees and swore with all her might!"

The following list of Americans was registered at the Banking Office of the American-European Express Company in Paris, to May 28:

J. A Middleton, John Calvill, J. S. Laurey, E. C. Hall. J. M. Fiske and lady, Dr. Moderno, G. H. Tucker, M. D., Dr. D. C. Peters, A. Wetter and lady, C. Ferrero, C. Widdefield, A. C. Hudson, M. Y. Wiswell, Jr., W. H. Davis, of Ohio; O. de Baisawbrie, M. A. Fallen, C. Speck, of Maine.

DROWNED.—OBEDIAH JOHNSON, aged 18 years, was drowned on Saturday by the upsetting of a boat at the foot of Roosevelt-street. The body has not been recovered. The deceased resided at No. 76 Nassau-street, Brooklyn. He was dressed in dark cloth pants, red shirt, and white neck-tie.

Street-Commissioner Conover Attempts to Take Possession—Deputy Turner Won't Surrender.

The Street Commissioner's office was the scene of rather an interesting gathering Saturday noon. DANIEL D. CONOVER, Esq., late President of the Board of Councilmen, made his appearance at the office of the Street Commissioner, in the Hall o Records, bearing in his hand a paper, with Governor KING's signature at the end of it, appointing him, the said D. D. CONOVER, Esq., Street Commissioner, to fill the place of the late JOSEPH S. TAYLOR. Mr. TURNER, the Deputy Superintendent, was taken by surprise—he confessed that he hadn't heard the news, and, in all innocence and good faith, supposed that himself was the incumbent of that office. Mr. CONOVER assured him that the Governor thought otherwise, and had made the appointment accordingly.

He was willing to show Mr. TURNER the opinion of NICHOLAS HILL, Esq., which was to the effect that if the Governor failed to appoint he would fail to do his duty. By this time Aldermen CLANCY and several other members of the Board arrived, flanked by sundry policemen wearing the City stars and caps. The President of the Aldermen, in his capacity of City Father, authorized Mr. TURNER to hold on. When Mr. CONOVER assured him that Mr. TURNER must no hold on, Aldermen WILSON turned the lepel of hi coat over, and discovered the star of a magistrate, by whose authority he commanded Mr. CONOVER to keep himself collected and peaceful, or suffer an arrest. Without arriving at any conclusion of the affair, and without the spilling of any blood, when 6 o'clock came Deputy TURNER shut up the office, and put the key in his pantaloons pocket, where it remained until the hour of going to press.

Deputy TURNER was cordially invited by Mayo WOOD on Thursday to visit his Honor and talk the matter over, but he declined the invitation: on Saturday, with the key in his pocket, he accepted the old invitation.

Whether it will remain a triangular fight—whether Mayor WOOD will go on and appoint, according to his intention, or whether the Deputy will resign into the Mayor's hands the task of getting an injunction, remains but a little longer to be seen.

LAYING OF THE CORNER STONE OF A NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH.—The Corner Stone of the New Catholic Church about to be erected in 23d St., between 6th & 7th Avenues, was laid yesterday with appropriate ceremonies. There were present at the house JAMES B. NICHOLSON Esq. 37 west 23d Street, the Most Rev. the Archbishop the very Rev. Father STORES, V. G, & Fathers DONNELL, CURRAN, McHENRY & LAFONT, the Pastor. From thence they proceeded in procession to the ground, when the following music was sung by the choir of the church, and prayers said by the Archbishop and Priests. Veni Creator, by DIETCH. Te Deum, by LAMBELLOTT; Ave Verum, by GASPARD. The accompaniment was the Alexandre organ.

After the ceremonies had concluded the Archbishop delivered an address. In the course of it he said ST. VINCENT DE PAUL was one who on earth was unknown except by his zeal and devotion to the service of God. He it was who in his ingenious charity invented the idea of establishing the Sisters of Charity, so called, and though he had passed from this world over two hundred years, still no conqueror that ever desolated the earth, no great warrior who ever left the blood-prints of his victories behind him, no man has received more benedictions from the poor, contributed to the elevation of mankind, as the humble Vincent de Paul. He is one of that band whose sons have erected this Church. I need not tell you that a Catholic Church is Catholic all over the world; there are no national doctrines belonging to it, and although all are baptized in the community of our faith, yet every nation upon earth loves to hear the Word of God in that language which he has, lisped in infancy and childhood. We have French Churches, not that they are French except in the sense I have just mentioned; we have also German Churches, and I would to God that there were Churches in which every man on earth could worship in the language he has heard in infancy and childhood.

The Church of St. Vincent de Paul will be in the Roman style of architecture, with two towers and a centre pediment, with the statue of the Saint whose name it bears. The front will be of brown stone, the spires of cast iron, and the sides and rear of brick; the roof will be covered with slate; the inside will be finished in the Corinthian order, with two aisles 33 feet high, and a semi-circular nave 50 feet high; the nave and aisles will be finished in the sanctuary with semi-circular ends, and will have an altar in each, with the sacristies behind it. The basement will be divided to six school rooms and chapel with 400 seats; the church will seat a thousand. The dimensions will be as follows: Outside width 64 feet, length 130 feet, height of front 70 feet, height of spires 145 feet. The probable cost will be about $100,000. The design was furnished by the architect H. ENGLEBERT, and is being carried out under his superintendence. The builder is Mr. JOSEPH M. O'CONNOR.

NO COMET COME.—That Comet failed to keep its engagement. Whether it was the weather that didn't suit it, or whether its fiery tail was not in presentable condition; whether it does n't belong to the class of sensation-mongers, and was alarmed because the TIMES told of so many people who were panic-struck, and so, from consideration of human weakness, restrained itself, and whether it was switched off as it rounded the North Pole, or whether the Great Bear set its teeth into its caudal extremities, and so delayed its passage, we cannot say, because our special reporter, who was on board, has not made his arrival yet; but the Comet didn't come, and the women who washed their children's faces, and kept them dressed in the parlor all day, let them out at night, disappointed and utterly disgusted. It was a relief to a great many superstitious people to find that midnight of Saturday had passed, and we were all safe and sound yet. We have heard of but one sad accident, as the result of the day's excitement. A young man at an early hour in the morning was standing in the parlor of his residence, when a servant on the sidewalk suddenly directed a stream of Croton water in full force against the window just at his back. Our young friend knew instinctively that it was the tail of that Comet come at last, and fell at once upon his knees as the most fitting position in which to receive the coup de grace. The panic soon subsided in a roar of laughter at the expense of the superstitious victim of a Croton Water Comet.

FOR NANTUCKET SOUND.—The U. S. coast survey schooner Bowditch, soon to sail, has on board Mr. MITCHELL's surveying party, who are engaged upon the investigation of tides and currents in their varied relations with physical geography. This new and fruitful field of labor, falling, as it does, peculiarly within the province of a coast survey, has for its object the study of those agencies to whose constant action is due the formation of shoals and sand bars, the natural dredging of channels, the changes in the configuration of the sea coast, as well as the effects following the erection of artificial structures in the sea, and the removal of rocks from channels. It embraces the past, and predicts the future history of our coast. These investigations are conducted by Professor BACHE, the Superintendent of the Coast Survey, who lays down the plan of the work to be filled out and executed by Mr. MITCHELL. This party have just completed an investigation of Hell Gate, and are now about leaving for Nantucket Sound. The examination of New-York Bar will engage their attention later in the season.

BALLOON JOURNAL.—Prof. NURAN furnishes the following report of his late ascension: Left Newark, N. J., at 6½ o'clock P. M. Friday, June 12, wind N. E. by E. When over West Farms took another current E. by N., passed over Hulett's Point, and then took another current E. by S.—came within 5 miles of Southport; then resumed an E. N. E. direction. Anchored at 9 o'clock P. M. at Clinton, Middlesex Co., Conn., distance 125 miles, in 2 hours and 30 minutes. Our greatest height was 8,528 feet—thermometer 51°—velocity of sailing between Southport and Clinton, over the Sound, was about 80 miles an hour, and over the same (Sound) passed two first-class steamers, the Connecticut and the Vanderbilt, leaving them behind in 20 minutes.

☞ A woman was bitten by a mad dog in Sixtieth street, near First-avenue, about 7 o'clock Saturday evening. The dog was pursued and shot dead by Metropolitan Policeman GREEN.

Fires and Alarms.

A fire broke out about 6¾ o'clock on Saturday afternoon, in Taylor's Saloon, No. 508 Broadway. It originated from one of the flues, and was put out quickly. The damage done was trifling.

ALARMS.—The alarm of fire for the Fourth District, at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, was caused by the burning of a chimney in Mercer-street, near Houston. The alarm for the same District about 1 o'clock Sunday morning was caused by the accidental burning of a bundle of straw in the stable of FARRINGTON & Co., No. 79 Bleecker-street. Captains DILKS, of the Fifteenth, HOPKINS, of the Third, and TURNBULL, of the Eighth Precincts, were present, each with a section of men.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock Saturday evening a bed accidentally caught fire in the dwelling house No 58 Leonard-street, and filled the house with a dense smoke. Great consternation prevailed among the inmates who rushed into the street in dismay. Policeman GLASS of the Municipal force rushed into the house and threw the bed into the street, which put an end to the alarm.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

THE LATE CURIOUS CASE OF CHILD-KIDNAPPING—THE CHILD RESTORED TO ITS PARENTS—ARREST OF THE KIDNAPPER—A STRANGE AVOWAL.—It will be remembered that a few days since a child eight months old, belonging to Mr. George Rhode, of No. 15 Avenue A, was stolen from its sister's lap by some unknown woman, and taken away to parts unknown. Mr. Rhode's daughter, aged about 9 years, was sitting on the stoop of her residence on the afternoon in question, with her little brother in her lap. A woman came along, and fondling with the baby a moment, required the little nurse to step into a baker's shop, next door, and buying some crackers, offering a 25 cent. piece with which to pay. The little girl at first declined to go, because she had to hold the baby. The strange woman said: "O, I will take care of the baby," taking the child in her arms at the same time. The little girl then went into the baker's and purchased the cakes. On coming out again, her baby was missing, as was also the woman in whose charge she had left him. She ran wildly about the street, crying loudly, but her search was in vain. She then returned and informed her mother, who renewed the search. The neighbors and the Police were notified, but all inquiries failed to reveal the whereabouts of the stolen child or the kidnapper.

Yesterday Alburtis Fritz, a constable at Stratton-ford, L. I., appeared at the Seventeenth Ward Station-house, with the kidnapped child, who looked well and hearty and not at all discontented at his forced absence from home. Constable Fritz had with him, also, a young woman of 16 years of age, whom he introduced as the person who had stolen the child of Mr. Rhode. Mr. Fritz stated that he found the young woman and child in the vicinity of Flushing under circumstances that convinced him something was wrong, and that on instituting inquiry he became convinced that the child was none other than that stolen from Mr. Rhode, in Avenue C, New-York—an account of which he had seen in the newspapers.

The young woman, on being questioned, did not deny her guilt. She gave her name as Bertha Burkrekell, and that her age was 16 years. She stated that she had been seduced on Long Island, by a man in good circumstances, by whom she had a child, which she immediately made way with. Seeing her seducer a few weeks since, she asked him for aid, stating that she had given birth to a child of which he was father. Her story was treated as doubtful. She was asked, "Where is the child, then?" She replied, "I have it at nurse in New York." "Then show it to me," said the father, "and I will give you the money you ask for." Here the interview ended. Bertha, wishing to obtain possession of the money, promised to come straightway to New-York, resolved to either beg, borrow or steal a child, to show to and convince her seducer. She looked a long while, and in many streets, before she found an opportunity to procure one of suitable age. At length, while in Avenue C, she managed to kidnap the child of Mr. Rhode, in the manner above described.

The child was restored to its overjoyed mother, and Bertha was locked up to await an examination before one of the magistrates.

THE LATE SHOOTING CASE IN THE FIFTH WARD—ANOTHER MURDER.—The negro, Philip Salters, who was shot in the head about two weeks since, while quietly standing in Thomas-street, by some well-dressed strangers, who were passing in a carriage, died of his injuries last evening, at the New-York Hospital.

IMPORTANT ARREST AND RECOVERY OF STOLEN PROPERTY.—Sergeant Banfield, of the Second District Police Court, arrested on the 10th inst., Lamele Dinkelspiel, of No. 21 Delancey-street, on a charge of receiving a quantity of satins valued at $1,500, which had been stolen from the premises of Hickok & Starr, No. 167 Water-street, during last month. Sundry other silks, valued at $3,000, were also found on the premises. From the facts which have been elicited in the preliminary examination of the case, it appears that ten pieces of said satins were found at the factory of Messrs. Duryee, Jaques & Co., who purchased the same of J. Smal & Co., No. 118 Maiden-lane, who either acted as agents for said Dinkelspiel or bought them of said individual; and furthermore, one piece of satin, a portion of the stolen property, was also found in the store of J. Smal & Co. These, together with a large quantity of other goods, were taken to the Jefferson Market Police Court, and deserve the attention and inspection of merchants who have been robbed. Dinkelspiel was held to bail by Justice FLANDREAU in the sum of $3,000 to answer.

Suicides.

A LOVE AFFAIR—SUICIDE AND ANOTHER DEATH.—The Rochester papers give full accounts of two remarkable suicides, one growing out of the other. On Tuesday last a young man named THEODORE M. GANZ, disappointed in love, wrote certain frantic letters to his friends, and then went out to the railroad, laid his head deliberately down on the track, as the express train approached, and was instantly crushed to a jelly. A day or two afterwards Miss MARIA ROHR, the young lady who jilted GANZ, fell ill of anguish on hearing of her lover's dreadful death, and such was her mental suffering, that physicians who were called to attend her considered her case beyond their power, and she continued to approach the crisis of her disease very rapidly. Last night her grief was violent, and she continually accused herself of being the murderer of GANZ, or asked if it was true that she had caused his death. Death released her from her sufferings, but we understood our informant to say that she was removed from her sister's house before she died, on account of the disturbance her outcries caused in the family.

MARIA was about 20 years of age, of a cheerful and happy temperament, much intelligence, and good common education. GANZ was a native of Bavaria, about 25 years of age, and a very exemplary young man. He was expecting his mother, a widow, 65 years of age, to arrive in this country the present Summer. In one of these letters he left, occurs this passage:

"I am insane now, I know, but I am not perfectly unable to think. My eye is neither blinded nor veiled; I can see my future life before me. Hitherto it has been such a one as I once would readily lay open before—before my children, if——; but now, grief and pain are eating away my heart.

I must have some divertisement. There is the intoxicating cup; how long ere I shall be a slave to it? There is—, I cannot mention it!—ever abunned till now. Pure and fine Love has been my guardian angel. She has left me to myself! Well do I know I can live after all that has happened—but how? Friendship—yes, pure friendship, such as you would bestow, could keep my heart until the world regained a shape I could live in; but I see it—I see it now; the green-eyed monster, Jealousy, standing in my way. I could not get happy, and you would become miserable. Dying eyes open themselves wide——. May you never see the tears you caused? May you be happy—may she be happy, as much as she can?"

A SOUTHERN LITERARY MAN DISHEARTENED.—Professor D. BARTON ROSS, author of the Southern Speaker and other class books, attempted to commit suicide in Petersburg, Va., on Thursday, by taking chloroform and stabbing himself in the region of the heart with a clasp knife. He was not dead at 2 o'clock on Friday morning, though little hope is entertained of his recovery. The wound was inflicted while shut up in his room at Powell's Hotel, and when found he was lying on the floor in a pool of blood. On the bed were discovered letters addressed to his friends and wife, indicating disappointment and depression of spirits, and intimating and attributing the intention of taking his life to reverse of fortune, and the non-appreciation of his efforts in the furtherance of Southern literature.

EFFECTS OF INTEMPERANCE.—In Boston, on Thursday, an Englishman 63 years of age, named CHAS. WESTWOOD, was found dead in his lodging room and shop, Doane-street. He was of intemperate habits, and leaves a family, from whom he had been separated a short time on that account. He committed suicide by cutting one of the arteries in his left arm.

No Murder at Beverly, Mass.

BEVERLY, MASS, Friday, June 12, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

The announcement in the TIMES some days since, to the effect that one JOHN MCLEAN was arrested in New-York, charged with being a fugitive from this place, where he was indicted for the murder of Miss MARY NORTON, is, we are informed, entirely erroneous, so far as the committal of such deed, or the arrest of MCLEAN attaches to this township. We would add that said rumor is calculated to reflect upon the unimpeachable character of a gentleman bearing the above name, at this place, in consideration of which a due refutation of the same may be called for.

H. K. W.

Mr. Hendrickson.

HEMPSTEAD, Thursday, June 11.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I saw in your valuable paper of this morning that you represented me, J. S. HENDRICKSON, as being missing from my home on Long Island with a drove of cows, which you will oblige me by correcting the same in your next edition.

J. S. HENDRICKSON,
Supervisor of the Town of Hempstead.

The person missing with cows was, as our files show, not J. S. HENDRICKSON, who is the Supervisor of Hempstead, but HENRY HENDRICKSON. From him we do not know that anything has been heard since his mysterious disappearance.

Marine Matters.

The steamship Ariel, Capt. LUDLOW, sailed yesterday for Southampton, Havre and Bremen, with 150 passengers and $230,000 in specie.

The steamship Washington, Capt. CAVENDY sailed yesterday for Southampton and Bremen, with 75 passengers and $500,000 in specie.

Great Freshets and Destruction of Property.

The recent heavy rains have produced freshets and great destruction of property.

The Dansville (N. Y.) Herald says: "On Stony Brook, about three miles above this village, a man by the name of BURDICK had his house, shop and barn swept away, and carried down stream last night; we have not learned the amount of his loss. D. WHITING, Esq., living in the same vicinity, had part of his house, nearly all his clothing, and provisions, wagons, farming utensils, &c., taken by the resistless waters.

We hear rumors of the finding of a drowned infant in a cradle, in a field a few miles north of us.

The little 'Mud Creek,' at the foot of East Hill, also made considerable of a 'swell,' watering the gardens through which it ran, with a vengeance, inverting some of the vegetables and covering others to the depth of several inches with sand and mud.

Considerable damage has been done at L. SWEET & Co.'s works, at Commonsville, the water completely surrounding and entering their buildings—it being four feet deep in the moulding rooms.

The Herald further says there is scarcely a rod of fence left on some farms on the Canaseraga Flats. Houses have been carried away, with furniture, bedding, etc., the families barely escaping with their lives, some of them being rescued in boats. Trees, three feet through, logs, dirt, almost everything, also obstruct the road.

The Penn Yan Chronicle says: The bridge belonging to the Dresden & Penn Yan Plank Road Company, on Clinton-street, was also carried away, as well as what remained of bridge and abutments of the old bridge on Head-street. All the gardens on the banks of this stream, were also overflowed, and many of them badly damaged. On the Outlet the only dam torn away that we hear of, was that of Ewin's Distillery, which, it is said, will prove a damage to him of nearly or quite $1,000.

The injury to the Crooked Lake Canal was quite extensive. A large break was made in the embankment on the long level near Dresden, some fifty feet in length. In several other places, large bars have been washed into the bed of the canal, which will require bottoming ont before navigation can be resumed. The damage on the next to the Upper Level, would have been serious but for the early and efficient efforts of the Messrs. HOLMES, and their employes, in attending to the waste weir, and other precautions for saving the embankments. The damage to the canal is estimated at $500. We are informed by the contractor that he expects to put it in order for the resumption of navigation during the present week.

The Hornellsville Tribune says: "The Canecadea and Crosby Creeks, by the heavy rain of last Monday night and Tuesday, were swollen to a height nearly equal to that of the June flood of 1855, overflowing some parts of our village, filling many cellars and causing other damage.

More serious results have been experienced on other streams and in other sections of the county. We understand a bridge and also a mill dam were carried away in the town of Freemont.

A railroad culvert was washed away near Whitney's Valley station, which prevented the Buffalo Express from performing its regular trip upon Tuesday evening. We also understand that the New-York and Erie Railroad has sustained considerable damage both East and West; and many fields of grass and grain on the flats have been considerably submerged and more or less injured. Much lumber is also afloat."

Gen. Scott not to be at Bunker Hill.

Gen. SCOTT writes the following letter to Boston, in explanation of his failure to be present this week at the Bunker Hill celebration:

NEW-YORK, Thursday, June 11, 1857.

GENTLEMEN: I had the honor to receive, in due time, your note informing me that you were a Committee on the part of the Massachusetts Legislature, appointed to receive certain high public functionaries and myself, previously invited by the Bunker Hill Monument Association to be present on the occasion of the inauguration of the statute of General WARREN.

Your flattering communication I delayed answering, in the hope (as I have explained to your Sub-Committee) that some favorable change in the health of one of my family might permit me to visit Bunker Hill and the neighboring cities and towns on the approaching occasion of high national interest, but the critical illness that has caused me so much uneasiness, having, in the meantime, rather increased than diminished, I am compelled, at the last moment, to decline the many flattering inducements before me, to visit your noble Commonwealth.

With the highest respect, Gentlemen, I have the honor to remain your obedient servant,

(Signed) WINFIELD SCOTT.

The General was to have been escorted by the National Guard of this City.

Seduction, Abortion and Death—Another Boston Doctor in Trouble.

From the Boston Traveller.

Newburyport was astonnded on Thursday by the development of another of those acts, in which Boston is disgraced as a participant. A young girl, about twenty years of age, daughter of one of our most respected citizens, was seduced by a young man living at Belleville. For the past year he has visited the family, and always received the kindest treatment. A short time since he found the girl was enceinte; and after a number of attempts to get her to leave town, he at last succeeded. Her parents supposed she was in Dover, on a visit, instead of which she was kept in two houses of ill repute in this city. She was afterwards inveigled to Boston, and underwent a surgical operation, was hurried thence to Newburyport, on Wednesday, and on Thursday paid the forfeit of such acts, dying in excruciating agony. Her seducer was arrested, and in default of $2,000 bail, was committed to jail.

Dr. LEWIS DIX, who is charged with having procured the abortion, was arrested in Boston on Friday, and brought before the Police Court. The case was continued to Thursday, and the defendant ordered to find sureties in $4,000 for his appearance at that time. DIX keeps a medical office in Endicott-street.

The name of the individual charged with being the seducer of the deceased young woman, is F. R. RICKASON. The name of the deceased female is EMMA POST

☞ The number of vessels in this port on Saturday was 764, including 30 steamers, 175 ships, 151 barks, 124 brigs, and 284 schooners.

MESSRS. WILLIAM GOODING and JOHN B. PRESTON, the engineers who have been appointed to make surveys of the Illinois River, preparatory to the commencement of improvements in the navigation of that river, will begin operations on the 15th inst.

The undersigned has on hand, and offers for sale, a large assortment of W. F. SHAW'S GAS COOKING and HEATING STOVES, adapted to the wants of large and small families. The peculiar merits of these inventions consist in economy of fuel, cooking being done at less than one-half the expense of any other method, avoiding heating the house or kitchen in warm weather, saving the wear and tear of expensive cooking ranges; doing away with kindling fires, and all the dust, dirt and smoke consequent upon putting a common stove or range in operation. For all kinds of nice cooking, they are unequalled, as the heat can be graduated to any degree, and kept at that point for any desired length of time. These stoves can be used in any house where the City gas is introduced, and from the simplicity of their construction, can be managed more easily than any other stove in use, requiring no particular skill in operating them.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & Co., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, brace and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us, that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

THE ROMANTIC ESTATE.—AT PUBLIC sale, on WEDNESDAY, June 24, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, New York, the extensive park and grounds of Henry Beckett, Esq., situated at Bordentown, New Jersey, formerly the property of Joseph Bonaparte, containing two hundred and thirty-four acres of land. A large and very handsome modern mansion, about sixty feet square, with three story wing and requisite outbuildings, has lately been erected on the most eligible portion of the park, commanding a splendid view of the river Delaware. The house is built in a most substantial manner, handsomely finished throughout, and with all the conveniences of a gentleman's town residence. Its convenient position for travelling is unsurpassed, there being six or seven daily lines of communication between New York and Philadelphia, and branches to the western and northern parts of Pennsylvania, making it peculiarly eligible for a large public institution. The house is handsomely furnished throughout, and the whole of the personal property may be had if desired.—Maps, showing the location and extent, with full particulars, may be had on application to METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF Directors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; to say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.

Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 26th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.

Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; in such case, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 60 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.

Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.

For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.

Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.

It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.

It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1877, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from the 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first days of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 20th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered, (none otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. BOSTON, June 1, 1857.

CONTINENTAL BANK, NEW-YORK, April 4, 1857.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,500,000, TO BE INCREASED TO $2,000,000.—The Board of Director of the Continental Bank, in view of its increasing business, and in pursuance of the authority conferred on them by the articles of association, have unanimously decided to increase the capital stock by an issue of 5,000 additional shares, of $100 each, which shall be subject in all respects to the stipulations, conditions, and limitations in said articles contained and declared with respect to the shares now existing.

The officers of the Bank having been duly authorized by the Board, hereby give notice that in accordance with such decision, and with the said articles, they will open books at their counter, and receive subscriptions on the 15th day of June next, between the hours of 10 o'clock A. M. and 3 o'clock P. M., at the said Bank in the City of New-York, from all persons who shall appear to be registered on that day on the books of the Bank as shareholders in the said Continental Bank, in the proportion of one new share of the increased capital stock at par, to every three shares then held by them respectively.

The amount subscribed, and not paid at the time of subscription, will be required on the 1st day of July next, when certificates will be issued.

Such portion of the additional 5,000 shares as shall not be taken by the shareholders within ten days after the said 15th day of June, will be disposed of for the benefit of the Association.

The transfer books will be closed from the 15th day of June to the (6th) sixth day of July, both inclusive.

MEDICAL.

SANDS' SARSAPARILLA.

For purifying the blood. Thousands have been cured by this preparation, and thousands and tens of thousands may yet be restored to health by its use. Prepared and sold by A. B. & D. SANDS, Druggists, No. 100 Fulton-st., New York.

HELMBOLD'S GENUINE PREPARATION. Highly Concentrated Compound Fluid EXTRACT BUCHU, for all diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Urinary and Sexual Organs.

JOY TO THE AFFLICTED!

It cures diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Obstructions, Female Complaints, Chronic Gonorrhœa, Strictures Gleets, and all diseases arising from excesses and imprudencies in life, NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED SUFFERERS, and removes all improper discharges from the Bladder, Kidneys, or Sexual Organs, whether existing in male or female, from whatever cause they may have originated, and gives health and vigor to the frame, and bloom to the pallid cheek. Debility, brought on by abuse, a most terrible disease, which has brought many of the human family to untimely graves, thus blasting the brilliant hopes of parents, and blighting in the bud the glorious ambition of many a noble youth, can be cured by the use of THIS INFALLIBLE REMEDY, and as a medicine which must benefit everybody from the simple delicate to the confined and despairing invalid, no equal is to be found. If you have contracted the terrible disease, which when once seated in the system, undermines the constitution, sapping the very vital fluids of life, procure the remedy at once.

The Leprous distilment, whose effect
Holds such an enmity with blood of man,
That swift as quicksilver it courses through
The natural gates and alleys of the body,
Curding, like eager droppings into milk,
The thin and wholesome blood.

BEWARE OF QUACK NOSTRUMS AND QUACK DOCTORS

HELMBOLD'S Highly Concentrated Compound FLUID EXTRACT OF BUCHU is prepared directly according to the rules of Pharmacy and Chemistry, with the greatest accuracy and chemical knowledge and care devoted in its combination. Its popularity has extended in all directions, and whether used in town, country, hospital, or private practice, has invariably given the most decided and unequivocal satisfaction, and produced the most salutary and beneficial effects. It has been and is used in all the principal cities in the United States and British Provinces, in both public and private practice, with great success. Henceforth, let it be understood, for the proofs are too overwhelming to be contradicted, that HELMBOLD'S Highly Concentrated Compound Fluid Extract Buchu is the most valuable remedy ever offered to the afflicted.

The mass of voluntary testimony in possession of the proprietor is immense, embracing names well known to science and fame, celebrated Physicians and distinguished Clergymen.

See Professor DEWEES' valuable work on the Practice of Physic, and most of the late standard works of medicine.

It is a medicine which is perfectly pleasant in its taste and odor, but immediate in its action, and it is taken by persons of either sex, without hindrance

WHO IS THE STREET COMMISSIONER?—The following are the only answers to this question which will stand the test of a rigorous examination:

From the Tribune, June 10.

The new charter expressly continued the Street Commissioner to the expiration of his term, which would be to the 31st of December, 1858; and all other officers are continued through their terms, or to the close of the present year, it not being intended to give any appointing power whatever to the existing Common Council. By the ordinances the Deputy Street Commissioner takes the place of his principal until the vacancy is filled according to law. By the charter the removal of elective officers can only be done by the Governor, for cause; in which case the Mayor and Aldermen can appoint till the next election. The removal of an officer by death certainly cannot work a change in the tenure of his office. It would appear, therefore, that as the Deputy succeeds ex-officio, he must be, de facto, Street Commissioner, until the close of the term specially declared by the Charter.

From the Times, June 11.

By the death of Mr. TAYLOR, the office of Street Commissioner does not become vacant, but devolves upon Mr CHARLES TURNER, hitherto Deputy Street Commissioner. The ordinance of 1849, organizing the departments of the Municipal Government, provides that "in case of a vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner, the Deputy shall act as Street Commissioner until the vacancy shall be supplied by a new appointment, and until the person appointed shall be duly qualified." The new charter prescribes that the Street Commissioner "shall continue in office until the expiration of his term, and shall not be removed from office during such continuance." As Mr. TAYLOR'S term would not have expired until the first of January, 1859, his Deputy will of course hold until that time.) The new Charter does not make any provision, even for cases of removal from office of heads of departments, excepting in the instances of the Comptroller and Counsel of the Corporation. Their places, if "occasioned by removal," may be filled by the Mayor, "with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen." If these places were vacated, however, by death, the Mayor could not legally fill them, nor can he fill the Street Commissioner's post, under any circumstance whatever.

NOT IN THE PROGRAMME.—A band of minstrels gave an exhibition at the Brooklyn Athenæum, Saturday afternoon, and during the performance, the audience became so much annoyed at the obscene language of an individual present that it was necessary to put him out, which was done gracefully by a member of the company. He returned to the hall again with a friend, and, at the close of the performance, the two went behind the curtain to inflict summary punishment upon the company. They had no sooner intruded themselves behind the scenes than they were both knocked down, and, in less than a minute, received a thorough and well-merited punishment, when they were advised by the Police present to go home and learn to behave themselves.

FOUND DEAD IN THE STREETS.—JOHN NEWTON, formerly a midshipman in the United States Navy, was found dead early Saturday morning last, at the corner of Fulton and Front streets, Brooklyn. He left the Franklin House about 12 o'clock Friday night, and was soon after found dead as above stated, and the body was taken to the Second District Station-house, where Coroner REDDING held an inquest yesterday. The Jury rendered a verdict, that his death was the result of an accidental fall upon the sidewalk.

Deceased was a son of Commodore NEWTON, now stationed in Kittery, Me., and was with his father at Gibraltar when the Missouri was burnt.

ANOTHER VICTIM.—THOMAS FRANCIS, a resident of Delaware County, Penn., but at present sojourning at the Pacific Hotel, Cortlandt-street, New-York, was swindled out of $365 Friday last, on Ninth-avenue, near Greenwood, Brooklyn, by two sharpers, with a "patent safe." FRANCIS intends to subscribe for a paper, and go home early this morning.

THE SUNDAY LIQUOR TRAFFIC IN BROOKLYN.—A few of the more respectable retailers of ardent spirits in Brooklyn, are disposed to obey the law as to the closing of their places of business on Sunday and would do so willingly, if the Chief Magistrate of the City manifested a determination to compel others to obey it. One week ago yesterday quite a number of the largest saloons were closed, but finding that no effort is made to compel others to obey the law, yesterday nearly every place was open as usual.

KINGS COUNTY DEMOCRATIC ASSOCIATION.—This Association organized on Friday evening last, by electing the following officers:

President—WM M. BAVARD.
Treasurer—Mayor POWELL.
One Vice-President from each Ward and County Town, and an Executive Committee of 5.

FINANCIAL.—The Strong-place Baptist Church, Brooklyn, during the past week liquidated all outstanding claims against the Society, incurred in erecting their Church, which cost in round numbers, $70,000. Besides the regular Church expenses, this Society support two Missions School at an annual cost of $1,800.

MILITARY.—The 14th Regiment N. Y. S. M., Col. J. C. SMITH, will parade in Brooklyn to-day, and at 11 o'clock will be reviewed by the Mayor and Aldermen.

NEW-JERSEY.

FUNERAL OF JOHN C. STEVENS.—On Saturday, at 1 o'clock, the funeral of the late Commodore JOHN C. STEVENS was attended from St. Paul's Church, Hoboken. Previous to that hour his friends had taken a last view of the remains at his late residence in River terrace, from which the procession moved to the Church, headed by the officiating clergy, Rev. V. BEACH, rector of the parish, and Rev. Mr. LITTLE, of New-York. Next came the remains, borne by six men who had been in the employ of Mr. STEVENS, as coachmen, servants, &c. Then followed the pall bearers, who were as follows:

Gov. John A. King, N. Y.	G. W. Morton, Hoboken
Jas. A. Hamilton, Dobbs' Ferry.	Hon. J. R. Thompson, N. Y.
Thos. W. Ludlow, Yonkers	Geo. F. Talman, N. Y.
Com. Wm. Edgar, N. Y.	Charles King, N. Y.
Andrew Foster, N. Y.	Wm E. Lught, N. Y.
	James S. Greene, N. J.
	Gen. A. Fleming, N. Y.

Next came Mr. EDWIN A. STEVENS and Mr. JAMES A. STEVENS, brothers, and other relatives. The Mayor, Council and citizens generally composed the remainder of the procession. Arriving at the Church the coffin was rested upon a pedestal erected for the purpose by Mr. MORRIS K. CRANE, the undertaker, in front of the altar. The ceremonies consisted of the reading of the funeral service of the Episcopal Church, by Rev. V. BEACH, assisted by Rev. Mr. LITTLE, and in the singing of an anthem by Mrs. EMMA GILLINGHAM BOETWICK, who was assisted in its performance by the choir. The Church was crowded to excess, and among those present were many prominent citizens of New-Jersey and New-York, including many members of the Union Club of New York, and of the New-York Yacht Club, of which Mr. STEVENS was a member.

The services over, the remains were taken to St. Mark's Church, New-York, to be deposited temporarily in the same vault with those of his wife, who died two years ago, until his family vault is completed at his country seat at South Amboy.

At a special meeting of the Hoboken Council, held on Friday evening last, at the Council Chamber Councilman BAMPTON had offered resolutions of grief and respect to the deceased, which were unanimously adopted.

ANNIVERSARY.—The Youth's Missionary Society of the Wayne street Reformed Dutch Church held its anniversary yesterday afternoon, on which occasion interesting addresses were delivered by Mr. WASHINGTON HASBROUCK of Jersey City, and Rev. WM. W. SCUDDER, of the Arcot Mission in India.

☞ Ahout 2,000 German singers of New-York, Brooklyn, Hoboken and Jersey City left the Jersey City depot at 3 o'clock yesterday in a special train for Philadelphia, to unite in the musical festival in that city yesterday and to-day.

☞ Strawberry Festivals once peculiar to Jersey City, but now everywhere suburban, and especially efficient as a means of raising money for religious and benevolent purposes, are starting again.

MONDAY, June 15—A. M.

The new steamer Vanderbilt, from Havre and Southampton Wednesday, June 3, arrived at this port early yesterday evening. Her English and French dates are four days later than by the Canada. The Liverpool markets are better for Cotton, prices being quite full, as compared with the quotations of the previous week, and some little activity being shown by speculators and exporters, as well as the regular trade. A better feeling in Yarns and Cloth is quoted from Manchester. The Grain Market of Tuesday, June 2, was dull, and 2d. was conceded on American parcels of Wheat, and 6d. on Flour. Indian Corn in limited supply, though the demand was also light, and prices about the same as on the previous Friday—39s.@40s. 6d. The London Money Market continued active, and the Continental exchanges scarcely so favorable. The movements of Gold and Silver since the sailing of the Canada are reported as very heavy, though chiefly inward. The West India packet delivered $3,160,000, mostly Silver; the Boston and New-York steamers, $1,566,000, and two vessels from Australia, $1,045,000. The Oriental steamer of the 4th June was expected to take ont $4,250,000 in Silver. The Funds were 94⅜ cent. for money, and 94⅝ for the July account. The Bank had notified that advances would be made on the Government Funds during the closing of transfers—say for not less than 14 days, nor beyond the 11th July. This announcement helped the feeling on the Stock Exchange, hnt the advance in the Funds was checked by the continued heaviness of the Paris Bourse, and ths unsettled reports from France in regard to the Silk crop The latest on this subject from the Southern Departments is, that apprehensions had ceased with respect to the health of the silkworm. The India and China mails had been delivered in London, though the American letters were probably forwarded hy the Fulton from Southampton. She left the same day with the Vanderbilt. The shipments of Tea from the four principal ports since 1st July, 1856, to 14th April, 1857, were 57,000,000 pounds wsight, against 73,000,000 the same period in 1856. Ths falling off from Canton and Hong Kong is 6,000,000, and from Shanghae 10,000,000. Exchange at Hong Kong and Shanghae have advanced; London, 4s. 11¾d.@5s. in the former market, and 7s. 3½d.@7s. 4d. at Shanghae. Freights had improved at Hong Kong, and vessels were wanted for California and Australia. The Chinese emigration to Australia had reached 14,500 persons in less than six months. In American Stocks in London the business reported was in Illinois Central shares at 19¾ premium, ex-dividend and ex-privilege, eqnal to 139 here. Ths Bonds are still qnoted 90@92 ₱ cent. Michigan Central Bonds—Sales at 91¾; shares, 87@89; Southern Michigan Sinking Funds, 71@73 ₱ cent; New-York Central 7s, 89@91, ex-dividend; 6s, 79@81; shares, 81@83; Erie's of 1883 at 84@86; Pennsylvania Central sterling mortgage, 91@93 ₱ cent.

The Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, for the past week, was chiefly characterized by an unusually heavy export of Specie, amounting, in the aggregate, to $3,394,891, including $712,000 by the Bremen and Havre steamers Washington and Ariel, on Saturday, against $1,106,849 same week last June. The following are the particulars of these shipments:

June 8—Steamer Quaker City, Havana—
	Doubloons	$268,508
June 9—Schooner H. Hallock, Maranham—
	American Gold	5,000
June 11—Steamer City of Washington, Liverpool—

	Silver Dollars	41,000
	English Silver	1,452
June 13—Steamer Ariel, Bremen—
	American Gold Coin	62,000
	Gold and Silver Coin	150,800
	California Gold	19,700
June 13—Steamer Washington, Bremen—
	Gold Bars	451,041
	American Gold Coin	33,000
	American Silver	1,600
June 13—Bark N. H. Gaster, Barbadoes—
	American Gold	30,000
	Total	$3,394 891

Against this large outward aggregate, the Bank reserve had the advantage of the

Receipts from California	$1,920,376
Net Disbursement of Sub-Treasury	ds1,704
Silver from New-Orleans	149,000
Spanish Coin from Europe	62 000

The difference against the Banks would thus appear to be only $580,811; hnt as the heaviest outgo, say $2,265,000 by the Arabia for Liverpool on Wednesday, went from Bank, two if not three days before the California arrival went into Bank, the average of the week, to be made up this afternoon, is likely to show a larger falling off, unless assisted materially hy the interior Gold exchanges, which still rule in favor of the City. The last average stood $13,134,714. The Sub-Treasnry balance s now down to $11,749,304, against $12,431,008 at the close of the previous week. Among the dishursements on Saturday afternoon were $45,000 on Government drafts from California. The Import entries of ths week, including the Dry Goods, hoth in our last paper, are $3,722,178, against $3,729,131 samc week last year. The Exporte of Domestic Prodnce and Miscellaneons Goods, $938,102, against $1,425,232.

The official Custom-House returns of the Foreign Trade at the port of New-York, make the Import Entries from the beginning of the current Treasury year, July 1, 1856, to the 1st Juns inst., amount to

* These items were included in miscellaneous goods, in our export statement every week of last year. Hence, we cannot furnish comparative figures, in detail, this year. Next year we shall be enabled to do so regularly, by keeping up the record as now arranged through the current year.

The Money Market through the week exhibited few or no changes from the previous ease in supply; demand loans were readily had at 7 ₱ cent, and prime short paper current at Bank at the same rate, and with the Discount Brokers at 7½@8 ₱ cent. Private lenders, while employing their means in this way, are less disposed to take paper over 60 days except at ndvanced rates of discount; say for prime lists at 3 or 4 months' date, 8½@9 per cent. There is not, however, a choice selection of long-date mercantile paper pressing for negotiation. A few of the best Railway acceptances go at 10 ₱ cent. Foreign Bills rnle 109¾@109¾ on London; 5.17½ on Paris. The ease of the Money Market dnring the week caused the demand for the market on Wednesday last to increase at the close, and in turn contributed to swell the shipment of Bullion. The business at the Custom House grows lighter every week, and the further reduction of the Sub-Treasury balance to less than $10,000,000 is now looked for.

The lowest prices of the season—and for several stocks the lowest known since the gloomy season of 1854—were made at the Stock Exchange in the course of the week, and the feeling of depression continued until near the close, when an improved demand was felt on the dealings in New-York Central, New-York and Erie, Galena and Chicago, and one or two other Railroad stocks. There was considerable excitement experienced in Reading shares, which showed great firmness until Friday noon, when prices suddenly fell from about 79 to 77 ₱ cent., and again on Saturday from 77 to 73½ ₱ cent., recovering at the close to 74⅝ ₱ cent. The first change was attributed to a rumor of damage on the line of the road, bnt as this was authoritatively set right from Philadelphia, the fall was subsequently attrihnted, on the Street, to a large private sale from some one or more of the leading Bull operators to the prominent Bear cliqne at abont 79 ₱ cent.; and as this relieved the latter from the previous closeness in the transfers, every one hastened, before the fact was made generally known, to put out a new line of shorts at lower prices. The Brokers for Philadelphia account were quite befogged for a time, and after the first call of the stock on Saturday morning, came in as sellers. In the afternoon, there were orders at 74⅝ ₱ cent. The general market left off firm. The following figures exhibit the course of prices for the past fortnight:

A new and very elegant building, for office and banking purposes, has just been added to the improvements of the lower part of Nassau-street, immediately opposite the Nassau and Wall-street corner of the Custom-House, by the Continental Bank. The building is 50 feet front on Nassau-street and next adjoining DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co. The Bank will remove its business this day to the commodious and every way convenient suite of rooms on the first floor. The basement, which is also handsomely fitted np and well lighted, will be occupied hy Messrs, ATWOOD & Co., Bankers, and hy the La Crosse Railroad Company.

A letter from the Snperintendent of the new line of the Wahash Valley Company, advises that the traffic on the road shows a fair improvement since the 1st of June, the first week's receipts being $13,815.

The May traffic on the New-York Central line settles np $662,488, as against $710,554 the same month last year. The deficiency, instead of $100,000, as rsported on rumor by one of our cotemporaries hefors the close of the month, is only $48,066. This is ths first return of the present Railroad year which hae fallen behind, and the net increase of the eight months, October 1 to May 31, is still over a half million of dollars.

The trade from the Trevorton Semi-Anthracite mines has gradnally increased to 3,877 tons per week, and the amount delivered for the season thus far, 63 days, is 27,396 tons.

In addition to the Specie received per steamer George Law, the following amount of treasnre has been transported over the Panama Railroad dnring the last two wseks, for English account.

To-day, the half-yearly conpon on the 7 ₱ cents. of the New-York Central Company will be paid at the Banking House of Messrs. DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co. The convertible clause in these Bonds will take effect from this day, and the privilege of conversion into the shares of the Company continne nntil the 15th Jnne, 1859.

The last California mail brought the necessary funds to pay the July interest on the $200,000 Fire Bonds of the City of San Francisco and also on the issns of $321,500 Civil Bonds of the same city. The payments will be made by Messrs. DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co., who have been formally constituted the New-York agents of the City and County, under the following order:

The Treasurer of the city and county of San Francisco he, and he is hereby authorized, to transmit through Messrs. ALSOP & Co., to Messrs. DUNCAN, SHERMAN & Co., of New-York, out of any moneys in the Treasury, the amount required to pay the July interest upon the bonds issued in pursuance of "An Act to provide for ths funding of the legal and equitable debt of the city of San Francisco, and for the final redemption of the same." Passed May 7, 1855.

We call attention to the eard of Mr. C. F. LINDSLEY, formerly well known in mercantile business in this City, who has just opened an office at No. 42 Pine-street, as a Bill Broker.

The Conspiracy in Wall-street.

From the Detroit Advertiser.

The enterprise of the Western country is now reeling under the concerted attacks of the "Bears" of Wall-street, to depress all Western stocks. Nothing short of a conspiracy now exists, to that end. Daily meetings, in private, are held, at which those implicated bind themselves to sell the doomed stocks at lower than market rates, all the accomplices agreeing to share the loss. In cases like the New-York Central, or tho Michigan Central, where there has been no stock in the market npon which to operate, spurious sales are made on time, to be delivered in 60 days, of five or ten shares of these stocks, and, at the same time, all manner of rumors are put afloat, calculated and designed to create a panic among real holders, and to compel them to sell. By these and the like influences, Eric Railroad stocks have been depressed from 43 to 33 per cent.; Hudson River Railroad from 33 to 19; Michigan Southern from 88 to 48.

The scope of the designs of these stock jobbers is general; they intend to depress every Western stock. Although the whole Stock Board are in a manner implicated in this disgraceful proceeding, yet the conspirators are known, and are distinct from the body itself. They hold their stated and frequent meetings at the St. Nicholas, or elsewhere, and determine how much stock of a given corporation shall be forced down, who shall do it, and how the loss shall be divided. The "fun" for the Wall-street Bears is death to the West. Stocks are depressed without the slightest reason or cause for it, and honest bona fide holders suffer, to gratify the gambling propensities of a few Wall-street speculators.—Detroit Advertiser.

Chicago Grain Trade.

THURSDAY EVENING, June 11, 1857.

The private dispatches last evening and this morning giving the news of two foreign steamers were quite conflicting and to some extent neutralized each other. In consequence of the doubt as to the actual character of the news, but little was done at the Board. Receipts yesterday fell a trifle below those of the preceding day—equaling 118,693 bushels. The shipments of yesterday amount to 134,051 bushels, showing a loss to the stock on the day's movement of 15,358 bushels. The receipts as compared with those of the previous day show a gain of about one-third in flour and of about one-fifth in wheat, and a loss of one-eighth in corn, with no material variation in oats.

Our exchanges are daily filled with accounts of the large quantities of corn in every direction. The following, from the Peoria Republican, will convince croakers that "there is some corn in the country yet:"

"If any one supposes that the scarcity of corn in the country has anything to do with the high prices, the illusion will be dispelled by taking a westward trip. The country is full of corn, and it is pouring into every station in great plenty. The streets are full of teams, and the railroads have more than they can do to bring the grain into the City. This is especially the case on the Burlington Road. In the little village of Sandwich alone there are 50,000 bushels in store, with receipts of from 1,500 to 2,000 bushels per day. And the same is the case, to a greater or less extent, all along the route. The high prices are employing the well-filled granaries of our farmers. Considerable wheat, too, is coming forward."

WHO IS STREET COMMISSIONER?

Conflict of State and City Authority

Both D. D. Conover and Deputy Turner Claim the Office--Both are Backed by the Police.

Meanwhile the Sheriff Takes the Office in Possession.

Mayor Wood Nominates Charles Develin, but he Sticks in the Aldermanic Caucus.

CONOVER EJECTED FORCIBLY.

GREAT EXCITEMENT, BUT LITTLE BLOODSHED.

THE FIGHT BUT JUST BEGUN

The contest between DANIEL D. CONOVER, Esq., and Deputy TURNER, for the office of Street Commissioner, was resumed yesterday morning, and the excitement connected with it was kept up all day. When the office was opened in the morning, a force of twenty of the Metropolitan Police, under Captain SPEIGHT, and about 15 of the Municipal Corps, under officer MASTERSON, were present—detailed by the respective Boards to preserve the peace. As time advanced each force was augmented, until the Municipal Police numbered about 150, who, fully armed, held themselves in readiness about the City Hall, and the Metropolitan ranks were swelled to fifty. The latter were in citizen's dress, and took their stations about and in the Hall of Records. At 9 o'clock Mr. CONOVER entered the office, holding in his hand the commission from the Governor, in sight, which, with the ante room, was thronged with the Police and the friends of the rival Commissioners, and announced that he had come to take possession. Addressing Mr. TURNER, he blandly remarked: "Mr. TURNER, I appoint you my depnty, and shall retain the clerks who are now in office."

Mr. TURNER replied that he did not recognize the right of the Governor to appoint his successor, and therefore could not admit Mr. CONOVER's claim to the office of Street Commissioner.

The excitement in the crowd at this juncture was very great, and officer MASTERSON, backed by his men, inquired of Mr. TURNER what the matter was.

Mr. TURNER—I don't recognize Mr. CONOVER as Street Commissioner, and I want your protection in prosecuting my duties.

Officer MASTERSON—My orders are to protect you, Sir; and I shall do so.

Mr. TURNER—Well, keep your force here and see that no violence is committed.

Mr. CONOVER moved towards the private office of the Street Commissioner, where the papers of the department are deposited. The word "private" was pasted on the door, which was locked and guarded by two police officers.

Mr. CONOVER—As Street Commissioner I demand admission into that room. I wish to enter upon my duties.

Mr. TURNER (to officers)—I do not want anybody to enter that room. I don't recognize him as Street Commissioner.

Officer MASTERSON—Mr. CONOVER, I cannot permit you to enter that room.

Mr. CONOVER (to MASTERSON)—I should like to know by what authority you take possession of this office, and prevent me from performing my duties?

MASTERSON—The Sheriff is my authority, here is his warrant.

The warrant read as follows:

The People, &c., vs. Thomas McGinn, &c.—Execution issued June 13, 1857; interest from Nov. 18, 1856. JAS MALONY, Attorney for defendants.

I hereby depute, authorize and appoint Mr. HUGH MASTERSON, and all and every person or persons aiding or assisting him in the premises, to take charge of and safely keep the furniture, desks, chairs and all other property now being in the Street Commissioner's office in the Hall of Records, which property is seized and levied upon by me, by virtue of the execution above mentioned.

Given under my hand, at the City and County of New-York, this 15th day of June, 1857.

JAMES C. WILLETT, Sheriff.

FREDERICK L. VULTE, Deputy-Sheriff.

The Sheriff also holds two executions upon the same property, which were levied upon June 18, 1856, in favor of GEORGE ALLEN for $441 41, and July 30, 1856, for $768 62 in favor of PETER CONOLLY. The appurtenances of the Mayor's, Comptroller's, Boards of Aldermen and Councilmen rooms are also in possession of the Sheriff, but the judgments upon them have been appealed. As the Sheriff is held responsible for its safe keeping he sent this posse over to protect the furniture.

Mr. CONOVER, having been refused admittance to the private office, took possession of a desk in the outer one, where he remained all day.

Mr. TURNER occupied his accustomed seat, and the clerks theirs. No business was done by any one. Mr. TURNER, in low tones, consulted with his friends, and Mr. CONOVER placidly conferred with his; the attending crowd freely expressed their views on this anomalous state of affairs.

Up to 11 o'clock the friends of the rival Commissioners had nothing in particular to disturb their equanimity. At that hour a squad of the Municipal Police marched through the crowd to the desk of Mr. TURNER, greeted with cries of "the Plug Uglies are coming!—down with the Black Republicans; hurrah for Mayor Wood; them's the boys can knock h—l out of the Albany men," &c. The Police, however, retired without making a demonstration, and comparative quiet was again restored.

Mr. CONOVER stated that the section of the Revised Statutes whence Governor KING derives his power to appoint a Street Commissioner, is to be found in the 4th article of the law of 1849, on resignations, vacancies, removals, and appointments of public officers. The first part of the 59th section reads as follows:

"Whenever vacancies shall exist or occur in any of the offices of this State, where no provision is made by law for filling the same, the Governor shall appoint some suitable person who may be eligible to the office, to supersede, or to become vacant, to execute the duties thereof until the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election after the happening of the vacancy at which such office should be by law elected; and the person so appointed to fill such vacancy shall possess all the rights and powers, and be subject to all the liabilities, duties and obligations of such officers, as they are now, or may hereafter be prescribed by law."

Mr. CONOVER stated that he had been sworn in by Recorder SMITH; that he filed his bonds with Comptroller FLAGG; that he was there to perform the duties of the office, and would remain there until removed legally, or by physical force.

The Deputy Sheriff says that their department is committed neither to the old nor the new Commissioners of Police, and that they had nothing to do with the Street Commissioner's office. The force at his command was there solely to preserve the property from being injured.

Mr. TURNER, on being questioned, said the Sheriff was acting in concert with himself; that the furniture was under their joint control; that neither of them recognized the authority of the Governor to appoint a Street Commissioner, and that they had so arrogued matters that he (TURNER) could carry on the business of the office as before.

At 2 o'clock Mr. CONOVER regaled himself with an excellent dinner brought from a neighboring restaurant to the office, and thus like a giant refreshed with new wine, returned to his station inside the iron railing. The sight of Mr. CONEVER's dinner drew from Mr. TURNER the remark, that "they were going to make an eating house of this place." This state of masterly inactivity was kept up until near 4 o'clock, relieved only by the pacing to and fro of the police and the entrance of the Deputy Sheriffs.

About the time for closing the office, at which period it was anticipated the grand crisis would come, the Police force under Officer MASTERSON was reinforced by a squad of the Third Ward, (old Police,) and Capt. FRANK SPEIGHT with a band of Metropolitans, from the Twenty-First Ward, who remained in the room. A large number of citizens were also present. Precisely at 4 o'clock, Mr. TURNER said: "Gentlemen, it is now 4 o'clock, and we must close the office; you will all please retire." The command was unheeded, and it was repeated by Officer MASTERSON with like effect.

Capt. BENNETT—"Gentlemen will please leave, as it is Mr. TURNER's wish—our orders to obey him are peremptory."

Mr. CONOVER—"I am in possession of this office by the appointment of the Governor of the State; I am the Street Commissioner, and as such I shall maintain my position here unless force is used to expel me. If, gentlemen, you want to see my authority, I will show it," and drawing his commission from his pocket, he exhibited it to the officers.

Mr. TURNER—I don't care about your authority.

Another pause followed, when Mr. TURNER reiterated his order to clear the office, stepping up to one of his Clerks—Mr. JOSEPH B. POLLOCK—he desired him to leave.

Mr. POLLOCK—I belong here—I'm a Clerk in this office, and shall remain here until Mr. CONOVER tells me to leave.

Mr. TURNER—Mr. CONOVER has no authority here—officer put him out, which the officers did, Mr. POLLOCK making but little resistance.

TURNER then advanced toward Mr. PECKHAM, another Clerk, and requested him to leave, which Mr. P. refused to do, stating that he would leave when Mr. CONOVER told him to.

Mr. TURNER—I command you to leave this room.

Mr. PECKHAM—I am a Clerk here, and have a right to remain here till discharged by the Street Commissioner.

Mr. TURNER—I am Street Commissioner, and I discharge you now. You are no longer Clerk in this Department.

The officers then unceremoniously ejected him, but be shortly returned. Captain FRANK SPEIGHT, who had been present, left for a moment to speak to Aldermen OWENS, who was in an adjoining room. On attempting to return again, he was met by several of the Municipal Police, who informed him that he must keep back. The Captain paid no attention to this order, but pushing himself through the guard, again entered the main room, saying as he did so, "I wish to speak to Mr. Conover." He had progressed only a few feet, however, before he was surrounded and seized by a number of the Municipal Police, who tried hard to eject him. SPEIGHT, who is a large and powerful man, resisted their efforts, and, for a time, successfully: during the mêlée, he was seized round the throat by a tall, long-armed man in a drab coat, who seemed determined to choke him. "Don't hurt him, MULLIGAN," was vociferated by several of the crowd, and thereupon the man in the drab coat released his hold. He had neither star nor emblem visible on his person, but it was asserted that he was a Policeman, one of Mayor WOOD's late appointments.

By this time the Captain had changed his position, and was standing with his hands clenched about an iron railing, still resisting with all his might. The excitement became every moment more intense, and maddened cries were made—"Put him out!" "Down with the d——d Black Republican!" "Give him the club!" Some of the officers seemed disposed to obey the orders of the crowd, but were restrained by their commanding officer, who told them not to strike. The Captain was finally forced from his position, his fingers being pulled one at a time from their hold upon the railing. The crowd who were then upon the inside gave a sudden push, made a loud shout of triumph, and the Captain was expelled, having suffered no further injury than a torn coat, a rumpled shirt collar, and a few slight scratches upon the hand, made visible by the blood which oozed therefrom.

The few Metropolitan Policemen who were on the outside immediately surrounded their Captain to prevent any further violence being offered him, but none was attempted. Soon afterwards the comparatively small Metropolitan force who were present formed in line, and marched to their head-quarters in White-street, whence, later in the day, they were dismissed for duty to their respective Wards.

At this time the office became comparatively clear, Mr. CONOVER still remaining at his post. An intermission of a few minutes was given, that all might recover breath from their arduous exertions, when Captain BENNETT again asked them to leave the room. "No exceptions," said he, "can be made, all must leave; not even the reporters can remain; now gentlemen, you will please retire," placing his hands upon those nearest him. The order was only partially obeyed, many still lingering, anxious to witness the end. Hereupon the officers, under HUGH MASTERSON, went to work pushing the crowd toward the door, and in a few moments they succeeded, by dint of great effort, in clearing the room.

MASTERSON and BENNETT then advanced to Mr. CONOVER, and urged him to leave quietly. "Do not place us in the position of having to force you," said they. "We will have to do so unless you will go quietly, for our orders are imperative to obey Mr. TURNER."

Mr. CONOVER replied, that "he would not leave unless forced to do so." Hereupon, BENNETT seized him by one shoulder, MASTERSON by the other; but CONOVER stood his ground, and the officers were assisted by as many of their force as could well get hold of him, and after much struggling on the part of CONOVER and great effort on the part of the officers, the whole crowd, finally, reached the door—the lookers on yelling "kill the son-of-a-b—h! put him out!" and such like expressions.

Mr. CONOVER was immediately surrounded by his friends, who congratulated him on his pluck and his escape from serious personal injury. Some advised him to again essay an entrance to the Office; he acted on the advice, but the door was strongly guarded, and they refused to let him pass. Capt BENNETT then spoke to him, offering his hand, stating he was sorry his duty compelled him to adopt such harsh measures. Mr. CONOVER accepted it, and remarked that he had no ill feeling towards any one present. He should do what he considered to be his duty in the premises, regardless of consequences. He was led off by his friends between the double line of Police which skirted the stairs, through the Park, to a carriage which awaited him in Chambers-street.

The crowd here gave three cheers and a tiger for DANIEL D. CONOVER, the new Street Commissioner, which he acknowledged by a graceful wave of his hat, declaring as he drove away that he should assume his duties in the morning.

The excitement seekers which filled the Park witnessed of the excitiug scenes that had passed, gradually dispersed, and the large Police force that had been assembled at the City Hall were dismissed.

It was currently rumored in the morning that Mr. CHARLES DEVLIN, contractor, had been nominated by the Mayor as number three of the Street Commissioners. In the afternoon his appearance was anxiously looked for in the office, but he didn't appear. His true position in connection with this matter may be learned from the proceedings of the Aldermanic Democratic caucus.

The New Commissioners met yesterday, pursuant to adjournment. After the usual formal business, 159 members of the Department were dismissed for insubordination and disobedience of orders. But one appointment was made, that of C. K. DOWLING, as a patrolman in the Third Precinct.

Depnty Superintendent CARPENTER was then summoned, and a long private consultation was had. By this time squads of policemen from various districts began to arrive, and soon, under command of Captain SPEIGHT, of the Twenty-first Ward, they moved towards the Park.

The old Commissioners did not meet. Mayor WOOD was too busy in the matter relating to the office of Street Commissioner. His Honor had not time to go out and take dinner, even. It was brought to him, and he dispatched it with haste. All about were assembled, in anxious consultation, policemen, aldermen, councilmen, office-holders, &c., all receiving and giving orders. It seemed as though a civil war was about to break out. Presently all moved towards the Hall of Records, the great centre of attraction.

DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS ON THE MAYOR'S APPOINTMENT

The Board of Supervisors met last evening, and adjourned without transacting any business. They should have met at 4 o'clock, but as the Democratic members were in Caucus relative to the Mayor's appointment of a Street Commissioner, and consequently the roll was not called until an hour afterwards. Even then there was not a quorum, and the Board adjourned without day.

The roll of the Board of Aldermen was called immediately afterwards, with a like result. Alderman FULMER was in the Chair, and as there were but six members present, he adjourned the Board until Thursday next. Those present were, Aldermen Fulmer, Tucker, Blunt, Owens, Corwin and Griffiths.

Aldermen FULMER had hardly laid aside the honors of the Chair, when the Democratic members appeared, and, not knowing that the Board had been adjourned, Alderman CLANCY doffed his hat and was hurrying to the Chair, when he was informed of what had been done.

He immediately requested the sergeant-at-arms to request the members present to remain, while he issued a call for a special meeting.

Alderman TUCKER said the Board had met and adjourned to Thursday next, and as he was quite unwell; he did not wish to remain in the room.

The clerk and assistants were busy making out the calls, and the sergeant at-arms was at his post to prevent the egress of members.

Alderman FULMER repeated the remarks of Alderman TUCKER, relative to the adjournment of the Board, and moved towards the door, but the Sergeant-at-Arms was there, and he did not leave the chamber.

Soon afterwards the call was announced, and a meeting of the Board ordered for this (Tuesday) evening, at 5 o'clock.

THE CAUCUS.

The Democratic members were in session from 12 o'clock until after 5, endeavoring to arrive at some decision relative to their action upon the appointment of a Street Commissioner by the Mayor. It was understood that the Mayor had appointed Mr. CHARLES DEVLIN, and that the Democratic members would confirm it, provided the Mayor would give them the appointment of the several heads of bureaus in the Department. The refusal of the Mayor to acquiesce was the cause of the long debate. What the conclusion at length was, was derived from the assurance of Alderman CLANCY, that when the Board should meet, the matter would be settled in less than ten minutes.

A Note from Capt. Craft.

NEW-YORK, Monday, June 15, 1857.

DEAR SIR: In answer to the card of Dr. E. H. KIMBARK, formerly clerk in a shoe store, stating that he did not receive the notice for his trial at the Mayor's Office on the charge of Dr. HASBROUCK until some hours after the time stated in said note, I will simply state that Officer WOLTMAN served the notice on him personally at 2 P. M., and the notice called for him to appear at the Mayor's Office for trial at 3 P. M. As for him not knowing any Police Captain by the name of WM. D. CRAFT, it is well to state that all the members of the Police Department do recognize him as Captain, and the only Captain of the Eleventh Ward in which he is still acting, and shall continue to act, until he is dismissed by the Commissioners, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge.

WM. D. CRAFT,
Capt. of the Eleventh District.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Monday, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

A long sitting was taken up with the final passage of bills respecting sewers, filling sunken lots, paving Fire Department, and similar matters, which have been already discussed and reported. The final constreets, flagging sidewalks, as well as bills affecting the currence with the Board of Aldermen respecting the purchase of the Arsenal property for $275,000, formed an exceptional important item.

The report of the Committee on Lands and Places, in favor of purchasing land on Ward's Island was opposed, on its third reading, by Councilman BRADY, on the ground that the price of the land was left to the discretion of the seller. After some discussion as to the report being referred for confirmation, ($20,000 per acre being deemed too much for the property,) such reference back to a Committee of the Whole of this Board was carried.

The contract to John S. Morrell for paving Lexington-avenue (which had already been fully argued in Committee of the Whole) was again argued on the third reading, and not confirmed for want of a constitutional vote. Councilman BOOLE contended strongly in favor of the affirmation of the contract; and on the other side Councilmen BRADY and OTTERSON contended that interested parties wished to swindle the City out of $7,000. The discussion occupied more than an hour. Renewed argument then arose as to the removal of a pump at the corner of Houston and Sixth, which, upon vote, was adopted by 33 to 1.

The report concurring with the Board of Aldermen to allow the Sixth and Eighth avenue Railroad Companies to set back the curb and gutter in Vesey-street, was adopted.

Several petitions and resolutions were then acted on.

Councilman OTTERSON offered the following ordinance:

THE STREETS.

An ordinance authorizing and directing the City Inspector to clean the streets.

Be it enacted, &c., as follows:

SECTION 1. The City Inspector is hereby authorized to have the streets, alleys and lanes of the City (except in the Twelfth Ward thereof) immediately swept and cleaned of all mud, ashes, garbage, refuse, and all offensive matter.

SEC. 2. Said City Inspector is further authorized to cause such street cleaning to be performed as often as in his judgment may be necessary for the preservation of the public health, until contractors shall assume the work, or other measures shall be taken by the Common Council.

SEC. 3. The Comptroller is hereby authorized and directed to pay from the appropriation for cleaning streets for 1857, so much as may be necessary to liquidate the expenses incurred by the City Inspector, under this ordinance, upon receiving from the Inspector the required legal vouchers.

He requested unanimous consent to its passage.

Councilman WARNER objected to its consideration until the next meeting.

The President decided that it must lie over under the rule, and it was laid over.

On this subject, the following memorial from the medical examiners of various Life Insurance Companies was presented be Councilman JONES, and referred to the Special Committee on Cleaning Streets:

To the Honorable the Common Council, &c., &c.

We, the undersigned medical examiners of the Life Insurance Companies, doing business in the City of New-York, respectfully represent to your honorable body:

That in view of the accumulated filth in the streets, and the near approach of the hot season of the year, we feel impelled by the interests which these Companies represent, as well as by solicitude for the health of our citizens generally, earnestly to impress upon your honorable body the imperious necessity which exists of an immediate and thorough purification of the public highways of the City, and other localities teeming with the seeds of disease. The sacrifice of life and property which would result should our metropolis be visited by a virulent epidemic, the impossibility of a large portion of our citizens being able to remove from the infected districts, and the heavy burdens which would then be thrown on the Corporation in supporting thousands of indigent families, resulting in increased taxation, constrain us to solicit a speedy and favorable consideration of our petition. And your memorialists will ever pray.

MINTURN POST, M.D., Medical Examiner to Medical Life Insurance Company, of New-York.
CORNELIUS R. BOGERT, M.D., New-York Life Insurance Company.
JAMES STEWART, M.D., Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Company.
ABRAHAM DU BOIS, Manhattan Life Insurance Company.

Councilman MCCAHILL then offered the following resolutions:

Whereas, The peace and good order of the City have been disturbed by a lawless gang of desperadoes, under the assumed name of Metropolitan Police, therefore, be it

Resolved, That His Honor, the Mayor, be and is hereby requested to have the said desperadoes arrested forthwith and punished according to law. [Laughter.]

Referred to the Police Committee.

Presently the Board adjourned to Wednesday.

Reception of General William Walker of Nicaragua.

A special meeting of the Committee of Arrangements on the Reception of General WILLIAM WALKER of Nicaragua, expected here this evening, was held at Sherwood's Saloon, Broadway, on Monday night, JOHN CREIGHTON in the Chair.

The Committee on Finance reported $1,000 in hand, after which the following gentlemen were added to the Reception Committee; Wildes P. Walker, H. N. Wilds, A. P. Woodruff, and Judge Gilbert Dean.

A Committee on Arrangements reported as follows:

The Rynders Grenadiers will assemble at National Hall, Canal-street, at 4 o'clock P. M., (to-day,) and march to the Park, where the line of procession will be formed by the Grand Marshal, Col. GEO. B. HALL, and thence to Pier No. 1, North River, to await the arrival of Gen. WALKER.

A salute will be fired from the Battery on the appearance of the Philadelphia steamer.

The carriages appropriated to the guests and the Reception Committee will be escorted by the Rynders Greuadiers and citizens to the Park, where the distinguished visitor will be welcomed by Hon. Judge A. A. PHILLIPS; after which he will be escorted in the same order to his hotel.

Associations and others desiring to participate will report without delay to the Grand Marshal, Col. GEO. B. HALL, at his head-quarters, No. 347 Broadway, Room No. 12, who will assign them places in the line.

The Reception Committee will embark on board the John Potter at 2 o'clock, and proceed to Perth Amboy, where they will receive their guest, and on their arrival in the City General WALKER will be welcomed by GEORGE A. A. PHILIPS, after which he will be escorted to his quarters, the St. Nicholas Hotel.

☞ One EDWARD COOPER, Esq., has cleared his skirts of the Walker Reception Meeting. But another EDWARD COOPER is willing to assume the opprobrium. The Mr. COOPER who disclaimed the honor is of the distinguished Iron house. The address of the Barkis who is willing is:

No. 44 WALL STREET, Saturday, June 13, 1857.

The signature of my name to the call for the meeting on Thursday evening last, for the reception of Gen. WILLIAM WALKER, was fully authorized by me, as was, also, my selection as one of the Secretaries of the meeting; and, moreover, I was present and acted as such Secretary, and I fully concur in the objects of the meeting. EDWARD COOPER.

PUBLIC HEALTH.

Quarantine Affairs.

DOMINICK RAGANS, who has been complained of for repeated violations of the Quarantine laws, was held to bail, under a Bench warrant, upon three separate indictments, in $300 each. The statement of RAGANS and his associates, that the vessel had received a clearance from the Health Officer, before he boarded or held communication with her, is pronounced untrue; besides, the offence against the Quarantine regulations consists in going upon the anchorage-ground while vessels are in Quarantine, and it does not matter, therefore, whether the vessel was boarded or not, or what her particular position was as to a clearance.

The bark Mary still lies at Quarantine, where she is being ventilated.

The Quarantine Commissioners have served a notice upon Mr. Sheriff LOCKMAN, of Richmond County, under the law of the State making the City or County, where property is destroyed by a mob, responsible for the damage done. They allege that open threats have been made to burn the State's buildings in process of construction, for Quarantine purposes, at Seguine's Point, and name several persons as implicated. After the service of this notice the Sheriff also becomes personally liable, unless he uses all due diligence to guard against the threatened outrage.

There is also another and potent argument for the faithful performance of his duties by the Sheriff. Should he disregard the legal notices served upon him, or felter in the discharge of his duties, the Governor, under the provisions of the act, will probably find another man for the place. But as yet no complaints have been made of the Sheriff, and he is fairly presumed to be on the side of good order, and against lawlessness, until his acts indicate the contrary. RAY TOMPKINS, Esq., who applied to Mr. LOCKMAN a few days since to be appointed Depnty Sheriff, was told that he had assumed such a position as to incapacitate him for the appointment.

WARNING NO. 2 TO SHERIFF LOCKMAN, OF RICHMOND COUNTY.

Following the example of the Commissioners of Emigration, the Quarantine Commissioners have caused a notice to be served upon the Sheriff of Richmond County, of the open and repeated threats made to burn the buildings now in process of erection at Seguine's Point. It is as follows:

To Abraham Lockman, Esq., Sheriff of Richmond County:

Please to take notice that the Commissioners for the removal of the Quarantine Station have been apprised of the following facts: That threats have been made to burn, injure or destroy the hospitals and other buildings in process of erection, and to prevent the erection of the same, on the property of the People of the State of New-York, in the town of Westfield, in your County, in the care and charge of said Commissioners, for temporary Quarantine purposes. That such threats are matters of common rumor, and that meetings have been held, at which inflammatory speeches were made, and resolutions passed, tending to the carrying out of such threats, and that WILLIAM HAGADORN, Jr., HARMAN B. CROSBY, LOT C. ULARK, ABRAHAM LATOURETTE, ALBERT JOURNEAY, Jr., GEORGE W. JEWESON and RICHARD D. LITTELL have openly stated that such buildings or erections could not stand, but would be destroyed by fire or otherwise, and the dwelling house and other buildings on said property, and intended for quarantine purposes having been burnt down; this notice is given under the provisions of an act of the Legislature of this State, entitled, "An act to provide for compensating parties whose property may be destroyed in consequence of mobs or riots," passed April 13, 1855.

GEORGE HALL,
Chairman of the Commissioners for the Removal of the Quarantine Station.

JOHN S. SNEDEKER, Secretary.
Dated NEW-YORK, June 13, 1857.

State of New York, City and County of New-York, ss.—CHRISTOPHER LARKIN, of Southfield, in the County of Richmond, and State aforesaid, being duly sworn, doth depose and say, that on the 13th day of June, A. D., 1857, he served a notice, of which the notice hereto annexed is a true copy, upon ABRAHAM LOCKMAN, Sheriff of the County of Richmond, by delivering such notice to him personally, and leaving the same with him; and deponent further says that he knows the person, so served as aforesaid, to be the Sheriff of Richmond County, and the person to whom said notice was addressed or directed.

CHRISTOPHER LARKIN.

Sworn before me the 15th day of June, 1857.
EDMUND ELMENDORF, Jr., Commissioner of Deeds

THE BROOKLYN BOARD OF HEALTH.—The Board met yesterday morning at the usual hour. Present, the Mayor and Aldermen WALSH, PRESTON, FITHIAN and SCHOLS.

The rules of the Board, laid on the table on Saturday, were taken up and adopted,

The following rules for the government of the Board were presented by Alderman PRESTON and adopted:

The office of the Health Office in the City Hall shall be the office of the Board of Health, where all business appertaining to the duties of said Board shall be transacted. Said office shall be open to the public daily, between the hours of 9 A. M. and 3 P. M.

The Board of Health shall assemble daily, Sundays excepted, at said office, (unless otherwise ordered,) at 9 o'clock A. M.

A majority of the members of the Board of Health shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, but a less number shall be competent to receive complaints against nuisances and refer the same to the Health Officer for his report thereon.

At the meetings of the Board of Health the order of business shall be as follows, after the approval of the minutes of the preceding meeting:

1. Complaints of nuisances.
2. Report from the Health Officer.
3. Report of Committees.
4. Resolutions.
5. Miscellaneous business.

The Health Wardens shall report daily to the Health Officer, and be subject in the discharge of their duties to such directions as they may receive from him or the Board of Health.

The Health Officer shall keep in his office a register of all complaints of nuisances, the testimony taken in relation thereto, and the action of the Board thereon, said register to be open to the public inspection.

All complaints of nuisances, applications for permits, and all communications to the Board of Health from persons transacting business with said Board, must be made in writing, duly signed by the person or persons interested, to the "Office of the Board of Health," and the same shall be communicated early to said Board by the Health Officer.

All complaints of nuisances shall be referred to the Health Officer, whose duty it shall be to examine into and procure testimony in regard to the same, and thereupon report in writing the facts in connection therewith to the Board of Health.

The "Health Officer" shall communicate to parties interested the resolutions or directions of the Board of Health in the matter of nuisances and permits, for which purpose he may require the certificate of the Clerk of this Board as to the authenticity of such resolutions as for such purpose he shall prepare.

Permits to land goods were granted to the following named vessels:

Schooner Southern Belle, naval stores, Wilmington.
Brig James Bryant, sugar and molasses, Cardenas, made application, and in consequence of the absence of any person connected with the vessel, Alderman PRESTON was disposed to refuse permission. Health Warden FROST reported all correct, whereupon the application was granted.
Brig Mountain Eagle, sugar and molasses, Trinidad de Cuba.
Brig Belle Poule, sugar and molasses, Porto Rico.
Bark Star, sugar and molasses, Cienfuegos.
Bark Santiago, sugar and molasses, Trinidad.
Bark Philander, sugar and molasses, Sague la Grande.
Brig N. Stoors, sugar and molasses, Porto Rico.
Brig G. W. Horton was given permission to land cargo under the discretion of the Mayor, provided she comes from a healthy port.

Alderman PRESTON moved that the Health Wardens be directed to make a personal examination of each vessel, and notify the parties in charge to be present at the Board when they make application, so that they may be, if necessary, examined under oath. And that no permit be granted unless the master or persons in charge of the vessel be present as directed. The examination to be with a view of ascertaining the sanitary condition of the port from which they sailed, and that of the vessel.

Alderman SCHOLS opposed the resolution on the ground of its unnecessarily occupying the time of the Board and the officers of the vessels. The Board had all information necessary to be obtained from the Health Officer at Quarantine. He made thorough examination, and could judge as near as was necessary.

Alderman PRESTON quoted the case of the brig Mary referred to above, as an evidence of how far the Health Officer could be relied upon in his reports and examination.

Alderman WALSH sustained the resolution, contending that it was necessary that precautionary measures should be adopted.

The resolution was adopted.

The schooner Europa, of Havana, with molasses, applied for a permit. Her captain was sworn, and he testified that he knew of no sickness at Havana or any port in that vicinity. He arrived on the 2d of June.

Permission was granted.

The Board then adjourned.

Reappportionment of Members of Assembly.

The following bill was passed April 13, 1857. In accordance with its provisions, it will be observed, it becomes the duty of the Supervisors of this City and County, and of every County in the State which is entitled to more than one Member of Assembly, to assemble next Tuesday, each Board at its usual place of meeting, and define the new limits of the Assembly Districts. It is provided in the Constitution of the State of New-York (art. iii., sections 4 and 5) that "the Members of Assembly shall be apportioned among the several counties of this State, by the Legislature, as nearly as may be, according to the number of their respective inhabitants, excluding aliens and persons of color not taxed;" that an enumeration of the inhabitants of the State shall be taken every ten years, beginning in the year 1855, and that "the Legislature, at its first session after the return of every enumeration, shall reapportion the members of Assembly among the several counties of this State." Accordingly the Legislature at its recent session, being the first held after the return of the enumeration of 1855, passed the following law, found at chapter 337 of the Laws of 1857:

An Act for the apportionment of the Members of the Assembly of this State.—Passed April 13, 1857.

The people of the State of New-York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. The number of members of the Assembly of this State, hereafter to be chosen in the several counties thereof, shall be as follows:

In the County of Albany, four.
In the County of Alleghany, two.
In the County of Broome, one.
In the County of Cattaraugus, two.
In the County of Cayuga, two.
In the County of Chatauque, two.
In the County of Chemung, one.
In the County of Chenango, two.
In the County of Clinton, one.
In the County of Columbia, two.
In the County of Cortland, one.
In the County of Delaware, two.
In the County of Dutchess, two.
In the County of Erie, four.
In the County of Essex, one.
In the County of Franklin, one.
In the Counties of Fulton and Hamilton, one.
In the County of Genesee, one.
In the County of Greene, one.
In the County of Herkimer, two.
In the County of Jefferson, three.
In the County of Kings, seven.
In the County of Lewis, one.
In the County of Livingston, two.
In the County of Madison, two.
In the County of Monroe, three.
In the County of Montgomery, one.
In the City and County of New-York, seventeen.
In the County of Niagara, two.
In the County of Oneida, four.
In the County of Onondaga, three.
In the County of Ontario, two.
In the County of Orange, two.
In the County of Orleans, one.
In the County of Oswego, three.
In the County of Otsego, two.
In the County of Putnam, one.
In the County of Queens, two.
In the County of Rensselaer, three.
In the County of Richmond, one.
In the County of Rockland, one.
In the County of St. Lawrence, three.
In the County of Saratoga, two.
In the County of Schenectady, one.
In the County of Schoharie, one.
In the County of Schuyler, one.
In the County of Seneca, one.
In the County of Steuben, three.
In the County of Suffolk, two.
In the County of Sullivan, one.
In the County of Tioga, one.
In the County of Tompkins, one.
In the County of Ulster, three.
In the County of Warren, one.
In the County of Washington, two.
In the County of Wayne, two.
In the County of Westchester, three.
In the County of Wyoming, one.
In the County of Yates, one.

(By the apportionment of 1846, under which each succeeding Legislature has been elected heretofore, Cayuga County had three members of Assembly, Dutchess three, Genesee two, Greene two, Kings only three, Montgomery, two, New-York sixteen, Onondaga four, Orange three, Oswego two, Otsego three, Queens one, Schoharie two, Schuyler did not exist, Ulster two and Westchester two. The other Counties had the same number of representatives as under the new apportionment.) [redacted]

SEC. 2. The several Boards of Supervisors in each of the aforesaid Counties which are entitled to more than one member of Assembly, shall assemble on the third Tuesday of June next, at the place where their next annual meeting is to be held, and divide their respective Counties into Assembly Districts, equal to the number of members of Assembly to which such Counties are now severally entitled, and shall cause to be filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and the Clerks of their respective Counties, a description of such Assembly Districts, specifying the number of each district and the population thereof.

There will be a great gathering of interested City politicians at the City Hall to-day, to witness, and perhaps try to influence, the action of the Supervisors in redistricting the City.

ARREST OF A HOTEL THIEF.—JAMES HOWELL of Rochester, was arrested at the Astor House to day, at 11 o'clock, by Officer DEVOY, the Sheriff's officer, upon a charge of grand larceny, and was committed in default of $1,000 bail.

The chambermaid saw HOWELL coming out of the room of Mr. HAND with his valise, and knew it. She gave the alarm, and Mr. STETSON's son ran out of the office, caught the rogue, and held him until Officer DEVOY came and took him in charge. This is the second case of the kind at the Astor within the last week.

Upon searching him, the officer found a pawn-ticket, which led to the discovery of a valuable valise in the hands of a pawn-broker at No. 121 West Broadway, which had been stolen on the 16th of May, and for which $48 would have been paid, had it not been discovered.

HOWELL is a young man, only 22 years old, and says he was born in Massachusetts, and now has a home in Rochester. DEVOY visited him at the Tombs, and he owned up as to the valise. He said he would rather go down to hell than tell where his baggage is, as there are letters among it he don't wish any person to see. Nevertheless, DEVOY will find it before his descent to the hot place aforesaid.

NO MORE EXTORTION BY RAILROAD COMPANIES.—Fathers having large families of hooped and marriageable daughters who are bound to spend the Summer at a fashionable watering place, and take ten or fifteen large dress trunks apiece with them, containing the stuff which modern belles are made of—the fond fathers of such families will take a deep and abiding interest in a law which was passed by the recent Legislature, which will define, and in many cases lessen, their traveling expenses. All, indeed, who are making up their minds to take a new lease of life since the Comet has failed to eject them from the premises,—all who intend to be switched off from the stroll of a swept-at-private-expense if-at-all City, even if they take the bustle (and hoops) with them, into some "quiet rustic retreat," as Niagara and Saratoga have been facetiously termed by some of their frequenters, will take the following copy of the bill out of their pocket-books, having previously cut it out and laid it away for the express purpose, and snap their fingers at the conductor while they read it as they are borne away rapidly over the rail.

"Laws of 1857; chap. 185. An act to prevent extortion by Railroad Companies. Passed March 27, 1857.

The people of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1.—Any railroad company which shall ask and receive a greater rate of fare than that allowed by law, shall forfeit fifty dollars, which sum may be recovered, together with the excess so received, by the party paying the same. But it shall be lawful, and party paying the same. But it shall be lawful, and not construed as extortion, for any railroad company to take the legal rate of fare for one mile for any fractional distance less than a mile."

A STATEN ISLAND FERRY-BOAT AGROUND.—The Huguenot, of the Staten Island Ferry boats, ran aground on Robin's Reef yesterday afternoon, while on her way to the Island. Her passengers were taken off by the Hunchback and brought back to the City. The Josephine passed the boat after she had grounded, but being crowded with passengers herself, was unable to take off the Hunchback's. There was considerable commotion on the Huguenot after the boat grounded till the nature of the accident was ascertained. Some grumbling followed upon being obliged to come back to the City. The Huguenot remained aground several hours, when the ebb-tide set her afloat.

ACADEMY EXHIBITION.

SECOND NOTICE.

The name of a work of art, if it must have a name, should be an inevitable necessity. A picture, it is true, may very well dispense with a name, if it be a really complete picture, for it will either tell its own story, or, having no particular story to tell, will leave us to name it according to our feeling or our fancy. Hang MILLAIS' "Order of Release," for instance, in any exhibition, without a name, and who could hesitate to baptize it on the spot? A single glance reveals the meaning of the scene—the dismal tragedy of the past, the blessed rapture of the present moment. The Highland dress, the wounded arm, the fettered ankles of the stately prisoner—the passionate happiness that lights up the earnest features of the woman folded in his close embrace,—the official precision with which the military turnkey eyes the precious paper put into his hand by the triumphant wife,—these are enough. They bring back to you Culloden, and the red "Field of the Slain,"—they bring before you the little cabin which waits to receive its rescued owner back again into the bosom of his native hills and the freedom of the Highland air.

Or take, in another kind, TURNER'S wonderful painting of the "Old Téméraire." Who cares to know just what ship that is which moves so slowly down the broad and gleaming Thames, her great yards squared without a sail—her ports yawning, empty of the thunders that once shook the sea, her tall masts widowed of the ensign they had borne so proudly over all the deep; no longer a hulwark of Britain manned with "hearts of oak," but a helpless, decrepit hulk, drawn onward by a paltry puffing steam-tug to its doom? There is a pathos in all the picture—in the declining light of day and the sleeping tide, as in the mournful hulk that was once so terrible in its beauty; which is the picture's very soul, and this the picture yields you, nolens volens, if it pay you will.

But if an artist insists upon giving a name to his work, let him be careful what he does. His name will in nine cases out of ten betray him. It will test the reality of the thought which gave birth to his picture, the intensity of the study which has developed it. And this is an ordeal through which few men can pass unscathed. "A rose by any other name might smell as sweet," perhaps though we have always been inclined to doubt the truth of that proposition when it is applied to the actual rose, and to the actual rose-smelling mortals of the nineteenth century, who have been educated, from their youth up, to associate with the name of a rose those delicate anticipations, those almost sensations of the mind, which go far to determine the frail sensations of the body in all refined and cultivated constitutions. But a picture called by a name which does not and cannot belong to it, loses a portion of its positive value. See in our exhibition, for example, Mr. LEUTZE'S "Rose of the Alhambra." (No. 50.)

Every one who is familiar with Mr. IRVING'S charming story, (and to all others of course, the name of the picture must be a profound enigma,) naturally looks for a scene sparkling with vivacity and scintillating with humorous suggestions. He knows that the scene which Mr. LEUTZE has undertaken to represent, is not a serious, but a serio-comic scene. A hypochondriac King brought to his senses by the magic persuasions of a silver lute in the hands of a lovely young girl, called the "Rose of the Alhambra," and jumping up out of the catafalque, in which he had compelled his Queen to lay him, because he chose to believe himself dead, certainly is not a tragical figure. But Mr. LEUTZE'S reviving monarch looks as if he had verily come back from the dead, and all the assistants look as if they believe he had. The Queen who got up the farcical solemnity, is fainting in the arms of her attendants, a proceeding only to be excused by the supposition that she had hoped to carry the joke out to the end, and to fairly rid herself of a half-witted, incompetent spouse. The monks about the catafalque are praying with amazing vigor, and seem to be entirely overcome. The whole group suggests one of the most solemn and affecting incidents possible. The contrast between the name and the character of the painting is so violent as to become absurd. In thinking on it we hardly notice minor incongruities of detail which yet abound on the canvass. Why, for instance, is the "Rose of Alhambra" represented in a dress which resembles only that of the Moorish maiden familiar to the frequenters of the masked balls of Paris? The Rose was a Christian Rose, and respectably brought up. She gave concerts, it is true; but we have no reason for supposing that she got herself up in such a fantastic guise for the purpose of attracting the posteas.

M. LEUTZE is a clever painter; but it must be owned that he paints very bad pictures—pictures which no man less clever than he could venture to paint. There are grave defects in the handling of this work. And it seems to have suffered already a degradation of tone which does not improve its effect. In this respect the No. 473 of the same artist, otherwise commonplace enough, has the advantage of the "Rose of the Alhambra."

Mr. ROSEITER is another artist of repute, who falls into traps of his own setting. We have already said our say of his "Wise and Foolish Virgins," and of one or two other pictures exposed by him. His "Giorgione and his friends going to the Lido," (No. 98,) which strikes us as, on the whole, his best picture of the year, has this capital defect of nominal insignificance. Why Giorgione? Giorgione was a man of marked and intense character, if ever there lived such a man in this shadowy, uncertain world. Nor was his brief life uneventful. But what is there in this group of young men and women richly dressed which conveys one solitary notion of Giorgione's life and conversation to the mind? Even his face is not to be seen in the boat, yet his face was one worth painting, and painting carefully. The picture, too, is unequally handled. The sky on the right hand is deplorably crude and false—the water glassy and exceeding substantial. The gondola is not, indeed, "a painted ship upon a painted ocean," but it looks wonderfully like the boats one sees on French clocks, set upon waves of a vitreous composition. The reflections are reflections seen in a solid substance, not the delicious wavering reflections natural to such a medium as the green shallows of the Guidecca at such an hour. But a fine feeling for light is shown in the distance, and the pose of the gondola is capital. There is great merit, too, in the figure of the Capuchin rowing off to ask alms for his Convent, and casting a true friar's glance behind him at the gay ladies in the gondola of the great artist. The same sort of ineffectual, imperfect ability distinguishes the "Modern Christianity," (No. 61,) which we took at first to be the marriage ceremony of an old English cavalry general—but must suppose now to be intended for a composition to which Tuscany largely contributes. Very different from all these pictures are those of Mr. HUNT, which, though they do not quite bear out the promise of his last year's "Marguerite," show themselves at once to be what they were meant to be—closely studied, strongly felt, thoughtfully finished elaborations of ideas which were born sharp and clear in the artist's mind. The "Bouquetière" (No. 88) is one of the most attractive, and if we may use such a word in such a connection, one of the most attractive pictures in the Exhibition. You recur to it again and again with ever-increasing satisfaction. It is a bouquetière, and it is nothing more. It is just a poor child, seated under the lee of an old house, with her lap full of flowers, which she would be only too glad to sell if you would buy them. Her face is full of the quiescent misery of her class, a misery tinged with the inherent sweetness of her own nature. It is such a face as holds poets in their walks about the City streets; a face, telling in its tale of suppressed emotions, undeveloped instincts, imperfect perceptions, the ancient story of the millions of mankind. See, too, how wonderfully the canvas is covered! What figure will you find in these rooms so accurately, yet so unostentatiously modeled? Where will you look for finer truth of tone—for finer harmonies of coloring? There is knowledge enough in the treatment of that old scraped brick wall, to turn the heads of half the rash persons who have flaunted their flowery imbecility in our faces upon these walls. Yet one regrets the intense mannerism of this picture, and of all Mr. HUNT'S pictures. Because it shows that he is still where he was last year; still looking for precisely such effects as he likes in the pictures of MILLET as he learned in the atelier of COUTURE, without so much as trying to find any other effects in heaven or earth worth painting. Every picture which he has this year exposed shows the same characteristics. The "Belated Kid," (No. 519.) in which the eye is arrested by an extraordinary quality of atmospheric truth, is almost identical with the Bguquetière in character. So also is the "Sheep Pasture," (No. 70,) (which is moreover deformed by a ridiculously impossible sky;) and the "Girl at the Fountain" (No. 39) strikes a different note but on the same key. As a piece of modeling, this latter picture is singularly worthy of attention.

Clearness of conception, too, belongs to Mr. EHNINGER, who decidedly has improved upon his pictures of last year. His "Foray" (No. 484) is one of the very cleverest and most satisfactory pictures in the rooms. It is better than its name. For it is evidently not a "Foray," in general, but a particular Puritan Forny, as one easily perceives by a glance at the face of the horseman who pores over his Bible with such a sanctimonious and satisfied air, and by the thoroughly roundheaded character of the dismounted trooper who is leading his horse and driving before him a cow and a calf most righteously "raised" from the dairy of some diabolical "malignant." Mr. EHNINGER has treated his subject with the utmost simplicity, but with as much of force as of simplicity. His truth in the details of substance is not more remarkable (as in the case of so many other artists of this day it is apt to be) than the severe accuracy and artistic grace of his composition. In truth there is not a picture of incident in the exhibition so well composed as this. The landscape which is from the pencil of Mr. MIGNOT, is unfortunately neither equal to Mr. MIGNOT'S reputation, nor to Mr. EHNINGER'S figures. It is a gracefully conceived but very unequally painted bit of willowy marsh land, through which a brook runs, with a distant glimpse of a rich country in the sunset light. The distance is very happily treated, and so, too, the light which drowses through the trees upon the group of foragers. But the trees, themselves, are rather sketchily handled, and the lichenous rock in the foreground is picturesquely, as well as geologically false. It is in fact no rock at all, and is, or ought to be, quite put out of countenance by the admirable reality of the cattle coming down to the stream. Mr. MIGNOT, let us hope, will do fuller justice to his talent in South America under the influences and in the society of CHURCH. He has, indeed, a landscape, "Autumn," (No. 281,) in this exhibition which is a more favorable illustration of his delicate and peculiar but somewhat dangerous facility. Mr. EHNINGER'S other pictures of the year are less remarkable than the "Foray," which, as we have said, is a picture quite hors de ligne; the "Love me Love my Horse" (No. 430) wanting originality, though very effective and characteristic in treatment; and the "Michael Angelo in his Study," (No. 519,) exhibiting only the very fine qualities of the artist on a theme and upon a scale hardly fitted to afford them their just development. Mr. EHNINGER, however, decidedly does gain in regard to individuality of treatment, as Mr. HUNT does not, and as so few of our artists seem to dream of doing.

Mr. EDWIN WHITE ought not to be of this number, for he has rare gifts, and his pictures are always note-worthy; but we judge that he has not yet made up his mind to his own theory of colors. His "First New-England Thanksgiving," with very high merits as a composition, (the feeling of the whole group is excellent, and the boy in red whose back is turned to us, on the right hand, is a singularly expressive figure,) is uncertain, cold and hard in color. It is, moreover, very flat. This is a common fault with Mr. WHITE, and appears again in his "Hagar," which, however, is hardly finished far enough to justify positive comment. At least, however, Mr WHITE appears to know what it is that he means to paint, and why he means to paint it, which are two important steps taken towards painting something which men and women may take the trouble to see and to think about. And we wish Mr. WHITE, therefore, all success in the difficult task which he has undertaken of painting a historical picture which shall please both himself and a "Legislative Committee" for the State of Maryland. For the chances are that five "Legislative Committees" out of six would prefer the incomprehensible uproar labeled No. 360, in the catalogue of this Exhibition, and purporting to represent the retreat of the "embattled farmers" from Bunker's Hill (why "BREED'S?" BREED is dead and forgotten, but BUNKER is immortal, and can't be killed by any possible correction.) to all the "Bouquetieres," "Belated Kids," "Forays," and "Andes of Ecuador" in the world. In fact, there are a number of pictures in the Academy Rooms which we should be glad to dismiss with the general criticism, "suitable for Legislative Committees and omnibus doors." For what possible use can there be in criticizing the pictures of painters who can't by any chance ever paint any better, or much worse than they already do? One can be very facetious over a bad picture, and there are few funnier things to be found in a long day's stroll than some of the canvases which adorn the walls of this year's show. But then the people who paint such pictures don't think they have been perpetrating jokes, and they certainly would not be made the happier by our sprightly severity. If they could be made the better by it, well and good! But as that is past praying for, why indict the fate of MARSYAS on a bag-piper or an organ-grinder? We are not quite sure whether it will profit Mr. PEELE for us to tell him that he puts too much mud upon his palette to make his tints pleasing. But we like his "Sound of the Shell" (No. 398) so much—there is so much simple, sweet and real feeling in the conception of that flaxen-haired little fisher-girl's face, tremulously alive with the wonder of old ocean's voice sounding in the heart of his lost "little treasure," that we choose to believe something may come of our protest against such inconceivable confusion of color as Mr. PEELE has dashed into her dress, and such feebleness as destroys his background of cliff and sea.

Why do we stop with Mr. PEELE? We really do not know—excepting that we choose to reserve a variety of observations which we have still to make upon the portrait-painters, and the landscapists who have not yet passed under our notice, for another occasion.

ALMOST A COMET.—The telegraph office was the scene of rather an unusual freak of electricity on Saturday evening. At about 6¾ P. M. the wires were struck, at some point west, by a pretty smart shock of lightning, and a ball of fire the size of an orange dodged past CARPENTER'S elbow, and exploded with a report like that of a pistol. Three valuable relay magnets were badly burned, and copper wire in their neighborhood melted. We learn that the Albany office received a similar visit, and four fine magnets were rendered useless in consequence.—Troy Whig.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Testimony on Behalf of the Claimant Continued—The Declarations of Dr. Burdell, as to Having a Wife, last December—He was at the Artisans' Bank, New-York, on Oct. 28 and in this City on the Sunday and Monday Previous—Where Eckel was on the 28th of October—A Clear Alibi for Him—What Miss Van Ness Saw of the Doctor's Courtship, and his Love for Mrs. C.

SURROGATE'S COURT.—MONDAY, JUNE 15.

The Surrogate's Court was, this morning, again surrounded by a curious crowd, who were, however, kept at a respectful distance by the police and a heavy chain. Several counsel were present, to make applications in other causes, which have been delayed or put off in consequence of the protracted proceedings in this case.

MR. KNOWLTON'S TESTIMONY—DR. BURDELL SPEAKS OF HIS WIFE.

Stephen Knowlton, of Clinton-avenue, Brooklyn, in the commission business, Front-street, was examined.—I knew the late Dr. Burdell since 1845; saw him in the month of December or January last; I had a piece of property in Brooklyn which I wanted to exchange for country property; one morning Dr. Burdell came to my office, and said he had been informed I wanted to exchange for City property; I said I did not, that I wanted to get into the country; I had little conversation with him then; a day or two after, he called, when I was not in, and he left a note saying he would call the following day, which he did; I told him it was useless to go and see my property, as I wanted country property; he said he did not want my property for himself; he appeared to be a man in trouble, and from his manner I feared he was involved; I asked him if the property he had was on a good title; he said it was clear of incumbrance, but he had some little trouble in his family, and he did not know, if he sold it, whether his wife would be willing to sign the deed; but that if we made an exchange he could give me ample security that I should have a clear title.

Q.—What time did this conversation occur? A.—Either in December or the beginning of January last; from the middle of December to the middle the January last, some time.

Cross-examined—I never had any business with Dr. Burdell except this; I have met him at the Metropolitan Hotel frequently, and in the street; I have met him also with my partner, Josiah Rich, I think; I never was intimate with Dr. Burdell, except when we met he frequently spoke to me, or bowed to me generally; he said it was his property in Bond-street he wanted to sell to me or exchange; within a year or two past I have met him in Broadway with a lady, and he bowed to me; about two years ago last Winter, I met him at a party given by the Metropolitan Hotel; he spoke about the party and weather, but nothing particular; I have no recollection of speaking to him particularly from that time to the business about real estate, last December, that I have mentioned; I unfortunately was acquainted with Dr. Burdell, and consequently have been brought here, but I have no interest one way or the other in this controversy; I never spoke to Dr. Burdell more than half a minute in the street—a passing salutation; I fixed a price on my property, $25,000, but do not know what price the Doctor fixed for his, because I did not want city property; his manner when I saw him appeared as if he was in trouble; he was cheerful when I met him at the Metropolitan Hotel, and his manner at this time was different; the Doctor said he did not want it in his own name, or for himself, or something of that kind; when I asked him if he could give a clear title, he said he did not know if his wife would sign the deed, but he was fixing matters, and could give a clear title; my property has been for sale, or exchange for country property, off and on, for the last two years, about; I fix the date of this interview with Dr. Burdell as in December or January, from the fact that I went about the middle of February to see the property of a Mr. Ward, and it was a few weeks—three or four weeks—before that Dr. Burdell called on me; at the time of the Doctor's death this all came up fresh in my mind; I could not say positively that it was before the 1st of January; there was no snow on the ground; he wanted me to exchange; I said I could not, as I wanted country property; I named a higher price than I calculated to take, and he did not object to the price; I am quite certain he used the word "wife;" I hardly like to be positive as to anything now a-days.

Q.—Do you recollect, and are you positive he used the word wife? A.—I am as positive as a man can be, that when I spoke about giving the title, he said his wife might object to sign the deed.

Q.—Did he not use the word "lady?" A.—I don't think he did; he spoke of his family, and I had no reason for supposing he had not a family, for I saw him frequently walk with a lady; I am sure he used the word "family;" I invited him into the house, but he did not come; I had told him I would not exchange for City property; from his conversation, I thought there was something wrong somewhere, when he spoke of not wanting it in his own name; he appeared different from what he did when I saw him before, to speak to, and I thought he was embarrassed; he spoke of the "difficulty in his family;" what that family consisted of I did not know; the Doctor appeared desirous to have my place; I told him I wanted a place ten to twenty miles from the City, near a depot, where I could get to my business early; I do not know Mrs. Cunningham or any of her family; I saw the Doctor only twice in regard to this—once at the office in Front-street, and once when I brought him to see my place; cannot recollect what he said in Front-street, exactly; he said he would go over to see my place; I do not know of his looking over my grounds, except when I was with him; no ladies were with him then; so far as I know, he never sent any ladies to look at the place; he never introduced any one to me as his wife; he never mentioned the name of any one he married; I cannot tell at what stage of the conversation it was he spoke about his wife, except that it was when I feared there was something wrong about his title, and questioned him about it; I told him from the start that I wanted country property.

Q.—Might he not have told you there was a lady in the house, who had a lease, and who might not be willing to sign off, but that he would give you security. A.—I am quite positive there was nothing of that kind said: the first time when he came to my office, he asked if Mr. Knowlton was in, and I looked up from my desk, when he said "How do you do, Mr. Knowlton?"; I cannot give the precise words of our conversation, but can give you the sum and substance of it; I suppose the last thing he said, before bidding me "good day," was that he would go over and look at my property; when I heard of Dr. Burdell's death, this circumstance flashed up in my mind; I may have spoken of it to three or four persons; I think I spoke to Dr. Powell about it, about a week after the death of Dr. Burdell; I do not know to who else I spoke about it, until some gentlemen from Mr. Clinton's office called to see me about it, and wanted to know what I knew about this; I was very uncivil to him because I did not want to be brought into this case.

DR. BURDELL IN NEW-YORK ON OCT. 28.

Mr. Charles T. Leake, Cashier of the Artisans' Bank, residing in Thirty-first-street, was called to produce the book of minutes of the Artisans' Bank. He stated that Dr. Burdell attended the meeting of the Board of Directors on the 24th and on the 28th of October, 1856; witness saw him on both occasions; Mr. Frazer resigned as Vice-President on the 24th of October, and on the 28th Dr. Burdell brought forward some business relative to that resignation; he was also present on the 31st of October, at the meeting of the Board; also present on the 14th and 18th and 28th of November; not present on the 2d of December, but was on the 5th of December.

Cross-examined—I do not know that there was any difficulty which led to the resignation of Mr. Frazer as Vice-President; the causes which led to his resignation originated probably a month before that event; they were spoken of in the Bank during that time, and by the other directors; I have no recollection of Dr. Burdell being present all the times his name is entered on the minutes, aside from the record; I recollect that he was there on the meeting of the 28th—that being the meeting after Mr. Frazer's resignation; the Board usually met at 9½ o'clock, and sat from an hour to an hour and a half.

Mr. Edwards Pierrepont, counsellor at law, was called to identify a paper produced, as an assignment which he had executed in blank, of a judgment against William Burdell, (brother of the Doctor,) on the payment of a judgment had by Wm. Burdell against Dr. Burdell, by the latter; Wm. Burdell had recovered a judgment against Harvey Burdell; I had a judgment which I recovered against William, for disbursements, &c., expended in his business, as I had been his counsel for years; the Court ordered that the judgment against Harvey be applied, as far as it went in payment of my judgment against William; this amount, Harvey was compelled by law to pay me, irrespective of any assignment; however, on Harvey paying me the amount of the judgment against him, I assigned to him the whole judgment against William.

Charles E. Babcock called and examined, stated that in October, 1856, he was a Director of the Artisans' Bank; according to the record of minutes, Mr. Frazer resigned on the 24th of October, and remembers from that circumstance that Dr. Burdell was present at the next meeting of the Board (the 28th.) The session on that day was later than usual; it probably broke up after eleven o'clock.

Cross-examined—From three to four weeks before Mr. Frazer resigned, the subject which led to his resignation was talked of by the Directors; it was regarded as a private matter, until after the resignation of Mr. Frazer.

DANIEL R. TAYLOR RECALLED.

Mr. Daniel R. Taylor was recalled, and cross-examined by Mr. Tilden; Produced his diary, with the entry: "Oct. 28, United States Court—Warner vs. Griffin—10 A. M.;" there was no entry of that suit on the 27th; the Attorney of record, (Mr. Kirkland,) died a few days before this; witnesses were present on the 28th to attend the trial of that cause; another case was on and it went off; there was also an entry of the case on the 29th of October, on the diary, which was in consequence of the request of Mr. Kirkland to examine the calendar; I think there was no regular adjournment of the cause, except when Judge DEAN was present; a stranger to me, representing himself as a relative of Dr. Burdell, called upon me, recently, to inquire what I knew about this matter; I do not know of any witnesses being subpœnaed for Monday, the 27th of October; I have no recollection of a formal postponement of the cause except once, on the 27th; I understood the cause was to be tried on the 27th; the subpœnas were prepared and issued that day, after leaving court, so as to have the witnesses ready the next day. [A subpœna, dated Oct. 27, was handed to witness, which he identified as one issued in that cause.]

MR. FRAZER'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. Alexander Frazer, formerly Vice-President of the Artisans' Bank, was called, and stated that he knew Dr. Burdell intimately; on the 24th of October last witness resigned as Vice-President, and saw the Doctor present; on the 28th Dr. Burdell transacted business for witness at the Board; saw the Doctor in the City (thinks it was in Bond street) on the afternoon of the 24th of October, before dinner; had business with him then; thinks he also saw him on Sunday, Oct. 26, and remembers him dining at the La Farge Hotel; Mrs. Frazer was not well that day, and was not present at dinner, and Dr. Burdell sat next to witness; witness' son was present at dinner; about that period Dr. Burdell filled his son's tooth; the Doctor and witness made an arrangement as to what should be done at the meeting of the Board on Tuesday, between the meetings on the 24th and 28th; the last of the week after the 24th of October, the doctor left the City; in the Summer of 1856, witness and his family were introduced to Mrs. Cunningham by Dr. Burdell; the Doctor appeared frequent in his attentions to her; witness introduced Dr. Burdell to Dr. Beecher in reference to putting Mrs. Cunningham's youngest daughter to school there; Mr. Platt, (President of the Artisans' Bank,) his wife, and a large company, were staying at Congress Hall, Saratoga, and Dr. Burdell introduced Mrs. Cunningham to them; the Doctor represented her as a widow worth $100,000, and he was desirous of showing her attention; I was the person who signed the bond for Dr. Burdell on the occasion of the suits for breach of promise, &c.: up to that time I supposed his intercourse with her to be friendly; I met them at a party of a Mrs. Williams; the Doctor has taken her and her daughter to visit at my house; on the day of the arrest for the breach of promise suit, I went with the Doctor to the Sheriff's office; I advised him to dispose of or settle the suit, and have no such suits over him; I said I thought it would be a great detriment to him to have suits of that nature hanging over him; that whatever it might cost him he ought to get the suits out of the way; I called to see Mrs. Cunningham, to see if those suits could be disposed of; I called at the instance of Dr. Burdell; Mrs. Cunningham said she would not settle, except in an honorable manner; that she did not care for money; after that I heard from the Doctor that the suits were settled; that he had not given her anything, and that each party paid their own costs; I do not remember his saying anything especially against her; he said they were going to leave No. 31 Bond-street; they were friendly, as I supposed; the Doctor's hair was dyed a year or two before his death; I think the Doctor told me once it was Mrs. Cunningham who dyed it.

Cross-examined—Do not remember distinctly that on the evening of Oct. 24 the Doctor had a conversation with me; I think he called on that evening; I am pretty certain about his dining with me on Sunday, Oct. 26, because of my wife being sick on that day, and my son preparing to go away; I think we were together nearly every day, at that period, for a week; my resignation had not been the subject of conversation until it took place; it was my impression that the Doctor called on me about half past seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, Oct. 28; I would not like to state positively; I was not present at the meeting of the Board of the 28th; I saw the Doctor at dinner at five o'clock, I think; he then spoke about the Bank; there was some business to transact that day that was put off, and he explained to me why he had not done it; I think, on the evening of the 28th, he said the business would be accomplished at some future meeting; I have looked at my papers, but there is nothing in them to fix the fact of the Doctor being here between the 24th and 28th of October; I am satisfied in my own mind that I saw the Doctor every day between those dates; on Thursday last, I think, I was sent for to Mr. Romeyn's office, and there saw him and Mrs. Cunningham, (Burdell;) she asked me if I remembered seeing the Doctor here on the 26th of October, (Sunday,) and Mrs. Frazer being sick; I said I had; she asked me also if I did not remember calling at No. 31 Bond-street on Saturday, the 25th of October; I said I did not. [The release by Mrs. Cunningham was here shown to witness, which he identified as having been shown him by Dr. Burdell, on the Sunday before his death.] The Doctor told me he was going to send it to Herkimer for safe-keeping.

To the Surrogate—My memory is more distinct as to seeing the Doctor on Saturday and Monday, (October 25th and 27th,) than it is of seeing him on the evening of Tuesday, the 28th.

Mr. Milo J. Jennings, a jeweler, from Saratoga, was called to prove that in the Summer of 1855, while Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Cunningham were on there, the Doctor introduced her and her daughter to him; spoke highly of her, and seemed very solicitous that she should appear amiable and to advantage.

Augustine Evrine, head waiter at the La Farge Hotel, proved some little circumstances corroborative of Mr. Frazer's testimony—as the fact of his wife being ill, and Dr. Burdell sitting with him and his son on that occasion. Dr. Burdell, he said, generally partook of almost everything on the table.

THE DOCTOR TAKES MRS. CUNNINGHAM TO ELIZABETHTOWN.

Abraham Schenck, keeper of a public house in Elizabethtown, testified that in the Spring of 1855, Dr. Burdell brought Mrs. Cunningham there, and introduced her as a rich widow who he wanted to purchase property in the neighborhood; witness frequently joked the Doctor about her; they slept at his house one night, when they had separate rooms.

Mr. James Fairbank, of the same place, corroborated the previous witness: The Doctor seemed very attentive to Mrs. Cunningham; he mentioned to witness that he had got a divorce for a niece of his from a Mr. Vorst, who had been the Doctor's agent in buying property out at Elizabethtown, and that Mrs. Cunningham had stepped forward as the next friend of his niece in assisting to get the divorce.

MR. ECKEL'S BOOKCASE BEDSTEAD.

Wm. Gardner, a carman, of No. 331 Ninth-avenue, testified that a few days after the close of the Industrial Fair, at the Crystal Palace, in October last, he carted a bookcase bedstead from there to No. 31 Bond-street, and carried it up to the room occupied by Mr. Eckel; and that on that occasion, a gentleman in the house told him to be careful not to hit the wall.

THE AWNING-RING.

Leopold Silverthau, a jeweler, in the Bowery, testified that Dr. Burdell had, some time last year, purchased a plain gold ring of him; but he could not identify the one worn by Mrs. Cunningham as the one he sold the Doctor; he once requested the Doctor to carry a bracelet he had repaired, to Mrs. Cunningham.

THE DOCTOR PRICES PLUM-CAKE.

Mr. Peteler, a confectioner, in Broadway, testified that on the 15th of October, 1856, Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Cunningham called to have a list made out for a party to be given on the 18th, and that the Doctor paid the bill.

AN ALIBI FOR ECKEL—WHERE HE WAS ON THE NIGHT OF THE MARRIAGE.

George W. Douglass, of No. 363 Eighth-avenue, was called and testified that prior to last Fall he and Mr. Eckel roomed together at No. 931 Broadway; that on the 15th of October, Mr. Eckel, after having advertised for a room and partial board, got a note from No. 31 Bond-street, and on examination of the house went there to live; that neither he nor Mr. Eckel had known Mrs. Cunningham or any one there previous to that; that for the first few days Mr. Eckel slept in the third-story back room, but on the 28th of October, witness purchased a bookcase bedstead of a Mr. Smith at the Crystal Palace, which was put up in the hall-room, third story, into which Mr. Eckel moved; witness was for some time negotiating about the purchase of the bedstead; on Sunday evening, Oct. 26, he went over to Bond-street to get Mr. Eckel's decided answer as to how much he should pay for it; on that occasion he saw Dr. Burdell in the house: on Monday, Oct. 27, he arranged with Smith to give him $104 for the bedstead, provided he carted it home at his own expense; on Tuesday the bedstead was sent home, and between seven and eight o'clock in the evening witness called on Mr. Eckel, and found him in the small room, regulating his things; he remained with Eckel about one hour and a half, when they went out together and had some supper in Broadway, after which Mr. Eckel accompanied witness as far as Union-square, and they separated; from towards eight o'clock, when he went to Eckel's room, he did not lose sight of him a minute until eleven o'clock, when they separated at Union-square; saw none of the family in the house that evening except Helen; a few days before at a party at Bond-street, witness saw Mr. Eckel wear a wig; before that he was pretty bald; never knew him to wear one before that; Mr. Eckel, after removing to Bond-street, slept several nights with the witness at No. 931 Broadway—one occasion five or six nights consecutively; witness was then in the laundry business; had done business for Mr. Eckel frequently, for which he paid him liberally.

THE DOCTOR INTRODUCES MRS. C. TO A SHOE STORE.

Sampson Reede, of No. 369 Bowery, who keeps a boot and shoe store, testified that the Doctor was a customer of his, and about eighteen months ago he introduced Mrs. Cunningham to him as "one of our folks," desiring witness to give her a good article; witness once joked the Doctor about the "young widow;" the Doctor said she was a first-rate woman, and better than all, she had $50,000. [Laughter.]

MISS VAN NESS TESTIFIES TO THE DOCTOR'S COURTSHIP OF MRS. C., AND HIS ARRANGEMENTS TO MARRY HER.

Hester Van Ness, of No. 104 Fourth-avenue, was called and testified that she knew Mrs. Cunningham intimately for the last twelve years; knew her former husband. Mr. Cunningham; first saw Dr. Burdell at Mrs. C.'s house, in Twenty-fourth-street, two years ago last Winter; he came there several times; witness, frequently saw him, her habit being often to spend the evening with Mrs. C.; from that Mrs. C. went to Twelfth-street, to Dr. Wollington's for a few weeks, where Doctor Burdell frequently visited her; that Miss Jouca and the Doctor both solicited Mrs. Cunningham to go to Bond-street to board, which she did against the advice of witness, who thought it improper for her as a widow to board in the house with the Doctor, a bachelor, paying her attentions; witness did not visit her so often as formerly, after she went to Bond-street; in the Fall of 1855, while boarding in Bond-street, she was on one occasion very ill, and witness was sent for; when she arrived she went directly up to her room, and found Mrs. Cunningham in bed, and Doctor Burdell sitting beside her; he did not wish any one to go in to disturb her, but Mrs. C. said she should see witness; the Doctor said to witness: "She must see you, although it is wrong; she is very low; I would give my own life to save here, for she is the dearest woman I have ever known!" this language only corresponded with what he had always said; he said he had sat up night and day with her; they stated to witness that Mrs. Cunningham had become dizzy and fallen on the stove; her face was badly cut, and she had bled a great deal; last Summer witness accompanied the Doctor and Mrs. Cunningham to Saratoga; they went by the boat; the doctor stopped at Congress Hall, and Mrs. C. and witness at Dr. Beecher's seminary; he came to see Mrs. C. generally three times a day while there, and spent his evenings with them; he was very attentive and kind, just as witness had always seen him toward Mrs. C.; while Mrs. C. was at Twenty-fourth-street he spoke very plainly before witness, who was regarded as a friend of both, and his manner and language was very lendearing—even foolishly so; there was no privacy as to the relations existing between Mrs. Cunningham and Dr. Burdell, before witness; they asked her to be bridesmaid when they would be married; the doctor wanted witness to get Mrs. Cunningham to throw off her black dresses when she was only a year a widow, and remarked that a fine woman like her should not bury herself for any man; his manner towards her always continued the same to the last; witness saw no change; witness remained at Saratoga for a week after Mrs. Cunningham, and on her return, Mrs. Cunningham came to her, and began to tell her about some trouble she had with Dr. Burdell; witness said she did not want to hear it—that Mrs. Cunningham had taken Dr. Burdell for her friend; at this time witness was making and altering dresses for her intended marriage; some days after, Mrs. Cunningham came, and said they were going to be married; that she had had much unhappiness, but that the Doctor had come to his senses, and was going to act like a man; she said that he proposed, as his friends had made so much trouble, that she should be married privately, let no one know, and in the Spring go to Europe, and that by the time they returned it would be an old story, and he would not be annoyed; she wanted her to be a witness to the marriage, but she (Miss Van Ness) stated that she had objections to be present as a witness at a private marriage, and would not do it for her own sister; Mrs. C. wept, and tried to induce witness to do so, but she would not; witness advised her, if the Doctor was not man enough to come publicly forward, she ought to give him up; she answered that witness did not know how much she loved him; after that on an occasion the witness went about some dress, which she wanted Mrs. Cunningham to come and fit on, Mrs. C. and the Doctor were in the basement; Mrs. C. said she could not go, because they were expecting a book-case home; after that Mrs. C. called one day, and said to witness if she was not a good girl she should not be bridesmaid; witness replied she did not care about being bridesmaid so long as she (Mrs. C.) looked so happy; Mrs. C. replied, "All my business is settled;" Witness saw Dr. Burdell in Bond-street on the day of his death; she never heard the Doctor speak of Mrs. Cunningham except in the highest terms.

The cross-examination elicited nothing new from this witness, nor did it shake her testimony in any particular.

It being near 7 o'clock, the Court adjourned to 10 o'clock to-day.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge Maynard and a Jury.

Catherine Hern, by Allen P. Man, her Guardian, vs. John Osmers.—This action was brought to recover $500 damages, for injuries received by the plaintiff, in April, 1856, by falling into the coal-hole in front of the defendant's residence, No. 107 Prince-street. The plaintiff, while passing through Prince-street, in front of the premises, stepped upon the iron covering, which was not securely fastened, and fell through, whereby she was dangerously injured, and became, and had continued, up to the present time, unwell, in consequence. Witnesses were called, to testify to the occurrence and the illness which ensued. The Jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff—$280, with costs.

of the hide imported it will be impossible to replace their stock at the prices asked for Leather. It is the general impression, both with the trade and manufacturers, that prices have already reached their lowest point, and with a little firmness on the part of dealers, and but a light stock to fall back on, the market must certainly advance. Heavy Buenos Ayres and good damaged Leather is very scarce and much sought after. Oak tanned is firm."

Laboratory, Middle Village, L. I., where every variety of beautiful designs, many of which are entirely new, will be found.
Mr. H. has no doubt his customers will be sufficiently satisfied with the quality of his works without his enumerating the number of premiums received (he has a few) at the late fairs, which has long since become almost a by-word. Sufficient to say that he will challenge the world to produce any better works, and is perfectly willing, if necessary, to test the same in any way where there are impartial parties to decide. The subscriber pledges himself that everything shall be as represented. Goods delivered in any part of the City free of charge.

JOSEPH G. & I. EDGE, JR.—FIRST PREMIUM FIREWORKS.—The subscribers claim to be the only manufacturers of "First Premium Fireworks" in the United States, having taken every first premium for fireworks offered by the American Institute for the past seven years, also at the Marshall testimonial.
They beg to state that they have entered their works for competition every year for the past four years at the Fairs of the American Institute, and also at the World's Fair, but none have offered to compete with them, which they deem conclusive evidence of their superiority over all other makers inasmuch as they decline placing their works in competition JOSEPH G. & I. New-York Daily Times.

NEW-YORK, TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The Cunard steamship Europa, now in her tenth day out from Liverpool, with three days' later news from Europe, had not been heard from at Halifax at a late hour last night.

The bids for carrying the United States mails overland to the Pacific have been published, and the names of the applicants, together with the amounts for which they propose to do the service, will be found under our telegraphic head.

A deficit of $550,000 has been discovered in the Ohio State Treasury, caused, as alleged, by the defalcation of JOHN G. BRESLIN, a former Treasurer. It will not prevent the payment of the July interest on the State debt.

A fire occurred in Syracuse on Sunday, in a row of new brick stores on South Salina-street, which destroyed property to the value of $50,000.

The excitement of yesterday centred in the House of Records and the Street Commissioner's Office. The bogus yellow fever panic—the Quarantine excitement—the Police embroglio—all disappeared from the public consideration; there is nothing talked of but this, Who is the Street Commissioner? Early yesterday morning DANIEL D. CONOVER, who was appointed on Saturday by Gov. KING to the office made vacant by the death of "young JO TAYLOR," again appeared at the Street Commissioner's Office and claimed it as his. Deputy TURNER again refused to recognize him as "his successor." The Mayor's police, to the number of some two hundred, were in and around the office to sustain Mr. TURNER—not that Mr. TURNER is the Mayor's man, but that very decidedly Mr. CONOVER is not. Fifty-four policemen who hold from the new Board were on hand to enforce the claims of Mr. CONOVER. There was no physical collision until the hour for shutting up the office arrived, when Mr. TURNER ordered all hands to leave the office. As everybody refused to go, the stronger party proceeded gradually to eject by force each of the weaker. Captain SPEIGHT, of the new Police, was carried out in the arms of the old Police, kicking, striking, scratching, and, but not seriously, scratched. When they came to Mr. CONOVER they were very polite, but when politeness failed, they gathered him up, and with the greatest care deposited him outside. The Sheriff's officers, to complicate the matter more, during the day took possession of the office by virtue of three old executions. At midnight, last night, the Sheriff still occupied the premises, a large force of police guarding it and all the entrances to it to prevent accidents. This morning the fight will be resumed. The infernal regions of the ancients were guarded by a three-headed Cerberus—our Metropolitan Hades has, thus far, enjoyed but a double-head, but to-day, so far as the Street Department is concerned, a third is likely to be added. Yesterday morning the Mayor appointed CHARLES DEVLIN, Contractor, to the Street Commissionership, already doubly occupied. The Democratic members of the Board of Aldermen and Supervisors were in caucus most of the day, in relation to this appointment—indeed, until near 5½ o'clock—so late that the other members organized and adjourned before they could bring the result of their deliberations in form before the Board of Aldermen. The Board meets again to-night, when probably the third man will be appointed, and the fight will be triangular and promising, certainly.

In the Board of Councilmen, last evening, a great number of bills from the Board of Aldermen were read a third time, having reference chiefly to paving, curbing and guttering streets, flagging sidewalks, filling sunken lots, and other matters of a similar character. The purchase of the Arsenal property was finally affirmed. The purchase of land on Ward's Island was referred back to a Committee of the Whole. An important memorial was presented by the medical examiners of the various life insurance companies as to the consequences of the filthy condition of the streets.

To-day the Supervisors should meet to re-district the City into Assembly Districts.

The Committee appointed to receive General WALKER leave for Perth Amboy at 2 o'clock to-day. They expect to return with their guest 7 P. M., when he will be formally received in front of the City Hall.

The testimony on behalf of the claimant, before the Surrogate, yesterday, proves conclusively that either Dr. BURDELL was ubiquitous, or there has been no slight departure from truth on the part of witnesses for either side; for while it has been positively sworn that he was in Herkimer on the 25th, 26th, and 27th of October last, yesterday's evidence shows him to have been in New-York. Again, in his declarations of and relations to Mrs. Cunningham, he appears Janus-like—at one and the same time writing and speaking of her as a "she devil" and an "angel," a "fiend in human shape," and "the best woman that ever lived," for whom "he would sacrifice his life." Miss VAN ZILE, who had a long experience, testifies to the most unvarying and tender intercourse between them.

California Politics.

The Democracy in California seem to be in little better condition than in New-York. Indeed, the influences at work there are in no small degree a graft from Tammany Hall, carried out by Colonel STEVENSON'S regiment, and subsequently nourished into active life by "DAVE" BRODERICK, Senator elect, and formerly of this City. DAVE, it will be remembered, was nominated for Congress some ten years ago by the Democracy of the Third District. His associations in those days were such that the better portion of his party refused to become accessory to his election, and so "bolted" the ticket, and secured the election of his competitor. DAVE was creditably ambitious, and took advantage of the field which California offered, to renew the battle for political distinction. At San Francisco he soon organized the Democratic Party upon the Tammany Hall basis. By shrewd and unscrupulous operation of the tactics which he learned in the school of his early political education, he was not long in securing and wielding a powerful influence in the Democratic Party, which he made felt in every primary meeting, State or County Convention and election. From the beginning he fastened his eye upon the Senatorship,—and after years of struggle and defeat, in which he expended a newly-acquired fortune, DAVE obtained the object for which he had fought so desperately, and last Winter took his seat in the Senate at Washington, in company with his ancient foe, Dr. GWIN.

The cup of his ambition seemed full; but BRODERICK could not be content while he saw "Mordecai sitting at the King's gate." He was determined to wield undivided power to dispense the Federal patronage on the Pacific slope at will, punish his enemies, and so illustrate his triumph in the humiliation of his foes. Upon the advent of the present Administration he commenced this new contest with characteristic self-confidence and boldness. GWIN, with [illegible] equal energy and determination, [illegible] greater skill, accepted the gauntlet, and won the fight. In the valuable appointments for California, Dr. GWIN secured the cream for his friends, leaving the whey for those who had relied on his indiscreet competitor. BRODERICK rent his garments in wrath, left the White House with cursings, and departed immediately for California, vowing a determination to show the President that he was not to be thus trifled with.

Recent accounts indicate that he is now hesitating as to whether he shall continue in the Democratic Party to divide it and place himself at the head of the strongest wing, or go over at once to the Republicans. As the question with him is evidently one of personal expediency merely, unembarrassed by any considerations of principle, we are not disposed to give him credit for his inclination to abandon the Slaveocracy. If he sees a reasonable chance of making successful fight for supremacy among his old party affiliations, he will remain where he is. If satisfied that all is lost there, he will step over to the Republicans and try for a more successful deal. This sort of floundering is indicative of a failing position. The Republicans have nothing to hope from such an acquisition; and if the Administration at Washington are satisfied of the selfish character of Senator BRODERICK'S partisan fealty, they will be apt to see that they were right in giving greater heed to the counsel of his rival, and that his cooperation can only be secured at too great a price for profitable investment. Meantime the disorganization of the Democratic Party in California, already consequent upon BRODERICK'S movements since his return from Washington, at present promises an easy triumph to the opposition. If that event should happen, the ambitious Senator will find himself below par on his return to the Federal Capitol.

England in the Gulf of Panama.

The reported cession to Great Britain of a New-Granadian island in the Bay of Panama is not confirmed by the last advices from the Isthmus. On the contrary, our special correspondent writes that the Mackintosh claim has been settled by the transfer of over half a million dollars in New-Granadian "promises to pay." As it was in settlement of this claim that the grant of territory was alleged to have been made, there can be no doubt that the report of an absolute cession was erroneous. It is fortunate for our relations with Great Britain that this is so. Her acquisition of sovereignty over any portion of New-Granadian territory commanding the interoceanic communication, would have been looked upon by our Government with serious distrust and alarm, and have afforded occasion for a diplomatic discussion more definite and damaging in its results than any which have hitherto arisen out of Central American affairs.

That Great Britain would be glad to secure a point in the Gulf of Panama from which to menace us in time of war is undoubtedly true. Such a transaction would be in precise accordance with her long-established policy of setting forts down before the doors of other nations, all over the world, with a view to holding a check over them all, and so by menace securing compliance with such conditions of peace as she may choose to impose. It is in pursuance of this policy that she holds on to her North-American Provinces, and has acquired Gibraltar, Jamaica, and other West-India Islands, Malta, Hong Hong, and the East Indies, together with many another possession dotted all over the map of the world. The purpose of Great Britain in thus flaunting her purpled flag in the face of all nations is so evidently unfriendly, so expressive of an intention to hold the power of doing harm, and so anticipative of future hostilities, that our people and Government will be excused for viewing with distrust any attempt on her part to further extend that policy with reference to this Continent. We would not advocate any undue sensitiveness upon such a point as this; but it is impossible to review the history of British Colonial progress and its attendant results, without conviction that a prudent regard for our own peace and security requires us to avail ourselves of all legitimate means to thwart her acquisitive policy whenever aimed against American interests. British territorial expansion of itself is something with which we have nothing to do; but when undertaken for the clear purpose of our injury, it becomes our imperative duty to resist and defeat it.

The late Hon. JOHN M. CLAYTON has frequently stated to the writer, that one of his chief objects in negotiating the Central-American treaty was to commit Great Britain to the abandonment of her policy of acquisition, so far as Central America was concerned, for the express purpose of preventing her from rearing a Malta in our way to and from the Pacific. Her acquisition of an island in the Gulf of Panama would be in clear violation of that instrument, and for that reason also would lead to unfortunate disturbance of the harmony which should subsist between us as Christian nations. The danger of any such difficulty seems past for the present, and it would scarcely be a profitable subject of comment now were it not for rumors that the objectionable project has really been entertained, and is not yet altogether abandoned.

The British Mail Steamship Company operating on the South Pacific coast, has its depôt on the Island of Taboga; and the Government has long coveted the same location for the purposes of a naval station, for which it is exceedingly well adapted. It is now said that the "promises to pay" with which the settlement of the Mackintosh claim was effected by New-Granada are secured by some sort of a mortgage upon the Island of Taboga. If this be true, as it is exceedingly doubtful whether New-Granada will ever be sufficiently in funds to redeem her promises, it would seem probable that at no distant day John Bull will be looking about for some plausible mode of evading his treaty obligations, in order to possess himself of his coveted territorial surety. It behooves our Government to keep a sharp eye on PALMERSTON, whose diplomacy is subtle as TALLEYRAND'S, and quite as unprincipled, at least wherever the United States are concerned.

AN ABSURD ERROR.—The art of reporting for newspapers being in its infancy in the State of Virginia, public speakers there are liable to be very strangely misrepresented, unless they furnish the reports of their own speeches to the local papers. A very absurd instance occurred in the reports published of the speech of Ex-President TYLER, at Jamestown, on the occasion of the celebration of the Anniversary of the Settlement of that decayed town. Mr. TYLER was reported to have said that STEWART'S marble palace in this City was built out of the profits of three thousand free negroes who were sent to New-York to be sold. We were a good deal puzzled by this strange statement: but the publication of Mr. TYLER'S oration in the Richmond Inquirer, enables us to correct the absurd blunder. Mr. TYLER, in alluding to the operations of DUNMORE in Virginia, just previous to the War of Independence, said:

"He proclaimed emancipation to the negroes, and invited them to join his standard. They did so in large numbers; and humanity, at this day, weeps over their cruel sufferings. Many were sent to the West Indies, while others were sent to New York to be forwarded elsewhere. From an aged citizen of Staten Island, (Mr. ISAAC BELL,) I learned a few years ago that the marble mercantile palace of A. T. STEWART is built upon the burial place of 3,000 of these unfortunates."

This is perfectly clear and comprehensible. All that Mr. TYLER meant to say was, that STEWART'S marble store occupies the site of what was once a negro burial-ground. As to humanity weeping over the sufferings of these freed slaves in being removed from Virginia to New-York, that is as it may be. If humanity has any tears to shed over the sufferings of Virginia Slaves, she will prefer to drop them over the thousands who are transported, at the present day, from Richmond to the cotton and sugar fields of Louisiana rather than waste them on the emancipated negroes who died and were buried in this City seventy-five years ago.

To the Pacific Overland.

The Post-Office Department at Washington is now engaged in considering the various bids for carrying the mails of the United States overland, from the valley of the Mississippi to San Francisco. Within a few days we may expect to learn who is the successful bidder,—and by which of the several routes proposed this new avenue of communication is to be opened. In the decision of these important questions Postmaster-General BROWN is possessed of a wide discretion, carrying with it, of course, and devolving upon that officer, the discharge of a weighty responsibility. The present is not an ordinary question of executive ability and financial economy, such as generally is supposed to govern and decide postal lettings. In the present case the Postmaster-General has unlimited power to reject each bid, regardless of its character, and to decide—as freely as though bids had not been called for—the route over which the mail shall be carried, and the parties to whom the contract shall be awarded.

In the selection of a route several considerations are important to be borne in mind. If possible this postal service and the "relay" stations which it will necessitate, should be made to afford incidental aid and protection to overland emigration, which can only be secured by the selection of a route possessing natural facilities for trans-continental travel. Regard should also be paid to securing the greatest possible dispatch in mail transportation, and reasonable surety against frequent delays by storms and snow blockades in Winter. As the United States spread over many degrees of latitude, and all its people are entitled to share equally as possible in the benefits to accrue from the establishment of this service, the route should be selected, also, as far as consistent with other necessities, so as to accommodate the largest possible number of those who desire to avail themselves of its advantages. These, we believe, are the considerations which ought to govern the Postmaster-General in awarding the stupendous contract now at his disposal.

It has been said that this advertising for bids was little more than a sham;—that Postmaster-General BROWN long ago decided in his own mind,—and so stated to certain prominent members of the Administration party,—that the contract would in all probability be awarded to a Mr. BIRCH, of California, and that the route selected would be the extreme Southern one from Marshall, Texas, via the Southwestern deserts and El Paso, entering California on its Southern border. We should regret to do Mr. BROWN an injustice, but we fear there is too much ground for apprehension that his prejudices are unreasonably in favor of the route thus indicated. This conviction we notice prevails also in California, and various popular meetings have been held there to protest against what is denounced as a gross perversion of the wise intent of Congress. The sectional influences of the Postmaster-General's home residence in Tennessee have undoubtedly prejudiced his mind more or less in favor of a Southern route,—and perhaps that is not surprising. His personal friends, too, those with whom he naturally seeks counsel, are of the same way of thinking; and the Secretary of the Interior, Hon. JACOB THOMPSON of Mississippi, whose Cabinet position necessarily gives him much weight in the decision of the pending question, is as fanatically zealous in behalf of an extreme Southern route to the Pacific, to the exclusion of all others, as is even JEFFERSON DAVIS himself.

If personal and local prejudices and preferences are laid aside, and this momentous subject is considered with rigid impartiality, it must be clear that the Southern route said to have been informally decided upon, is utterly destitute of any advantage whatever, and, in all respects that which will least accommodate and subserve the public interest. It is long and circuitous, and is not conducive, therefore, to the most prompt transportation of the mail between its respective termini. It passes over immense deserts, where water is scarce and poor, and whither all supplies must be carried from either end of the route. It is exposed to the constant depredations of the most warlike savages to be found between the two oceans. The climate is not unhealthy, but the heat is excessive. Its only advantage is the absence of snow at all seasons. The objections already noted sufficiently establish the fact that it will never become a favorite route for emigration,—even if practicable as such,—which can consequently derive no incidental benefit from the establishment of the mail posts and relay stations. And even if this Southern route viâ El Paso were such as to invite emigration, the distance which by far the largest portion of the immigrants would necessarily travel ere reaching the terminus at Marshall, would have carried them far on their way across the Plains by a route due west from their homes. Take St. Louis for a common central starting point, and describe a circle around it the radii of which shall be equal in length to the distance thence to New-Orleans, and we find that the mouths of the Mississippi are quite as near to this centre as is New-York, and that all the southern centres of commerce and population are in reality in closer communication therewith than are four-fifths of the centres of population and commerce lying North and East of that point. Look again, and we see that three-fourths of the whole population of the United States are located North of the latitude of St. Louis, while at least eleven-twelfths of all the emigration to the Pacific slope is drawn from the same region, and much the largest portion of that from points far more distant from the "Empire City of the Mississippi Valley" than is New-Orleans. The same result, precisely, follows a comparison of the demands for postal service. Ten letters to and from the Pacific are mailed or find their destination North of St. Louis; and the business and money transactions to which many of them relate, are almost entirely the interest of parties living in the same northern locality. These facts are indisputable, and it follows that the rule of "the greatest good to the greatest number" imperatively demands a more northern route than that with which we are threatened. If the northern verge of Minnesota were to be taken as the starting point, it would be far more equitable and just towards the interests of the whole country. The mass of immigrants even then, in reaching the point of departure westward, would save more than half the distance lost in traveling to Marshall, and the saving in pecuniary expense of travel would alone be sufficient to provide a large share of the supplies necessary for the overland journey.

But we do not advocate an extreme Northern route. That is objectionable for many considerations, not the least of which is its impassability during the season of snows. We see no reason, however, for taking a more Southern starting point than St. Louis, from which city already the Pacific Railroad is rapidly pushing its way towards the great plains where grass is abundant during the season of emigration. From here the line should run to Salt Lake, and thence to California by some of the lower passes of the Rocky Mountains. To this it is objected, we know, that the Independence route has proved a failure because of the snow in the mountains. The difficulty is easy to avoid. That route strikes across the Continent a hundred miles or more north of Salt Lake City; but during the Winter season a deflexion could easily be made far enough south to avoid the snow-blockades. From the Lake towards the Pacific the route down through the long line of Mormon settlements to San Bernardino, entering California at or near the same point proposed for the Southern route, would afford entire immunity from all difficulty, and serve a large number of American citizens on the plains now almost destitute of mail facilities. Thus in Summer the route would be taken which accommodates emigrants to all parts of our Pacific possessions,—and in the Winter, when that emigration is comparatively trifling, a mode of avoiding the snow is easily obtainable. To this proposition it may be objected that it would require two sets of posts and relay stations. That is true only with reference to a small portion of the route this side Salt Lake; and the additional expense attendant upon such an arrangement would be abundantly compensated by the additional advantages thus secured. West of the Lake the chief expense of providing stations would be incurred on the Summer route. In the Winter, the Mormons in their numerous settlements between Salt Lake City and San Bernardino, would be only too glad to provide all needed supplies in return for a little money, and at prices as low as their inland market is poor.

It is to be hoped that these and similar considerations which we have not the time to mention here will be carefully weighed ere it is definitively determined to disregard all the advantages of a Central route, and the wise provision of Congress for an overland mail is so executed as to utterly negative half the good it was designed to accomplish.

THE PERUVIAN REVOLUTION AND THE GUANO TRADE.—By the last mail from the South Pacific we were informed that the Peruvian Revolution, under VIVANCO, had turned out a complete failure. We never anticipated any other result. The revolution, so-called, was, from the outset, an unprincipled movement; its leaders did not even pretend, after the manner of demagogues, that they were the commissioned champions of right against might, or that they sought to redress any grievous public wrong. The fight was of the duello order between two rival chiefs—President CASTILLA on the one side, and General VIVANCO on the other—and the prize was the rich revenues of the Guano Islands. Both CASTILLA and VIVANCO had their supporters. Their popularity was about evenly balanced, but while the former was prompt, energetic and bold, and with ample means, paid his soldiers regularly, the latter was vacillating and weak, and except from pillage and plunder, had no resources with which to prosecute a vigorous war. CASTILLA was, moreover, sustained by the wealthy citizens of Lima, whose politics are always subservient to their interests, and who would support any administration rather than see the streets of the capital converted into a battle field. With all these chances in his favor, CASTILLA, of course, has triumphed over his opponents.

Nevertheless, at one time, a singular stroke of good fortune had well nigh turned the tables against the President. Four vessels of the Peruvian Navy, including the Apurimac, of 44 guns, declared for VIVANCO, who, by this act, became virtually master of all the Peruvian seaports. With other places, he held possession of the Chinchas for many weeks, and, to raise money for the prosecution of the war, he sold large quantities of guano to American citizens at from $6 to $8 per ton register instead of $36, the legitimate rate. It is now averred that CASTILLA intends to claim the difference from the United States; but such a claim is ridiculous, and cannot be entertained for a moment. Our Government has always refused to enforce in any way a civil debt which, by contract, may be due from a foreign Government to an American citizen; and far less will it be held reponsible for any real or supposed debts due by American citizens to a foreign Government. But Peru, under any circumstances, can have no legal claim against shipmasters and others because they received guano at the Chinchas for a consideration beneath the ordinary tariff rates. If VIVANCO has been as extravagant and reckless of the guano revenues as he is represented to have been, it is only one of the many penalties which the country must pay for that state of anarchy in which it so often delights to exist. President CASTILLA must keep a better look-out on his war vessels, now that they have returned to their allegiance, and when the next revolution breaks out, its suppression will not cost him so much trouble and expense as that of the late émeute under VIVANCO. His present attempt to make foreign Governments responsible for damage done by domestic insurrections—for that, as we understand it, is his design—is preposterous, and does not admit of an argument.

A Philanthropic Speculation.

What is to be done for the Meat Market? Really beef and mutton threaten us with a panic quite as serious as the yellow fever or cholera. One's butcher's bill is daily increasing its frightful proportions, and there is no immediate prospect of relief. We rebel against statutory provisions prescribing what we shall eat or drink, but submit in silence to such oppressive advances in the price of animal food as must necessarily force half the community into Vegetarianism. Roasting beef is from 21 to 28 cents a pound, and steaks from 22 to 27 cents. For mutton we pay 18 cents per pound, and lamb brings about the same price. If perchance our hearts are gladdened and hopes of relief revived under a decline of a penny or two to-day, we have learned by sad experience that to-morrow will carry prices up higher than ever. There seems to be no limit to the upward tendency. When we paid eight cents for good beef we thought it hard to be compelled to add a penny; but soon as we got used to the advance and ceased grumbling, another and another turn were given to the screw. This is the process by which we have reached the present high prices, and where it is to end short of an abandonment of fleshy diet, who can tell?

Speculation unquestionably has aided in no slight degree to enhance the cost of these necessaries of life,—but that influence would not be so potent except for the limited supply of beef cattle. The market demand is increasing far more rapidly than the means for satisfying it. Comparatively few men in the United States make a business of raising cattle for market. The enterprise to be eminently successful requires large capital;—and Western speculations in land, of late years, have proved more inviting to those who ought to be cattle raisers than the rearing of live stock, for the reason that the former seemed to involve less risk, larger profits and quicker returns. Besides, of those men whose tastes and pursuits are rural, comparatively few are possessed of the capital which would be necessary to enable them to rely entirely upon stock raising. They prefer to grow wheat and corn,—for from the latter they can begin to realize the means of subsistence in a few months, while the beef grazier cannot expect to send much to market for the first three or four years. These considerations give us little hope of adequately-increased home supplies for a long time to come.

Whence, then, shall we turn for relief? To foreign markets, doubtless, if any can be made available. This practical question was considered in a practical manner by a meeting of Baltimore butchers a week or two since, assembled for the express purpose of discussing the means of effecting a fall in prices. Among the speakers was a Mr. JOSEPH J. KEEFE, from the Republic of Venezula, who stated that fine beef cattle could be had there in any quantity at four or five dollars per head. Nay more, he referred to somebody now in this country who had come on to raise $150,000, for which he was ready to exchange beef cattle at one dollar per head! It is a well-known fact that cattle rove the plains of Venezula in countless numbers, almost as wild as the Buffalo of our Western plains. Mr. KEEFE declared that a million a year are slain for their hides alone, an assertion which is abundantly confirmed by reference to the statistics of export of that article of South American commerce. Colonel JOHN WHITING, of Cbiriqui, stated at the same meeting that he had spent twenty years in Venezuela, and saw no difference between the meat of that country and this.

Here is opportunity for a speculation as philanthropic as it may prove to be profitable. Surely the experiment is worth trying. An ordinary steam propeller will make the trip from Venezuela in ten or twelve days, and would find profitable employment in transporting cattle at ten or fifteen dollars per head. The expense of time and money in thus bringing Venezuelan beef to our market would scarcely be greater than that of bringing the animals from Illinois and Iowa—now our largest sources of supply. If the statements of Messrs. KEEFE and WHITING are accurate—and it is easy to verify or disprove them—our meat market may speedily be abundantly supplied at much lower rates than now, while those who have the enterprise and public spirit to achieve this much-desired result may at the same time reap an abundant reward for their agency. Who will move in the matter? Why not the butchers themselves, of whom we have several energetic and highly respectable organizations in our City? It may be objected that beef would deteriorate upon so long a sea voyage. The experience of travelers will not justify this conclusion. Besides, why not bring the cattle here and "plant" them, if needs be, as we do oysters,—put them out at pasture, or in fattening stalls, until they shall be in the best possible condition for market? At the present high prices here, it would pay to import beef "frames" at fifteen dollars per head, to fatten after their arrival. We shall record, with pleasure, any evidence that the subject is to be investigated, or the experiment tried, for it is one of vastly more importance to the people in this part of the country than many another about which more noise is made.

THE CITY DIRECTORY FOR 1857-'8.—Mr. TROW has issued his City Directory somewhat earlier this year than usual. It is, as usual, compiled by Mr. WILSON, and in fullness and the order of arrangement it is an improvement upon any previous issue. The Appendix contains a well-digested mass of useful information in City affairs. Take it altogether, the Directory is the cheapest and most useful publication of the year, and we could better dispense with two-thirds of the books published than do without this City annual.

AN AGED ARTIST.—The venerable artist REMBRANDT PEALE, author of the Court of Death, &c., is in town, and this evening reads a paper before the Historical Society on WASHINGTON and his portraits. The meeting is to be held in the large chapel of the New-York University, and promises to be one of unusual interest. Members and their ladies—the public generally are invited to be present, and no money demanded for admittance to the lecture or the strawberries.

The Last Meeting of the National Medical Association.

The late anniversary meeting of the American Medical Association at Nashville, Tenn., is a matter of national interest. Owing to the out of the-way situation of Nashville, its distance from all other great centres, it was meagerly attended by Northern physicians, but six going thither from all New England and New-York. Our own quota deserve a mention for their spirit. They were Messrs. JAMES R. WOOD, REESE, BARWELL, and ALDEN MARCH. But four from Pennsylvania, a small delegation from the north-western States, and the bulk, making some one hundred and fifty, were from the South. Great preparations had been made by the profession of the State and city to properly entertain the members of the Association, but much to their chagrin, this small number came to share it.

The meeting opened in the Representative Hall of the State capitol—the President, Dr. ZINA PITCHER, of Michigan, taking the Chair. The Committee of Arrangements, Dr. C. K. WINSTON, welcomed the Association in a neat manner. The business of the first day was the annual address of the President, the reports of various scientific societies, and the election of officers for the ensuing year—Dr. PAUL F. EVE, of Tennessee, being chosen President. The evening was spent in the stately mansions of Professors EVE, JENNINGS, and Dr. FOSTER, where every luxury which wealth and refinement could gather together, were served with an apparently thoughtless prodigality.

On the second day Dr. EVE took the Chair, with a few remarks, and the Association went on to hear abstracts of various papers, which were referred to the Committee on Palliation, also requests from many, asking for time to complete their papers. The session was closed early to enable members to visit the Hermitage, paying their respects to Mrs. POLK, widow of the late President, visiting the park of Gen. HARDING, with its hundreds of deer, elk, buffalos, &c., and the large hybrids resulting from a cross between this latter animal and the common cow, all roaming in apparent freedom through its broad confines. In the evening the [illegible] of Dr. SEELEY was thrown open to the Association, where was a repetition of the unsurpassed luxuries of the previous evening.

The third day, finishing the ordinary business, was characterized by two discussions of more than usual interest. One seemed to be an outbreak of the general feeling of the Association, and was debated (all on one side) with considerable warmth. The purport of it was, that men holding high positions in the community had detracted from the reputation of the profession by promulgating certain views, not only as their individual opinions, but as the views of the profession respecting moral insanity, and requesting a Committee to be formed to protest against this outrage; that Dr. REESE alone had taken hold of this subject as it should be viewed, viewing the whole matter with reprobation, and proposing that he should be appointed Chairman of the Committee. This was done with great unanimity.

The next question was the long-agitated, long-deferred subject of Medical Education, and a Committee, Dr. JAS. R. WOOD Chairman, was appointed to report a system of Medical Instruction.

After the satisfactory accomplishment of a large amount of business the Committee adjourned sine die.

The evening of the third day had been specially set apart for a grand reunion. The floor of the House of Representatives was cleared away for a ball-room, and that of the Senate Chamber for a supper room. 2,500 tickets of admission brought a house full of the beauty and elite of the Capital and State. We dare not trust to the reports of those present. Their heads were evidently turned. They describe it as a gathering such as was never witnessed upon the Continent. The beauty of the women, their prodigality in surpassingly brilliant toilets, such displays of flowers, heaps' diamonds, silks, seem to have been unprecedented. There seemed to have been no one old, no one without taste, none without money. Fortunately, our Northern delegation took their wives with them, or perhaps so tempted as they were by these Western Circes, they might have forgotten the poor inmates at Bellevue Hospital and their suffering patients all around.

The meeting, although attended by so many less than was supposed, was one of great value. Much business was effected. It has awakened the West to professional union, shown the North the wealth, education, resources, generosity of their distant brethren, and stirred up a spirit of emulation which cannot but be of great good to the profession and the nation.

The next meeting is to be held in Washington, D. C., at the Smithsonian Institute.

Marine Matters.

THE GREAT EASTERN.—This mammoth iron steamer, it is now said, will probably visit New York upon her first visit across the Atlantic, instead of Portland, as it has been heretofore announced. The difficulty of her approaching this City by the way of Sandy Hook, on account of a lack of water upon the Bar, has been the excuse for allotting Portland as the place to land at, as there is plenty of water in that harbor, and extensive arrangements, it is reported, have been made for her reception by building docks, warehouses, &c.

Should this change in her destination take place, it will, no doubt, be a great disappointment to the Portland people, whilst it will give thousands of New-Yorkers the opportunity so see this wonderful specimen of naval architecture, who would not otherwise have that gratification. Upon the Bar, by the way of Sandy Hook, there is 27 feet at high water, and 23 at the shallowest place at low water. The Spring tides give a rise of 6 feet. The pilots would not agree to take the ship in if drawing over 26 feet, which would not allow of her taking in freight.

By the way of Long Island Sound, however, the shallowest point in channel-way, at low tide, is 26 feet, and the Spring tides giving a rise of 8 feet, which is more than amply sufficient for the purposes required. Pilots assert that 35 feet can be found by some slight variations at high water.

If the Great Eastern were brought in by way of the Sound, the natural stopping-place would be at Morris' wharf, the other side of Hell Gate. There is a wharf 600 feet in length already built at that place, which could easily be extended, with ample depth of water for the big ship to lie alongside. As there is a line of railroad running to that point which would furnish convenient accommodations for visitors, the distance would probably be in favor of the enterprise, as far as this is dependent upon opportunities for inspecting the ship.

Port Matters.

THE PORT WARDENS

Coutinue to have all they can attend to in the way of Marine Surveying, averaging about forty vessels per day; and the steady progress of the opinion and feeling among the merchants in their favor, satisfies them that all opposition will ultimately die out. In a word, they have no spare time on their hands to devote to litigation at present.

HARBOR MASTERS.

The recent searching scrutiny into the abuses mutually practised by the Harbor Masters, and some of the less scrupulous shipowners, by which it was alleged dock privileges had become too much a matter of barter and sale, seems to have had a good effect upon both parties, and there are now few cases of grievance occurring. Some of the merchants, however, express themselves displeased that one of the old Harbor Masters who was removed, still visits his former haunts along the docks, and darkly hint that he may be acting, in a quiet way, as a deputy, in violation of the new regulations. But as they do not mean to complain without cause, they will give new appointees a fair trial, keeping their weather eye open, ready to report to Governor KING the first case of malfeasance they can put their fingers on.

ADVANCE WAGES.

Messrs A. A. LAW & BROTHER have sent the first vessel to sea under the new regulation of no advance wages to seamen. Their bark Hongua, Captain CARTWRIGHT, sailed on the 27th of May, for Hong Kong, with eighteen men all told, none of whom received the long customary advance wages. Their shipping agents state that no such feat was ever accomplished before. Every man who returns in the ship will receive a bonus of 10 per cent. upon the wages due him at the end of the voyage. Comfortable clothing, equal to a suit for each man, was put on board. The men, however, were of a respectable class, and all went sober and well provided.

It is said a Boston ship has, also, been sent out under the new régime. Opposition, if any, will come from the worser class of boarding-house landlords.

DEEPENING THE SLIPS.

Operations in this Department proceed slowly. The Pilot Commissioners have made an order forbidding the dumping of the mud taken from the slips any where in the East River. A line will be defined well back on the flats in the North River where it will be deposited, unless, as is possible, it may be deposited in the Wallabout Flats and mixed with the sand now being used for filling up that locality.

SHAD POLES.

The shad fishery in the North River is done for the present season, and the poles are being taken up. The fishermen account for a rather indifferent season by the prevalence of long continued cold weather, which has kept the fish off shore in deep water.

THE RAILROAD EXCURSION.

Scenes and Incidents of the Festival.

Correspondence of the New York Daily Times.

ST. LOUIS, Sunday, June 7, 1857.

The ceremonies attendant upon the great Railroad Celebration are over at last, and though a little late perhaps, I propose to give the readers of this DAILY TIMES some description of the scenes through which we have passed, and the attendant incidents, although an adequate idea of all we have seen and enjoyed is beyond the power of my pen. This celebration, as you know, was gotten up under the auspices of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company, to commemorate the opening of their road through from Cincinnati on the Ohio—"the Queen City of the West"—to St. Louis, the "Empire City of the Mississippi." The occasion was embraced, however, to celebrate also the completion of the Northwestern Virginia Road, from Grafton on the Baltimore and Ohio Road, to Parkersburg on the Ohio River, and the Marietta and Cincinnati Road, between the two cities of the same name. Thus three Railroad Corporations united in the effort to make the occasion a memorable one to all who should participate in its incidents. Right well have they succeeded. A most delightful week have we passed in enjoyment of the treat provided for us; and nothing whatever has transpired to detract in the least degree from the sum of hilarity and happiness.

Your correspondent formed one of a party of some four or five hundred, who made Baldmore their starting-point on the morning of the 1st inst. Seated in a train of the commodious and elegantly-finished cars of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company, we speedily found ourselves whirling rapidly along through the grandly-beautiful scenery which characterizes that route. Its beauties I have described on former occasions, and can add nothing new on that score. Suffice it to say that the scenery is unequaled by any other through which an American railroad passes, and that to the lover of mountain views it stands unrivaled throughout the Continent. Since I was over the road last the arching of its great tunnels has been completed, the immense wooden trestle-work replaced by exquisitely beautiful but substantial iron work, and the road, in all respects, completed in the most substantial manner. The Petersburg branch, as already stated, is a new work, and I suppose it would have been the main road at the beginning had not the cranbedness of Virginia legislation then forced it a hundred miles farther North to Wheeling, in the vain idea that by such a process the tide of trade and travel would be made to pour through that City, regardless of other circumstances, to build up and enrich it. The Petersburg branch was completed only a few weeks since, and although its tunnels and high embankments comprise a large share of the entire line of one hundred miles, it is so substantially constructed as already to be found in fine working order.

The day wore rapidly away—the guests the while receiving every possible attention from Mr BROOKS, President of the Company, WM. PASCOTT SMITH, assistant Master of Transportation, WENDELL BOLLMAN, Master of the Road, and other officers of the Company with whose names I am not familiar. The versatility of Mr. SMITH especially, in interesting the company, suggesting advantageous points of view, making the guests acquainted with each other, and in various ways contributing to the comfort of the guests, was the subject of general remark. Throughout, the perfect organization of the road was apparent. Every little detail of the day's progress had been carefully provided for, and was adhered to with scrupulous fidelity, thus insuring regularity, safety and comfort. We dined at Cumberland, and arrived at Grafton—the junction of the Parkersburg Road—at a seasonable time in the evening. Here, also, the liberality of the Company had provided for our substantial entertainment. A snug hotel, containing some forty rooms, has been erected here by the Company, for the accommodation of travelers who desire to remain over night. It also contains a capacious dining-room, sufficient for the accommodation of two or three hundred guests. The telegraph had advised of our coming, and we were soon ushered in to an excellent and bounteous supper, to which our mountain-aired appetites did ample justice.

The rooms of the hotel were allotted to the use of ladies and their husbands, and the young men were provided for in the sleeping cars, where a satisfactory night's rest was obtained. I had omitted to mention that the company brought from Baltimore an excellent brass band, which discoursed fine music occasionally along the route as we tarried a few minutes at the prominent stations, or left the cars to get a better view of the glorious scenery in the Cheat River region of the Alleghanies, or to examine and admire some of the airy yet substantial structures of iron by aid of which we leaped across great chasms from mountain to mountain. So, too, at Grafton, when the inner man had been bountifully refreshed, the sweet strains of music were employed to lull us to the embraces of "Nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep."

On Tuesday morning our iron horse was harnessed again, and ere the sun had long climbed over the mountain ridges and dispelled the mists from the charming little valley in which daylight found us, we were again on our way towards the Ohio at Parkersburg. The country through which we now passed was exceedingly rough, and probably never saw white man until the Railroad engineer struck his levels across it to mark out a path for the steed which tires not. As we pass over it now we wonder that the natural obstructions to its completion did not appal its projectors, and peremptorily forbid all efforts to subdue them. Nevertheless, the work has been done. Attempts to traverse the route by winding among the hills through a succession of little valleys were useless here. The ridges and the streams all run at right angles to the road. To circumvent the mountain barriers and the difficulties they reared was simply impossible. There was nothing to do but attack and vanquish them. This has been done. The streams have been bridged in numbers almost countless; the valleys are filled up by embankments of many miles length, and the mountains bored by tunnels to such an extent that I half suspected we had found the "Underground Railroad" at last, running right through Virginia and straight to the free-soil of Ohio. Had FAYETTE MCMULLEN (who was of the party) let off one of his characteristic speeches on Northern fanaticism,—in which he talks the longest and says the least of any public man I know of—we must have admitted the provocation to be ample.

Ere noon we shot out from the mountains and landed upon the fertile banks of the Ohio. Here we were met by a delegation from Marietta, who accompanied us on board a pair of steamers waiting to receive us. Soon the lines were cast off, the steamers were lashed together side by side, and proceeded thus to Marietta, some twelve miles distant. On board the steamers an ample dinner was served, and by the time the travelers had appeased their appetites we reached the Plymouth of the northwest. The history of Marietta is well known. Here it was that American civilization first broke ground in the vast and fertile Northwestern Territory. After the war of the Revolution had closed with the firm establishment of American Independence, a band of war-worn veterans gathered the remnants of their broken fortunes—sacrificed in the cause of Liberty—and started for the Northwest Territory to seek for themselves new homes to cover with Virginia Land Warrants. They landed on the banks of the Ohio where now stands Marietta, founded that town, and so began the development of the great State of Ohio and its sisters of the northwest which have followed in such rapid succession.

In view of these reminiscences Marietta was a most appropriate place for the reception of the Eastern guests. Here we were met by the Municipal authorities and the Governor of Ohio, who welcomed us to the State in an eloquent and appropriate speech, a copy of which I forwarded you several days since. Gen. CASS responded happily on behalf of the guests, and was followed by the inevitable FAYETTE MCMULLEN, who couldn't let the opportunity slip to display before an Ohio audience the figure of a live Governor of Washington Territory—a curiosity which he doubtless believed would be hailed with as lively emotions as the advent of a black bear. The speech of General CASS possessed the more interest for us all from the fact that half a century ago he here received his first political trust, and began his long career of continuous public service. It was a pity to have the reflections awakened by these coincidences abruptly disturbed by the rude bombast of the energetic Virginian and embryo Governor; but as it was easy to get out of the way, the guests bore the infliction good-humoredly as possible, finding consolation in the prospect that he will soon transfer his sphere to the other side of the Rocky Mountains. I forgot to mention that while on board the steamers on the Ohio, somebody got up in behalf of the Press a series of resolutions of thanks to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company for their very liberal attention to us all. The object was certainly a good one, but the equivocal manner of its accomplishment would not speak well for the intelligence of "the Press,"—and on behalf of not a few bona fide members of that "institution" as represented on this occasion, I take this opportunity to say that the Press proper had little or nothing to do with it. Even the nemee of some of the few members of the Editorial fraternity signed to the resolutions published, were attached without their knowledge or consent. It is one of the usual incidents of an affair like this that the men whose "modesty" is sure to undertake the personification of the "Press," are generally those who have little or no other than a temporary or accidental connection with the professions: and so it happens often that the geniuses are held responsible for the freaks, foibles and blunders of the "accidentals." In this instance the Press is made to thank the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company "for their unusual attention on the present occasion." For one I repudiate the equivocal compliment altogether. It is my experience, and I believe the experience generally of the Press and the public, that the Baltimore and Ohio Company are always kind and attentive, and that there was no occasion in attempting to compliment them, to slap them with a back-handed blow indicating that kindness and attention on their part are unusual virtues with them, to be encouraged and fostered into development by double entendre resolutions.

After some additional remarks by the Mayors of Marietta and Baltimore, and a hurried ride by a portion of the guests to the celebrated Indian mound in the near vicinity, the party took the cars for Chillicothe. As the grades for the first few miles are very heavy, and a steep hill has to be crossed upon a "W," the cars were divided up into five trains. This "W" is a temporary work only, and is expected to be superseded within a few weeks by a long tunnel already far advanced towards completion. Upon the eastern division of the Marietta and Cincinnati Road, there is a great deal of heavy work, the country being very rough. The hills, however, are rich in mineral resources, the development of which, it is confidently believed, will soon afford a liberal remuneration for the enterprise which has traversed them by rail, and so afforded the means of communication with the outer world, without which those treasures of nature were as valueless as the mother earth in whose bosom they have been locked for ages. After some twenty or thirty miles were passed, we struck into the rich bottom lands for which Ohio is famous, and which are capable of supporting a dense population, independent of any and all outward resources.

At 9 o'clock in the evening we reached Chillicothe. Here we were met in the cars—the moment their speed was checked—by a host of hospitable citizens, who picked us up like old familiar friends, placed us in carriages, and drove us off to their mansions to entertain us for the night. A more hearty exhibition of generous hospitality than that displayed by the people of Chilicothe, I never hope to witness. Every door stood wide open—every table groaned with substantials and delicacies, and every heart seemed as open as the doors. We came as strangers, but met as old friends, as electric was the thrill which taught us at once that we were at home. Not less than eleven hundred guests were thus quartered on the citizens that night, and yet many complained because their rooms were not filled to overflowing with the free lodgers. An amiable rivalry among them, as to who should secure the greatest number of guests and entertain them in the best style, was everywhere perceptible. Your correspondent and traveling companion formed part of a company of fifteen who enjoyed the elegant hospitality of Col. JOHN MADEIRA, whose mansion will ever be remembered, I am sure, as the scene of one of the most pleasurable incidents of our lives. It was with unfeigned regret that we bid him and his family farewell on the following morning to take the train for Cincinnati, sincerely hoping that at some future time our paths may again cross, that we may renew an acquaintance the pleasure of which was equaled only by its brevity.

At Cincinnati we found the city in holiday attire, the streets filled with people, and the buildings gaily decked with innumerable flags. Here, too, we found the hotels all filled, with the exception of the few rooms retained by proprietors for favored guests, and the vast crowd of strangers were thrown upon private hospitality. And again did the people respond. Private mansions innumerable were thrown open, and in a brief time all were comfortably provided for in families, where they were entertained with a repetition of the kindness and liberality which our Chilicothian experience had already taught us to expect of Ohioans. Here your correspondent was indebted to the hospitality of JOHN RAWSON, Esq., and family, whose kind attention will ever be remembered with lively emotions of gratitude. Except for private hospitality, a large proportion of the guests must have gone hungry and sleepless. Cincinnati is sadly deficient in first class hotel accommodations,—having scarcely enough to accommodate the ordinary travel; and the best of those she has, already appear to have deteriorated lately, until they have reached a grade far below the standard of excellence which they once justly boasted. Cincinnatians complain of this much, and express the hope that steps may be taken soon to supply the deficiency, and give them an Astor or St. Nicholas.

The telegraph has already notified you that the chief feature of the public celebration at Cincinnati was the parade of the Fire Department and the exhibition of steam fire engines. This certainly was a very interesting spectacle. In an incredibly short space of time after lighting the fires—a few minutes at most—these steam-engines were throwing half a dozen streams, each a distance quite beyond the power of our best New-York machines; and half-a-dozen of them together raised high in air a perfect river, sufficient to flood and drown out, instantaneously, the most furious conflagration. Experience has given the Cincinnatians such confidence in the invincibility of this new agent of protection, that they do not pretend to insure property now-a-days for more than half its value—and that only with a view to covering damage by water—for the considerable progress of a fire is something they now never apprehend. If these steam fire Engines could only vote, we might hope to see them adopted in New-York, but, until that improvement is accomplished, I fear we can scarcely expect their merits to receive such practical indorsement with us.

The trip from Cincinnati to St. Louis, and the incidents of the celebration here, I will endeavor to notice in another communication. S.

ST. LOUIS, MO., Monday, June 8, 1857.

My last brought the Railroad excursionists to Cincinnati, where we arrived early in the afternoon of Wednesday. On Thursday morning some twenty-nine cars, divided into two trains, and filled with the Excursionists, started from the "Queen City" for St. Louis. Everything passed off delightfully. The weather was clear, but copious showers had effectually laid the dust, and the travelers consequently experienced no inconvenience from that source. The Road, though new, was in excellent condition; the arrangements of the day to secure speed, comfort and safety were perfect, and the company all in gay and lively spirits. A more detailed description of the Road itself you will have already received, so I need not repeat it here. In deference also to the never-failing "crowd" upon your columns I pass hastily over the events of the trip. The party were plied all the day long with abundant supplies of refreshments served in the cars through the liberality of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad Company—lunched at a station, the name of which I have forgotten, and dined at a capital dinner at Vincennes, Ind. All along the line of the Road the people had turned out with music and banners to testify their joy at the consummation of the enterprise which brings them into such close connection with both the East and the West. As the shades of evening closed in the day, bonfires were lighted along the roadside, and the settlements by which the train swiftly passed were bathed in lurid glare.

The approach towards the banks of the Mississippi, near midnight, was announced from the St. Louis bluffs by the firing of cannon, and upon the arrival of the trains a multitude of people had crossed to the Illinois side to meet them. Bonfires, torches and fireworks lighted up the scene as Mayor WIMER, of this city, welcomed the guests. The latter were immediately conducted on board the steamers Reindeer, Baltimore, Illinois and Di Vernon, which were moored on the east side of the river ready for their reception and entertainment during the night. A sumptuous supper was soon served up, and then the state-rooms were allotted to the tired travelers for a night of needed rest. St. Louis was a blaze of light when the train arrived, and the levee, as one looked across the turbid stream, seemed one sheet of fire, from which ever and anon shot upward pyrotechnic meteors of varied colors and form.

Early next morning the steamers started with their guests for a trip to Carondelet, to give them opportunity to view the extent of the city of St. Louis. The countless steamers lying at the levee were gay with flags, and their decks crowded with people in holiday attire, came to take a look at the strangers from the East. Music from multitudinous bands, cheers from the masses, and salutes from cannon afloat and ashore, combined to raise the general enthusiasm to fever best. At about 9 o'clock the boats came to the levee and landed their passengers, who were conveyed to omnibuses waiting in the near vicinity, and by 9½ o'clock the procession moved towards the fair grounds, situated on the heights overlooking the city. These grounds, it will be remembered, I described somewhat at length during a visit which I made to St. Louis last September. They are spacious, finely situated, and provided with altogether the most complete set of buildings for purposes of agricultural display to be found in the United States. The principal structure is an immense amphitheatre, containing in its galleries seats for many thousands. Into this place filed the procession, and mingled with the thousands of both sexes already assembled to honor the occasion.

When all were seated a song of welcome was sung by the German Sängerbund with fine effect,—and then Mayor WIMER introduced Hon. ED. BATES as the orator of the day, who delivered an excellent speech which had no fault save its great length,—two hours being rather a long time certainly to detain a hungry crowd with a substantial dinner just before their longing eyes. The dinner, however, was the next article on the programme. It was well worthy the occasion, and was discussed with zest and universal satisfaction. In quantity it was abundant, and in quality all that could be desired. The removal of the cloth was followed by a series of toasts and speeches in response by Prof. O. M. MITCHELL, of Cincinnati, Lewis B. PARSONS, and others, after which the guests dispersed.

I had almost forgotten to say that private hospitality was again appealed to in St. Louis to supply the guests with quarters, and that a large number of family mansions were thrown open for their entertainment. Profuse liberality was everywhere characteristic of the people, and I meet no stranger here who does not seem delighted with all he has seen and enjoyed, or who will not carry away with him pleasant recollections of their festive occasion. There is much more which I could say, did I not know how limited is your space, but which I must defer to some other opportunity. S.

The guests who went to St. Louis by the way of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, held a meeting in that city on the Saturday evening of their arrival. H. N. GALLAGHER, Esq., of Charleston, Va., was called to the Chair, and the following-named gentlemen were appointed Vice-Presidents and Secretaries:

Vice-Presidents—Hons. Erastus Brooks, New-York; P. T. Thomas, Maryland; Fayette M'Mullen, Maryland; J. M. Harris, Maryland; Edward Sarver, Maryland; John L House, District of Columbia; Cuss. A. Phelps, Massachusetts; Ex-Governor Dutton, Connecticut.

Secretaries—J. R. Thompson, Esq., Virginia; Edward Fulton, Esq., Maryland; William Parker, Esq., Massachusetts.

W. B. Shaw, of D. C.; W. H. Travers, of Md.; J. W. Simonton, of N. Y.; Paul Cooke, Esq., of Va., and Hon. Chas. A. Phelps, of Mass., having been appointed a Committee on resolutions, reported the following, which were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the completion of the several lines of railway from Baltimore and St. Louis, over which we have passed with such speed, safety and comfort, constitutes a result of truly national importance, forming as they do a short and direct route between the Atlantic Sea and the commercial centres of the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys—Cincinnati and St. Louis.

Resolved, That the good practical management, the stupendous engineering triumphs, and the sublime natural scenery which characterize the Baltimore and Ohio Road, render it one of the most attractive and valuable of all our internal improvements.

Resolved, That the Marietta and Cincinnati, and Ohio and Mississippi Roads, which continue this great avenue to the central West, are destined to become a grand trunk line, extending not only from the Atlantic to the "Father of Waters," but even to the shores of the Pacific Sea.

Resolved, That the generous hospitality of the Baltimore and Ohio, Marietta and Cincinnati, and Ohio and Mississippi Roads, and also of the citizens of Chilicothe, Cincinnati, and Vincennes, commands and receives our warmest acknowledgment.

Resolved, That the boundless liberality shown in our overwhelming reception and kind treatment by the people of St. Louis mark them as a community of rare generosity, which will be ever held in our most grateful remembrance.

The following was offered by WILLIAM H. WHITE, Esq., of Baltimore, as an additional resolution, and was passed unanimously:

Resolved, That our thanks are due and hereby tendered to those Railway Companies who have in their generosity tendered to us a free passage over their roads on our way to and from St. Louis.

Central American Affairs.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, June 13, 1857.

The proposition which Lord PALMERSTON, in his recent speech, mentions as having been offered to this Government, to wit: the adoption by the United States Government of the conditions and stipulations of the convention of August last between Great Britain and Honduras, is altogether inadmissible. The press of that country is almost unanimous on that point. It is competent for Great Britain and Honduras to enter into what stipulation they please, but there is no propriety in making the United States a party to them. The counter-proposition of the United States was simply to omit all mention of that convention, and to provide that England and the United States should acknowledge the Bay Islands as a part of the territory of Honduras, thus requiring that the cession to Honduras should be unconditional. Every difficulty as to Central America seems to have been got over but this.

The proposition of Lord PALMERSTON above referred to, was offered to the Government some weeks ago, and the reply of the Secretary of State declining it was communicated to the British Minister about the 1st of this month.

It is not at all improbable that some other proposition will be offered on the part of Great Britain after some further negotiation. It seems to have been the general impression in England that the treaty, as amended by the Senate, would be accepted by the British Government, and it is very possible that public opinion there will require the adjustment of the question upon the terms proposed by the United States.

We learn from Nicaragua that Costa Rica, and other States lately allied with her, are about to take possession of Nicaragua as a conquered country, and partition it among themselves. The Costa Ricans claim the lion's share. They not only claim the river San Juan, but the whole line of transit by way of the lake. The other States will not assent to this, and will resist the pretension by force. Another civil war, involving all these turbulent little States, is on the eve of commencement. There is a Walker party in Nicaragua, and they will call upon WALKER to return, even before he is quite ready for another campaign. Upon his return he will probably be at the head of an alliance of all the States against Costa Rica.

Brick Block Caved in at Grand Rapids, Mich.—Twenty-Six Persons Buried.

We learn from the Grand Rapids Enquirer that, on Monday forenoon, the brick block adjoining the south end of Taylor & Burns' Block, on Canal-street, fell with a crash, indiscriminately pitching the brick, timber and workmen into a heap together. In a very few seconds the alarm was given, and there was a general rush to rescue the unfortunate men. There were twenty six men upon the walls, and two men on the floor of the first story. A majority of them escaped without serious injury, though they were all more or less jammed and bruised. Nine of them were injured more seriously.

BENJ. F. POTTER, son of Mr. POTTER, the master builder, was standing upon the south wall, with CONNELLY, as he pitched down, struck upon his face—no serious injury—saw him around in the afternoon.

MORRIS CONNOLLY, mason, unmarried, was hurt about as seriously as any of the rest, but if there is no internal injury, of which fears are entertained, will be around in a few days.

MARTIN COVART, hod carrier, married, presented a pretty bloody appearance, but was not seriously hurt.

JOSEPH CARROL and his son PATRICK, hod carriers, were pretty seriously jammed—the young man especially.

PAUL ADRIANCE, hod carrier, was the only Dutchman unlucky enough to get hurt—he escaped with a gash in the head.

WM. WHEDAN, mason, married, was among the wounded, though not dangerously injured.

Judge LYON had a rib fractured, and was severely bruised. In the afternoon he was more comfortable, able to sit up, and desirous of coming down town.

FRANK, son of Judge LYON, had his face severely bruised. His eyes were full of mortar, and burned.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN DUTCHESS CO.—There was an alarm of fire at Poughkeepsie, on Friday night last, caused by the burning of the extensive flouring mills of G. W. NORTHROP, near Bangall; Dutchess Co., 12 or 14 miles distant. The mills with their contents, including 500 bushels of rye, were entirely destroyed. Loss at present unknown.

One of the Allopathy doctors in Goshen, Orange County, has preferred a complaint against a professional brother because he dared to call in a Homeopath in the same village in consultation; whereupon the County Medical Society first refused to hear testimony, and then unceremoniously expelled the offending member. Meanwhile, half the township is going into the Homeopathic faith, and it is a pretty fight.

The Cooperstown Journal says: The vine has grown finely in most parts of the county during the past week. There is considerable complaint that the vine has been winter killed.

THE MORMONS.

What the New-York Mormons Think of the Utah Governorship.

The New-York Mormon indulges in the following comments upon the question of the Governorship of Utah. The article also gives information not before published, of the number and locality of the periodical publications now existing in the Mormon interest in different parts of the world:

"Our readers will perceive in the telegraphic dispatch from Washington of the 4th instant, that a Governor for Utah has been found and his policy blocked out. After reaching Utah he is 'to issue a proclamation that such persons residing in the Territory, male and female, as desire to return to the States, shall receive protection and necessary assistance from the Government.' This is a 'splendiferous' move. 'Goodness gracious!' who won't pray for long life and happy death to the Democratic Administration at Washington, if they only carry out this move? Talk of compromises—this is the compromise of compromises. Who won't be pleased now? Apostates will doubtless be grateful for deliverance from the society of those whose sacred laws they had trampled upon; the Mormons will be quite as thankful for the unoccupied space their absence will leave for better folks; and the Gentiles cannot fail to be benefited by such accessions to their numbers. Seeing, then, that all parties will be considerably benefited, we go in for the movement. It is admirable in conception—carried out in detail it may be something more glorious than it has entered into our minds to conceive. We long for its realization. Hurry it up. We promise the Administration and the new Governor our hearty cooperation. Send us on the proclamation, and we will give it the widest circulation. We shall lead the van by publishing it in this paper; we shall send it to, and speak for its publication in the Western Standard, San Francisco, Cal. in the Millennial Star, Liverpool, England; in Zion's Trumpet, Wales; in the Scandinavian Star, Copenhagen, Denmark; in Zion's Watchman, Australia; in the Tyntheller, Geneva, Switzerland; and by way of pamphlet, we can have it published by our Elders in France, Germany, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Gibraltar Cape of Good Hope, East Indies, China, and in all the nations and islands of the sea where a Mormon is to be found. All this, we were about to say, we would do free, gratis, for nothing; but on remembering that Uncle Sam is expected to have some twenty three millions in his long stocking before many months, moulding, for aught we know, for want of a free circulation, our charity withers; the benevolent sentiment is stifled; and we come to business behind the counter, and offer to do all that, and as much more if we can, for the circulation of the proclamation, for a reasonable share of the dollars. We are aware that other papers have a greater circulation than ours; but then the Administration have doubtless a greater wish to do good than to seek after the vain glory of the world. We know that we are the best advertising medium for this business, ask a share of government patronage, and give our reasons for speaking so highly of our paper for this business. Apostates are well aware of the greediness with which their lies have been received in the States; they know that the public are hoaxed continually by editors, and would, therefore, treat the proclamation as one more added to the great list of fabrications. From want of confidence they would take no preparatory measures for leaving the Territory, and thus the sublime mission of the new Governor and the army would in a measure fail. If they read it in our paper they would believe it; besides, the Mormons in Utah, did they believe that the general Government intended to bestow such a favor on the Territory as to take away the grunting portion of the community, they might be tempted to elbow that class they wanted to get rid of, and really prepare something like a return emigration to justify Uncle's expenditure. All this, we think, can be better accomplished through the publication of the proclamation in The Mormon, and the papers we have named, than by publishing it in ten papers of the Gentiles. We would, in the event of being selected, likewise recommend the folks in Utah to take early advantage of the "assistance and protection;" and as the female portion of the community are to be the special objects of care, we would also assure them that the object of the mission was their deliverance from thraldom and not to replenish the monogamic Christian institutions, such as Five Points and Blackwell's Island, which in their simplicity they might judge it to be. Let the Government only try us, and they will see how nicely we will prepare the road before the Governor. His mission won't fail if he sticks to us. We get credit for knowing a thing or two. If it be not treason to give a hint, we had serious thoughts of hinting to the administration to take into their kind consideration the terrible condition of many of the inhabitants of the States. What a pity it is to see a Governor and an army of assistance and protection going over the plains to Utah without doing good by the way! What if a proclamation was published in the States, and all the inhabitants, male and female, who were discontented with their positions, were informed that they had now the opportunity of going to Utah with the assistance and protection of the government? What of that, gentlemen? Glorious again! All the corrupt Mormons living in the pure, virtuous cities of the States could then clear out. Who in the Cabinet will take this up? This is something like business. No fun, gentlemen, we assure you—all downright, good, sober earnest. Furthermore, we are certain that from ten to one hundred persons can be found crying in the States to go to Utah for every one that can be found in that Territory longing for a return to the States. The gentleman in the Cabinet who takes up this subject, and puts it through in a right manner, will have his name handed down among the honorable men of the earth, and shall no more be associated with DRUMMOND and the long string of blackguards who are thirsting for blood, and in their fury so blinded that they do not discover the eyes of the world fixed upon them, and know not the power of a righteous God, who will overthrow them for shedding the blood of innocence."

The Military Expedition to Utah.

From the St. Louis Republican.

Active preparations are making here and elsewhere for a military expedition to Utah. The current opinion seems to be, that a force of about 2,500 men is to be sent to that Territory, and some dispatches even specify the regiments which are to be sent thither; but we doubt whether this number of men can be obtained from them. The expedition, we infer, is not expected to take up the line of march from Fort Leavenworth until the middle of July, and then, as it will take at least sixty days to reach the neighborhood of Great Salt Lake City, it is well enough to consider what can be done before the Winter sets in. The snows commence in that region in October, and unless peaceable occupation can at once be taken of Salt Lake City, and quarters obtained for the troops, great privations and sufferings may follow. Such an emergency seems to have been contemplated by the Government, for they have advertised for the delivery of two thousand head of beef cattle at the point of destination of the army, but they may not arrive in time, and the cunning of the Mormons, if they make resistance at all, will teach them to cut off all supplies, and thereby greatly embarrass the Commissary Department. We much fear that this expedition is projected too late in the season for effective military operations, and that it may fail altogether.

The Difficulties of Abolishing Mormonism.

From the Charleston Mercury.

Polygamy, as it is called amongst the Mormons, is only concubinage. No form of marriage is executed between the parties. BRIGHAM YOUNG, or one of the Elders, says to a woman that she is "sealed" to such a man, and she goes and lives with him. BRIGHAM calls all who are sealed to him wives, but they are only concubines. Now, is there any law of the United States making concubinage a crime? Some of the States make adultery a punishable offence in their Courts. But there is no such law enacted by Congress for the Territories, nor made by Utah for the people which inhabit its Territory. The concubinage of Mormonism may, therefore, continue in existence with the full authority of the United States in this Territory.

As to the other peculiarity—the quasi Government of their church—all churches take cognizance of the conduct of their members, and the submission to their behests is entirely voluntary. So, if the Mormons think proper to submit to the decrees of their church, in matters of personal conduct or even in matters of property, as did the primitive Christians, how can Government interfere? If the people will not bring suits into the Courts of the United States. How can the Courts adjudicate? It appears to us, therefore, that the peculiarity of Mormonism may coexist with the full acknowledgment of the authority and laws of the United States.

But if there was an incompatibility between them, the remedy is so easy of making themselves a State, that we cannot doubt they will use it. They have upwards of one hundred thousand people in Utah, and proselytes are daily flocking into the Territory, both from Europe and this country, to swell their numbers. Now, what is to prevent them from applying at the next Congress for admission into the Union as a State? What will the advocates of squatter sovereignty say to the proposal? Can they reject it? Even on the principle laid down in the President's inaugural address, Utah must be admitted. The Constitution of the United States prescribes but one condition to the admission of a Territory as a State—the Constitution shall be Republican; and by the laws of Congress, as well as the usages of the General Government, any Territory having a sufficient number of inhabitants to send a member of Congress, shall be admitted into the Union. That number is now one hundred thousand, and the Mormons have this number, and more, in Utah Territory. Once a State, are not the contracts of marriage, like all other contracts, under the exclusive control of the State? Can the General Government, or any other State, dictate what shall be the laws of marriage in a State, or prescribe or limit the authority of Courts established within its limits by a State?

For these reasons it appears to us that Mormonism can only be abolished by the progress of civilization and the morality of a true religion. The force of the United States, employed to establish United States authority, will not touch the peculiarities of Mormonism, and cannot overthrow its institutions. Force employed to destroy the people, or extirpate their doctrines, would be worthy only of the dark ages of persecution.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

DARING ATTEMPT TO BURGLARIZE HALL & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & CO., Bankers, MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

Gents: Our banking house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and confirming our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the ruins down to you?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

WILDER'S PATENT SALAMANDER SAFES.
Renewal of the Wilder Patent.

The public are respectfully informed that, notwithstanding the great efforts made by other Safe makers to defeat at all hazards the renewal of this Patent for making the GREAT FIRE-PROOF SAFE OF THE WORLD, the subscribers are happy to say that the necessary documents were this morning received from Hon. Chas. Mason, Commissioner of Patents, granting the extension for the term of seven years from this date. All infringements upon the same will be prosecuted to the utmost venture of the law. A full assortment of all sizes can be found at the warehouse of Messrs. STEARNS & MARVIN, No. 40 Murray-st., and at our warehouse, No. 122 Water-st., near Wall, who are now the sole manufacturers in the United States. E. G. WILDER & CO.,

HOUSES AND LOTS FOR SALE.

HOTEL PROPERTY FOR SALE.
THE SUBSCRIBER,
Proprietor of the Union House, in the city of Troy, having made arrangements to enter into other business, is desirous of selling the lease, furniture and fixtures of the above house. The house contains 160 rooms, and they are all well furnished. The rent to be paid is merely nominal. The furniture, &c., cost over $25,000; I will sell for $15,000. If not sold soon I will sell one half interest to any one who is competent and will take charge of the house. F. W. BISHOP.

COTTAGE SITES AND 1,500 ACRES OF LAND ON THE HUDSON RIVER FOR SALE.—1,500 acres of land in the town of Courtlandt, Westchester County, having a front of nearly three miles on the Hudson, near the village of Peekskill, and about 1¼ hours ride by railroad from the City of New-York, being part of the ancient manor of Van Courtlandt. A large portion of said tract is covered with a thrifty growth of oak, chestnut and hickory, and on it are valuable granite quarries, iron ore, and valuable clay beds, and a number of beautiful building sites. It will be sold together, or in separate parcels. This property has been in the Van Courtlandt family since its original grant by Royal Patent from William III. For further particulars, apply to ADRIAN H. MULLER, Auctioneer, No. 35 Wall-st.

VALUABLE SHORE PROPERTY FOR SALE OR TO LEASE.—The subscriber would call the attension of manufacturers and others, who may be in pursuit of a convenient water-front for business purposes, to a portion of his property lying on Flushing Creek, which he offers for sale or to lease. Said property is always accessible for vessels drawing from 8 to 10 feet of water, and no location is in a safe and convenient harbor, within one hour's mail from New-York.

For manufactories and many other business purposes, this property will be found to possess many advantages over other places. The communication to this place is frequent, per steamboat and railroad, and at a low fare.

To provide means for the immediate completion and full equipment of the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad of 465 miles, as well as to make timely provision for the redemption of the Funded Debt of the Ohio and Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana, and Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad Companies respectively, maturing at different periods between Sept. 1, 1864, and July 1, 1873, the PITTSBURGH, FORT WAYNE AND CHICAGO RAILROAD COMPANY, into which those three Companies were legally merged by consolidation August 1, 1856, has authorized the issue of TEN THOUSAND BONDS, of which 3,500 of $1,000 each are known as Construction Bonds, and 6,500 of $1,000 each are known as Redemption Bonds, and are of the tenor above stated.

These Bonds are secured by a MORTGAGE IN TRUST to JOHN FERGUSON and THOMAS E. WALKER of New-York, covering the Company's Road of 465 miles, from Pittsburgh to Chicago, with all its Depôt grounds, appurtenances and franchises, embracing the Railroad Bridge over the Allegheny River at Pittsburgh, and Depôt grounds of great value in Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Chicago, Fort Wayne and at other points.

The Mortgage provides for a Sinking Fund.

NEW-YORK CITY.

More than Five Thousand Children Lost.

During the past year more than five thousand children were lost in New-York, Brooklyn and Jersey City. But it is a pleasure to add they have all been found again and returned to their crying friends. Many will so much marvel at the numbers of the lost and found as they who remembered the solemn procession of the old times when a single child was lost—the old man ringing the bell and crying at intervals, "Any body lost a baby," while by his left hand he led the little one, sometimes with its knuckles in its eyes sobbing over its lost condition, but oftener, with only wonder in its face—wonder what all the fuss is about, and behind, a long string of girls and boys ragged and genteelly dressed, pressing on to see who shall claim the foundling, and generally one or two of the crowd to be lost before the thing is ended.

Very differently these things are managed now. Seldom one stops for three hours in a Station-house, without hearing the anxious inquiry from a mother, "Have you seen my child?" The policeman hopes not, but "will she say how he looked?"

"He was a very pretty boy—he had full, red cheeks, a smooth, fair skin, flaxen, curly hair, and a clean white pinafore, that I ironed yesterday, before I cooked his dear little dinner for him; and O, dear, i you could have seen him feeding his dear little pet dog Bully, you would have died, he's so liberal and unselfish. Why, bless his little heart, do you know he'd give away every thing he gets, except his playthings. He has beautiful blue eyes—large, and so intelligent-like. Can you tell me where I'll find my child?"

It is in some cases a long time before the officer in attendance can ascertain the size, appearance and age of the child. As soon as he does, however, he puts the Police Telegraph in operation (if in this City) and inquires at the office of the Chief of Police, whether any lost children have been reported there. If not, the operator in the Chief's office opens the line to the other Station houses, and if a child has been found at any of them, an answer is returned immediately, and forwarded over the line to the station where the inquiry was first made. Such inquiries are hardly ever fruitless, for it is the duty of every Policeman to report all children found strolling about, and unable to tell where they live, to their respective Station houses, without delay. Such childre are kept there for two days, when, if not claimed they are transferred to the Alms House. It is, however, seldom that a child remains unclaimed so long. The facilities which the Police and Police Telegraph afford, for the discovery of lost children, is now pretty generally known, so that when a child is missing some one repairs to the nearest Station-house immediately, and the whereabouts of the absent little one is often learned in two or three minutes, even though it be in a distant part of the City.

During the past year there have been in this City alone:

Lost children restored	4,952
Sick and injured aided	916
Rescued from drowning	94
Horses astray restored	602
Cattle astray restored	26
Lodgers at the Station houses	64,908

EXAMINATION AT COLUMBIA COLLEGE.—The concluding examination for the year was commenced on Thursday at Columbia College. It will continue daily until Tuesday, the 16th, when the result will be announced.

Professor McVICKAR examined the Seniors in Ethics. They acquitted themselves as well as members of the Senior Class (proverbially the least studious in Colleges) generally do. The Juniors were very thoroughly sifted in their knowledge of the classics by Professor ANTHON.

Professor HACKLEY examined the Sophomore Class in Mathematics; some of the problems in Trigonometry were demonstrated on the black board with great readiness.

The Freshmen yesterday had a holiday; their turn will come to day.

Candidates for admission will be examined in the President's room at 10 A. M. on the 25th and 27th inst., and Commencement takes place at Niblo's on the 30th.

The buildings, which are at present occupied by the College, are undergoing thorough repair; the recitation rooms are in rather a bare condition. They have recently been repainted and repaired. The alterations and improvements will not be completed until October. Meantime the students have a vacation during the warm months.

THE NURSERY AND CHILD'S HOSPITAL.—The corner-stone of the building for this Hospital will be laid, with appropriate ceremonies, on Monday, the 22d of June, at 4 o'clock P. M. The new site is at the corner of Lexington avenue and Fiftieth-street, where the ceremonies of the occasion will be conducted by Rev. Dr. ANTHON. This institution was first organized in 1854. Favored by the unceasing kindness of many patrons, and the occasional aid of many others, it now takes rank as a permanent institution. The Report of the Visiting Physicians of the past year shows that 204 women, and 329 children have passed under their inspection during the year. Numerous sick children of the indigent have been restored, and the daily labors of many mothers out at service have been lightened by placing their children in this building for care and protection. Families have been supplied with nurses from the Institution, approved by the Physicians, a treble benefit, to the family, the nurse, and the Institution, which receives a fee in each case. The whole household at the Nursery is under the immediate care and control of a matron, and two of the Lady Managers by turns make daily visits and examinations in detail throughout all of the wards of the establishment.

AMERICAN INSTITUTE—MECHANICS' CLUB.—A regular conversational meeting of the Mechanics' Club of the American Institute was held at the rooms on Broadway on Wednesday evening, Mr. BUTLER in the Chair. Several papers were read, among them one on Economic Geology, and one a new marble, by Professor A. H. HILDRETH.

The subjects for conversation were the electric telegraph and steamboats. Professor HILDRETH made a long and able statement, in which he set forth the claims of Dr. JACKSON, of Boston, as the original discoverer of the Magnetic Telegraph, as early as the year 1832, at which time he had a machine, with drawings illustrative of the methods of conveying ideas by the magnetic current, all of which were shown to Professor MORSE, on board the ship Sully. Professor H. recited the exact language used by Dr. JACKSON to Professor MORSE. He also stated further, that the French had awarded the palm to Dr. JACKSON, as the true discoverer of the Telegraph, while Professor MORSE was given due credit for his enterprise in making a merchantable article through his patent of the Magnetic Telegraph. He stated that Mr. JONES, in the Patent Office, offered to give Dr. J. a patent for the invention of the Telegraph, which was refused by the Doctor, on the ground that no man of science ought to take out and hold a patent, for science is truth and should be free.

Mr. TILLMAN, of the Committee on Science, replied rather sharply to the statements of Professor HILDRETH, and in support of the claims of Professor MORSE.

Mr. ROOSEVELT and Judge MEIGS joined in the conversation.

Mr. CHASE exhibited a model of a window blind, of a novel and admirable method of construction.

The Chairman announced steamships as the subject for the next meeting, and the Club adjourned.

MECHANICS' INSTITUTE.—A meeting of the Philosophical Society of the Mechanics' Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the rooms No. 20 Fourth avenue, G. B. WHITMAN in the chair. The subject was "Wood, considered in its relation to the Arts." Mr. VAIL opened the conversation by a statement of the proper arrangement of the subject for discussion, and was followed by Mr. REID, who stated some interesting facts in relation to the history of Art in connection with Wood, in different countries and at different periods. The conversation was very interesting, and the audience larger than at previous meetings. The application of wood to ship building will be considered at the next meeting. The Literary Society of the Institute holds its meetings on Monday evenings. The question for discussion at the next meeting is, "Ought Ministers of the Gospel to engage in Politics?"

A SUNDAY EXCURSION SPOILED.—The steamboat John Birkbeck having advertised to leave the foot of Broome-street, E. R., on Sunday, at 2½ o'clock, P. M., for Harlem, some twenty five persons assembled at that point to take their Sunday ride. Having waited with some impatience for the arrival of the hour and the steamboat she was at last seen approaching, when the [illegible] began to move down to go on board. The [illegible] stopped her wheels at the Pier below, but instead of taking the passengers on board, put on steam again and cleared out, leaving the crowd on the dock, giving utterance to complaints loud, if not deep, at their shabby treatment. The complainants say if you don't want to go Harlem, make a special effort to meet the appointments of the John Birkbeck, and you will be gratified by being left behind.

ANOTHER YACHT RACE.—To-morrow the schooner Haze, M. H. GRINNELL's yacht, and the sloop Una, belonging to W. B. DUNCAN, are to sail for $500 a side, from the City around the Southwest Spit and return. Some of the steamboats will take the occasion for an excursion down the Bay at a dollar a head, to witness the race.

ROCHESTER UNIVERSITY.—At the Anniversary Exercises of the Literary Societies of the Rochester University, the Oration will be delivered by Prof. A. J. UPSON, of Hamilton College, and the Poem by J. N. WILDER, Esq., of Albany, on Anniversary evening, Tuesday, July 7.

☞ The United States mail steamship Atlantic, Capt. OLIVER ELDRIDGE, to sail on Saturday the 20th inst., having been put in the most perfect order, will be open to those who wish to visit her to-day.

☞ The ship Antelope was yesterday taken upon the Sectional Dock for repairs. She will be stripped, recaulked and coppered.

Catharine Ferry Nuisance.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Will you, through your paper, inform the public that a wrong is regularly perpetrated at the Catharine Ferry on Sunday evenings, to wit: On Brooklyn side no person stands to receive your fare; consequently, upon your arrival at New-York, a great rush is made for the narrow gate—the other gates being firmly secured and warily watched. Last evening some two hundred and fifty unfortunates—certainly not less—made their escape from "durance vile" after some fifteen or twenty minutes' confinement. This is an intolerable nuisance, and, while I have no hope that the slightest change for the better can be effected in the regulations of "The Union Ferry Company," I have hope that you, for the sake of the people, will publish a word of warning.

A SUFFERER.

Omnibus Impositions.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: Paying as you enter an omnibus has become an intolerable nuisance, and requires the united efforts of the Press to abolish it. Last evening, upon the arrival of the Hudson River Railroad train at 10 P. M., at Thirty first-street, a sufficient number of ladies and gentlemen filled stage No. 18 of the Fourteenth-street and Broadway line, anticipating they would get down town quicker than by the railroad train. In collecting up fare, one gentleman held his change ready and said he would pay when he got through, if the driver did not stop at all the cheatres too long, whereupon the driver stopped his horses and said his orders were not to move until all fares had been collected, thus keeping the whole load of passengers waiting to hear his abuse. To end it, another gentleman paid the fare and the driver slowly moved on, and, with thirteen inside and three outside, he would negotiate with every standing person along the different corners of the street to get in after much delay, some of the passengers got out to take other stages, and two gentlemen with heavy traveling bags were forced to leave the stage near Fourth-street, and run on foot to get to a railroad depôt in time to take the train about leaving. About this time a young lad stepped in, and went making his own change the driver came to a full stop, and we again had to wait until the fare was handed up. If the stage companies are victimized by those who won't pay, let them adopt some other method than this troublesome practice, as the paying portion of the community think too much of their time to be thus detained. By the old system no time is lost, and the change is ready when the passenger gets out, and much faster rides are the result. Again if any accident occurs they will never refund, although a person may have rode two blocks of the long distance for which they have to go. Anticipating your valuable assistance, I remain an opponent of this nuisance and a friend to FAST TRAVELING.

AN IMPOSTOR.—A genteelly dressed female called recently at an office, with a written statement signed CHARLES A. HOFFMAN, A. M., purporting that her husband was suffering from protracted illness, and in poverty, and calling herself Mrs. HERMAN, adding that she lived at No. 65 Hester-street, and that HOFFMAN lived at No. 90 same street. Her paper has a number of genuine signatures from persons who have given her money. On application at No. 65 Hester street no such person was found there, nor could Prof. HOFFMAN be found at No. 90.

Coroners' Inquests.

DEATH FROM INTEMPERANCE AND EXPOSURE.—An inquest was held yesterday morning at the City Prison, by Coroner PERRY, upon the body of Capt. —— STONE, formerly a popular North River steamboat captain, who at one time commanded the steamer Lighter. The deceased was admitted to the City Prison on Sunday morning. He was brought in on a chair. He was in a dying condition, and so feeble as to be hardly able to speak. Policeman SHEHAN said he found him in the street in a destitute condition, and brought him to the Tombs, that he might be sent to the Almshouse. Dr. COVEL, the Prison physician, gave the sick man all the attention possible, but he sank gradually, and died at 6 o'clock that evening. Dr. COVAL, in his evidence before the Coroner, said; "I should judge that intemperance was the remote cause of his death; the immediate cause was exhaustion." The Jury rendered a verdict of "Death from intemperance and exposure."

DEATH FROM BURNS.—Coroner HILLS held an inquest at the City Hospital, yesterday, upon the body of SOPHIA COENZE, a native of Germany, and aged 48 years, who came to her death, so the Jury found, "from severe burns, accidentally received by her clothes taking fire from the upsetting of a fluid lamp upon a hot stove, on the 14th day of June, 1857, at No. 262 West Thirty-eighth-street." The deceased was a married woman, and resided where the accident occurred.

KILLED ON BOARD THE "VANDERBILT."—THOMAS EARLY, a sailor on board the new steamship Vanderbilt, was almost instantly killed on that vessel, yesterday, by falling from the maintopgallant-yard to the deck. The body was removed to the late residence of deceased, at No. 10 Washington-street.

THE FIFTH WARD HOMICIDE.—An inquest upon the body of the negro SALTERS, who was fatally shot a few nights since in the Fifth Ward, was commenced yesterday at the New-York Hospital, but was adjourned till to-day.

KNOX AT THE HEAD OF AFFAIRS.—In his trade there is certainly nobody like KNOX, of Broadway, corner of Fulton, and nothing, consequently, like his hats. For color, richness of appearance, durability and exquisite finish, the world might be traversed before it could furnish any rival to the far-famed articles emanating from KNOX'S. Our artist in these essential crownings of the outward man, studies physiognomy, and no matter what the countenance may be, it is sure to look comely under one of KNOX'S own.

LONG ISLAND.

FIRE IN BROOKLYN.—At 4 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out in the three story brick building at the corner of Court and Centre streets, owned by S. GUNDER, and was damaged to the extent of $1,000, covered by insurance. The first floor was occupied by E. FARRILL, as a liquor saloon. He reports his loss in stock at $800, and that he also had $,200 in bills destroyed which was paid to him on Saturday. Insured in the Clinton Insurance Company. The second floor was occupied by M. GAINES, and the third floor by JAMES MULLIGAN. They saved most of their property.

SERIOUS ACCIDENTS.—A young man named MICHAEL GEARY, residing at No. 264 Fourteenth-street, New-York, had both of his feet shockingly crushed on Sunday evening by one of the Greenwood cars on Court-street, near Schermerhorn. He was standing on the front platform, and stepped off to allow a lady to leave the car, and the car starting again before he had regained his position, he was thrown upon the track. He was conveyed to his home. The feet are so badly injured that he never will be able to use them again.

A German named SEBASTIAN STAGGERS fell from the third story of a house to the area, at the corner of South First street and Eleventh street, Sunday night, where he was found about 4 o'clock yesterday morning by officers BELL and AUSTIN of the Sixth Precinct, who were called to the spot by the groans of the injured man. It was found that he had broken one arm, collar-bone, two ribs, and was otherwise severely injured. He was taken to the City Hospital for treatment.

THE FIRST ARREST.—ROBERT THOMAS, porter-house keeper, No. 6 Greenpoint avenue, the head and front of the Kings County Liquor Dealers' Association—the one who offered the resolution to expel any member who applied for a license—has been arrested for selling liquor last Sunday, in violation of the law. He gave bail before Justice PERRY. This is the first arrest under the new Excise Law.

AN ANNOYING MISTAKE.—Two men, in charge of one of the garbage-carts of the Fourth Ward, espied a barrel full of what they supposed to be garbage, in front of a grocery on the corner of Myrtle-avenue and Adams-street. They emptied the contents of the barrel among the refuse in the cart. Too great ran out in breathless haste, and great was the astonishment of the garbage men when they ascertained, but too late, that they had dumped a barrel full of eggs, fresh from market, into their cart; a few were picked out whole, but most of them were broken. The grocer was inconsolable, but had to pocket the loss.

☞ There was some little excitement in Brooklyn yesterday caused by the report that the body of a child had been brought ashore from a vessel in the Atlantic Basin in a somewhat mysterious manner. Upon investigation it turned out that the Captain of a vessel had a child die in a foreign port, and desiring to bring it home, put the body in a barrel of spirits, and being ignorant of the local law, brought it ashore without the usual notice to the Health officer.

FOUND DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man was found in the East River, off the foot of Van Brunt-street, Brooklyn, yesterday. The body is 5 feet 8 inches in height, light complexion, dark hair and small moustache. The only clothing on the body was a shirt and pair of pantaloons.

☞ An attempt was made to fire the Brooklyn City Hall Sunday night last, by firing a pile of lumber in the basement. As there is no wood work about the building to burn, the attempt was a failure. It was evidently done to create an alarm.

MILITARY.—The 14th Regiment N. Y. S. M. made their annual Spring parade yesterday in Brooklyn, and were reviewed by the Mayor and Common Council. The corps, as usual, made a creditable appearance.

ANOTHER SWINDLE.—On Saturday, Dr. J. A. WILSON, of Pennsylvania, was swindled out of a $75 gold watch and $25 by the patent-safe game, near Greenwood Cemetery. He was taken from a hotel in New-York by two sharpers to see the sight.

BURGLARY.—The residence of DANIEL SHELLY, corner of Powers and Bergen streets, Brooklyn, was entered by burglars on Sunday night, who stole a watch and $46 in bills.

☞ GEORGE LAW made complaint in Brooklyn yesterday against PETER MCQUADE for stealing his horse and wagon from near the Atlantic Basin one day last week.

The Great German Saengerfest.

From the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin of yesterday.

The great Musical Festival commenced in this city on Saturday, and thus far the previously arranged programme has been carried out. The weather has been very favorable, and the affair thus far has gone off with great éclat. On Saturday evening the grand reception took place in Independence square, and the scene presented there will be long remembered by all who had the good fortune to witness it. The stranger societies were received in the main avenue of the square, and the display of lanterns, flags, &c., was superb. After the singing of the Song of Welcome by a powerful choir, the strangers were escorted to headquarters at Jayne's Hall, where they were addressed by Mr. WM. ROSENTHAL, and after partaking of a collation they were escorted to their lodgings.

The great event of yesterday was the concert of Sacred Music at Jayne's Hall. The room—particularly the galleries—was well filled. The stage was beautifully decorated with the flags of the different societies, which were placed at intervals in the semi-circle at the northern end of the Hall. The showy flags, the wreaths of evergreens, the poetic inscriptions—and above all the gaily dressed ladies, who occupied the boxes above the stage, made up a scene which was striking and novel. The singers occupied the stage, while in front of the latter, on the main floor, a space was set apart for the powerful orchestra.

It was very evident, this morning, that something unusual was afoot. In many parts of the city flags were displayed liberally, and in the Eleventh and Twelfth Wards, composing the Old District of Northern Liberties, the display of bunting exceeded all previous efforts, in that way. The American flag, blended with the ensigns of different German States, and the German patriot flag flouted the breeze in every direction, while, in many instances, the houses were adorned with evergreens and words of welcome set forth in German phrase. Business, except such as pertained in some measure to the Festival, was suspended, and scores of stout German citizens, with their wholesome looking wives and rosy-cheeked sweethearts, were hurrying through the streets in their holiday attire.

Here and there young Germans in the orthodox, brown linen suits, black belt and felt hats, which constitute the Turner uniform, might be seen working their way towards some house where a display of flags and laurel, with a lettered transparency in the midst, denoted that it was the rendezvous of a Turner bund or a Singer's Verein.

The members of the societies from abroad, were also conspicuous objects among the throng in the streets, and they could readily be distinguished by their fanciful scarfs, or the neat little badges they wore upon the lappels of their coats.

The great centre of attraction, early this morning, was the Academy of Music, on Broad street, where a rehearsal for the Grand Jubilee Concert which comes off this evening, was to take place.

Eight o'clock was the hour fixed for the rehearsal, but in consequence of many of the singers being late in reaching the Academy a much later hour had arrived before the rehearsal was commenced. In consequence of this delay, it was one o'clock before the societies left the building, and then some time elapsed before the line was formed and the procession started.

To-night the great Jubilee Concert takes place at the Academy of Music, and to-morrow the picnic at Lemon Hill will come off.

TREMENDOUS FRESHET.—$40,000 WORTH OF LUMBER DESTROYED.—The rains of the past few days have been very heavy to the north of us, and the Alleghany consequently was swollen very rapidly. It commenced rising here on Tuesday evening, and by noon yesterday had risen eight feet, but then commenced to recede.

Ever since the late rise, large numbers of rafts of lumber and timber have been tied up along the shores of the Alleghany, from this city up to Sharpsburg, ready to be floated down when wanted.

The river rose so unexpectedly during Tuesday night, that but little effort was made to secure these rafts, and so rapidly, that by midnight they were beginning to break loose and go adrift. From midnight to daylight the rapidly-rising stream was bearing them away on its turbid bosom, and the watchman at the old Alleghany Bridge says he could hear them constantly surging against the piers and making the old fabric tremble all over. What number of rafts broke loose we are not yet able to say; but the shores above the city are pretty well swept. Large numbers were dashed against the piers of the bridge and torn in pieces, and probably but few, if any, escaped this fate. The amount of lumber and timber thus destroyed is estimated at $40,000, very little of which was insured.

The following-named persons, among numerous others, are heavy losers: Messrs. HAND, WICKERSHAM, POOR & REED; HEATH & LUCAS; J. HERRON: COOK, BARNEY & Co.; HORNER & HARRIT. WATSON & Co. lost two empty flats, and Captain DENNISON two loaded metal boats and three empty flats. His loss is covered by insurance in a Wheeling office.

But little of the lumber will be secured again. The most of it will become trophies to the wreckers along the river below.—Pittsburg Gazette.

MONDAY, June 15—P. M.

The Official Averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending Saturday last, June 13, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank on another page of this paper, present, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, June 6:

Increase of Loans	$77,015
Decrease of Specie	1,159,835
Decrease of Circulation	141,682
Decrease of Actual Deposits	1,121,766

The average decrease of Specie is not unexpected after the export demand of $3,394,000, which was mostly supplied from Bank three days before the California arrival. The average would indicate that the Banks open business for the present week with $800,000 or $1,000,000 more than is here reported. The other items of the statement are satisfactory and consistent. The actual deposits keep up well, after so large a remittance to Europe. Including the Exchanges through the Clearing-House, and the balance in the Sub-Treasury, the following is the general comparison with the previous week, and also with this time last year:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	June 14, 1856.	June 13, 1857.	June 6, 1857
Capital	$50,791,000	$60,442,000	$60,442,000
Loans	104,168 881	115,419,541	115,338,526
Specie	17,414,680	11,974,879	13,134,714
Circulation	8,360,735	8,696,893	8,838,575
Gross Deposits	91,602,245	96,168,937	96,594,391
Exchanged	22,015,560	28,067,613	27,361,301
Undrawn	68,586,695	68,111,324	69,233,090
In Sub-Treasury	9,876,491	11,749,304	12,431,008

The week opens on an easy supply of Money at call and on first-class short date paper. As noted last week, lenders are disposed to ask higher interest on bills having over 30 or 60 days to run, and 8½@9 ₱ cent. are the terms on the longer dates. The Foreign Exchanges to-day, for the Boston steamer, are 109¾@109⅞ on London; 5.17½ on Paris, the same as for the packets of last week. A moderate business thus far done for the present opportunity. Some three days' sight London was on the market at 110¾@110⅞. About $225,000 in Gold was deposited in the Sub-Treasury to-day for transfer drafts on the Boston office where the Gold will be put up for the steamer on Wednesday. The further sum of $750,000 will go over by express. The Sub-Treasury receipts, including the Boston transfers, were $323,428; payments $219,104; balance $11,853,029. The payments include the further sum of $45,000 on Government drafts from California.

There is an improved Stock Market to-day. The firmness was quite decided throughout the list and the advance established on the Railroad list was equal to 3 ₱ cent. in Southern Michigan, 2 ₱ cent. on Galena and Chicago, ¾@1 ₱ cent. on New-York Central, Erie, Rock Island and Southern Michigan Guaranteed, and 2 ₱ cent. on Toledo. Another heavy day's work was done in Reading shares and a large amount of buyers' options taken at 75¾@¾@¾ ₱ cent., and sellers' options at 74½@¾. The cash price, at Second Board, was 75¾ ₱ cent. The dealings at the Board altogether show a more equal contest between the speculators for a rise and fall. The general market left off firm.

The defalcation in the State Treasury of Ohio, telegraphed from Columbus this afternoon, is an old affair, originating with a former treasurer. The amount now made public is larger than was generally supposed. The loss in no wise affects the current finances of the State, and the July interest will be paid as usual in this City on the first day of the month.

UNPARALLELED EXCITEMENT IN THE CITY

The Recorder's Office the State Head-Quarters, and a Coroner Doing Sheriff's Duty.

Yesterday was a day of more excitement than New-York has suffered before for many years. It was thought that it would be a busy day when its programme was announced in the papers of yesterday morning. The unfinished business of Monday at the Street Commissioner's office, the Police quarrel giving all signs of an early approaching collision, the turnout of the Seventh Regiment on its way to embark for Boston, and, most of all, the preparations for the arrival of General WM. WALKER, the chief of filibusters, in the evening. Any one of these was excitement enough for one day, but coming all together an unusual hubbub and confusion was expected. But the reality swamped all previous calculations, and made such a day as has not been experienced in the metropolis since the Astor Riots. The scene of the greatest excitement was at the City Hall.

As it was expected that Mr. CONOVER would again attempt to take possession of the Street Commissioner's office yesterday morning, at 8¾ o'clock Officer MASTERSON, under the authority of the Sheriff, placed his men in the Street Commissioner's room. These prevented access behind the railing, where were seated Mr. TURNER, Capt. BENNETT, of the Municipal (old) Police, and one of the Deputy Sheriffs.

The Police were drawn up in a semi-circle, beginning from each side of the door and extending round the room. Officer MASTERSON told the men who guarded the gate that should Mr. CONOVER attempt to pass, they must politely forbid him, but if he tried to force a passage they must put him out.

At 9 o'clock, Mr. CONOVER appeared entirely unattended; passing through the double line of Police which skirted the stairs and hall, he entered the outer office, where he was met by his friends, who congratulated him on the course he had pursued in the matter. Mr. CONOVER proceeded to the inner room and attempted to pass the gate, but the officers refused to let him enter. He then requested Captain BENNETT to admit him, but the Captain answered:

"You cannot come in, Sir. I trust you do not consider this a personal matter in any wey. It is a disagreeable duty, but I have strict orders not to permit you to pass the gate, and I must enforce them."

Mr. CONOVER—I have nothing to do with personalities; but I am the Street Commissioner, and this is my office. I am here under the authority of the highest power of the State, and I will show you the commission under which I act.

Mr. CONOVER here produced his appointment, bearing Governor KING's signature and the seal of the State.

Mr. BENNETT—You need not produce it.

Mr. CONOVER, (holding it up)—I demand admittance to and possession of this office. You deny both, and I now offer to show you the authority under which I act.

Mr. BENNETT—Mr. CONOVER, it is not my province to read any of those documents; I do not wish to look at your papers; I have orders which I must execute.

Mr. CONOVER—By what authority do you refuse me?

Mr. BENNETT—As a Deputy Sheriff and Captain of Police.

Mr. CONOVER—The "Captain of Police" I care nothing about. Are you deputized by the Sheriff?

Mr. BENNETT—Yes, Sir.

Mr. CONOVER then addressed himself to Mr. TURNER, who was seated behind the railing, apparently a good deal excited:

"Mr. TURNER," said he, "I wish to speak with you a moment."

TURNER, (shaking his head)—No, Sir.

Mr. CONOVER—Only a moment, Mr. TURNER.

Mr. TURNER—No, Sir, I will not hear it; I will not speak with you.

Mr. CONOVER—You refuse to hear me?

Mr. TURNER—Yes, the time has gone by.

Mr. CONOVER then turned to the gate, and reaching over the arms of the officers, attempted to open it. Officer MASTERSON, taking him by the collar, said: "You cannot go in, Sir! Here, men!" and the semi-circle immediately closed around Mr. CONOVER, completely surrounding him.

"But I must go in," said Mr. CONOVER.

"You shall not go in, Sir!"

"I must—I will go in."

Mr. CONOVER then renewed his attempt to enter, when he was again seized by the collar by Officer MASTERSON and another Policeman, when a brief struggle ensued. Other officers seized him by the arms, and he was carried to the door and released.

Turning to MASTERSON, he said: "You have resisted me. By what authority do you act?"

Mr. MASTERSON—I act as Deputy Sheriff.

Mr. CONOVER—Gentlemen, I have the law upon my side: I proceed upon authority above yours; you have resisted me, and in so doing have resisted the laws of the State. I have proceeded in a strictly legal manner thus far, and shall take only legal steps.

Mr. CONOVER then went to the outer room of the office, and took possession of a desk behind the railing, seating himself between his two Clerks, Messrs. POLLOCK and PECKHAM. These gentlemen were Clerks under Mr. TAYLOR, and recognizing Mr. CONOVER's commission as valid, accepted a reappointment at his hands.

A builder, who was present, required an extension of time, for the removal of some sand, and he applied to Mr. CONOVER for it. One of the clerks made out the paper, which Mr. C. signed, and it was delivered to the builder.

So matters remained for about twenty minutes, the crowd increasing, but conducting themselves peaceably. At the expiration of this time, however, Capt. BENNETT received a message from Mayor Wood, directing Mr. CONOVER's immediate expulsion from the office.

"Sergeant LEWIS," said Capt. B., "you must eject Mr. CONOVER from this office. Do it peaceably if you can, but should force become necessary, you can have 500 men at your disposal."

Officer LEWIS stepped up to Mr. CONOVER and stated his orders.

Mr. CONOVER—I shall not go.

Capt. BENNETT advanced and said: "Mr. CONOVER, this is a very painful duty to me. I have nothing against you personally, but I must insist on your leaving this room."

Mr. CONOVER replied that he intended to stay unless he should be forcibly ejected. Whereupon Capt. BENNETT took him by the collar.

Mr. CONOVER requested one moment to show the authority under which he acted, and again exhibited the Governor's commission, but the Captain said he had seen it already, but could not recognize it, and, renewing his grasp on Mr. CONOVER's collar, dragged him to the door. The police force gathered round them and shoved Mr. C. towards the door. He made no attempt at resistance except refusing to walk. A few of the police made insulting remarks to Mr. C. as he passed them, but they were promptly reprimanded by their officers. In the hall Mr. C. was released and his friends recommended him to institute legal proceedings.

By this time several thousands had collected about the Hall of Records, and all sorts of rumors were afloat. Police squads, in full dress, marched and counter-marched about the Park, and the general expectation was that a bloody collision between Mayor Wood's party and the Metropolitan Police was at hand.

Mr. CONOVER, with a body guard of friends, passed through the crowd and took a carriage in Chambers-street, whence he proceeded to the office of Mr. FIELD. Meantime Mr. TURNER remained in the Street Commissioner's office, and said he was ready for business, but he did not like the kind that had been transacted that morning.

THE STREET COMMISSIONER'S OFFICE CLOSED.

About 11 o'clock, however, the excitement was too much for him, so he requested the Mayor to order the police to close the office, which the police set about doing. The heavy iron shutters were closed and bolted, the doors locked, and the office vacated.

THE SHERIFF WASHES HIS HANDS OF THE MAYOR'S ACTS.

While this was going on, Deputy-Sheriff VULTE made a speech to the crowd, defining the position of the Sheriff in the premises, and protesting against the Mayor's movement of closing the office, as the force under the Sheriff's orders was fully competent to protect the public property and preserve the peace.

From this time up to three o'clock affairs remained comparatively quiet. Knots of politicians and citizens gathered about the Park and the neighboring restaurants to express their opinions on the state of the City affairs generally, but particularly on the events of Monday and yesterday morning.

In the interim Mr. CONOVER went over to the Superior Court room, where the following took place:

SUPERIOR COURT—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Hon. Justice HOFFMAN.

Yesterday, upon the complaint and affidavit of Daniel D. Conover, Judge Hoffman granted an order of arrest against Fernando Wood, James C. Willet, Charles Turner, and John W. Bennett. The defendants were held to bail in the sum of $5,000 each, and the order made returnable on the 20th inst. The following is a copy of the summons and complaint:

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.—Daniel D. Conover vs. Fernando Wood, James C. Willet, Charles Turner and John W. Bennett.—Summons for relief.

To the defendants: You are hereby summoned and required to answer the complaint in this action, of which a copy is herewith served upon you, and serve a copy of your answer on us, at our office, No. 82 Broadway, in the City of New-York, within twenty days after the service hereof; and if you fail to answer the complaint as aforesaid, the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief demanded in the complaint.

Dated NEW-YORK, June 16, 1857.

FIELD & SLUYTER,
Plaintiff's Attorneys.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.—Daniel D. Conover vs. Fernando Wood, James C. Willet, Charles Turner, and John W. Bennett.

Daniel D. Conover, plaintiff, complains and alleges:

First, That on the 15th day of June, 1857, the plaintiff being Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, while peaceably seated in his office in the Hall of Records of the said City, was violently assaulted by the defendant, Bennett, assisted by other persons unknown to deponent, who acted under his directions, who made an unprovoked attack upon deponent, seizing him by the collar and the arm, bruising and otherwise injuring his head and neck, and violently ejected him from his office.

Second, That as the plaintiff is informed and believes, the defendant, Bennett, and the persons so assisting him, acted under the advice and direction of the other defendants, Willet, Wood and Turner, who procured the said assault to be committed, and aided and abetted therein.

Wherefore the plaintiff demands judgment against the defendants to the amount of ten thousand dollars. FIELD & SLUYTER, Plaintiff's Attorneys.

City and County of New-York: Daniel D. Conover, the above-named plaintiff, being sworn, saith that the foregoing complaint is true, of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated to be on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true. D. D. CONOVER.

Sworn, June 16, before me,
SAMUEL S. ACKER, Commissioner of Deeds.

AFFIDAVIT OF DANIEL CONOVER.

City and County of New-York: Daniel D. Conover, the above-named plaintiff, being sworn saith, that he is the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, having been appointed such by the Governor of thee State upon the decease of Joseph S. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner: that his apartments consist of four rooms in the Hall of Records in said City, and that the defendant, James C. Willet, is the Sheriff of the said City and County.

That on the 15th day of June, 1857, while deponent was peacefully seated in said apartments, the defendant Willet entered the same.

That at that time several men were stationed in front of one of the rooms before mentioned communicating with the room in which deponent was sitting, and on deponent's attempting to enter said room, they refused to permit him to do so, alleging that they had been deputized to act as deputy sheriffs by the said Willet, and were directed by him to prevent deponent from entering said room; that said Willet informed deponent that they had been so deputized and received from him such orders; that said Willet in deponent's presence directed said men to prevent deponent's entrance into said room, and that he subsequently sent other deputies to remain in deponent's office, as deponent believes, to embarrass and annoy him in the prosecution of his duties as Street Commissioner, and deponent further saith that subsequently and on the same day the deputies so placed in deponent's office by said Willet ordered deponent to leave his said office, and that thereupon defendant, Bennett, ordered and assisted by several other men unknown to deponent, who acted under his directions, seized deponent forcibly by the collar and by his arm, and on deponent's attempting to defend himself struggled violently with him, hurting his arm and neck, and otherwise injuring him, and forcibly ejected him from said apartments.

That as deponent has been informed by the person so assaulting him, and verily believes, all the persons committing said assault acted by the direction of the defendant Wood, who ordered said assault to be made upon the deponent, while in the peaceable prosecution of his duty.

And deponent further saith that during the said assault the aforesaid deputies of the defendant Willet and the said Charles Turner, stood by and encouraged, and aided, and abetted the defendant Bennett in his said attack, and as deponent is informed and believes, the said deputies were directed by the defendant Willet to lend their aid and countenance thereto; that the said Bennett during the day frequently went back and forth from deponent's office to the office of the defendant Wood.

Deponent further saith that he believes all the defendants conspired together to procure said assaults to be committed upon him.

And this deponent further saith that, on this 16th day of June, 1857, this deponent took his place in his said office, when the said Bennett, who is acting as a policeman under the order of the said Wood, appeared and ordered this deponent to leave, whereupon this deponent demanded his authority, and the said Bennett answered that he was acting by the express orders of the said Wood to turn this deponent out. He and the men under his command thereupon forcibly removed this deponent from the said room.

D. D. CONOVER.

Sworn June 16, 1857, before me,
SAMUEL S. ACKER, Com. of Deeds.

SUPERIOR COURT OF THE CITY OF NEW-YORK.—Daniel D. Conover vs. Fernando Wood, Charles Turner, James C. Willet and John W. Bennett.—Order to arrest and hold to bail.

TO THE CORONERS OF THE CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW-YORK: It appearing to me, by affidavit, that a sufficient cause of action exists under section 179 of the Code, you are required forthwith to arrest the defendants in this action, and hold each of them to bail in the sum of five thousand dollars, and to return this order to Field & Sluyter, plaintiff's attorneys, at their office, No. 82 Broadway, New-York, on the 18th day of June, one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven. [Signed] MURRAY HOFFMAN.

Dated NEW-YORK, June 16, 1857.

NICHOLAS HILL'S OPINION.

In filling the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Taylor, it is said that the Governor acted upon an opinion given by Nicholas Hill. It is as follows:

"I have examined the question whether the existing vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner, in the City of New-York, may be supplied by an exercise of the appointing power vested in the Governor, and have arrived at the following result:

1. No power over this vacancy is given to the Mayor and Board of Aldermen by the 19th or any other section of the amended charter. Even the power of appointment given by that section was not to take effect, in respect to this office, until the expiration of the term of the deceased incumbent, (Sec. 51.) The cases, moreover, in which the power to fill vacancies was intrusted to the Mayor and Aldermen are expressly designated, and their right to fill them in cases not designated, is thus excluded by implication, (Sec. 29.)

2. I know of no special enactment or other law authorizing the filling of this vacancy, except the statute passed Feb. 3, 1849, (Laws of 1849, Sec. 23;) and it seems to me that the case comes fairly within the power there given to the Governor. (Signed) NICHOLAS HILL."

CAPT. WALLING'S ATTEMPT TO ARREST MAYOR WOOD.

An order of arrest against Mayor Wood for inciting to riot, was also issued by Recorder SMITH, and placed in the hands of Capt. WALLING, of the Metropolitan force. The Captain immediately proceeded to the Mayor's office. He entered without opposition, and walking up to the Mayor, put his hand on his Honor's shoulder, saying, "I arrest you, Sir!"

The Mayor looked at him with apparent astonishment, and then turning to his policemen, said "Men, put that man out!"

The policemen obeyed orders; seized Capt. WALLING and ejected him forcibly from the room. Capt. W. then returned to the Recorder's office, and said that he had been unable to accomplish the arrest of Mayor Wood. The Recorder thereupon issued the following warrant of arrest:

To any constable or policeman of the City of New-York:

Whereas complaint on oath has been made before the undersigned, Recorder in and for the said City, by George W. Walling, obergiog that he was resisted by Fernando Wood in the execution of criminal process duly executed on the 16th day of June, instant, at the City of New-York: These are, therefore, in the name of the people of the State of New-York, to command you, the said constable or policeman, and every of you, to apprehend the body of the said defendant, and forthwith bring him before me, at my office, No. 23 Chambers-street, in the said City, to answer the said charge, and to be dealt with as the law directs.

Given under my hand and seal, this 16th day of June, 1857. JAMES M. SMITH, JR., Recorder.

The Recorder also wrote a requisition upon the Metropolitan Police Commissioners for one hundred additional men. This requisition was responded to, and one hundred and fifty men, under the command of Depnty-Superintendent CARPENTER, marched to the scene. This swelled the Metropolitan force to about two hundred, who were all drawn up opposite the Recorder's Office in Chambers street.

CORONER PERRY'S ATTEMPT TO ARREST THE MAYOR.

Meanwhile Coroner PERRY was found by a messenger in the street—and told that he was wanted by the Court on business. Without dreaming its nature he instantly obeyed the order, and appeared before the Judge, to whom the Judge intrusted his warrant to arrest the parties named above. [The Coroner who called on for this Sheriff duty because the Sheriff was a party, and the statutes provide that in such a case the Coroner shall be called on.] Coroner PERRY proceeded to the Mayor's office with a warrant for his arrest on this civil suit. The Coroner stated the business with which he was charged to the officers who were guarding the Mayor's quarters, but they refused him admittance. He then returned to the Recorder's office, and made the following affidavit:

City and County of New-York, ss.—Frederick W. Perry, of the said City and County, doth depose and say, that he is one of the Coroners of the said City and County, duly elected and sworn, residing in the said City and County and exercising the duties of the said office of Coroner; that as such and on the 16th day of June, 1857, at the said city, a warrant of arrest, a copy of which is hereunto annexed, was delivered to and received by this deponent for execution according to law; that he went with the said warrant to the City Hall in the said city for the purpose of arresting the defendant Fernando Wood thereon, under and by virtue of the said warrant; that he went to the outer door of the said office of the Mayor, the said Fernando Wood, in the said City Hall, and was at first denied admittance; but on being informed that he was such Coroner, and had business with the Mayor, was admitted within the said office up to the railing within the same, where he was met by some twenty or more of the Municipal Policemen, who denied him admission to the inner room, where, it was said, and where deponent believes and has no doubt the said Wood then was; that this deponent declared to them his business, and told them that he was such Coroner, and had such process or warrant of arrest; that thereupon a messenger went into the inner office and informed said Wood of deponent's business, that deponent does not know his name, but that he also was a Municipal Policeman; that he returned almost instently, and then a Mr. Ackmerman, formerly, and now claiming to be Captain of Police, who was then present, and who, as I believe, came out of the said private office of the said Wood, came to deponent and told him that it was the Mayor's orders that he should be turned out of the room; that he then immediately seized this deponent, and after a little resistance on his part, led and forced this deponent out of the room, and he was, therefore, wholly unable then to execute the said warrant of arrest, by reason of the resistence then and there given by the said Wood and the said Ackerman to such service by this deponent. F. W. PERRY.

Sworn before me this 16th day of June, 1857.
JAMES M. SMITH, JR., Recorder.

CORONER PERRY'S SECOND ATTEMPT.

At the Recorder's office Mr. PERRY found D. D. FIELD, Esq., whose, and the Recorder's, advice he sought. Mr. FIELD opened the Revised Statutes to Article VII., page 537, Sec. 101, part 3, and read the section concerning the duties of Sheriffs, as follows:

"When a Sheriff, or other public officer authorized to execute any process delivered to him, shall find or have reason to apprehend that resistance will be made to the execution of such process, he shall be authorized to command every male inhabitant of the County, or as many as he shall think proper, and with such arms as he shall direct any military Company or Companies in said County, armed and equipped, to assist him in overcoming such resistance and, if necessary, in seizing, arresting and confining the resisters, their aiders and abettors, to be dealt with according to law."

So said Mr. FIELD: "I advise you at once to make a requisition upon the military; take a sufficient and overpowering force of armed men, and serve your warrant."

The RECORDER—I advise—but it is only my advice, remember; I have no authority in the matter, for the warrant is not returnable to me—I advise you to take a force, say, of 50 policemen, and with them go to the Mayor and serve the warrant, if you can. Take men whom you can rely upon. Don't peril your lives, but, until they are in danger, yield nothing.

Coroner PERRY—Gentlemen, I am not lacking in courage, nor am I fool-hardy; I am willing to go alone, with 50 men, or with 500, as you may advise me intelligently. But I want to know that I am right first. The Mayor's Office is surrounded by the most desperate characters in the City. Let me know: Am I to serve the warrant, at all hazards? I am prepared to try, but 50 men of the best spirit—the most determined courage—will not be sufficient to enable me to do it.

"Tell them who you are, and your errand," advised the Recorder. "Assure any who oppose that they do so at the peril of imprisonment for twelve months—even if they use no violence. It will be less likely to provoke the passion of the mob than if you take a larger force.

Besides these, there were several of the old Police injured,—but not any of them seriously. Among the number was:

18. J. N. PURDY of the Sixteenth Ward—hurt in the side.

PURDY and CRAWFORD had their wounds dressed at Mr. MATSELL's office by Surgeon-General HAGEBOUK and Dr. GILLIGEN.

19. A man named DE COURCEY, keeper of a bar-room in Chambers-street, got mixed in the fight and received some severe wounds about the head.

The wounded of the Metropolitan force taken to the office of Recorder SMITH were attended to by Dr. JONES, Dr. HARROLD, and others, and were afterwards removed, some to the New-York Hospital and some to their homes.

"I am ready," said Coroner PERRY, rising; "and here are your men," said Captain SEBRING, of the Ninth Ward (now) Police. "Fifty men of the Department are at the door." "Can I rely upon them?" asked the Coroner. "They will not run, Sir—they will do their duty"—and they went out—the Captain taking the lead, the Coroner following, and the force two by two in order. The crowd gave three cheers as they started, and followed them. A minute after Chambers-street was unusually still. Most of the throng in front of the Recorder's office had pressed up toward towards the rear of the City Hall. The roofs of the houses and windows were filled with lookers-on, but in the anxiety to see how the men bore themselves there was no cheering, but a marked stillness—almost breathless waiting for the result.

A BLOODY ENCOUNTER OF THE RIVAL POLICE.

At 3 o'clock the Park was thronged. The City Hall was filled with Mayor Woon's Police, fully equipped, who had been summoned from all the Districts. Nearly all the Captains were present. The gates in front of the main entrance of the Hall were closed fast. The archway beneath was jammed with a reserve. The Sixth, Eleventh, and Thirteenth Ward men protected the western entrance leading to the Chief's office. The eastern and middle entrances were guarded by men from several Wards. At the upper back entrance stood Captain HARRIS WIMES of the Eighteenth Ward with a large force of his District, flanked by Captain JOYCE of the Twentieth Ward and many men from the upper Wards.

Half an hour later there was a terrible commotion. The crowd ran wildly towards Chambers-street, shouting, "Here they come; pitch into the sons of b—h's." The Irish brogue was very common. From the vicinity of the Court of Sessions building or New City Hall, came steadily on the Metropolitan Policemen. They had each upon their hats a ribbon with a number and the words, "Metropolitan Police." They were closely pressed by the throng, who hooted and hallooed and cheered for "FERNANDO WOOD." Lieut. JACOB L. SEBRING, of the Ninth Ward, who had command, led the advancing force. They marched steadily on, and halted only on reaching the steps leading to the rear entrance of the Hall. There the crowd behaved most frantically, and made a rush towards the Metropolitan men, but they were quickly repelled. Lieut. SEBRING, after a moment's halt, proceeded to ascend the steps. The old Police under Captain WIMES resisted. A great many fighting men (not policemen) from the Fourth and other Wards, rushed to the attack. Alderman WILSON of the First Ward was in the midst of the affray, with his official baton in hand. Clubs were drawn and freely used. Many of the "roughs" drew from beneath their coats huge sticks and various other weapons and going in the fight charged upon the Metropolitan men, who fought with great determination. Many on both sides were felled to the ground, and blood spirted high from the wounds of the combatants. At length, overwhelmed by the superior numbers of their opponents, the Metropolitan Police gave way, for a moment, but it was only for a moment. They again formed and again essayed to mount the steps and take the entrance by storm, and for a time it seemed as though they would succeed. The scene was a terrible one; blows upon naked heads fell thick and fast, and men rolled helpless down the steps, to be leaped upon and beaten till life seemed extinct. Still the small Metropolitan force pressed on firmly, against the overwhelming odds, until attacked in the rear by a large number of outsiders, they were forced to split and retreat. The Metropolitan men were attacked separately by Woon's men in uniform and without, knocked to the ground and kicked about the head again and again, amidst terrible execrations and cheers in broken English, for "FERNANDO WOOD," and "our side," and loud cries of "Down with the Black Republicans!" At length all the maimed men were gathered up by their companions and carried away—some to the office of the Recorder, and some to the office of Mr. MATSELL, beneath the Hall. Loud shouts were then repeated by the maddened crowd, who pursued and beat any and all whom they suspected of being a Metropolitan officer.

Lieut. SEBRING, who escaped uninjured, marched his men, supporting their wounded ones or carrying them in their arms, back to Chambers-street, in front of the Recorder's office.

That many men were not killed outright is wonderful. The clubs used in the fight were the heaviest "day clubs," and all the blows given by them were upon the head.

It was almost impossible to ascertain with accuracy

THE NUMBER OF THE WOUNDED.

It is certain, however, that about twenty suffered more or less,—three of them fatally it is feared. We annex the names of the injured so far as learned:

The following named of the Fifth Ward were injured:

1. Samuel S. Slater—shockingly mutilated about the head; fatal result feared.
2. Thos. Bell—seriously.
3. S. B. Smith—terribly; not expected to survive.
4. James Greer—slightly.
5. Peter Bodine—several scalp wounds.
6. Wm. Van Tassell—severely cut about the head.
7. Henry S. Green—slightly.
8. John Girvin—severely.
9. S. W McKay, Third Ward—slightly.
10. —— Milton, Third Ward—slightly.
11. —— Swazzle, Third Ward—slightly.
12. —— Benedict, Third Ward—badly.
13. —— Kelly, Third Ward—slightly.
14. Elisha Burlison, Ninth Ward—badly.
15. Daniel Allertson—very badly; not expected to live.
16. Lyman Crawford, Seventeenth Ward—very badly; wounds not considered fatal.

All the above are members of the Metropolitan force.

AT THE RECORDER'S OFFICE.

It was scarcely fifteen minutes after the 50 men, under Capt. SEBRING, left the Recorder's Office before they were back again at the door. During the absence a messenger was discharged to find Major-General SANDFORD. Brigadier-General HALL had been requested, in the event of the messenger's ill success in finding Gen. SANDFORD, to furnish advice in the contingency. Gen. HALL ordered the National Guards, who at the moment were marching down Broadway to embark for Boston, to halt and await orders. Gen. SANDFORD, meanwhile, had been found and made his appearance at the Recorder's Office. The Recorder explained succinctly the state of affairs—an excited mob—an immense gathering of wild, reckless men were surrounding the City Hall—and some 500 men bearing the emblems of the old Police Department were on guard, preventing the service of two warrants, one of a civil and one of a criminal nature, upon FERNANDO WOOD. Coroner PERRY had gone out with 50 policemen to repeat the effort;—there was little hope that he would succeed. The warrants must be served—to have it done would require a force of several hundred men. He did not feel justified in exposing even that number unarmed to the fury of the mob. He appealed to the General, did not the public peace require that a regiment should be brought to the field, whose simple presence would, without a doubt, prevent bloodshed, and effect the ends of justice? At this moment a Metropolitan Policeman came rushing in with news from the fight in the Park. "Well," said the Recorder, "what reception have you met?" "We are cut all to pieces," was the answer; "our men have been knocked down, trampled upon, and some of them killed, we fear."

Captain SEBRING was the next man in. "We are all cut to pieces," said he; "it was folly for us to attempt it. They rushed upon us from above, and bore us down by superior weight. A dozen of our best fellows are horribly cut." One asked if the men were true. "Not one of them flinched," said he. Turning to the door, "Fetch in those wounded men," said he, and one after another, six, with terrible gashes on their heads, were borne in by their companions. "Good God," said one, "General SANDFORD, what more do you want?"

"Don't be excited," said the General; "let us hear the story from the Coroner."

Coroner PERRY proceeded to rehearse it calmly, as we have given it above.

"That is enough," said the General. The following paper was immediately served upon him:

CORONER PERRY TO MAJOR GENERAL SANFORD.

SIR: Having been resisted in the execution of a civil process issued to me out of Superior Court of this City, commanding me to arrest FERNANDO WOOD, I hereby require from you ten military companies, armed and equipped, to assist me in overcoming such resistance, and, if necessary, to seize, arrest and confine the resisters and their aiders and abetters, to be dealt with according to law.

Yours, F. W. PERRY,
Coroner City and County of New-York.

The General left, and in five minutes more, about 4 o'clock, the National Guards (7th Regiment) were drawn up in front of the City Hall.

We have already stated that Mr. CONOVER went directly from the Street Commissioner's office when he had been forcibly ejected. From that place he directed to Sheriff WILLET the following:

STREET COMMISSIONER CONOVER TO SHERIFF WILLET.

NEW-YORK, June 16, 1857.

JAMES C. WILLET, Esq., Sheriff of the City and County of New-York:

SIR: Having received from the Governor the appointment of Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, I beg to inquire of you by what authority you have interfered and do now interfere with my possession of the rooms pertaining to my office.

Yours, &c., D. D. CONOVER.

The following reply was received in a few moments afterwards:

SHERIFF'S OFFICE, Monday, June 16, 1857.

SIR: I have just received your note inquiring by what authority I interfere with you in relation to your holding possession of the rooms appertaining to the business of the Street Commissioner. I have not interfered in said matter, nor do I intend to. It is not my province to decide who is Street Commissioner. My duty is simply to protect the property I hold, under and by virtue of an execution, and to preserve the peace as far as possible. I have the honor to remain truly yours,

JAMES C. WILLET,
Sheriff of City and County of New-York.

Commissioner CONOVER also addressed the following pregnant note to the Comptroller:

A. C. FLAGG, COMPTROLLER, Dear Sir: I have been duly appointed to fill the office of Street Commissioner in the City, left vacant by the death of J. S. TAYLOR. I have entered upon the duties of the office, pursuant to said appointment, and desire that no payment be made on account of the Street Department, except upon my requisition. Yours respectfully,

D. D. CONOVER.

Commissioner CONOVER next made the following affidavit before Recorder SMITH, upon which criminal warrants was issued.

MR. CONOVER'S AFFIDAVIT BEFORE RECORDER SMITH.

State of New York, City and County of New-York.—Daniel D. Conover, of said City, being sworn, saith that he is the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York, having been duly appointed such by the Governor of this State upon the decease of Joseph S. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner; that his apartments consist of four rooms in the Hall of Records, in said City, and that James C. Willet is the Sheriff of said City and County, and that on the 16th day of June, 1857, while deponent was peaceably seated in his said apartments, the said Willet entered the same; that at that time several men were stationed in front of one of the rooms before mentioned, connecting with the room in which deponent was sitting, and on deponent's attempting to enter said room, they refused to permit him to do so, alleging that they had been deputized to act as Deputy Sheriff's by the said Willet, and were directed by him to prevent deponent from entering said room; that the said Willet informed deponent that they had been so deputized, and that they had received from him such orders; that said Willet, in deponent's presence, directed said men to prevent deponent's entrance into said room; and that he subsequently sent other deputies to remain in deponent's office, as deponent believes, to embarrass and annoy him in the prosecution of his duties as Street Commissioner.

Deponent further said that subsequently and on the same day the deputies so placed in deponent's office by the said Willet ordered deponent to leave his said office, and that thereupon one John W. Bennett, aided and assisted by several other men unknown to deponent, who acted under his direction, seized deponent forcibly by the collar and by his arm, and on defendant's attempting to defend himself, struggled violently with him, hurting his arm and neck and otherwise bruising and injuring him and forcibly ejecting him from said apartment.

That as deponent has been informed by the persons so assaulting him, and verily believes, all the persons committing the said assault acted by the directions of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the said City, who ordered said assault to be made upon deponent while in the peaceable prosecution of his duty.

Deponent further saith that during the said assault the aforesaid deputies of the defendant, Willett, and that Charles Turner stood by and encouraged and aided and abetted the said Bennett in his said attack, as deponent is informed, and believes they were directed by the said Willet to lend their aid and countenance thereto; that the said Bennett during the day frequently went back and forth between deponent's office and the office of the said Wood, and, as deponent believes, acted under his orders during the whole day; deponent further saith that he believes all the defendants conspired together to procure the said assault to be committed upon him.

Deponent further says that on the 16th day of June, 1857, when he entered his office aforesaid at about nine o'clock, A. M., he found a portion of said office occupied by several persons claiming to act as Deputy Sheriffs, and who, as deponent believes, were deputized to act as such by said Willet, and were ordered by him to annoy and molest deponent; that said persons refused to permit deponent to enter a portion of his office inclosed by a railing where his desk is situated, and on his attempting to enter the same, laid violent hands upon deponent, and forcibly pushed him away from said railing; that subsequently after deponent took another desk the defendant, Bennett, accompanied by 10 or 12 men, who acted under his orders, entered deponent's office, and stated that he was directed by the said Wood to eject deponent from said office, and that he would bring 500 men to effect that purpose if necessary, and then ordered deponent to leave said office, and on deponent's refusal the said Bennett seized deponent by the collar, and the men aforesaid acting under Bennett's orders surrounded and threatened deponent, using violent language, and finally after a struggle the said Bennett violently ejected deponent from said office. Deponent further saith that as he is informed and verily believes that said Bennett committed said last mentioned assault by the direction of the said Wood, and that the said Turner was present and to take part in directing the movements of the persons who assaulted deponent.

D. D. CONOVER.

Sworn June 16, 1857, before me,
JAMES M. SMITH, JR., Recorder.

We have already related the unsuccessful attempt of Capt. WALLING to arrest the Mayor on the process founded upon the above, whereupon the following requisitions were made:

RECORDER SMITH TO SHERIFF WILLET.

JAMES C. WILLET, Esq., Sheriff of the City and County of New-York:

SIR: Officer WALLING has been forcibly resisted in the execution of a warrant against FERNANDO WOOD and others, issued by me. The law must be enforced. I call upon you for a sufficient force to enable the officers to execute the process.

Yours, respectfully,
JAMES M. SMITH, JR., Recorder.

Served at 2 P. M.

RECORDER SMITH TO THE BOARD OF POLICE COMMISSIONERS.

To the Board of Police Commissioners:

GENTLEMEN: I hereby make a requisition on your Board for fifty men, to aid in the execution of a criminal process against FERNANDO WOOD and others.

JAMES M. SMITH, JR., Recorder.

THE SHERIFF DISMISSES HIS SPECIAL DEPUTIES AND PUTS ON HIS OWN DEPUTIES.

The Sheriff came to his office yesterday at 9 A. M., the usual hour. He immediately proceeded to the Hall of Records and notified Capt. BENNETT and some 20 other Deputies whom he had appointed on the preceding day, to keep guard at the Street Commissioner's office, that their services as Deputies were no longer required. He told Capt. BENNETT that the action which he had taken on the evening previous in aiding to eject Mr. CONOVER from the Street Commissioner's office was in violation of his orders.

Capt. BENNETT—I acted then in accordance with instructions received from his Honor Mayor Wood.

THE SHERIFF—That is no special matter now. I shall require your services no further. Nor those associated with you as Special Deputies. My own regular force of Deputies will answer every purpose.

Capt. BENNETT—I shall continue to act, though not as your Special Deputy.

The Sheriff at once took warrants from the Special Deputies, which were handed over without hesitation or comment. Having done this, he gave instructions to six of his regular Deputies to protect the property in the office of the Street Commissioner. Leaving these men in charge, he returned to his own office. Intelligence came to him that the crowd surrounding the Street Commissioner's office were generally of the opinion that he was sustaining Mr. TURNER, the Deputy Commissioner, and that in thus sustaining he was acting in concert with Mayor WOOD. With a view to give a clear exposition to the public of the position he held, he caused the following notice to be placed on the door of the Street Commissioner's office:

THE SHERIFF DEFINES HIS POSITION.

"Notice.—Having been informed that sundry persons acting under special deputations for preserving the peace and protecting the property levied upon by me, at the office of the Street Commissioner, have exceeded their authority, I have been advised, and concluded to, and I hereby do, revoke such special deputations.

I have nothing to do with the contest for the office; my duties are merely to preserve property and to keep the peace.

I have placed my own regular deputies in charge of the property, and I request all good citizens to respect their authority. JAMES C. WILLETT,
Sheriff of the City and County of New-York."

When the notice was being put up, there was a general desire to know its character. So great was the jam, in order to get a sight at the document, that some of the Municipal Police on guard had to raise their clubs to keep the crowd back. One individual at length read it aloud. Most of the auditors expressed their approbation. An old gentleman, but with considerable youthful blood still running in his veins, cried out, "I knew the Sheriff was all right, Mayor Wood can't come the suction over him."

About the time the above scene was being transacted at the Hall of Records, the Sheriff received a message at his own office from Mayor Woon, asking that he appoint 15 new special deputies to assist in keeping guard at the Street Commissioner's office. The Sheriff refused to grant the application, stating that he had no further force, in his opinion, required for the purposes he desired of them than the deputies he already had in attendance. Subsequent to this, matters remained very quiet for two or three hours, as also about the Hall of Records.

ARREST OF MAYOR WOOD.

Shortly after 3 P. M., word was brought from the Recorder's office, to the Sheriff that Capt. WALLING was coming over to arrest Mayor WOOD. A message was sent was; sent to the Sheriff asking if resistance should be made to the arrest of the Mayor whether he would aid in effecting such. The Sheriff replied that he would give every legal aid in his power to secure enforcement of the laws. He regarded Capt. WALLING as an officer legally appointed by the Metropolitan Police Commissioners under laws of the State in active force. Mr. WILLET, attended by Counsel went over to the Recorder's office to inquire more fully as to the contemplated arrest. The Recorder produced a warrant drawn up for the arrest of the Mayor, directed to any constable or policeman of the city simply. It was decided to amend the warrant by directing it also to the Sheriff or any of his deputies. Thus amended, the warrant was placed in the hands of the Sheriff, as follows:

STATE OF NEW YORK, CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, CITY HALL PARK.

To the Sheriff or his Deputy, to any Constable or Policeman of the City of New-York:

Whereas complaint on oath has been made before the undersigned, Recor

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

THE BURDELL ESTATE.

Further Testimony for the Claimant—Examination of Dr. David Uhl, C. G. Gunther, Governor of the Alms-House, Mr. Gilmore, Dr. Ware—Dr. Burdell Pays Mrs. Cunningham's Medical Bills.

SURROGATE'S COURT—TUESDAY, June 16.

The Surrogate sat at 10 o'clock this morning, when testimony for the claimant was resumed.

TESTIMONY OF DR. DAVID UHL.

Dr. David Uhl was first called, and testified: I am a physician, residing at East Twentieth-street; knew Dr. Burdell for two years; first became acquainted with him in October, 1855; he got me to attend a lady at his house; I went and found the lady was Mrs. Foute; was employed by him to attend his brother Lewis and Miss Helen Cunningham; Dr. B. paid my bill for attending Miss Helen; I became acquainted with the present claimant at the time I attended Miss Helen, which was in November, 1855; saw Dr. B. frequently after that time; was well acquainted with his personal appearance; went to No. 31 Bond-street the day of the murder; I noticed the appearance of Dr. B. at that time; I saw the body again on Sunday, and every day after that until it was buried; there was a very remarkable change in the appearance of the body from Saturday to the day of its burial; on the day I first saw the body the face was very blue, and much congested, and looked so little like him that, had I seen him under different circumstances, I should not have known him.

The examination of the witness was here suspended, on order to allow the examination of Mr. C. G. Gunther, who was called away on official business.

TESTIMONY OF MR. C. G. GUNTHER, GOVERNOR OF ALMS HOUSE.

Mr. Gunther then testified as follows: I am one o the Ten Governors of the Almshouse; met Mrs. B. last Tuesday week at the Almshouse; was told that Mrs. B. was there to see Mary Donohue; found her seated by the bedside of Mary Donohue; Mrs. B. commenced asking a variety of questions; she asked Mary if she had ever seen anything improper in the house No. 31 Bond street, and she said she had not.

TESTIMONY OF DR. UHL RESUMED.

Dr. Uhl again took the stand, and testified as follows: The next day the body looked more natural; when the body was found, it laid all night on the face, but subsequently the position was changed, and it looked more natural from day to day after that; saw Mr. Marvine on the Sunday he gave his testimony; I heard him describe the person he married; never had seen Dr. Marvine before; I asked him if he could swear to the body, and he said he would not swear positively, but said there are some strong points of resemblance between the deceased and the man I married, particularly about the mouth; he was on the second floor, and had just come out of the door of the room where the inquisition was held; he passed down stairs, and was immediately surrounded by a great many persons, who asked him questions, and he gave a description of Dr. Burdell, his manner and appearance; he said his beard was somewhat long; persons around him frequently interrupted him, and said that that was not like Dr. Burdell, but did not refer to any one else; Dr. Marvine said that death made such great alterations in a person that it made it extremely difficult to swear positively; the Coroner wanted him to swear positively, but he would not do it; I can't recollect that he said anything about Eckel at that time; I saw him a few days afterwards, before the funeral; he said he had seen the body again, and it reminded him more of the man he had married; Dr. Burdell had two different manners; when he called upon a person upon professional business he spoke silently and hesitated a great deal—would turn from side to side; was very peculiar in his manner on such occasions; at other times when he met persons in the street he spoke quickly; on several occasions he called upon me on professional business; Mrs. C. was the subject of frequent conversation between us when he called at my office; always spoke of her in the highest terms; when he first called upon me he said there was a lady living in his house very wealthy, and had two accomplished daughters; until about the 1st of May, 1856, he used to speak to me about her; after that time I had removed my office from that street; saw him in the latter part of October, 1856, on Monday, as I was passing through Bond street; his whiskers then were very black; I made the remark, he was fixing up, and I asked him if he was going to be married; I have joked with him about marrying the widow, and he would reply that he was not a marrying man, that Mrs. C. was a nice woman, and would make a good wife;" I have frequently met the Doctor with Mrs. C. in Bond-street walking arm-in-arm; he told me about going with her to Brooklyn; he knew some friends of hers there, and he knew all about her property there; I think the time was the 27th of October, by reference to my books.

Cross-examination by Mr. Tilden—Mr. Marvine, in the presence of the persons who gathered about him when he came down stairs from the room where the inquest was held, said, when he had described the person he married, that could not be Dr. Burdell; at the time Dr. B. was buried it looked more like him than at any time previous; the change in the body was so remarkable that I mentioned it to physicians; I am certain that the face did not become discolored, independent of the wounds; it was in November when I was called to attend upon Miss Helen; the conversations I had with the Doctor about Mrs. C. were anterior to May, 1856; after that time I used to meet the Doctor frequently, but don't recollect meeting him with Mrs. C.; I saw the body every day until it was buried; do not see Mrs. C. frequently; I saw her two or three days ago; had seen her from time to time professionally, and only so; have seen her every week within the last three months; sometimes three or four times a week; Mrs. C. may have mentioned to me something about the testimony of Rev. Mr. Marvine, but I have no distinct recollection of it; I went to Brooklyn on the 27th of October, in the morning, to see a patient, A. L. McCarthy, and it was on my way down from my house that I met Dr. Burdell; stopped at the Coroner's office first; never saw Dr. Burdell after that day; was present at No. 31 the day after the murder; was there about two hours; did not see Mrs. C. that morning at all; never saw Mrs. C. alone before the murder; I never called upon her or her family over five or six times before the murder; I spoke to the Doctor about marrying Mrs. C. on the 27th; I told him that I thought of moving; he wanted me to take his house; in reply to my question, why he wanted to sell out? he said he was going to Europe; that Mrs. C. was going with him; that is the only time he ever mentioned that Mrs. C. was going with him; he said at one time that he had charge of Mrs. C.'s property in Brooklyn, and knew all about it; that the property consisted of lots and houses and would be very valuable; in attending Mrs. C. professionally I made the charge always against her; in regard to the post mortem examination before the Coroner, I stated that it was not correctly done.

Redirect—Have had considerable experience in post mortem examinations; am a lecturer in a medical college in Thirteenth street.

TESTIMONY OF MR. GILMORE.

James B Gilmore testified as follows: Am a Director of the Artisans' Bank; was present at the meeting of the Board on the 24th of October last; saw Dr. Burdell there and Mr. Frazier; Mr. Frazier resigned his position as Vice President; I base my statement upon other facts than the minutes; had a conversation with Dr. Burdell after the breaking up of the meeting; he asked my opinion about a matter to be brought before a subsequent meeting; was not prepared to give him an opinion about it then; he said that at the next meeting he would propose it; I sent him word the next day that I had considered the matter and recommended that he should not bring it forward as I should be obliged to oppose it; Dr. Burdell introduced his business at the next meeting; this business was in reference to Mr. Frazier, who was regarded as a particular friend of Dr. Burdell.

Cross-examination.—Considerable discussion arose out of this business which Dr. B. introduced; the Doctor talked of this business, subsequently, and spoke to individual members of the Board afterwards, in regard to it; did not relinquish the idea for three or four weeks afterwards; I think he introduced a resolution at the meeting, but it was not seconded; the Doctor at the meeting on the 28th talked with me after it was over; he appeared to be excited; it was on the 24th, immediately after the adjournment that he spoke to me about his business.

TESTIMONY OF DR. JOHN WARE.

Jonathan S. Ware examined by Mr. Dean.

To the Surrogate—My office is at No. 23 Twentieth-street; I live at No. 280 Fourth-avenue; I am a dentist; am 58 years of age.

Q.—Did you know the late Harvey Burdell? A.—I did, Sir.

Q.—For about how long? A.—Some 7 or 8 years, Sir.

Q.—Did you formerly live the next house to him in Bond-street? A.—Yes, Sir, at No. 29 Bond-street.

Q.—How long ago, about? A.—I went there in May, 1847, and left in October, 1854, I think it was.

Q.—You lived next door to him for seven years, then? A.—He moved there after I lived there.

Q.—You knew him well, did you? A.—I knew him very well.

Q.—Did you see him on the 28th of October? A.—I did see him.

Q.—Where did you see him? A.—I was coming up Bleecker-street, upon the west side, towards Broadway; I had been down Bleecker street; I was coming up from the North River.

By the Surrogate—On the side next the Battery? A.—Yes, Sir; it was on the south side—the left-hand side as you go down.

Q.—State how you saw him, and when? A.—When I came to the corner of Bleecker-street and Broadway, I met Dr. Burdell and two ladies; I turned and he bowed to me, and I recognized him.

Q.—You was coming up to Broadway? A.—I was coming to Broadway, and than going down.

Q.—What did Dr. Burdell do? A.—I said that I met Dr. Burdell and two ladies; he crossed Bleecker-street to the other side and passed down; after passing him I turned round and looked at him, and saw him go down; it was rather uncommon to see Dr Burdell out with the ladies, and it attracted my attention.

Q.—You say Dr. Burdell was going down; down which way; to the North River, or to the East River? A.—To the North River.

Q.—Did he separate from the ladies? A.—No, Sir; the ladies were with him.

Q.—Did you know those ladies? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Can you describe their persons? I wish you would come as near to it as you can. A.—I did not notice the ladies; I think they were in dark dresses; but whether one or both were so, I could not tell.

Q.—Were they both of a size? A.—I did not take particular notice enough to say.

Q.—Was he walking one side of them, or between them? A.—He was walking between them.

Q.—Did you notice whether either of them had hold of his arm, or not? A.—I could not tell.

Q.—By what means are you able to fix the night upon the 28th of October? A.—Upon the morning of the 28th I received a note from C. W. Snow, Esq., on private business; the note was dated upon the 27th, and I got it upon the morning of the 28th.

Q.—How do you connect that note with meeting him? A.—I had been down to his house, No. 80 Macdougal-street, and, not finding him in, I returned.

By the Surrogate—And upon your return you met the Doctor? A.—Yes, Sir.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tilden—Where did you meet the Doctor? A.—At the corner of Bleecker-street and Broadway.

Q.—Standing in Broadway? A.—Not standing at all, but coming up Bleecker street, and he crossed over and turned down Bleecker-street, just as I came up with him.

Q.—On the opposite side of the way? A.—No, Sir; he came down the west side of Broadway, and I came up Bleecker-street and met him at the corner.

Q.—Which way were you going? A.—I came up on the right hand side of Bleecker street, and was going down, and turned up on the right at Broadway; first I came up Bleecker-street, and then went down Broadway.

The Surrogate—"I was at the corner coming up Bleecker-street, and the Doctor was going up Broadway, upon the left-hand side as you go up, towards the North River; I was going towards Broadway, upon the south side of Bleecker-street, towards the Battery?" A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You met just at the corner? A.—Yes, Sir; I got to the corner as he got past me.

Q.—You were able to see these persons pretty distinctly I suppose? A.—I saw the Doctor and the two ladies; I bowed to the Doctor and he returned it.

Q.—Do you remember what sort of a day it was, whether a warm or a cool day? A.—My impression is that it was rather a warm day; I do not recollect particularly.

Q.—Was this before sundown? A.—As near as I can recollect, it was about 8 o'clock.

Q.—Which way did they go? A.—They crossed Bleecker-street and then turned down Bleecker-street; I stopped after they had passed me and saw them turn down Bleecker-street, because it was an uncommon thing for me to see the Doctor with the ladies; it was a curiosity.

Q.—When was the last time you saw him before that? A.—I had not seen him for a good while.

Q.—When did you move out of Bond-street? A.—In 1854.

Q.—Have you any distinct recollection that you had seen Dr. Burdell after you moved ont of Bond-street before this time? A.—Yes, Sir; I could not tell you what time, but several times.

Q.—Any time recently before that? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You mentioned the ladies dresses; could you state what the Doctor's dress was? A.—I could not.

Q.—Had he a frock coat on? A.—That I could not tell; I did not observe any part of his dress at all; merely saw the individual.

Q.—Had he gloves on? A.—That I could not tell.

Q.—Would not white gloves have been rather a conspicuous object, and would you not have been likely to notice them if he had had them on? A.—No, Sir; I think not; if he held his hands up in that way [opened palm] I might.

Q.—Did you notice whether the ladies had white kid gloves? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you notice the face of either lady so that you could recognize it if you should see her again? A.—No, sir; I did not notice the face of either of the ladies.

Q.—Did you say that you spoke to him? A.—No, sir; I merely bowed to him.

Q.—Where you were going down Broadway? A.—To no place in particular; this was my evening walk.

Q.—Where had you started from in order to go to Macdougal street. A.—From No. 280 Fourth avenue.

Q.—Is No. 80 Macdougal-street above or below Bleecker-street? A.—It is between Bleecker-street and the Hospital, on the left hand side.

Q.—Which is it nearest to, Bleecker or Houston-street? A.—Bleecker-street is nearer for me than Houston-street.

Q.—Is No. 80 nearest to Bleecker or to Houston-street? A.—It is two-thirds of the way down from Houston-street.

Q.—When you turned down Broadway, where did you go to; how far down? A.—Perhaps down to the Battery; perhaps down to the Park.

Q.—Did you go as far as the Park? A.—Perhaps I die.

Q.—Do you know whether you did or not? A.—I could not be positive of that.

Q.—Did you see anybody else you knew on your way down? A.—I do not recollect.

Q.—You do not recollect whether you stopped at the Park or at the Battery? A.—No, sir; not at the Battery; I did not mean that.

Q.—Was your impression first that you went to the Battery? A.—I merely said that as a casual remark.

Q.—Did you not say that you went down to the Battery? A.—I meant that I went down towards the Battery.

Q.—Why did you say that you went down to the Battery if you had no recollection of it? A.—I answered casually.

Q.—Is it your habit to answer casually when under oath? A.—No, Sir; that is not my habit.

Q.—If you did not go down to the Battery, as I did not ask you anything about the Battery, how did it come into your mind to tell me casually that you went down to the Battery? A.—I did not intend to say that I went down to the Battery, but towards the Battery.

Q.—You meant to say then that you went towards the Battery? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—I did not ask you where you went towards, but where you went; and you said down to the Battery; I should like to know if you can explain how you happened to say that casually? A.—I answered you without thought.

Q.—Without thought when under oath?

Mr. Dean suggested that the witness had corrected himself in the same sentence, and this course of inquiry was not legitimate.

Mr. Tilden replied, that it was a question of the accuracy of memory and the moral structure of a man's character about which he had a right to interrogate.

Q.—After you turned back, where did you go to? A.—I went home.

Q.—You went directly home? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you see any other human being on that walk that you knew? A.—I could not say now that I recognized any one; I have no recollection of it.

Q.—Have you a good many acquaintances in New-York? A.—Yes, Sir; a good many.

Q.—How is your practice as a physician? A.—Very good.

Q.—Considerably extensive? A.—Ordinary.

Q.—Have you not social relations with a good many people? A.—I have, Sir.

Q.—Are you an observing man? Do you ordinarily know men you meet in the street? A.—Not very often.

Q.—You did not notice any other human being you knew, on this long walk, excepting this one? A.—I could not recollect a single individual.

Q.—Either going down or coming up? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What was this document you have spoken of? A.—It is a letter on private business. I have it with me and am willing to show it to the Surrogate.

Q.—Were you asked to bring this letter? A.—I do not recollect that I was.

Q.—When did you first speak of it? A.—I do not recollect when; last week I think it was; I was asked if I had seen Dr. Burdell, and I mentioned the fact that I had seen him so and so; but I could not tell the date.

Q.—Who asked the question? A.—Mr. Romeyn.

Q.—When? A.—I could not tell that.

Q.—When do you think it was? A.—I think it was after the murder trial.

Q.—How long have you known Mr. Romeyn? I do not know.

Q.—Have you had any business with him? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Are you a client of his? A.—No, Sir; I have had law business with him; have employed him at some time.

Q.—Have you seen Mrs. Cunningham? A.—I never saw her.

Q.—Who is this gentleman whom you went to see that evening? A.—G. W. Snow.

Q.—Who is Mr. Snow? A.—A merchant, at No. 21 Chambers-street.

Q.—You did not find him at home that evening? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—When after that did you find him at home? A.—I could not state the date.

Q.—Was this business of importance? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—About which you felt solicitude? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did it concern yourself or himself mainly? A.—It concerned myself.

Q.—You did not relinquish the attempt to see him because you failed to see him that night? A.—No, Sir.

By the Surrogate—Q.—When did you go again? A.—I might have gone the next evening or the evening after.

Q.—How long was it before that business was finally terminated or closed up? A.—It is not closed up yet.

Q.—Do you see Mr. Snow sometimes about it now? A.—Occasionally I do.

Q.—At his house? A.—At his house in the evening.

Q.—Do you go there frequently in the edge of the evening? A.—It is the only time I ever do go there.

Q.—You seldom see him anywhere excepting at his house? A.—No, Sir; I am not out in the daytime at all.

Q.—Because you are occupied in your profession? A.—Yes, Sir; I usually take about the edge of the evening to go there to see him.

Q.—Have you been there a great many times to see him about this business since? A.—I have.

Q.—You think you did go, or may have gone, the night after? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You think you did go, or may have gone, the second night after? A.—I couldn't tell whether it was one, two, or three nights after.

Q.—Hadn't you been there before to see him? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—At the same house? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—About the same business? A.—Yes, Sir, about the same matter.

Q.—How long ago did you commence going there to see about this business? A.—I could not tell the time.

Q.—Was it not a month before? A.—Yes, Sir; three months before.

Q.—You had been going there for three months at this hour of the evening? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—And have continued to go there from that time up to the present about that hour of the evening? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Then it has been your habit for nearly six months to go to see him very frequently about that hour of the evening at his house; and sometimes you found him in and sometimes you did not? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you oftener find him in or out? A.—I oftener found him in.

Q.—You often found him out? A.—Sometimes out.

Q.—You frequently found him out? A.—Not very frequently.

Q.—Did you not frequently find him out? A.—Not frequently.

Q.—Sometimes you found him out? A.—Yes, Sir.

By the Surrogate—How did you receive that note? A.—By the penny postman; I have not got the envelope.

Q.—Was it Boyd's? A.—I could not tell whether it was Boyd's or not.

Q.—Where is the envelope? A.—The envelope has been destroyed; the envelopes I destroy and file away the letters.

By the Surrogate—Was it destroyed at the time of receiving the letter? A.—About that time; it is my habit to destroy the envelopes and file the letters away.

Q.—Did you tell anybody else of it at the time? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not fix the date for some months after, did you? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—When did you fix the date? A.—I did not fix the date until I ascertained it from this letter; I could not tell when it was.

Q.—When did you ascertain it from the letter? Did you look for the letter until after the murder trial? A.—I did not look for the letter until recently; No, Sir.

Q.—From the time of the occurrence until you looked for the letter, had you any knowledge what night it was? A.—No, Sir.

By the Surrogate—When did you look for the letter?—recently, you say? A.—I think it was last week.

Q.—Last week you first looked for the letter? A.—First looked for the letter.

Q.—Then you were never able to say until last week what date it was? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do you mean to say that, going to that house very frequently before, at this same hour in the evening, to see this man, and very frequently afterwards, not having recollected this thing for a period of between six and seven months, you can swear positively that it was on that identical night you met this man? A.—I can, Sir.

Q.—There is no possibility of your making an error? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—None whatever? A.—None whatever.

Q.—You are absolutely certain? A.—I am certain.

Q.—When was the first time you ever talked to anybody about this circumstance? A.—I could not tell.

Q.—Who was the first person you ever talked to about it?

Witness—About the date?

Counsel—No; the circumstance of your meeting Dr. Burdell that night? A.—Mr. Romeyn.

Q.—When was that? A.—I could not give the date.

Q.—About when? A.—I think Mr. Romeyn asked me the question at the time the murder trial was going on, if I recollect.

Q.—Where were you? A.—In my office.

Q.—What was he doing there? A.—He called in to see me.

Q.—What about? A.—This very business.

Q.—What did you tell him? A.—I told him I recollected meeting him, but could not give him the date.

Q.—At that time you was not able to fix the date? A.—I was not able to fix the date.

Q.—You did not look for the letter from that time until this last week? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not at first recollect about the letter, I suppose? A.—I had forgotten it the first time he came to see me. The first time Mr. Romeyn saw me, this letter had not been written.

Q.—What time was that? A.—The first time he saw me about seeing Mr. Burdell, and I told him I would look up my papers and books and see if I could ascertain.

Q.—This letter had not been written then? A.—At this first call of Mr. Romeyn it had not been written.

By the Surrogate—Who wrote it? A.—There, Sir, is his handwriting, [Handing the letter to the Surrogate.]

Q.—You did not look for this letter from Mr. Snow immediately after the first time Mr. Romeyn called upon you, then, when he first called upon you about seeing Dr. Burdell? A.—I told him I could not fix the time; I did not tell him anything about the letter.

Q.—You did not remember anything about the letter at that time? A.—I did not.

Q.—How long was it after that before you remembered about the letter? A.—I did not recollect about it until I found it. Mr. Romeyn called upon me a second time and requested me to look at my book.

Q.—When was that second time? A.—I think it was last week.

Q.—You never recollected about the letter until that day? A.—I had no occasion to recollect it.

Q.—Of course; I merely wanted the fact that you did not recollect it. A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What book did he ask you to look in? A.—In my appointment book.

Q.—Did you look there? A.—I did, Sir.

Q.—Did you find anything there? A.—No, Sir; nothing at all by which I could fix the date.

Q.—What date did he want you to fix? A.—He wanted to know if I recollected the date of the meeting with Mr. Burdell, and I could not fix the date.

Q.—Did he state what date he wanted it fixed upon? A.—Not that I recollect; nothing was said upon the subject.

Q.—When was it that you looked at the book? A.—I think I was not until last week.

Q.—Did you give the book a thorough search then? A.—I did, Sir.

Q.—And found nothing? A.—I found nothing.

Q.—How did you come at that time to think of looking after the letter? A.—I cannot tell you how I came to, Sir.

Q.—Did Mr. Romeyn suggest that? A.—That I do not know.

Q.—Don't you recollect whether he suggested looking after the letter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do you recollect that he did not suggest it? A.—No, Sir; I have no recollection of that.

Q.—Will you say that Mr. Romeyn did not ask you to look after this letter? A.—I am not certain; I said that possibly some memorandum or letter might fix the date.

Q.—You recollect that that occurred? A.—That occurred.

Q.—You recollect that you said that to Mr. Romeyn, and he said that to you? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Then what did you mean by telling us you did not recollect? A.—I don't think I understood you.

Q.—I asked you whether Mr. Romeyn suggested to you to look after this letter, and you said you did not recollect. A.—I told you that he wanted me to ascertain the date, and called upon me for that purpose; and this is what I wished to be understood, that I told him I would look at my appointment book and see, and I would look at some letters, and perhaps something of that kind would fix my memory; then I found this letter, and remembered the circumstances.

Q.—Then you recollected that the night after this letter was received was the night you saw Dr. Burdell? A.—That was the first time I recollect anything about this letter.

Q.—That was last week? A.—That was last week.

Q.—You did not recollect, before that, that it was this night you received this letter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not recollect, before that, that it was this night you had called at Mr. Snow's? A.—I could fix no date that I called upon Mr. Snow.

Q.—You called upon him so often that you could not recollect what night it was until you saw this letter? A.—No, Sir, I had called continually about that time.

Q.—About the same time of the evening? A.—About the same time of the evening.

Q.—You, therefore, could not tell what time it was until you found this letter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not remember that it was the same night upon which you had received this letter? A.—No, Sir, until I found the letter.

Q.—You did not remember anything about the letter until you found the letter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not connect the two circumstances in any manner until you had found the letter? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—All the way in which you were able to connect the two circumstances of the receipt of the letter and the seeing of Dr. Burdell, have arisen since you found this letter? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Entirely? A.—Wholly, Sir.

C.—You have no recollection of it before that? A.—None at all.

Q.—And this was last week? A.—This was last week, Sir.

Q.—You had the first interview with Mr. Romeyn about this business during the murder trial? A.—I think that was the time; I could not be positive.

Q.—There is nothing in this letter about Dr. Burdell. A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Dr. Burdell had no connection with this letter? A.—None at all.

Q.—No connection with the business to which the letter relates? A.—None at all.

Q.—No connection with Mr. Snow? A.—None at all.

[The Surrogate here read the letter.]

Q.—Now, Sir, do you mean to say that you did not look for that letter for the express purpose of fixing that date upon the 28th day of October? A.—I looked for it to ascertain the date.

Q.—Didn't you look for that letter to fix the date upon the 28th of October? A.—No, Sir; I understand you now.

Q.—Didn't you know at the time you searched for the letter that it was desired to fix the date upon that day? A.—I do not understand your question.

Q.—Did not you know that Mr. Romeyn desired to fix the date upon that day before you looked for this letter? A.—He didn't say that to me.

Q.—Did not you know that? A.—I might infer it; but did not know it.

Q.—How would you infer it? A.—I don't know that I can explain it to you, Sir.

Q.—I want you to try—how did you infer it, and why did you infer it? A.—I cannot tell you, Sir.

Q.—Was anything said by which you could infer it? A.—I do not recollect now.

Q.—Do you say that nothing was said whereby you could infer it? A.—I do not recollect the conversation particularly, Sir.

Q.—You recollect you had a conversation? A.—I had a conversation; yes, Sir.

Q.—How long did that conversation last? A.—Perhaps ten minutes.

Q.—Do you recollect any one thing said in it? A.—He asked me if I could fix the date upon which I saw Mr. Burdell.

Q.—Did he ask you anything else? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was anything else said? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was anything else said upon your part? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was anything else said upon your part? A.—I do not recollect anything said; I cannot recollect the particular conversation.

Q.—This was last week, was it? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You recollect all that happened six months ago—now, can you tell me what was this conversation last week? A.—He merely asked me if I could fix the date, and I said I would look and see; that was all that was said between us, I was busy; he came in the evening; and he did not stay there three moments.

Q.—Nothing else was said or talked about, then, in the ten minutes that you say he was there, but his asking one question and your giving one answer? are Mr. Romeyn and you so slow spoken as that? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What did you mean by telling me that this conversation lasted ten minutes? A.—You asked me if he was there in the evening, and stayed long.

Q.—I did not ask that, I asked how long this conversation lasted; did you not say that the conversation lasted ten minutes? A.—I said it lasted ten moments; it might not have taken five moments?

Q.—Would it take five moments for him to ask that one question, and for you to give that single answer? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Why then did you tell me that the conversation lasted ten moments? A.—I cannot tell you why; it might have been your manner of asking.

Q.—Why did you not tell me the truth, that he only asked one question, and you made one answer, if that be the truth? A.—He may have talked upon some other subject; I do not recollect particularly now.

Q.—What did you mean by saying he did not? A.—I do not recollect whether he did or did not.

Q.—You recollect that it was a ten minute conversation? A.—I cannot say that it was a ten minute conversation, we were only a few moments together, and I was busy at the time.

Q.—Why didn't you say so then when I asked you? A.—I cannot tell you why.

Q.—You say you inferred that it was desired to have you fix this meeting upon the night of the 28th. Did you infer what time in the evening it was desired you should fix it? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You did not infer about the time in the evening? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—How came you to infer about the evening, and not about the time of the evening? A.—I could not tell you why I did so.

Q.—You did infer that they wanted you to fix it upon that evening. Have you read any of the testimony in this trial? A.—I have.

Q.—Most of it? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—How much of it have you read? A.—I could not tell you how much, very little indeed.

Q.—Which part did you read? A.—I have read no part in particular.

Q.—Mention some one part that you have read? A.—Testimony on both sides.

Q.—Mention the testimony of some one witness that you have read? A.—I could not do it.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of the murder trial? A.—I read part of it.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of the Coroner's inquest? A.—I read part of that.

Q.—Did you read the marriage certificate? A.—I did, Sir.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of Rev. Mr. Marvine at the Coroner's inquest? A.—I read a part of that.

Q.—What part? A.—I could not tell you.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of Rev. Mr. Marvine at this trial? A.—Some part of it upon this trial.

Q.—What part of it? A.—I could not tell.

Q.—Did you read that of Helen Cunningham? A.—A part of that.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of Augusta Cunningham? A.—Yes; Sir.

Q.—Did you read the testimony of Augusta Cunningham, wherein she fixes the time when this marriage took place? A.—I presume I did, Sir.

Q.—How long have you known that it was claimed that this marriage took place on the night of the 28th of October. A.—I could not fix the date, Sir.

Q.—You knew that the marriage was alleged to have taken place upon that night? A.—I did, Sir.

Q.—How long have you known it? A.—I could not tell you.

Q.—Have not you known it, Sir, ever since the Coroner's inquest? A.—I presume I have, Sir.

Q.—Did you ever talk to anybody, up to last week, about having seen Dr. Burdell walking with these ladies that night? A.—Never.

Q.—Never to any human being? A.—I have no recollection of mentioning it to any human being.

Q.—Are you a married man? A.—I am not, Sir.

Q.—Are you a widower? A.—I have no wife, Sir.

Q.—You have never been married? A.—I have been married.

Q.—Then you are a widower, I suppose? Have you any children? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Do they live with you? A.—They do.

Q.—What are their ages? A.—From 13 to 20; I have three children, one daughter and two sons.

Q.—What are their respective ages? A.—The oldest one I think is 21—a daughter; my two sons are younger.

Q.—You never mentioned to your children the circumstances of your having seen Dr. Burdell? A.—Not a word.

Q.—Are you a housekeeper, Sir? A.—I am not.

Q.—Where do you board? A.—At No. 280 Fourth-avenue.

Q.—What boarding-house is that? A.—I forget the lady's name, at this moment.

Q.—How long have you boarded there? A.—Since last Fall in the same house, but there are two individuals who have kept it; Mrs. Hope keeps the house now.

Q.—You have boarded there since last Fall? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Are there any other inmates in the house? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Who are they? A.—The names of the individuals I do not know—those that are there now.

Q.—Do you know any of them? A.—Not any in the house.

Q.—How many are there? A.—I think there are two gentlemen.

Q.—Any others? A.—No, Sir; none that know of.

Q.—What are the names of these gentlemen? A.—I forget these gentlemen; I have not been long in the house; the lady who now occupies the house only came in the 1st of May; they are all strangers to me.

Q.—When did you go there? A.—Last Fall; another lady was keeping the house at that time.

Q.—Who kept the house before the 1st of May? A.—I cannot think of the name.

Q.—Your memory of names is not so good as your memory of countenances when you see them in the dark? A.—That is too true, Sir.

By the Surrogate—The time you went there last Fall, was it before or after you met the Doctor in the street? A.—I was at the same house, boarding there.

By the Surrogate—You have stated that at the first time Mr. Romeyn called to see you, this letter was not written? A.—I did not understand your question, Sir.

Q.—What did you think the question was? How did you understand it? A.—I don't know how I did understand it.

Q.—Don't you know that the letter was not written at that time? A.—No, Sir; the letter was written according to its date.

Q.—What did you mean, then, by saying that it was not written according to its date? A.—I got an impression upon my mind that the whole transaction was previous to the writing of the letter; that I had got into my mind.

Q.—What had got into your mind? A.—It had got into my mind that Mr. Romeyn—

Mr. Dean objected to this course of questioning.

Mr. Tilden objected to interrupting and prompting the witness, and said that he intended to have the full benefit of the examination of such witnesses as this.

Mr. Dean objected to the expression, "such witnesses as this."

The Surrogate said that it would be proper to refrain from such remarks in the presence of witnesses.

Q.—You say that your impression at that time was that this whole transaction was before the letter was written? A.—You asked me that question; that was my impression at that moment.

Q.—That your conversation with Mr. Romeyn was before the letter was written? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What transaction did you mean? A.—I have reference to the murder trial; I got that impression; in recollecting dates, it is very difficult, unless I can have something to fix upon, some document or something of that kind; and putting the question in that form, I merely misunderstood and said what I did not mean with regard to it.

Q.—Do you think you have explained it? A.—The letter was written upon its date, and had no reference to any subsequent matter.

Q.—But notwithstanding the recollection of this date, the moment I asked you the question you had the impression that it was written subsequent to the murder trial? A.—I could not fix the date.

Q.—You now say that the letter was written at the time of the date it bears? A.—I said it was written at the time of the date it bears.

Q.—And the moment I interrogated you about it, you had the impression that it was written subsequent to the murder trial? A.—That passed my mind at the moment, when you put the question.

Q.—That is the reason you answered in the way you did? A.—Yes, Sir; that is the reason I answered in the way I did.

The Surrogate—Is it necessary to press this farther?

Mr. Tilden—I think, your Honor, that it shows the structure of this man's mind, and his habits of memory.

Q.—Do you remember the day you received this letter, Sir? A.—It was the day after it was written, Sir; the next morning.

Q.—What time in the morning? A.—I could not tell you what time, Sir.

Q.—Early in the morning? A.—I could not tell what time in the morning.

Q.—Where were you when you received it? A.—At Nos. 284-286 Fourth-avenue; that was my office at the time.

Q.—You received it through the Express? A.—Through the penny post.

Q.—Is your wife living? A.—Yes, Sir; she that was my wife.

Q.—Have you been divorced? I have, Sir.

Q.—When was that? A.—I could not give the date; as some two years ago.

Q.—Who was the plaintiff in the suit? A.—A gentleman from Connecticut; I cannot recollect his name.

Mr. Dean objected to these questions.

The Surrogate admitted the questions, as bearing upon the question of memory.

Q.—Who was the plaintiff in that divorce suit? A.—I think his name was Lockwood, Sir; I would not be positive; he was from Connecticut; I could not tell his name without reference to the documents.

Q.—You do not remember his name? A.—No, Sir; I could tell you by referring to the documents.

Q.—Can you ever remember people's names without documents? A.—Not unless they excited some attention so as to be fixed in my memory; not the names of individuals or dates; by referring to the documents I could tell you.

Q.—Do you know what the word "plaintiff" means? A.—You mean the Attorney of the one suing for the divorce. I suppose.

Q.—Was this man your Attorney? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—He was your wife's Attorney? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Who was your Attorney? A.—I had no Attorney.

Q.—Did you defend the suit? No, Sir.

Q.—What Court was this suit in? A.—In the Supreme Court of Connecticut, Sir.

Q.—Do you often receive letters by the Penny-Post? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Always the same day they were written? A.—Not always.

Q.—Not always? A.—Always if written in the first part of the day; otherwise not until the next day.

Q.—Sometimes not until the second day; how often? A.—A great many times not until the next day; if the letters werenot written until the afternoon, I did not get them until the next morning.

Q.—Did you not sometimes fail to get them the next morning? A.—Not that I know of; there may have been cases; but I do not know of any.

Q.—Has it not sometimes happened that you did not get them until the morning after that? A.—I do not recollect any case now, Sir.

Q.—Do you know what time of day this letter was written?

Witness—Which letter?

Counsel—No matter.

Q.—Did you go out for the purpose, after seeing Mr. Snow, of going down towards the Battery to walk? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you intend to take that walk before you went out? A.—I started to go to Mr. Snow's.

Q.—Are you accustomed to take long walks? A.—I am, Sir.

Q.—For your health? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—To any particular place? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Frequently down Broadway? A.—My object when I left home was to go to Mr. Snow's, I believe.

Q.—And then to take a walk afterwards? A.—And to take a walk afterwards.

Q.—Didn't you mean to go down Broadway? A.—I had no fixed intention.

Q.—When you left Mr. Snow's, did you not intend to go down Broadway? A.—I could not recollect what my thoughts were then.

Q.—Can you tell when when you made up your mind to walk down Broadway? A.—No, Sir; when I got to the corner, perhaps.

Q.—Was that a longer walk than you usually take? A.—That I could not tell.

Q.—How long ago was it that this divorce took place? A.—I believe it was about two years.

Q.—Upon the suit of your wife against you, was it? A.—It was, Sir.

Q.—For what cause?

Mr. Dean objected to the question.

The Surrogate—I do not know why you should object to it; the character of the witness is material.

Mr. Dean suggested that adultery was not the only ground of divorce in Connecticut, and that the fact of divorce did not, therefore, prove any thing.

The Surrogate—Then it cannot hurt his character.

Q.—What was the cause? A.—You know what the cause for divorce in Connecticut is.

Q.—No, I do not; what is it? adultery? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You made no defence? A.—I made no defence.

Q.—In what court of law was this suit prosecuted? A.—I believe in the Supreme Court, Sir.

Q.—Where did you reside at that time? A.—In the City.

not careful;" he said "He might do worse;" that was the last conversation I had with him concerning her: this was after the 1st of October, 1856; the Doctor never spoke of her in my presence in any other terms than of respect.

Cross-examination.—When the Doctor was angry at a person he was the most vituperative man I ever knew, and he did not hesitate to say anything without any reference to its being true, if he thought it would be injurious to the person; I never had any difficulty with him; he did not hesitate to denounce in the most unmeasured terms any person whom he might imagine had injured him; he was quick-tempered and violent; I have known him speak in terms of praise of an individual, then denounce him, in a few days afterwards, most bitterly, and then praise him again; was very extravagant when he was praising or denouncing any one; I never heard any body so much abused by him as his relatives were; I never heard such bitter language used by anybody as he used towards his brother William and his near relatives.

Mr Clinton here rose and stated that there seemed to be great difficulty in public matters. There was great danger of a public riot, and his associate, Judge Bean, desired to have this case stand adjourned until to-morrow morning.

The Surrogate accordingly adjourned the Court till to-morrow morning at ten o'clock.

SUPREME COURT—Special Term—June 16.

Before Hon. Justice Mitchell.

THE FRENCH RAILWAY FINANCES.

The Northern Railway of France vs. Charles Carpentier, et al.—Mr. Townshend, yesterday, came into Court and asked permission to put in an affidavit in opposition to the one put in by Mr. Morrogh on Saturday last. If the Court would permit him to do so, he would draw up an affidavit to be placed with the rest of the papers, and would serve a copy of it on the other side.

His Honor thought that the proper course would be to take an order to show cause why this proposed affidavit should not be appended to the other papers.

Mr. Townshend then submitted the following affidavit, and the Judge granted the order returnable this morning:

City and County of New-York, ss.

John Townshend of said City makes oath and says, that he is informed and believes that after the consent in this cause of James Morrogh, the plaintiff's attorney, dated May 22, 1857, the defendant, Louis Grelet, was, by the Sheriff of New-York, suffered to leave the State of New York and the United States without any further or other consent of the plaintiff's attorney than that of the 22d of May, 1857, and that the said consent was treated and acted upon by said Sheriff as a complete discharge out of his control of the said Parot and Louis Grelet.

JOHN TOWNSHEND.

Sworn before me this 16th day of June, 1857.

H. S. Lincoln, Com. of Deeds.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.

Ordered—That the Trial Term for June be continued into the fourth week, and that causes to be tried by a Jury will be disposed of during that time.

June 16, 1857. B. H. JARVIS, Clerk.

MARINE COURT.

Before Judge McCarthy.

Justus Chollar vs. McDonough Bucklin, William Muller and John D. King.—The defendants, Bucklin and Fuller, Feb. 24, 1857, made two promissory notes, payable to their own order at the Shoe and Leather Bank, one month after date, for $150 each. The defendants indorsed both notes, and the plaintiff, the rightful owner and holder of each, presented them for payment severally on March 27 and April 27, at the Shoe and Leather Bank, and payment was refused. The plaintiff gave due notice of the refusal to the indorsers, and looked to them for payment. The plaintiff demanded judgment for $300, and interest on each note from the time of its maturity, with the costs of this action. Judgment $303 73 and $12 costs and allowance as against the defendant King, and $303 73 and $7 allowance and costs, as against Bucklin and Fuller.

COURT OF GENERAL SESSIONS.

The State vs. Dominic Ragans, for Violations of the Quarantine Laws.—This case, which had been set down for trial in the Court of Sessions yesterday, had not been called up tu 11½ o'clock, in consequence of unfinished business. At that hour, John Van Buren, with copies of the three indictments against Ragan, in his hands, called the attention of Judge Russell to the case. He had been suddenly called on, just as he was about to leave the City to act as counsel for the defendant, but he had not read the indictment, and was not prepared to go into the case. Mr. Clark, also, who was associated with the parties, was engaged in the trial of a case which would occupy him most of this week, and he requested to have the case deferred until Saturday, to allow time for him to prepare. It was his intention to withdraw the plea of not guilty, and ask to have the indictments quashed, at which time he would present some of the points of this law to the Court.

Mr Hall, the District Attorney, opposed the motion to defer. The indictments were found on Friday, and the case was set down for trial on Tuesday; the defendant had also stated he was ready for trial, and had his witnesses all ready to bring into Court. He should be sorry to appear to be wanting in courtesy, but the circumstances of the case obliged him to press for the immediate trial of the case, and he was ready; this defendant was no stranger in this court, and had not been taken by surprise; he was before the Court last year and the year previous, upon charges precisely similar to this under which he was now arraigned, but under pleas of not being ready, for lack of counsel or witnesses, the cases had been deferred and had never been tried. The District-Attorney said a motion to quash could not be made under the ruling of this Court after the plea had been entered.

Judge Russell—In cases where parties may have acted without counsel, or had been taken by surprise, the motion might be granted as a matter of courtesy.

Mr. Van Buren did not wish to be understood as asking that the case should not be tried—he wished it tried at this term, but the defendant had no counsel, and they only wanted time to prepare the case. If the object was to injure and break down the defendant, who was a poor boatman, this was the way to do it; but if, as the District-Attorney had stated, there were grave matters of law to be gone into, time should be allowed. This case, which was for alleged violation of the Quarantine regulations, was a matter of every day occurrence—one which he and the Judge violated every time they went to Staten Island, and which every Ferry boat violated upon every trip to and from Staten Island. These buoys of the Health Officer were all over the bay.

The District-Attorney said: The offence charged, although it appeared an ordinary misdemeanor, yet under the circumstances, it involved consequences of the greatest importance to the public health, and his position required him to insist upon the trial of the man, that if he were found guilty he might be punished. The very immunity he had enjoyed in his former breaches of the law had seemed to embolden him to repeat the offence; he was one of those who had violated the law repeatedly—had contemned it, and set it at defiance. The cause for making this law stringent, and requiring a summary trial, was because the persons who violated the law were generally sailors, who were here to-day and gone to-morrow, and the same was true of the witnesses. Heretofore this person had procured delays until the witnesses were all gone, and they had then come into Court, and were anxious for a trial. The Health Officer was present, ready to swear to the corpus delicti, and they were ready to proceed. He read from chapter 412 of the Acts of the Legislature, section 4 of the "Act to provide for more effectually guarding against the spread of pestilential diseases," passed April 14, 1857, which is as follows:

"Every person who shall oppose or obstruct the said Health Officer in performing the duties required of him by law, and every person who shall go on board of, or have any communication, intercourse or dealing with any vessel under Quarantine, or with any of her crew or passengers, without the permission of the Health Officer, or who shall, without such permission, invade the Quarantine grounds or anchorage, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than one hundred nor more than five hundred dollars, or by imprisonment, not less than three nor more than six months in the Penitentiary."

Mr. Van Buren again repeated in substance his former points, and asked that the case might be deferred.

Judge Russell—The difficulty is, that if it is not tried now, it must go over to the September term. I will permit you to defer the case until next Thursday, with the distinct understanding that the case is to proceed at that time. I shall not permit you to withdraw the plea, but I will hear you; if upon the hearing the Court should be with you, a plea to quash the indictment can then be made—if not, the trial must go to the Jury.

Mr. Van Buren, with Ragans, Roy Tompkins, Esq., and some other of his friends, then left the Court.

AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors, this day, the following preamble and resolutions were passed:

Whereas, The Board of Directors has received the sad intelligence of the death of Aquila G. Stout, the President of this Company, who departed this life at his residence in this City, after a short illness; therefore

Resolved, That this Board have heard with deep regret of the unexpected death of their President, Mr. Stout, who for many years has acted with them in the care and management of this Company.

Resolved, That we entertain a grateful recollection of the kindness and courtesy which have marked our intercourse with Mr. Stout, since he has been the President of this Company.

Resolved, That we remember and duly appreciate the probity of his character, the clearness of mind, and prompt and active habits of business that distinguished him; that we are indebted to his zeal, intelligence and industry in re-uscitating the Company after the disastrous fire of 1845, in securing public confidence in its character and resources, and promoting, during his administration of its affairs, its respectability, prosperity and success.

Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with the family of our departed friend, and sincerely condole with them on the loss of an affectionate husband and father, whom it has pleased Heaven to remove from their circle.

Resolved, That these resolutions be entered upon the minutes, and that a copy be sent to the family of the deceased.

At the same meeting, JAMES N. COBB, Esq., was elected President of the Company.

By order of the Board of Directors.

J. H. LEGGETT, Secretary.

FOR SALE.—ROLLAND'S MECHANICAL Reloading Trough and Hot Air Oven, for the manufacture of Bread, Biscuit, Pastry, &c., patented in Europe and America.—The undersigned, sole grantees for the United States, are now ready to entertain propositions for city, county and State rights. The invention is entirely different from any hitherto brought under the notice of the American public, and superior to any apparatus yet devised for the preparation of the best bread, by cleanly process, and with an immense saving of labor and fuel. It is equally well adapted to the largest and smallest concerns. Pamphlets, with full description and statement of its success in Europe, may be had on application as below, or they will be sent free to any address.

NEW-YORK, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 17, 1857.

News of the Day.

The City yesterday was in a state of excitement greater than it has experienced since the time of the Astor-place riots. Indeed, considering how many more were directly interested in the result of this than that occasion, it is doubtful whether, in a score of years, there has been in the City's history such another day as yesterday. It grew out of the forcible ejection again of the lately-appointed (by Gov. KING) Street Commissioner from his office. Mr. CONOVER obtained, upon his affidavit, from Judge HOFFMAN, warrants for the arrest of the Mayor, Sheriff, Deputy Street Commissioner and others. As the Sheriff was a party Coroner PERRY was required to serve these warrants. On attempting to arrest the Mayor he was furnished with 50 (new) policemen to enforce it. These were met by the Mayor's Police as they ascended the City Hall steps, and by an immense mob of the Mayor's friends, and a terrible fight ensued, which resulted in the fatal wounding of several men. Retreating to the Recorder's office, and taking their wounded with them, Major-General SANDFORD acceded to the requisition of Coroner PERRY, and ordered the National Guar—dwho, fortunately, at the moment were passing down Broadway, to embark on a pleasure trip to Boston—to draw up in front of the City Hall. After this there was no more rioting. During the day, Captain WALLING attempted to serve a criminal warrant upon HERNANDO WOOD. The arrest was effected at last, by the aid of the Sheriff. A writ of habeas corpus bad been sued out, in anticipation of the Mayor's surrender, which was made returnable to his friend Judge RUSSELL. The Judge inadvertently having left town, the Mayor in consequence was held a close prisoner all night—no bail in such cases being allowable. On a third warrant, Mayor WOOD is to appear before Recorder SMITH at 10 o'clock this morning—fiveregiments of the militia being detailed to enforce his attendance. The City was full of rumors last night that Capt. DILKES had died of his wounds—that HARRY HOWARD had been terribly cut on attempting to pass the lines of the militia, and was captured and imprisoned for the night. There is no truth in these. Proclamations from President DRAPER and Mayor WOOD were issued late last night. The Aldermen yesterday confirmed contractor CHARLES DEVLIN Commissioner of Streets a few moments after the Mayor had put him in possession of the office. Gov. KING, who had gone to Boston to attend the Banker Hill celebration, was notified by telegraph of the matters transpiring in the City, and answered that he would be in town to-day. At the hour of going to press all things were quiet.

The Court of Appeals met at Albany yesterday, and the Metropolitan Police case will be taken up this morning before the full Bench, notwithstanding there are several hundred cases on the Caleadar ahead of it. Yesterday preliminary proceedings in this matter, reported specially for the DAILY TIMES, will be found elsewhere.

The arrival of General WILLIAM WALKER, late of Nicaragua, in this City yesterday, added much to the general excitement that prevailed. He was met at pier No. 1 by a very large number of people, and conveyed in a carriage to the Park, in front of the City Hall. There he was welcomed in an address by Judge PHILLIPS, and with cheers by the people. His response was very brief, in consequence of the prevalence of a heavy rainstorm. Subsequently he was conveyed to the Lafarge Hotel, where he now is. The gathering to see him was immense, and the confusion great. It is probable that he will be arrested soon, at the instance of Commodore VANDERBILT. His arrival at Philadelphia was not followed by any public demonstration.

The Cunard steamer Europa, from Liverpool on the 6th inst., arrived at Halifax yesterday morning, with three days later news from Europe. Parliament had reassembled after the Whitsuntide vacation, but in its proceedings there was nothing of special interest. The politico-religious tumults in Brussels and other Belgian cities had subsided, and no renewal of the disturbances, previously reported to have occurred there, was apprehended. The U. S. steam-frigate Niagara had gone to Portsmouth, there to undergo the necessary alterations for the reception at Liverpool of her portion of the Atlantic Telegraph cable. From Madrid we learn that negotiations with the Mexican Envoy have been broken off. There are still hopes of peace, but at present there are grounds to apprehend that a resort to hostilities cannot be prevented, even by the strong mediation of France and England.

By way of Havana we have advices from Vera Cruz to the 8th inst. Another conspiracy against President COMONFORT and his ministers had been discovered in the City of Mexico. The conspirators, instigated, it is supposed, by the Spanish Government, were agents and supporters of the Ex-Dictator SANTA ANA. Their plan (to get possession of the Government and murder the President) was happily discovered and frustrated, and the ringleaders were promptly punished. The returns indicate that Gen. COMONFORT is reelected President by an overwhelming majority. Great defensive preparations were going on at Vera Cruz, in anticipation of the threatened Spanish invasion.

The Commission appointed by the Governor of Ohio, to examine into the condition of the State Treasury, in consequence of the discovery of a heavy defalcation by a former Treasurer, consists of WILLIAM DENNISON, Jr., of Cincinnati, and the Auditor of the State. The Commercial exposes a state of affairs at Columbus truly startling: for if the assertions of our cotemporary be correct, the politics of the State are under the control of men who do not scruple to use the public monies in business, in speculation, and even in gambling.

The Massachusetts American State Convention met at Boston yesterday, and about three hundred delegates were present. The Springfield Platform was reaffirmed, and that of the National Convention, held at Louisville recently, was repudiated. Hon. N. P. BANKS was nominated on the first ballot for Governor—having received 219 out of 229 votes. The nomination was made unanimous. ELIPHALET NASH, of Springfield, was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, and JOHN H. CLIFFORD for Attorney-General.

The Albany Board of Excise Commissioners refuse all applications for a license under the new Liquor law, stating that they construe its provisions to limit the time for granting licenses to ten days after the law went into effect. Notice was given to the Board yesterday that a mandamus would be obtained to compel them to entertain applications.

The semi-annual meeting of the State Temperance Society took place at Albany yesterday, and was attended by about fifty delegates. The financial report shows the Society to be in debt about $6,000, which the President, Mr. DELAVAN, in the course of his opening address, said he would pay himself, if the Society did not. The report of the Business Committee embraced a reference to the new Excise law, which occasioned a lengthy debate, and the presentation of a series of resolutions on the subject by HORACE GREELY. The proceedings will be found reported quite fully under our telegraphic head.

The celebration of the Anniversary of the Battle of Bunker Hill at Boston to-day bids fair to exceed all former ones. The display of military and civic societies will be immense, the programme for the procession embracing ninety-five lodges of Masons alone. The telegraph informs us of the safe arrival of several New-York fire companies to take part in the ceremonies.

The examination in the matter of the Burdell estate was resumed yesterday before the Surrogate. Several witnesses were introduced to prove that the most amicable relations existed between Dr. BURDELL and Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, among whom were Rev. Mr. BARCHER, of Saratoga Springs, Mr. SANXAY, Dr. B.'s counsel. The evidence as to the state of feeling between the parties was somewhat contradictory. Young Mr. FRAZIER testified that he heard Dr. B. say that Mrs. C. had a dressmaker that would swear to anything, and he hoped his hands would be withered before he ever married Mrs. C. or any old woman with children. He heard him say also that he would set fire to the house, for the sake of getting her out, if she staid there after the first day of May. She was a bad woman, and would do anything. A very important point in the testimony was that in the evidence of Dr. WARE, who swore that he saw Dr. B. with two ladies on the evening of the 28th of October, about 8 o'clock. He fixed the date by having received a letter from G. W. SNOW that morning, and being at the time on his return from Mr. SNOW's residence. He was subjected to a rigid cross-examination by Mr. TILDEN, in which it appeared that the witness had been in the habit of calling at Mr. SNOW's for three months before and ever since that time, at the same hour of the evening, and no particular reason was given why he should remember that day more than any other.

Civic Rebellion.

Eight years ago the military of this City were called out to aid the police in suppressing a mob of ruffians in Astor Place, who had attempted to prevent an actor from making his appearance on the boards of the theatre in that locality. We had a Mayor then who put himself at the head of the Police, to preserve the peace of the City, and it was at his order that the fatal orders to fire on the mob was given, by which several lives were lost. Since that time there has been found no occasion to call upon the military until yesterday, when their aid was again invoked, to assist the civil authorities in arresting the Chief Magistrate of this City, who had, himself, forcibly resisted the officers of the law in the execution of their duty. If New-York could be further disgraced by having such a man in the office of its Chief Magistrate as FERNANDO WOOD, the disgrace was inflicted yesterday. While part of our citizens were assembling to give an ovation to an unsuccessful filibuster, the Mayor of the City was forcibly resisting the service of a civil process, issued by one of the Judges of the Superior Court, and the Recorder and Coroner were compelled to call upon the Sheriff and the military to aid them in serving processes upon him for violently resisting the authority of the Governor of the State.

After a serious collision between the two police forces, and a desecration of the City Hall by the ruffianly conduct of the Mayor's men in resisting the officers of the law in the execution of their duty, a truce was effected by the intervention of the military, and the peace was preserved for awhile. The Mayor remains in the custody of the Sheriff until this morning, when, it is understood, another attempt will be made, and no doubt with success, to arrest him for resisting the officers of the law, and bring him before the Recorder.

The whole of these processes and disgraceful transactions, have grown out of the appointment of Mr. CONOVER as the successor of Mr. TAYLOR, the late Street Commissioner, by the Governor. Whether the Governor has the right to make the appointment or not, is not for the Mayor to decide; and, as the Chief Magistrate of the City, he has no other duty than to see that the laws are obeyed. But, instead of compelling others to obey the laws, he has himself set the officers of the law at defiance,—the City has been made the scene of the most outrageous and disgraceful disorders, which have not only been countenanced, but instigated by the Mayor himself.

Nearly the whole of yesterday the Park was filled by a noisy and disorderly mob, the business of two or three of our Courts was suspended, the Sheriff's office was in a state of siege, a large number of the policemen were drawn away from their regular beats, the passions of the vilest part of the populace were excited by the demoralizing spectacle of the Chief Magistrate of the City setting the law at defiance, and putting himself at the head of a turbulent force to oppose and defeat the execution of a process issued by one of our highest Courts. There cannot, of course, be the slightest doubt as to how these outrages will terminate. The law must be respected. The call upon the military will be promptly responded to, and the rebellious opposition of the Mayor will be put down without difficulty. There is not a man in the City, who has any regard for his own safety, or any desire for the preservation of our institutions, who would hesitate to assist in opposing such revolutionary and demoralizing conduct as that of our Mayor yesterday.

Mayor WOOD has issued a good many proclamations to the people since he has been in the office; but the one issued by him this morning in reference to the occurrences of yesterday exceeds in its monstrous impudence everything that has before proceeded from him. His calling upon the citizens to "remain calm," in the midst of a civic rebellion at which he is himself at the head, is the very sublime of assurance. Let opinions be as divided as they may in respect to the authority of the Governor, or the propriety of his conduct in appointing a Street Commissioner, there cannot, among men pretending to respectability, be any difference of opinion as to the conduct of the Mayor yesterday. There has been an impression that the Sheriff was on the side of the Mayor and the Deputy Street Commissioner in resisting the appointment by the Governor, but there seems to have been some misapprehension on this point. The Sheriff, we understand, has no disposition to interfere to prevent Mr. CONOVER from entering upon the discharge of the duties of the office.

GRIEFS OF THE TRIBUNE.—The feelings of our amiable neighbor, the Tribune, have been grievously lacerated, it seems, in consequence of a Custom-House advertisement having found its way accidentally into our columns. We can well understand the motives of the Collector in sending his advertisements where they will be likely to have the most readers; but we shall be under the necessity of excluding them hereafter, as we can fill the space they would occupy in our paper with much more profitable matter. We would very cheerfully transfer all such favors, if we had the power, to our aggrieved cotemporary, who has been rendered so very unhappy by this unappreciated addition to our advertising columns.

The "Walker Reception."

General WILLIAM WALKER did arrive in this City at just about seven o'clock on Tuesday evening, as it had been previously made known to an expectant community that he would, in all probability, do. How many more ex-citizens of the United States, put by their own acts out of the pale of the law and of civil life, did at the same time honor the streets of this unhappy metropolis with their presence, we cannot possibly undertake to say. A carefully taken census of the individuals who remained in the Park after the collision between the Municipal and the Metropolitan authorities had come to an end for the moment, might throw more light than we can just now command upon this question. In the present semi-paralytic condition of the public Police, it is not perhaps advisable that we should push these inquiries too far.

Enough, that the ejected Lieutenant of President RIVAS, of Nicaragua, was visible last evening, at about half-past seven o'clock, of course in an "open baronche," drawn by horses whose color it was impossible for us, in the uncertainty of the twilight, to descry—that he came to the City Hall, got out of his vehicle and made "an address," abruptly terminated by a sudden and severe shower of rain which dispersed his audience, and thereafter departed again, and so, as old PEPYS in his "Diary" hath it—and "so to bed." Thanks to the outrageous proceedings of the afternoon, a large number of people were assembled in the Park, who, having nothing particular to do, and being in a state of mind more or less prepared for any adventitious excitement, welcomed the runaway hero with an appropriate confusion of cheers, jokes, squibs and laughter. Partly as a consequence of this unlooked-for accession to their numbers, and partly, too, as a consequence of the judicious action of the illustrious "Committee of Reception," who advised the intending beneficiary to enter New-York at an hour when most of the respectable inhabitants are reposing themselves, after the toils of the day, and most of the disreputable population are emancipating themselves for the amusements of the evening, "General" WALKER enjoyed the opportunity of making himself inaudible to about one-half as many of the "people" of New-York as were assembled in the Park to witness the passage of the funeral cortège of the lamented WILLIAM POOLE. That the citizens of the metropolis are not to be held responsible for any part of this vague and jovial "Reception," we need hardly say. If "General" WALKER labors under the delusion that he or his proceedings have been in any way indorsed by the inhabitants of New-York, we recommend him to test the reality of that indorsement by an appeal for "material aid."

We have conceded so much space in our columns as we thought due to a report of a considerable assemblage in one of the principal public places of the City. We should have given as much prominence to a public reception of General Tom Thumb, or to the dying speech and confession of a distinguished murderer, for it is the office of a metropolitan journal to chronicle the follies and the frailties not less carefully than the accidents and the catastrophes of the day. But we think it due not less to the good fame of our City (already sufficiently compromised by domestic difficulties of a grave and serious kind), than to the reputation of the country, that we should express the sentiments of mingled disgust and contempt with which the most decent and intelligent citizens of New-York, of all classes and of all parties, regard the filibuster farce performed last night after the tragedy of the Police war in the Park. Foreigners, who do not and cannot understand that a "public meeting" in an American city means something or nothing—according to the names of the parties prominent in its proceedings—ought to be informed that we really can hear the explosion of "one hundred guns at the foot of Pier No. 1," and the discharge of two or three incoherent and inaudible speeches from the steps of the City Hall, without thereby compromising "our lives, our fortunes, and our sacred honors," in a plan for the conquest of the Isthmus of Panama, and the Society Islands, or for the immediate annexation to the State of New-York of the Republic of Costa Rica and the East Indian possessions of her Britannic Majesty.

War with the Mormons.

Nothing is more clear than that a man may be a Mormon without being an idiot or a poltroon. Odious as are the practices, and absurd as are the doctrines of the followers of JOE SMITH, there is nothing in the odium of their practices, or in the absurdity of their doctrines absolutely incompatible with the possession by these deluded mortals of so much sense as is requisite to make them very troublesome and dangerous antagonists.

Even three thousand Mormon soldiers, regularly disciplined and respectably commanded—a Territory populous with credulous Mormons, and sufficiently stocked with the necessaries of life—an unfavorable climate and a region of uncivilized prairie to be traversed by the assailing army—what are we to infer of the probable results of an attack upon the aforesaid Mormons by a body of 2,500 United States troops? In commenting some time since upon the signs of a vigorous policy with regard to BRIGHAM YOUNG and his usurpations, which had been already put forth by the President, we took occasion to call the attention of the Administration to the question of the adequacy of such a force as has been detailed for service in Utah to the duties required of them. We then thought it extremely desirable that the first armed demonstration made by our Government in vindication of its insulted authority should be of so peremptory a nature as to make resistance ridiculously impossible. It is now reported, on the faith of the Charleston Courier, that General HOPKINS, of Florida, a "famous Indian fighter," has been appointed to the Governorship of Utah. A "famous Indian fighter," if he accepts the appointment, will probably try to foster his old fame into new life by fresh fighting, and if in his first attempt he should be defeated, it is clear that we shall have a long and tedious conflict upon our hands. This view, which we have taken from the beginning, is supported, as we are glad to see, by journals which, like the St. Louis Republican, enjoy the opportunity of studying the Mormon Question, from the vantage ground of proximity to that anomalous people. And the St. Louis Republican avers its belief that if the Mormons "make such resistance as they are capable of making, 2,500 men is not a sufficient force to quell them, and the expedition will prove a failure."

The neighborhood of the City Hall yesterday bore melancholy testimony to the danger of attempting forcible measures without a sufficient force to insure their success. And we do most earnestly hope, that in dealing with BRIGHAM YOUNG, Mr. BUCHANAN will not commit the error into which Mr. Coroner PERRY fell in his dealing with Mayor WOOD. When a blow must be struck, it should be struck emphatically, and once for all.

ANOTHER OPENING FOR GENERAL WALKER.—General WALKER has arrived among us at a very opportune moment for the exercise of his peculiar talents, if he should still be disposed to seize upon any province or city that happens to be in a state of anarchy from the reckless conduct of conflicting factions. Thanks to Mayor WOOD, the City of New-York is now very much in the condition of Nicaragua when WALKER made his descent upon that distracted country, and made himself its dictator. Who knows but that the disappointed Filibuster, taking a hint from the conduct of the Mayor and his remarkable proclamation, may make up his mind to assume the supreme command of the City.

A SLIGHT COLLISION.—This is the gentle term which the Journal of Commerce applies to the series of gross outrages which have been perpetrated by the Mayor and Deputy Street Commissioner, in their resistance to the law of the State, and the commands of the Governor. The Journal's idea of gentleness is something like that of Nick Bottom's. It must be a very remarkable outrage indeed, on the part of Mayor WOOD, which the Journal would regard as anything but gentle. It will probably call the broken heads of the Metropolitan Police who were assaulted by order of the Mayor while attempting to serve a process upon him, a mild rebuke.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Gen. Walker's Letter to the President—The Utah Governorship—The Overland California Mail Contract.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 16.

Gen. WALKER's letter to the President will appear to-morrow.

Gov. P. F. THOMAS has declined the offer of the Governorship of Utah, and it has been offered to two others.

The Postmaster-General will decide upon the bids for the Overland California Mail contract this week.

X. Y. Z.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, June 16.

Ex-Governor PHILIP FRANK THOMAS to-day formally declined the Governorship of Utah, the office, according to the statement of his friends, not being sufficiently remunerative. It is untrue that Major HOPKINS, of Florida, was offered it. The probability is that Col. CUMMINGS will be appointed, as no other person is now mentioned in that connection.

Notwithstanding the pressure relative to the California overland mail, it may be positively asserted that no foreshadowing of the route to be selected has been authorized to be published in any quarter. Nothing definite has yet been done, the subject requiring the most thorough investigation in view of its great national importance, and which it is believed has already been the subject of Cabinet deliberation. An early decision may be expected.

General WALKER has written a long letter to the President, which, to-day, he placed in his hands. His (WALKER'S) statements will, doubtless, cause a full investigation by the Government, of the conduct of Captain DAVIS. A letter has been received from Ex-Secretary DOBBIN, to the effect that he does not recollect having used the name of WALKER in his official dispatches to Captain DAVIS, nor instructed him in reference to the war in Nicaragua, and that the object of sending a vessel to San Juan del Sur was for the protection of Americans in that quarter.

CORNELIUS, the public printer, was seriously bruised this afternoon. He was standing by his carriage, when the horse took fright, and throwing him down, the wheels passed over his body.

Albany Matters.

THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS AND THE LICENSE LAW—THE MAYORALTY.

ALBANY, Tuesday, June 16.

The Board of Excise Commissioners met to-day. Applications for licenses were made, which the Board refused to entertain, stating that they construed the law to limit the time for granting licensee to ten days. Notice was given that a mandamus would be obtained to compel them to entertain the applications. This will test the point as to whether the limit of ten days is discretionary with the Commissioners, or binding upon them.

Mayor PERRY publishes a letter declining to resign the office of Mayor, but expressing a willingness to set any day which Dr. QUACKENBOS, the contestant, may agree upon, for a final trial of the claim before Judge GOULD.

The State Temperance Society.

SEMI-ANNUAL MEETING AT ALBANY—DEBATE ON THE EXCISE LAW, ETC.

ALBANY, Tuesday, June 16.

The State Temperance Society held a semi-annual meeting at the Assembly Chamber to-day. About fifty were present, among whom were HORACE GREELEY, Senators RISER, PATERSON and BRADFORD, and Rev. Dr. MARSH. The proceedings opened with a prayer from Rev. Mr. DENNISTON, of Buffalo. E. C. DELAVAN, Esq., President of the Society, delivered an address. In it he alludes to the passage of the Excise bill with regret; declares that it has bound down the people to liquor taxation for one year at least; states that no true temperance man can favor the licensing and sanctioning of crime; advises no action by the Temperance Society, as such, in relation to the law, leaving it to each temperance man to pursue the course he deems best in regard to that law; reviews the whole history of adulteration from 1833 to the present time, showing that all liquors consumed in this country are more or less adulterated and pointing out their poisonous qualities; recommends and urges the entire disconnection of the Society from all party politics, and a standing upon its own merits as a party, rather than be forced into any other organization. He concluded by stating that the debt of the Society is $6,000, which he says he will pay if the Society does not.

After the address, Professor MCCOY, Secretary of the Society, moved to take a ballot for President. He introduced the motion by stating that Mr. DELAVAN'S frequent propositions to withdraw from that position had created a desire at least to go through the form of an election. Many had come here with the intention of voting for a President. It would be for the benefit of the Society should the President consent to this course, for if he opposed it, it might give rise to unpleasant and harmful discussion.

Mr. JOHN N. WILDER denounced the motion as indecent, both in tone and time, and moved the adoption of the President's address, which was carried.

Professor MCCOY renewed his motion.

Rev. Dr. MARSH moved as a substitute, that the Society learns with pleasure the consent of Mr. DELAVAN to continue in the office of President of the Society.

The substitute was declared adopted.

Professor MCCOY demanded a count, when all but himself and one other Delegate voted in favor of the substitute of Dr. MARSH.

The financial report was presented, and shows the indebtedness of the Society to be $5,953 75. The report was accepted.

The following Business Committee was appointed: Dr. Marsh, Rev. W. Denniston, Messrs. Gorliss, E. W. Jackson, E. B. Day, E. J. Warren, Jermain, Rice and Cannon.

Several of the delegates then delivered addresses.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

After speeches from various delegates, the Business Committee reported a series of resolutions which are, in substance, as follows:

The first denounces the re-establishment of the sale of intoxicating liquors, under the seal of the State, in every city, town and village, and declares that no restriction can atone for it.

The second quotes Judge BIRDSEYE'S declaration approvingly, that the new Excise law differs in no material respect from the old, and declares that two hundred years experience shows the tremendous evils of the principle of excise.

The third places the responsibility of the execution of the law upon the executive officers of State.

The fourth expresses the conviction that the people will not be lulled into false security, nor be satisfied until prohibition is secured.

The fifth recommends all the friends of Temperance to organize prohibition bands, and to raise funds for the support of lecturers, &c., so as to secure nominations of Senators and Assemblymen.

The sixth calls for the aid of the pulpit and the press in the cause of prohibition.

The seventh refers to the triumphs of Hon. NEAL DOW, and offers a welcome to all temperance apostles from abroad.

The eighth declares the prohibitionary principles to have been a perfect success wherever fairly tried.

The remaining resolutions return thanks to the President and other officers; express regret and sympathy at the death of CHARLES BARTLETT, Vice-President of the Society; approves the efforts of PETER SINCLAIR, of Scotland, among the youth of New-York; deplores the Society not discouraged by momentary reverses, and recommends the Executive Committee to have the temperance pledge prepared in a new and attractive form, and introduced into families and among youths.

Mr. WARREN, from the Business Committee, presented a minority report, from himself alone, in which he indorsed the present license law as likely to be productive of good, if properly enforced.

The reports were accepted, and the majority resolutions taken up seriatim.

The first resolution was passed.

On the second resolution being read a warm debate arose. Mr. STEBBINS, of Rochester, moving to amend by declaring the present excise worse than the old law.

Hon. HORACE GREELEY opposed the amendment and the resolution. He thought the present law would limit the number of dealers, which, in New-York, would be a great step towards prohibition.

Mr. COFFLIN said he was from Oyster Bay, which derived much benefit from the present law, and if the license principle was denounced, Oyster Bay would be lost to the temperance cause.

Rev. Mr. DENNISON strongly attacked the hellish principle of license, and declared that the issue must be made between prohibition and free rum.

Senator BRADFORD was opposed to violent denunciation of the present law. Let it be observed while in existence, and it would one day be replaced by prohibition.

Hon. HORACE GREELEY asked if it was not a benefit to have liquor-shops closed on Sunday.

Mr. JOHN N. WILDER said he agreed with those who believed it wrong to license crime. If the Legislature of New-York should reinstate slavery in the State it would be no recommendation of the act should they emancipate on Sundays and holidays. The people wanted prohibition, and the present law was only palmed on them by political tricksters to smother that sentiment and operate for the benefit of a party in the next election.

After further warm debate, Hon. HORACE GREELEY offered substitutes for the resolutions of the Committee relative to the principles of excise and prohibition. They are as follows:

First: That the true law of temperance is total abstinence, and the true rule of legislative, prohibition; second, that exertion to secure the latter must not be relaxed; the third declaims responsibility for the Excise law; the fourth declares the act of the last Legislature the best effort yet made to moderate, regulate and render respectable and safe the use of intoxicating beverages, but predicts its failure; the fifth declares it has many wholesome features calculated to mitigate the evils flowing from the use of alcoholic beverage; the sixth repudiates the law as a finality, but accepts it as the means of popular education for prohibition; the seventh declares it to be the duty of all to obey the law; and the eighth calls upon the friends of temperance not to cease their exertions for prohibition, and to regard the present law as a truce only.

Mr. WILDER moved to refer Mr. GREELEY'S substitute to the Business Committee. Motion lost.

Pending the question on the adoption of the substitute the Convention adjourned until to-morrow morning.

General CAREY is announced to speak to-night at the Capitol.

The Banker Hill Celebration.

ARRIVAL OF DEPUTATIONS FROM NEW-YORK, ETC.

BOSTON, Tuesday, June 16.

Oceanus Engine Company of New-York, with Sheltou's Band, arrived at about 1 o'clock to-day. They were received at the depôt by Washington Company No. 5, of Charlestown, and escorted through some of our principal streets to that city, where they are being well taken care of. The Company numbering 54 men, with their splendid engine, attract much attention. They remained in Worcester several hours this morning, as the guests of the firemen of that city.

New-York Hose Co. No. 5 arrived at Lowell this forenoon, vid Norwich and Worcester, and are entertained by the Lowell firemen. They are expected in Boston early to-morrow.

The boys from the Orphans' School at Randall's Island were introduced to the Mayor at the City Hall to-day. They visited Faneuil Hall, and afterwards dined by invitation with the Mayor.

Governor KING, of New-York, arrived to-night.

Considerable excitement was manifested late in the afternoon, in consequence of a report that the Seventh Regiment was ordered on duty in New-York to suppress a riot, and would not come.

The weather is cloudy, with indications of an easterly rain storm.

Massachusetts American State Convention.

NOMINATION OF HON. N. P. BANKS AS CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

BOSTON, Tuesday, June 16.

The American State Convention, numbering about 300 delegates, representing 82 towns, assembled to-day in a room of Tremont Temple. GEO. W. MESSINGER, of Boston, presided.

The Convention reaffirmed the Springfield platform, and refused to adopt the platform of the National American Party, recently constituted at Louisville.

On the first ballot for Governor, N. P. BANKS received 219 votes, out of 229 cast, and was then, amid cheering, declared the candidate unanimously by acclamation.

ELIPHALET TRASK, of Springfield, was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor, receiving 224 votes.

JOHN H. CLIFFORD was nominated for Attorney-General.

A Committee was appointed to wait upon Mr. BANKS, who found him quite ill. He is understood to have verbally accepted the nomination, and promised to write a letter explanatory of his decision.

The New-Hampshire Legislature and the Dred Scott Decision.

CONCORD, N. H., Tuesday, June 16.

Resolves were introduced into the Legislature to-day strongly denouncing the Dred Scott decision as an attempt to usurp the legislative functions of the Government.

An act to secure personal freedom was also presented, giving all races and colors the same rights as white citizens.

N. G. ORNWAY has been appointed High-Sheriff in place of Mr. RIXFORD, removed, by address from the Legislature.

The Pennsylvania Public Works.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, June 16.

Before the Supreme Court, in session here, the application for an injunction against the sale of the main line of the public works was made to-day. Gov. POLLOCK protested against the decision of the Court in the premises, and in favor of the right of the defendants to be heard.

Fire in Nanuet, N. Y.

NANUET, N. Y., Tuesday, June 16.

The mills known as Warren's Mills, in this place, and owned by JOHN SMITH, were destroyed by fire at about 3½ o'clock this morning. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary. The loss is about $5,000, and there is no insurance.

HALIFAX, Tuesday, June 16.

The Royal Mail steamship Europa, Captain LEITCH, from Liverpool, at 9 A. M., on Saturday, June 6, arrived at this port, at 5 o'clock this morning.

The Canadian screw steamer Indian, from Quebec, arrived at Liverpool, at 2 A. M., on the 4th.

The screw-steamer Kangaroo left Liverpool on the 3d, for New-York, and the U. S. Mail steamship Fulton, left Southampton on the same day for New-York.

Great Britain.

Parliament resumed its sittings on the 4th, but the proceedings were only of local interest.

In the House of Commons, Lord PALMERSTON had intimated that he intended to submit a bill at this session for the abolition of Church rates.

Mr. BERKELY gave notice of his intention to bring up the question of the ballot on the 23d of June.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated that there was no intention, at present, of reducing the duty on paper for educational purposes.

Ineffectual efforts were made for the appointment of Committees to revise the duties of the Board of Trade, and to consider and report measures for improving the condition of the laboring classes.

The Princess Royal annuity bill was finally passed.

The London Times states that there is not the least ground for the report that the U. S. frigate Niagara is not to take her share of the Submarine Cable. She was to leave the Thames on Monday, for Portsmouth Dockyard, where some of her stanchions were to be taken out, and her ward-room altered to accommodate the cable. This done, she would at once proceed to Birkenhead, and commence taking in the cable.

At the Greenwich Works, about nine hundred miles of cable was completed, and the whole length would have been done but for the fact that the daily consumption of fine wire has been more than all the wire drawers of England could furnish.

The Agamemnon was to commence taking in the cable at Greenwich on the 9th or 10th of June. Her tender is to be the steam frigate Leopold.

All the vessels will rendezvous at Cork Harbor, where the final arrangements will be made.

The war steamer Cyclops is now taking soundings along the proposed deep-sea route.

The period for paying out the cable is the month of August.

The suspension of WILLIAM MCINTOSH & Co., of Manchester, is announced. The liabilities are supposed to be about £100,000.

An appeal is put forth for funds to carry out Lady FRANKLIN'S Arctic Expedition, which is expected to start by the beginning of July.

France.

The statement that during the late visit of the Emperor to the Minister of Artillery, an attempt was made upon his life is reiterated, and the fact that the English journals containing any reference to this matter, as well as to the Government election plan, were intercepted at the French Post-Offices, gives color to the story. The recent Government circular in regard to the approaching election formed the main political theme, and Paris correspondence generally agree in saying that the document has created a sensation highly detrimental to Government interests.

The list of Democratic candidates for Paris had not been arranged. The correspondent of the Times says that in the event of the election of these candidates, the difference of opinion as to taking the oaths to the existing Government will probably be satisfactorily arranged. He also states that it is doubtful if Gen. CAVAIGNAC will appear as a candidate.

It was expected that the monthly returns of the Bank of France, to be published in a few days, would show an increase in the stock of bullion amounting to more than £100,000.

Rumors of an approaching interview between the Emperor ALEXANDER and the Emperor of the French are again circulating in Paris.

Belgium.

The recent excitement appears to have completely died out.

The Grand Duke CONSTANTINE of Russia had paid a visit to the King at Antwerp.

Spain.

Some cheap-bread riots had occurred at Granada. A large number of people paraded through the principal streets, and, having assumed a menacing attitude, were ordered to disperse, and failing to do so, they were fired upon by the troops, which had been called out, and four persons were wounded. They then retired to their homes and quiet was restored. The City was, nevertheless, declared in a state of siege. On the 26th all was tranquil.

The Madrid correspondent of the London Times says the negotiations on the Mexican question have been suspended until the arrival of the Mexican mail, due early in June, and adds: "If it brings authentic intelligence of chastisement inflicted on the delinquents, this will give a favorable impulse to the ulterior march of the question—but if the expected news be within the mark, and less than the requirements of the Spanish Cabinet, it is not impossible that LA-RHADA, unless Lord HOWDEN and the Marquis DE TURGOT are able to detain him, will leave Madrid on account of the refusal of this Government to recognize him officially. In this case hostilities may be expected. It is to be feared that the Mexican question presents very serious difficulties, and is by no means so near its settlement as some have recently supposed."

Italy.

The Naples correspondent of the Daily News recounts a large number of continued barbarities on the part of the authorities and says that a placard addressed to the citizens calling on them to rise had been put in circulation. Tri-colored bills of an inflammatory nature had also been freely distributed.

Austria.

The announcement of Marshal RADETSKY'S death appears to have been premature, as the official gazette of Verona, of the 31st of May, contains a medical bulletin that his health continued to be satisfactory.

Russia.

The Prussian papers say that the Emperor of Russia is about to reduce his army, and it is stated at Vienna that the St. Petersburg government has made advances to Austria.

Persia.

The ratifications of the treaty of peace between England and Persia were exchanged on the 2d of May at Bagdad, with great ceremony. Mutual congratulations passed between Mr. MURRAY and the Persian Plenipotentiary.

Greece.

The French Consul at Athens has demanded of the Greek Government, the establishment of a Greek Embassy at Paris.

Turkey.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times, says the Porte has forwarded a memoir of its Diplomatic Agents in Europe, demonstrating the necessity for some change in the Treaties between Turkey and the Christian Powers. In the document it is set forth that public peace and security cannot be maintained in Turkey, so long as each separate Legation and Consulship have a right of jurisdiction.

The Latest by Telegraph from London to Liverpool.

In the House of Lords on Friday, Lord STANLEY intimated in respect to several petitions for a relief in the Merchants' Shipping act, that Government saw no reason for any alteration in the existing law.

In the House of Commons Sir JOHN PAKINGTON said

he found that in the ordinary course of things there would be little chance of his bringing forward his motion on National Education until too late a period of the Session to admit of its being properly discussed, unless he received some indulgence from the Government. He therefore appealed to Lord PALMERSTON to aid him in enabling the new Parliament to discuss so important a subject.

Lord PALMERSTON admitted the importance of the subject, but could not at present offer a government day for the discussion.

This, it is presumed, abolves the measure for the session.

The Sound Dues question was taken up, and the House voted £1,125,000 in liquidation of England's share in the redemption.

MR. LIDDELL called attention to the Danish transit dues, which although of comparatively small amount, were vexatious in their operation, and ought to be abolished by treaty, as well as the Sound Dues.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said in response that the Government had endeavored to get the abolition of the transit dues included in the treaty, but had been unable to obtain the assent of the Danish Government to the proposition.

FRANCE AND RUSSIA.

The Paris correspondent of the Times says Count DE MORNY, previous to his departure from St Petersburg, which is to take place about the 25th of this month, will sign the treaty of commerce between the French and Russian Governments, of which the clauses are already agreed to.

BELGIUM.

Official dispatches from Brussels of the 3d, declare that tranquility is restored, but that many petitions against Church abuses had reached the Government A very strong feeling against the Jesuits continued to manifest itself throughout the country.

A Brussels letter in the Paris Presse says, that at a Cabinet Council it was resolved to withdraw the obnoxious bill on charities, and that two or three ministers tendered their resignation, which the King refused to accept.

The Chambers will be convened again in a few weeks, but only to vote upon urgent measures, and after they are passed the session will be closed.

FRANCE.

The improved position of the Bank of France having led to rumors of a contemplated reduction in the rate of discount, the writer of the Times' city article says: "It seems that such a step will be resorted to before the artificial purchases of gold are entirely stopped.

The Medway, 110 days from Melbourne, was off Plymouth yesterday evening, with 50 tons of copper ore, 4,560 bales of wool, 18,000 ounces of gold dust, and 106 passengers. She sailed Feb. 17, rounded Cape Horn March 24, entered Pernambuco May 3, left on the 6th, and crossed the Line on the 8th.

THE DIFFICULTY WITH NEW GRANADA.

Advices from Bogota to the 24th of April state that the Mackintosh question was either settled, or on the point of being so, and that relations were about to be restored between the two governments It is added that Don JUAN DE FRANCISCO MARTIN, who has resided for the last three years in Paris, is appointed Minister Plenipotentiary from New Granada to the Court of St. James.

From the Times City Article.

LONDON, Friday evening.

"The funds opened at an improvement of ¼ per cent., which subsequently experienced an increase of an eighth. Further arrivals of overdue vessels from Australia, coupled with better accounts from Paris Bourse, was the principal cause of the increased confidence. Relief was likewise felt from the termination of the extra pressure in the Discount Market, consequent on the liabilities on the 4th and 5th of the month.

Money on the Stock Exchange was lower, and was still in full demand on Government securities, at 6½ per cent. The quotations of French 3 per cents. show a preponderance of money purchasers, and a further average improvement of ¼ per cent. The gold by the Walmer Castle, from Port Philip, was valued at £152,192. This makes the total for the present week of £573,000.

Sailing of the Europa for Boston.

COMMERCIAL INTELLIGENCE.

Liverpool Cotton Market.

The Broker's Circular of the Liverpool Market quotes COTTON generally unchanged, as compared with the rates of the previous week, though for the inferior qualities there was but little inquiry, and prices were weak. The sales of the week were 40,000 bales, including 4,500 on speculation, and 6,000 for export The sales of Friday were 6,000 bales, including 1,000 bales to speculators, and 1,000 bales to exporters, the market closing steady at the following quotations: Fair Orleans, 8¾d.; Middling Orleans, 7 13-16d.; Fair Mobile 8¼d.; Middling Mobile, 7 11-16d; Fair Uplands 8d.; Middling Uplands, 7¾d. The stock in port consisted of 638,800 bales, of which 342,000 bales were American.

State of Trade.

Business in the Manchester Market was interrupted by the holidays.

Liverpool Breadstuff Market.

The Liverpool Breadstuff Market was dull, and all qualities were somewhat lower. Messrs. RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co. quote FLOUR dull at a decline of 1s.@2s. WHEAT very dull and 6d. ₰ bushel low. CORN quiet, prices easier, but quotably unchanged. The Brokers and other Circulars quote WHEAT dull and 1d. lower; FLOUR dull and 6d.@1s. 6d. lower; CORN quiet, but steady. The weather had been favorable for the crops.

RICHARDSON, SPENCE & Co. quote Western Canal FLOUR 31s.@31s. 6d.; Philadelphia and Baltimore, 31s.@32s.; Ohio, 32s.@32s. 6d.; Red WHEAT, 8s. 6d.@9s. 1d.; White, 9s.@9s. 6d.; Yellow CORN, 39s.; White, 40s.

WELCOME TO GEN. WILLIAM WALKER.

GREAT GATHERING IN THE PARK.

An Address by Judge Phillips.

REPLY OF GEN. WALKER.

Were WM. WALKER an Alexander, just returned from a series of brilliant successes, bearing in his hands the rich spoils of nations added to his empire, he could not have been received with more enthusiasm than marked his advent into our City last evening. The weather was not very propitious. All day the skies betokened rain, and the air was raw and chilly. Fortunately, however, for the pageant the clouds withheld their contents until the proceedings were nearly over.

It was feared, also, during the day, that a disagreeable difficulty would occur upon the landing of WALKER and his associates, growing out of the pending difficulty between Col. LOCKRIDGE and Captains FARNUM and HALL. It will be remembered that these Captains were dismissed from LOCKRIDGE'S command for alleged intemperance, and that they, in turn, have published the Colonel as a coward, and incompetent to lead the expedition with which he endeavored to force his way up the San Juan River to reinforce WALKER. The consequence is, a bitter state of feeling between these parties, which manifested itself this morning in declarations by FARNUM and HALL—who were Marshals of the procession—that Col. LOCKRIDGE should be prevented, forcibly, if need be, from taking a seat in the carriage provided for the distinguished strangers. This breeze also blew over, we believe,—at least we heard of no effort to put the uttered threats in execution. Nevertheless, the apprehensions of so disagreeable an incident not a little disconcerted and discouraged the Committee having the conduct of the reception ceremonies in their charge.

THE COMMITTEE EMBARK.

At 2 o'clock, several members of the Committee of Reception went on board the steamer John Potter, and proceeded to South Amboy to meet the object of their attentions. These gentlemen—who were designated by a silver star set in a rosette of white and blue ribbon—were as follows: Capt. JNO. CREIGHTON, Chairman; Judge A. A. Phillips, H. N. Wild, Edward Cooper, Gen. C. R. Wheat, Alex. C. Lawrence, Wildes P. Walker, and Malcom Campbell. Gen. C. F. HENNINGSEN was also of the party,—looking younger and heartier than he did five years ago, notwithstanding his rough campaign in Central America.

THE STEAMER DECORATIONS.

The steamer was not decorated except with her usual colors, and a dozen flags, on each of which was blazoned the blood-red star of Nicaragua, displayed over the hurricane deck. The union jack was also spread to the breeze at the bow, where it waved in close embrace with the flag of Nicaragua, which hung from the same staff. Nothing of interest transpired on the trip to Amboy, where the steamer arrived in about two hours time. At 5 o'clock the train from Philadelphia came in eight, and in a few minutes more reached the wharf.

THE MEETING WITH WALKER.

The Committee of Reception met Gen. WALKER as he left the cars. On recognizing Generals HENNINGSEN and WHEAT in the collection of friends, WALKER advanced and greeted them cordially, and was then introduced to Judge PHILLIPS, who bid him welcome, without, however essaying any speech. WALKER responded to the greeting without formality, expressing his pleasure at meeting again his companions-in arms who were present. The friends who accompanied Gen. WALKER from New-Orleans and arrived here with him yesterday, were Col. LOCKRIDGE, Col. J. P. WATTAS and Capt. FAVSONX, late of the Nicaraguan war schooner Granada. Col. FRANK ANDERSON accompanied him hither from Washington.

THE RECEPTION ON BOARD.

The guests accompanied by the Committee, proceeded on board the boat to the ladies saloon, where Mr. CAMPBELL, addressing the General said:

Gen. WALKER: On behalf of the Committee appointed for your reception, by the citizens of New York, a portion of that Committee have come here to welcome you, and to escort you to the City, where suitable ceremonies of reception will be observed.

The General bowed in acknowledgment, took his seat, and received the congratulations of a crowd of persons presented to him by the Committee, until Capt. SIMPSON, of the steamer, rescued him from the throng, and escorted him to a private room, for refreshment. After his return to the saloon, the remainder of the time was expended in general conversation between the guests and their friends.

SCENES ALONG THE ROUTE.

Our reporter, who accompanied the party from Camden to Amboy, states that nothing of note occurred along the route, except the assemblage of enthusiastic masses of people at different points, all anxious to see the "President of Nicaragua." At Burlington and Bordentown in particular, the concourse was very large. On the way across the bay, the steamer Wyoming dropped alongside the John Potter, ringing a salute, to which General WALKER responded from the deck of our vessel, amid cheers from the Wyoming's passengers. At various points along the "Kills," also, small collections of people upon the banks of the river saluted the Potter as she passed.

CONVERSATIONAL INCIDENTS.

While crossing the bay, J. W. GERARD, Esq., who was among the Philadelphia passengers, obtained an introduction to Gen. WALKER, with whom he entered into conversation, assuring him that he bore a striking resemblance to Gen. TAYLOR—a suggestion which the party to whom addressed received with great dignity, evidently half suspicious that the comical attorney was quizzing him. Mr. G. subsequently introduced that novel topic of conversation, the weather, and drew the General out upon the subject of the climate of Nicaragua, which he described as very fine, the temperature upon its high table-lands rarely rising above 85°.

THE CAUSES OF DISEASE IN NICARAGUA.

Mr. GERARD remarked that he had seen Gen. HENNINGSEN, and that he looked remarkably well. WALKER replied that those who took care of themselves in Nicaragua were well enough. Mr. G. suggested that the soldiers who went out to that country were a rough, careless set, we supposed, and apt to be disastrously free with bad whisky. WALKER rejoined that there were some certainly who suffered from that course, but that bad food and an insufficiency of food, was a far more frequent and more serious difficulty.

DIPLOMACY GREETING WAR.

Chevalier WYCKOFF next presented himself and introduced an agent of BEADY, the celebrated daguerreotypist, who made application to Gen. WALKER to sit to him this morning for a photograph. The General promptly acceded to the request, and fixed an hour for the engagement. WYCKOFF subsequently struck very naturally into the field of diplomacy. In WALKER'S triumph would be the solution of the Central American imbroglio, he said to the General, and added that he had made the same remark a day or two since to a British functionary at Washington, who received the suggestion with significant nervousness. Lord NAPIER should instantly demand his passports.

A GREETING FROM MASSACHUSETTS.

An old gentleman from Massachusetts sought an introduction, and asked WALKER if he proposed to visit that State. WALKER replied that it was uncertain. The old gentleman said that if he did, he would find he had friends there. They would not be descendants of the Pilgrim Fathers, WALKER replied, if they did not welcome the cause which I represent,

THE APPROACH TO THE BATTERY.

When the steamer was within a mile of the Battery, the cannon planted there began to thunder forth its salute of one hundred guns, served with great rapidity and precision. As she neared the wharf, Gen. WALKER, and his accompanying companions-in-arms, took their station upon the upper deck, where the General, with uncovered head, and supported on either side by Colonels HENNINGSEN and ANDERSON, bowed acknowledgment of the cheers sent up by the dense mass of human beings who assembled in thousands, blackening the wharf, the Battery and the lower end of State-street. The sight was certainly such as is not witnessed every day. Alderman WILSON was one of the first to rush on board when the steamer touched the dock. Seeking G. WALKER, he welcomed him again in behalf of New-York.

FORMATION OF THE PROCESSION.

During the afternoon, Col. HALL, Captain O'KEEFE, Captain FARNUM, and Captain MCKEELE, were upon the platform that had been erected for the formal reception. The presence of the Colonel was remarked, particularly, because those who had read the reports of the proceedings of the Committee of Arrangements, thought he would have been engaged in superintending the Ryndere Grenadiers, who, it had been said, would appear in full strength, and take prominent part in the reception. Such was the intention of the Committee, and such, at one time, was thought to be the intention of the Grenadiers. But they did not appear at National Hall, Canal-street, at 4 o'clock, as ordered, and consequently Col. HALL was not engaged in the direction of their movements.

At 5 o'clock a gentleman came upon the platform with a transparency, on two sides of which was written:

"We Honor the Brave,"

and on the two others—

"Nicaragua shall soon be Free."

This was nailed on the right, and in front of the platform. Soon afterwards another gentleman appeared with a tri-color flag—three horizontal stripes, the upper and lower blue, the middle white, with a red star in the centre. It was nailed to the left front of the platform.

At a few minutes past 6 Capt. O'KEEFE stood upon the reporter's table, and said:

GENTLEMEN: Gen. WILLIAM WALKER, the hero of Nicaragua, will arrive at pier No. 1 in half an hour and all who desire to take part in the intended reception, are requested to form into line behind the band, and march down to meet him when he lands. Stewart's Band marched off, and a large portion of the vast assemblage that had been there for hours witnessing the extraordinary proceedings of the authorities at the City Hall, followed, passing out of the western gate to Broadway and down Broadway to the steamboat landing. While they were forming and for some time after they had left, a cannon was fired at intervals of two or three minutes.

THE DEBARKATION—SCENES AT THE WHARF.

An open barouche, drawn by four horses, was in waiting upon the wharf when the steamboat arrived. To this Gen. WALKER attempted to walk, but the crowd all rushed to seize his hand, lifted him up on its wave and fairly swept him into the seat provided for him. An attempt to organize a procession quite failed in consequence of the tremendous pressure of the masses to get near enough to shake the hand or see the face of the man they had come to honor. Accompanied by a band of music, the carriage containing the guests and Committee passed up State-street and Broadway to the PARK. All along the route the side-walks were crowded with anxious spectators, who cheered this lion of the day with enthusiastic rounds as he passed. The Police force was evidently elsewhere engaged at this time, for very few if any of its members were visible in the procession, much to the damage of General WALKER'S carriage, the springs of which were broken, and its back torn out by the rude efforts of "the boys" to climb into the vehicle for a better look at its distinguished occupant.

KNOCK-DOWN ARGUMENTS.

Capt. CREIGHTON tumbled one of these intruders out of the carriage, and was himself knocked down in the crowd. In the melée, the Captain's cost was nearly torn from his back and quite ruined—a fact which will probably necessitate his purchase of a new wedding garment immediately, as he had designed getting spliced in the coat which now is itself so sadly in need of splicing.

AT THE PARK.

When the first carriage arrived at the western gate, the crowd in the Park, between the stand and the City Hall, became very much excited; and by the time it reached the front of the platform, there was the most densely packed mass of human beings that have gathered in front of the City Hall for many years. They were much closer together than sardines in a tin case, for sardines admit a little fluid between them, while, although it was raining freely at the time, not a drop could penetrate lower than the line of the breasts of the assemblage. Above that line there was a quantity of water, which fitted from one to another along the open space above the line of pressure of backs and breasts. There was no room for the carriage, and for some time it could not be moved. The horses remained remarkably quiet, considering that they were hard pressed in front and on either side; and that many who doubted the resisting power of their ribs were dodging under their bellies, in the hope of escaping under the platform. Others clung to the horses' harness and to the carriage, and those who could climbed up the platform to save themselves from injury. When the second carriage arrived, drawn by four horses, and containing Gen. WALKER and some of the members of the Committee, the confusion was, if possible, greater than ever. As the mass swayed towards it, those in front clung to the carriage and to the harness to save themselves. Several minutes elapsed before General WALKER could gain the platform. As soon as he appeared, three cheers were given, and there were loud cries of "Order!"

REMARKS OF CAPT. CREIGHTON.

Capt. CREIGHTON, mounting the reporters' table, said: If those who cry "Order!" will only keep order, we will soon have order. Fellow-citizens: If you will give me your attention for one moment, as Chairman of the Committee of Arrangements, I will not occupy your time by a long speech, but will merely introduce to you Judge A. PHILIPS, who will deliver the address of welcome to the noble chieftain we have assembled to do honor to. [Cheers, and for utmost confusion.] I now introduce to you Judge A. PHILIPS, who will deliver the congratulatory or welcome address to Gen. WM. WALKER. Three cheers for WALKER!

This was responded to loud and long, and Judge PHILIPS, amid confusion which rendered him inaudible beyond the stage, addressed Gen. WALKER, who stood opposite him with head uncovered.

GENERAL WALKER'S REPLY.

When Judge PHILIPS had concluded, the rain was coming down heavily, but an umbrella being held over his head, Gen. WALKER spoke as follows, in a clear, deliberative voice:

CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK: I thank you for your expressions of sympathy toward a cause of which I am the humble representative. I thank you for these manifest approbations of a cause for which we have been so lately engaged, and for which we expect to struggle yet in the future.

[The noise and confusion was here so great that Captain CREIGHTON made a fresh appeal to the crowd, that while the President of Nicaragua was addressing them they would have sufficient self-respect to keep silence. This appeal had very little effect, and General WALKER continued.]

CITIZENS: It is gratifying to have heard allusions to the fields, which I hope may be termed glorious, of Nicaragua; but with far higher pride than any which mere victories may inspire, I stand in your presence, to-day, and declare with satisfaction that I challenge any one to point to the first instance in which I have acted contrary to the law of right or justice. Prouder do I feel to make this declaration than to have been victor on a thousand fields! [Enthusiastic cheers.]

[The rain was now falling very fast and the confusion was so great that it was impossible to hear a word beyond the reporters table. Observing this Mr. H. N. WILD cried aloud to the audience.]

REMARKS OF H. N. WILD.

Gentlemen, if you are desirous of hearing the tones of General WALKER, you must be as quiet as possible.

While Mr. WILD was addressing the audience, Gen. WALKER concluded his remarks as follows:

Again I thank you for these expressions of sympathy and approbation, and I hope to see you all at any time that you may make it convenient.

The General and those of his officers who accompanied him were immediately shown to their carriages and driven to the St. Nicholas, and the crowd dispersed.

AT THE ST. NICHOLAS.

Arriving at the hotel the General alighted, when it was discovered that there were no rooms provided for him. Another crowd gathered, and the General was again hemmed in. Discovering Gen. WHEAT near by, Gen. WALKER said to him: "General, get me out of this."

AT THE LAFARGE.

No sooner said than executed, the powerful arm of Gen. WHEAT made way for his friend. As soon as he reached the door, Gen. WHEAT procured a carriage. They both entered, and the driver drove in haste down Broadway until the crowd was far behind, then up again to above Fourth-street. Gen. WHEAT then ascertained that there were rooms prepared at the Lafarge, to which he drove immediately, and Gen. WALKER was admitted through the private door to his rooms without the knowledge of any who were searching for him.

As the rain had caused the General to shorten his intended remarks at the Park, it was thought he would resume them at the Hotel, but, under the circumstances, he declined. Subsequently, it was determined to make an occasion on some future day, for the General to speak at length.

During the evening, he was visited by a large number of friends—among whom was GEORGE LAW—but nothing of a public nature transpired.

Probable Arrest of General Walker.

Commodore VANDERBILT has had a capias issued for the arrest of General WALKER, charged with having combined with Messrs. C. K. GARRISON and CHARLES MORGAN to break up the accessory Transit steamships line. The Commodore is, of course, well aware that General WALKER'S pockets must be completely empty. He has had the writ issued as a matter of form. The effect of the writ, though not pecuniarily remunerative to the Commodore, will probably compel the General to show himself before a New-York Court.

DARING ATTEMPT TO ROB ONE OF HERRING & CO.'S Fire and Burglar Proof Patent Champion Safes frustrated.

OFFICE OF J. S. REED & CO., Bankers,
MARION, Ohio, June 6, 1857.

S. C. HERRING & Co.—Gents: Our banking-house was broken open last night, and an unsuccessful attempt made to force open the Safe; gunpowder was used in quantities sufficient to break glass in the back room, twenty-five feet from the safe, and to displace pictures and furniture, as well as to blow the inside of one of the outside doors into small pieces, but your Hall's Powder Proof Lock resisted all efforts to effect an entrance. The burglars left a very good selection of tools—sledge-hammer, a variety of queer looking chisels, braces and bits, together with levers, &c., &c. It took three good strong men nearly an hour to remove the remains of the wreck so as to reach the inside door, which, of course, remained unharmed. Considering this latter circumstance, together with the fact that two more doors awaited the thieves, if they had succeeded in opening the outside one, we have no hesitation in ordering a new door, and continuing our confidence in your "Burglar Proof Safes with Hall's Powder Proof Lock." One half the outer door is in good order. Can you make the other from measures in your books, or shall we send the burnt one down?

We feel under so much obligation to you for the protection your safe has afforded us, that we authorize you to make any use you may choose of this affair.

Very respectfully, J. S. REED & CO.

The subscribers have on hand, for sale, the largest assortment of FIRE AND BURGLAR-PROOF SAFES in the world, guaranteed to be equal to the above, and superior to any other now offered to the public.

ALBERT H. NICOLAY, Auctioneer.

THE BONAPARTE ESTATE.—AT PUBLIC sale, on WEDNESDAY, June 24, at 12 o'clock, at the Merchants' Exchange, New York, the extensive park and grounds of Henry Beckett, Esq., situated at Bordentown, New Jersey, formerly the property of Joseph Bonaparte, containing two hundred and thirty-four acres of land. A large and very handsome modern mansion, about sixty feet square, with three story wing and requisite outbuildings, has lately been erected on the most eligible portion of the park, commanding a splendid view of the river Delaware. The house is built in an unusually substantial manner, handsomely finished throughout, and with all the conveniences of a gentleman's town residence. Its convenient position for travelling is unsurpassed, there being six or seven daily lines of communication between New York and Philadelphia, and branches to the western and northern parts of Pennsylvania, making it peculiarly eligible for a large public institution. The house is handsomely furnished throughout, and the whole of the personal property may be had if desired.—Maps, showing the location and extent, with full particulars, may be had on application to ALBERT H. NICOLAY, Auctioneer, New York.

Divided in lots to suit buyers. Lease with the most permanent fixtures, as flooring, gas and water pipes. Then, the elaborate ornamental, carpenter, &c. work, which cost over $2,000; mirror, oil cloth, bar and oyster counters, kitchen range, all the furniture, stock, glassware, &c., also, elegant sign, &c. Whatever may be the sacrifice it must be sold, as the owner leaves for Europe. 20 per cent required time of sale; balance following day. Rent $760 per annum. Chance for speculators, &c.

F. NASH, Auctioneer.

AUCTION NOTICE.—SALE OF SPLENDID rosewood and mahogany household furniture, elegant carved rosewood piano-forte, solid rosewood parlor furniture entire, of the most costly description, pier and mantel mirrors, valuable collection of choice oil-paintings, &c.—F. NASH will sell, TO-MORROW, (Thursday,) at 10½ o'clock, the entire rich and desirable contents of the large 5-story residence No. 230 14th-st., west of 8th-av., the whole of which is worthy the special attention of housekeepers, as being the largest and best assortment of valuable furniture offered at public auction for many years, having cost upward of $10,000, and will positively be sold without limits, rain or shine.

SALE OF VALUABLE LEASEHOLD PROPERTY.—By virtue of the last will and testament of Peter McLoughlin, late of the City of New-York, deceased, and pursuant to the judgment of the Supreme Court, the undersigned will on the 19th day of June next, at 12 o'clock, noon, at the Merchants' Exchange in said City, by Anthony J. Bleecker, Auctioneer, sell the following described leasehold property, to wit: All that certain lot of land, together with the building thereon, situate, lying and being in the IVth Ward of the City of New-York, on the south side of Chatham-st. or square, distinguished on a map of the estate of the late Hendrick Rutgers, deceased, dated Nov. 15, 1813, made by Bridges & Poppleton, and filed in the Register's Office, New-York, as lot No. 159, bounded northerly in front by Chatham-st. or square aforesaid; southerly, in the rear by an alley; easterly, on one side, by lot No. 158, and on the westerly side, by lot No. 161; containing in breadth in front, 25 feet 4 inches; in the rear, 25 feet 1 inch; in length, on the easterly side 76 feet, and on the westerly side 78 feet, be the same more or less —the said premises being now known as No. 197 Chatham-st. The lease of the above premises is for the term of 21 years, from the 1st day of May, 1837, at the yearly rent of $300, payable quarterly, and also taxes and assessments. The lease provides for a renewal of 21 years, at such rent as may be agreed upon between the parties, and in case of disagreement, the rent is to be fixed by disinterested persons, and is not to exceed 5 per cent. on the appraised valuation of the lot only. The lease also provides for three additional renewals, or payment for improvements. The premises are subject to a lease, which will expire May 1, 1859, at a rent of $1,400 per annum. Dated May 27, 1857.

METROPOLITAN BANK, New-York, May 18, 1857.
AT A MEETING OF THE BOARD OF DIrectors of the METROPOLITAN BANK, held on the 8th inst., it was resolved to increase the Capital Stock, $1,000,000; say, from $3,000,000 to $4,000,000.
Subscription books will be opened at the Banking House, No. 108 Broadway, on the 1st day of July next, and remain open until the 10th of said month. Those holding stock at the close of business on the 25th of June next, will be entitled to subscribe at par, for said million of additional capital, and will receive one share of new stock for every three shares of old. They will also have the right to assign the privilege of subscribing, for which purpose a form will be furnished.
Shareholders will have the right to pay in full on the 1st day of July next; to such as do, there will be no charge of interest. Those who do not pay at that time, are required to pay 50 per cent. on or before the 15th of said July, and the remaining 50 per cent. on or before the 15th day of October next.
Interest at 7 per cent. per annum from the 1st day of July, will be added to all instalments paid after that day, in order to make all the payments equal to a full payment on the said 1st day of July.
For partial payments, scrip receipts will be issued; but whenever a shareholder shall pay the full amount due on his subscription, he shall be entitled, at once, to the usual certificate of full paid stock. All shareholders will have the benefit of the dividend which may be paid in January, 1858.
Shareholders at a distance, wishing to take the stock they will be entitled to, may make their subscriptions to the new stock by sending to this Bank, duly signed and witnessed, a power of attorney.
It is very desirable that such shareholders as intend to avail themselves of the opportunity to subscribe, or who wish to assign their rights to do so to some other parties, shall give notice of their intentions as early as the 1st of July, if practicable, but certainly by the 10th.
It will be necessary for parties to whom such rights shall be assigned, to appear at the Bank, in person, or by attorney, to sign the articles of the Association
GEORGE L. SENEY, Cashier.

SIX PER CENT. LOAN OF THE COMMONwealth of Massachusetts.—The Commissioners of the Sinking Fund of the Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company, by virtue of an Act of the General Court, hereby give notice that they will receive sealed proposals until the 20th inst., at noon, at the Office of the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, at the State House in Boston, for the purchase of the scrip of the Commonwealth of four hundred thousand dollars, payable July 1, 1857, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum, from 1st day of July, 1857, payable semi-annually on the first day of January and July, on the coupons attached to said scrip, at the Treasurer's Office in the city of Boston. A deposit of 10 per cent. of the amount of each proposal will be required on their opening, to insure final payment; the whole amount of the loan to be paid on or before the 29th inst. Proposals may be made for any part of the above loan, not less than five thousand dollars. They must specify the amount of premium offered, (more otherwise will be received,) and must also give the address of the party making the proposals, and be inclosed in an envelope marked "Proposals for Massachusetts State Loan," and be addressed to MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer and Receiver-General of the Commonwealth, at the State House, Boston. The right is reserved to reject all or any part of the proposals made.

MOSES TENNEY, Jr., Treasurer;	Commissioners of Sinking Fund.
GEO. L. PERKINS, Treasurer Nor. & Wor. Railroad Company.	Norwich and Worcester Railroad Company.

BOSTON, June 1, 1857.

EIGHT PER CENT. LAND GRANT FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS.—The Chicago, St. Paul and Fond du Lac Railroad Company proposes to sell to those holders their Eight per cent. 20 year Construction (Land Grant) Mortgage Bonds, of $1,000 each, of date May 1, 1857, and secured upon their entire Road and line of Road from Chicago to Lake Superior, and upon a million of acres of the grants of Public Lands from Congress, as made to this Company by the States of Wisconsin and Michigan.
Accompanying each Bond will be a Scrip Certificate, entitling the purchaser or his assigns, at his or their option, to ten shares, of $100 each, of Privilege Land Grant Stock, on electing, at any time within two years from June 1, 1857, to subscribe and pay ten per cent. of the par value thereof, the same never to be subject to any further assessments, but to be credited with proceeds of sales of lands until full paid, to share dividends and be entitled to vote per rata, as provided by said Company, and set forth in said Stock Privilege Certificate, and in their Circular to Stockholders of May 25, 1857.
The subscription price for said Bonds to be 90 per cent. their par value and accrued interest, payable 10 per cent. in hand, 10 per cent. on 1st July next, and 20 per cent. on each of the first days of August, September and October next, or as much sooner as parties may elect, at the office of the Company in New-York.
The subscription list will be opened at the office of the Company, No. 12 Wall-st., on MONDAY, the 8th inst., and will remain open till the 20th June inst.—Dated New-York, June 1, 1857.

THE STREET COMMISSIONER DIFICULTY.

ments under arms all night, and they would be at the disposal of the Recorder in the morning.

The Recorder then directed Deputy CARPENTER to report himself, with the force under his command, at his office, at 10 o'clock.

The Metropolitan Police force, which up to this time had been standing in front of the Recorder's office, now marched up Broadway to White street, where they were dismissed to their respective precincts. The crowd also dispersed, with the shouts of one party and the groans of the other.

Several arrests were made of disorderly persons in front of the Recorder's Office while these events were transpiring. Two of the arrested parties were taken before the Recorder, who committed them to the Tombs to answer the charges against them.

ALDERMAN BILLY WILSON.

An affidavit was also made before the Recorder against Alderman WILSON for being implicated—indeed for being foremost—in the riot, and the Recorder issued a warrant for his arrest.

A SPECIAL POLICE.

An indication of the strong public feeling of indignation and distrust that has been excited by the recent proceedings of the City authorities is furnished by the fact that upwards of 2,000 citizens of the highest respectability and social position have offered to enrol themselves into a special police, for the protection of the public weal, and the preservation of of the peace of the City. We may congratulate ourselves that the impulsee of the well-inten tioned of the community take this constitutional form, instead of running wild on vigilance committee ideas.

GOVERNOR KING.

It was currently reported, last night, that a telegraphic dispatch had been received from Governor KING announcing that he would be in the City to-day

THE MILITARY.

The operations of the military yesterday were conducted with a promptness, and quiet decision that reflect the highest credit not only on the officers but the men under their command. The speedy appearance of the 7th Regiment was no doubt the means of averting a serious conflict. Cartridge boxes and steel have a soothing effect on the pugnacious instincts of angry men.

The necessity for the cooperation of the military in support of the civil arm was anticipated. On Monday night the Generals and officers of the various corps held a meeting at the house of Gen. HALL and remained in readiness during the night, to act when the emergency required. But the clouds although gathering fast and fiercely marked no electricity until yesterday. It will be interesting to know how in cases of necessity the military is called called out. Being, in these cases merely a branch of the civil power, it acts of course under the direction of the recognized officer for the peace of the City. A requisition from the Commissioners of Police, the Mayor, Sheriff, Coroner or Recorder, is all the authority that is required. This is served on the Mayor-General, or in his advance on the oldest Brigadier. By the latter it is distributed to the Commandants of Regiments; thence through the proper officers to the rank and file, who assemble immediately at their drill rooms and await orders. This is the mild way of doing things, and under ordinary circumstances takes some little time—perhaps two or three hours. If it becomes necessary however to call out the military with extreme promptness, twelve strokes are sounded on any of the City Bells and instantly all the members of the military companies leave their occupations ann hasten to the drill-room. In a very short time six thousand men, completely armed and equipped, are ready for orders.

Major General SANDFORD "hath his quarrel right" and is more than "thrice armed," for he has requisitions from the Recorder, the Sheriff, the Commissioners and the Mayor. It is due to the latter official to state that he did not awake to the consciousness of the riot until he had been secured as the cause of it—until he was under arrest.

At this moment the Seventh Regiment, attired in its newest uniform, and additionally buoyant from the prospective pleasure of an excursion to Boston—an excursion on which they have expended, it is said, upwards of $10,000—marched gallantly down Broadway on the way to the steamer. Its festive career was at once arrested, and the men proceeded to the City Hall. They were informed of the unpleasant duty that devolved upon them, and without a murmur, relinquished their hopes of Boston glory. The presence of this splendid corps, coming as it did with perfect instantaneousness, had the most salutary effect on the rioters. Had it been delayed for an hour or two there would have been, without doubt, a fierce and sanguinary battle. As it was, they eclipsed the angry stars, some of whom gazed out of the open windows of the City Hall with most woe begons faces. The Eighth regiment was also bound for Boston, but when their services were required, acted with cheerfulness, notwithstanding some slight difficulty with an officer at the outset.

A volley from the 7th Regiment, situated as it was, would not have been attended with very fatal consequences, for it is doubtful if the entire body possessed a single ball-cartridge at the moment of its grand demonstration in front of the City Hall. But they were not long before they obtained an ample supply. Major-General SANDFORD sent an order to Commissariat-General WARD for ammunition, and that officer immediately dispatched Major ANTHON and Major SMITH, with 100 rounds of grape and canister, and 6,000 rounds of ball-cartridge.

The following regiments were also called out: The 4th, under Col. Hinken; the 5th, under Col. Schwartzwalder; the 6th, under Co'. Pinkney; the 8th, under Col. Lyons; the 9th, under Col. Pitkin; the 11th, under Col. VAN BUREN; the 12th, under Col. Cocks; the 71st, under Col. Vosburgh; the 55th, under Col. Segal. These regiments were quietly secreted in the various arsenals and drill-rooms of the City, under arms, and ready for instant action. Four or five of the number remained under arms all night.

It is, of course, hoped that all further occasion for the cooperation of the military is at an end; but in case this hope should prove delusive, ample provision has been made for the preservation of the public peace, and the prompt suppression of any further violence. ¶ The 5th Regiment and a company of Light Artillery are ordered to be under arms this morning by 8 o'clock; also, the 7th and 71st Regiments at 9 o'clock. Peaceable people need labor under no uneasiness whilst their houses and families are protected by a citizen soldiery so prompt and competent as that which New-York is proud to call its own.

The music store of WM. HALL & SON, being near to the scene of action, was selected as the head-quarters of Major-General SANDFORD, Brigadier-General HALL, &c. It presented an appearance strongly in contrast with its useful peaceful aspect. The military chieftains, instead of writing their dispatches on the tops of drums in the old-fashioned way, used the most beautiful pianos for desks. Who can tell what gentle influence may have been exercised by this simple circumstance!

Mr. Commissioner DRAPER, General NYE, Dr. QUACKENBOSS, and other notabilities were in eager consultation until a late hour.

As late as 10 o'clock the different military companies continued to arrive at the arsenal, corner of Elm and White streets. At 9½ P. M. there were three Regiments, the 6th, 11th, and 12th, assembled, numbering over 1,000 men; the 55th Regiment having already been dismissed. The 10th, 11th, 12th, and 69th Regiments of the 4th Brigade, were dismissed and ordered to report at 12 o'clock to-day, in fatigue uniform.

The promptness with which the order was obeyed by the various Regiments, was a suprise to themselves as well as to the citizens.

Company F, Captain MCMAHON, received the order to assemble at 5½ o'clock—at 6 o'clock they were all mustered, and all animated by a common impulse to obey the ordere of their Chief.

General YATES' Brigade, of the 4th Regiment, in command of Col. KINCKEN, and Lieut. Col. TELLER, were promptly out in full force.

The first troop of National Guards, Capt. LYTLE, did not receive the order until 6 o'clock. At 8 o'clock they were all mustered. At 9 o'clock they were dismissed, with orders to report to Maj. General SANDFORD at 9 o'clock this morning. The City Guard, of the Sixth Regiment, Capt. WM. H. HALLICK, received the order about 4½ o'clock, and at 6½ o'clock they were at the Armory ready for duty.

The Sixth Regiment Governor's Guard, under command of Col. PINCKNEY, received an order from Maj. General SANDFORD at 5:30 P. M. They were all assembled at their Armory, in Centre Market, 200 strong, at 8 o'clock.

One company of this Regiment, consisting of 30 men, were detained for special duty at the Arsenal during the night.

The 12th Regiment, under command of Colonel COCKS, mustered 160 men upon one hour's notice. This is as many as were mustered at the last parade. The officers stated that this regiment would obey, without faltering, the command of their superiors. They had nothing to do but to obey orders, and they would do it, to protect the Laws and the peace of the City.

UNAVAILING SEARCH FOR MR. DEPUTY TURNER.

After the closing up of the Street Commissioner's office Mr. TURNER, the Deputy Commissioner, left the Hall of Records, and was not seen about there or the City Hall during the remainder of the day. It was rumored that his had received intimations of an intention to arrest him, and that he had absented himself from view accordingly. It was certain that a number of his own friends, who were looking for him, could not find him. When the warrant for his arrest was sent to the Sheriff the letter made a personal search for him at his house and elsewhere, but did not succeed in getting him or learning his whereabouts. A depnty, who made a subsequent search of several hours, had met with no better success up to a late hour last evening.

INCIDENTS.

While the Metropolitan Police were valiantly charging up the City Hall steps one of them, an old man, was felled to the ground by heavy blows on the head from the "locusts" of the municipal force, one of whom continued to pound him as he lay almost insensible on the steps. SAMUEL MACKAY, a member of the Third Ward Metropolitan force rushed in to protect his comrade, and while in the act of raising him he was beaten badly on the back and stabbed in the left breast. The weapon passed through his thick coat, vest, shirt and under-shirt, just grazing the skin enough to bleed.

Foremost among those who fought in defence of the stoop against the Metropolitan force was SAMUEL MYERS, one of the assistant Clerks to the Board of Aldermen.

Two loafer-like individuals, each carrying a rifle, and a band on his hat, inscribed "No King," were inclined to create a disturbance but they were promptly locked up.

When Mr. CONOVER sat at the desk in the outer room of the Street Commissioner's Office, he was accosted by Dr. BRUENNINGHEISEN with, "Good morning, Mr. Street Commissioner; stand your ground, Sir. If you need assistance to sustain you in your position, say the word, and in less than an hour, 500 of your German fellow-citizens will lend you their aid."

Mr. CONOVER thanked the Doctor, and Capt. BENNETT ordered the latter to leave the room.

"Shall I leave, Mr. Street Commissioner?" asked the Doctor.

"Yes," replied Mr. CONOVER. "We had better act, for the present, quietly."

The Doctor retired, and anathamatizing the Mayor as he went.

The Metropolitan Police Commissioners were in session up to a late hour. Their office in White-street was beseiged by citizens through the afternoon, asking to be sworn in as special policemen, and a large number were added to the force. The Commissioners state that they could have had two thousand persons if necessary. They will continue to add to the force until they have enough to take care of the City without the aid of the military.

REPORT OF THE WOUNDED UP TO MIDNIGHT.

Dr. JONES, the surgeon who last visited the injured policemen, makes the following statement of their situation:

Officer GREEN is the most dangerously hurt of all the rest. He was dragged into the City Hall and beaten and stabbed after the fight. He had four severe wounds about the head, a very deep stab in the left arm, and was jumped upon in the face until shockingly mutilated.

Officers REILLY and HINTON, of the First Ward were not very badly hurt, being only bruised about head and face.

Officer SWAZEY, of the Third Ward, was very badly cut about the head and face; there was a profuse hemorrhage of the wound, and symptome of congestion of the brain. He is seriously injured. Officer MACKEY was cut in the left side by a knife, a gash four inches long having penetrated through his coat and under-clothing on the left breast, but has no serious flesh wounds; his head is cut, and his person kicked and bruised. Officers SLATER and PETIT, of the Fifth Ward, were slightly wounded in the head. BODINE and GOODELL have severe scalp wounds. STEPHEN B. SMITH is very seriously and dangerously cut about the head, with threatened congestion. Officer GREEN very badly cut about the head. Messrs. SMITH, GREER and SWAZEY are considered in a very dangerous situation. Officer LAFLIN, who was stabbed by the ice-pick, is recovering.

The nomination, by the Mayor, of CHARLES DEVLIN to the office of Street Commissioner, was made at five o'clock, when, without waiting for the indorsement of the Board of Aldermen, he was escorted to the office, and installed by Capt. BENNETT and his squad. He was, however, ratified by that Board. The office was then closed, locked, and Capt. BENNETT held the keys, and kept possession by a small force.

President Draper to the Citizens of New-York.

OFFICE OF THE METROPOLITAN BOARD OF POLICE,
NEW-YORK, Tuesday, June 16, 1857.

The unusual excitement now prevailing in this City, and the appearance of a military force to aid in the execution of the law, make an exposition of the circumstances which have led to such a state of things proper, if not necessary.

At about 11 o'clock A. M., this day, a warrant was sent to this office by the Recorder to be served upon Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, (Mayor of this City,) who, with others, was charged with inciting a riot. This warrant having been placed in the hands of Officer WALLING for service, about 2 o'clock P. M., a requisition came from the Recorder for fifty men to aid in the execution of the warrant, which Mr. WOOD refused to obey, and which he had resisted by force. This requisition being, of course, complied with, at about 3½ o'clock, information was received at this office from the Recorder, that the men placed at his command had proved insufficient to serve the process, and while ascending the steps of the City Hall, had been assaulted by an overpowering force placed there to protect Mr. WOOD against the service of the warrant, and claiming to be Municipal Policemen. The Recorder requested that as the civil force had proved insufficient to serve this process, the military should be called upon to protect them in the discharge of their duty, and to preserve the peace of the City.

Upon repairing to the scene of the riot, we found a great concourse of people, many of them in a state of tumultuous excitement, and about five hundred men armed with clubs, to resist the service of the process upon Mr. WOOD. Deeming that the peace of the City, the due service of process issued from our Courts of law, and the protection of property required the promptest and most decided measures, we at once exorcised the power conferred upon me by law, and issued an order to Major-General SANFORD to hold sufficient force in readiness to preserve the peace. He was in a position to comply with this order immediately, and did so. The Commissioners of Police have now at their disposal a force sufficient for that purpose. The City is now quiet, and the Commissioners are happy to state that hundreds of substantial citizens have offered their services as special policemen. A sufficient number of these have been accepted. Relying upon this indication of the feeling of the citizens of New-York, the Commissioners have confidence in their ability to secure preservation of order and the execution of the law. S. DRAPER, President Board of Police.

Proclamation to the People of New-York.

NEW-YORK, June 16—7 P. M.

As if the usurpers of your muncipal rights were not content with act after act of unjustifiable, illegal and tyrannical encroachments, they have this day attempted to take life in an effort to degrade you through my person. But for the efforts of myself and those under my command your streets would have been deluged with blood and your property destroyed.

In this emergency, and at this crises in the government of the City, I call upon you to remain calm—to observe the laws, to respect persons and property, and to avoid excitement and collision. Rest assured, as Chief Magistrate of New-York, clothed with ample power to preserve the peace, there is nothing to fear. I shall continue at my post, regardless of threats or illegal attempts to deprive me of the means of executing the laws. So far our people have borne with patience and without resistance these repeated insults and injuries. Let us continue in the same spirit, trusting to the courts and that higher authority of the franchise, which enables the American people, sooner or later, to rid themselves of insolent, corrupt or imbecile rulers. FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

Board of Aldermen.

CHARLES DEVELIN CONFIRMED AS STREET COMMISSIONER.

The Board of Aldermen met yesterday afternoon, at 5 o'clock, President CLANCY in the chair. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

The following communication was received from his honor the Mayor:

MAYOR'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, June 16, 1857.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: I nominate Charles Develin to the office of Street Commissioner, in place of Joseph S. Taylor, deceased. FERNANDO WOOD, Mayor.

Alderman BLUNT, of the Fifteenth Ward, said, in view of the excitement outside and the importance of the appointment, they should not proceed to consider this matter now. He thought this appointment belonged to the gubernatorial power under the circumstances. He quoted the Revised Statutes on the power of the Governor to fill vacancies in the event of the decease of the incumbents of public offices, and moved that the matter be referred to the Corporation counsel.

Alderman COULTER, of the Seventeenth Ward, said the matter should be acted on then. He did not care for the old statute laws. Put an end to the excitement now. Put a man in there who has got the nerve to exercise the functions of the office and put out all who have no right there. They were not to be coerced on this occasion. "Let us see," said he, "what Democrat will dare to falter now."

Alderman JACKSON, of the Twelfth Ward, did not know what the gentleman meant by "dare." They were there to do their duty without fear. He thought the Mayor and Aldermen had authority to fill the vacant office.

A motion to lay the previous question on the table was lost; 16 votes in the negative, 4 in the affirmative. The previous question was then put and carried; affirmative votes, 17; negative, 4.

The motion to confirm the nomination of Mr. Develin was carried, Alderman BLUNT calling for the Ayes and Noes. 17 votes in the affirmative, and Aldermen Fulmer, Owens, Valentine and Blunt, 4, in the negative.

Alderman FULMER, of the Sixteenth Ward, explained his reasons for voting in the negative. He had nothing against Mr. Develin personally, but he thought it would look like a farce to appoint so large a contractor over a bureau which had the giving out of such large contracts.

A communication was received from the Mayor nominating Peter Duffy to the office of Inspector of Vessels.

The reading of the report of the Committee of the Board of Councilmen on cleaning the streets was interrupted by a motion to suspend the reading and lay the report on the table. Alderman BLUNT called for the Ayes and Noes, and the motion was lost. The report was then read through, and the Aldermen concurred in it.

Alderman MCCONNELL, of the Thirteenth Ward, offered a resolution confirming a contract for street cleaning, which was carried.

Alderman MOSHEDON, of the Nineteenth Ward, offered a resolution to appropriate $500 to defray the expense of the funerals of Alexander F. Vache and Joseph S. Taylor. Adopted unanimously.

An invitation was received from the mechanics and working-men at the Navy Yard, Brooklyn, to be present at the presentation of a service of plate to J. McLeod Murphy, late engineer at the yard.

The Board then adjourned.

THE POLICE IMBROGLIO.

IN THE COURT OF APPEALS.

Before Honorable Judges Hiram Denio, Chief Justice, Alexander S. Johnson, George F. Comstock, Samuel L. Selden, John W. Brown, Alonzo C. Paige, William H. Shankland, and Levi F. Bowen.

Counsel for the Appellants—CHARLES O'CONOR and Judge EDMONDS.

And for the Respondents—Messrs. EVARTS and CUTTING.

ALBANY, Tuesday, June 16, 1857.

The People of the State of New-York, on the relation of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York, Plaintiffs and Appellants, vs. Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell and James S. T. Stranahan, Defendants and Respondents.

STATEMENT OF FACTS FOR THE APPELLANTS AND FOR THE RESPONDENTS—THE ARGUMENTS IN THE CASE ADJOURNED UNTIL TO-DAY.

The Court of Appeals met this morning in the Senate Chamber, instead of the room in which they usually transact their business, all of the Judges being present with the exception of Judge BROWN.

This cause arose on a quo warranto issued by the Attorney-General of this State, on the relation of the Mayor of the City of New-York, on which an injunction was granted by Judge ROOSEVELT, on the 25th of last April. To make the cause intelligible, we append a copy of the complaint:

The people of the State of New-York, plaintiffs, on the relation of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the City of New-York, by Stephen B. Cushing, the Attorney-General of said people, complain of Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell, and James S. T. Stranahan, defendants in this action, and show that at the time of the passage of a certain pretended act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, entitled "An Act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the Government thereof" on or about the 15th of April, 1857, the office of Police Commissioners, and member of the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New York was, and ever since hath been, and still is a public civil office of said City, the said Police Commissioners of right comprising such board, being three in number—that is to say, the Mayor, Recorder, and City Judge of the said City of New-York; and at the same time the office of head of the Police Department of the City of New-York was and ever since hath been, and still is, a public civil office in said City, of right belonging and appertaining to the office of Mayor of said City, and, at the same time, the office of head of the Police Department in the city of Brooklyn was, and ever since has been, and still is a public civil office in said city of Brooklyn; and the said plaintiffs further say that after that time, on the 23d day of April, 1857, at the City and County of New-York, Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell and James S. T. Stranahan, as a pretended Board of Police, under said pretended act, without any legal warrant, act or grant whatsoever, intruded into and usurped the said several offices of Police Commissioners and head of the Police Department in the City of New-York, and head of the Police Department in the city of Brooklyn, and also all the power and authority which before the passage of said pretended act of the Legislature of the State of New-York, was conferred by law upon the Board of Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York, or upon the said Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of the City of New-York, or upon the Mayors of the said cities of New-York and Brooklyn respectively, as the head therein, and which state or are in any way connected with the Police government, Police appointments, or Police discipline within either of the said cities, or within the counties of Kings or New-York, and still do so unlawfully usurp, hold and exercise the said several offices of Police Commissioners and head of Police aforesaid, and all the power and authority aforesaid, in contempt of the people of the State of New-York, and in violation of the constitution and laws of the said State, and to the prejudice of the said people. Wherefore the said plaintiffs pray that the said Simeon Draper, James Bowen, James W. Nye, Jacob Cholwell, and James S. T. Stranahan, that they and each of them, be ousted from the said office, from all the said power and authority aforesaid, and every part thereof; and that the said relator be declered entitled to hold use, exercise, and enjoy all the powers, rights, and privileges of the said office of Police Commissioners and head of the Police Department in the City of New-York, as he of right ought to have, hold, exercise, and enjoy the same, under the laws of the State of New-York existing and in force at the time first above mentioned; and that the said defendants pay the costs of this action; and that the said plaintiff may have such other, or further, relief, in the premises, or both, as may be granted. S. B. CUSHING, Attorney-General.

STATEMENT OF FACTS FOR APPELLANTS.

By chapter 315 of the laws of 1844, nearly all the offices connected with the police in the City of New-York, created by charter or statute, were abolished, and a new department of police established in their stead. The organization of this Municipal Police was modified in its minor details by subsequent acts. By the latest of these, enacted April 13, 1853, p. 440, the whole body, consisting of a Chief of Police, Captains, Lieutenants, Sergeants, Policemen and Doormen (art. 1, § 2) was placed in subordination to the Mayor of New-York as the Head of the Department. (Art. 2, § 1.) The power of appointment and removal as to all officers and members of this department was vested in a Board of Police Commissioners, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder, and City Judge. (Art. 3, § 1.) At all previous times, the police officers in New-York, as in all other parts of the State, were elected by the people of the vicinage, or appointed by some local authority.

Chapter 569 of 1857 is an act clothed with all the requisite forms of legislation, purporting to institute a new state of things. Its provisions are as follows: A "Metropolitan Police District" was formed, consisting of the counties of New-York, Kings, Westchester, and Richmond, and placed under the government of a Board of Police, seven in number, consisting of the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn, and five Commissioners to be triennially appointed by the Governor and Senate, (§§ 1, 2.) The powers of appointment and removal were vested in this Board, (§§ 6, 7.) Immediately on taking the oath of office, said Commissioners were to organize as a Board, (§ 3,) and from their first meeting they were invested with all the power and authority theretofore "conferred by law upon the Board of Police Commissioners of the City of New-York, or upon the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge of said City of New-York, and upon the Mayors of the cities of New-York and Brooklyn as the heads therein of the Police Departments of those cities," which related to or was in any way connected with the government, appointment, or disciplins of the police, &c. (sec. 31.) From and after such first meeting, all powers, &c, inconsistent with those thereby created were to cease, and all laws, &c, inconsistent with that act were repealed. (Secs. 33, 35.)

The moneys required to support this new civil force were to be raised, as theretofore, by the Supervisors of the respective counties, in proportions dependent upon the relative number of men employed in the respective counties; that subject also being regulated by the Common Councils or Boards of Supervisors. (Secs. 20, 6.) This police fund, however, was not to be directly disbursed by local officers, but was to be paid into the State Treasury, and thence drawn and applied to the payment of salaries, &c., by the (Metropolitan) Board of Police. (Sec. 27.)

A complaint against the defendants, in the nature of a quo warranto, was filed by the Attorney-General, setting forth the facts hereinafter mentioned. The defendants answered, substantially admitting the facts. The plaintiffs demurred. And judgment was rendered in favor of the defendants at Special Term.

On appeal to a General Term sitting in the first District, this judgment was affirmed.

The defendants having been appointed, commissioned and sworn into office in due form as Commissioners of Police of the Metropolitan Police District, in conformity with the act of 1857, held their first meeting, and organized as a Board of Police under said act, on the 22d day of April, 1857. They, thereupon, assumed the official government of the Police force in the City of New-York, and the offices and duties theretofore held and exercised by the Mayor as head of the Police, and the Mayor, Recorder and City Judge as Police Commissioners, and continued to hold, exercise and perform these offices and duties until the commencement of the action.

STATEMENT OF FACTS BY THE RESPONDENTS.

The relator, Wood, is Mayor of the City of New-York. By the tenth section of the Charter of 1849, (Laws of 1849, ch. 187,) an executive department known as the "Police Department," is provided as a part of the City Government, and the Mayor is made the head. By an act reorganizing the Police Department in the City and County of New-York, its administration is placed under a Board of Commissioners, consisting of the Mayor, Recorder, and City Judge (Laws of 1853, ch. 228). On the relation of Wood, claiming that the office of Police Commissioner, and member of the Board of Police Commissioners, is a "public civil office," and the office of head of the Police Department "is a public civil office," "of right belonging and appertaining to the office of Mayor," this action is brought against the defendants as having intruded into, and usurped the said offices, praying that they may show by what warrant they claim said offices, and that they may be ousted therefrom, and the relator be declared entitled thereto.

The defendants by their answer set up their appointment and induction into the of "Commissioners of Police for the Metropolitan Police District of the State of New-York," as created by the "Act to establish a Metropolitan Police District, and to provide for the government thereof," passed April 15, 1857, (Laws, 1857, ch. 569,) and deny the intrusion and usurpation complained of.

At the time of the framing and adoption of the present Constitution, the Police Establishment of the City of New-York existed and was administered under "An Act for the establishment and regulation of the Police of the City of New-York," passed May 7, 1844, as amended by an Act May 13, 1846, (Laws, 1844, ch. 315; Laws, 1846, ch. 302.)

Previous to these legislative establishments of an organized system of Police for the City, the Police powers and duties were distributed through various classes of officers, of more uncertain functions, and with no fixed subordination, created from time to time by special enactments of the Legislature, or under the general powers of the City Charters. The act of 1844 was the fundamental and originating source of the Police system of the City.

The act of 1853 first introduces the office, till then unknown in name or function, of "Police Commissioners" and "Board of Commissioners," and transfers the whole power of appointment and government of the police force from the charter functionaries of Mayor and Aldermen to this statutory Board. The acts of 1844 and 1846 were substantially (if not entirely) repealed by the act of 1853.

By the act in question, the Counties of New-York, Kings, Westchester and Richmond are constituted, for the purposes of the act, into one District, to be called "The Metropolitan Police District of the State of New-York."

Five Commissioners, deriving their appointment from the Governors, (by and with the consent of the Senate,) and the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn, ex-officio, form the Board of Police for the District. (Sec. 1.)

The power and duty of the Board extend to the maintenance and exercise of authority in all matters of police administration throughout the district. (Sec. 5.) Their Police force is to do duty in any part of the district, "without regard to residence or county lines." (Sec. 6.)

The members of this Police force "possess, in every part of the State, all the common law and statutory powers of constables, except for the service of civil process; and any warrant for search or arrest, issued by any magistrate of the State of New-York, may be executed in any part of this State," by any member of this Police force. (Sec. 8.)

All the Powers conferred by law on the Commissioners of Police of the City of New-York, on the Mayors of New-York and Brooklyn, and on the Aldermen of Brooklyn, are to cease upon the organization of this Board, and thereafter to be vested in such Board. (Sec. 31.)

The title and authority of the defendants, under the terms of the act of April 15, 1857, to exercise the functions complained of as usurpation of office, are unquestioned; and if that act be valid, it furnishes sufficient warrant for their exercise of those functions.

The plaintiffs have demurred to the defendants' answer, on the ground that the act set up is unconstitutional.

After ons or two trifling motions had been disposed of,

Mr. O'Conor rose and said: May it please the Court—In the case of the People of the State of New-York, against Simeon Draper, James Bowen and others, which I believe is No. 403 upon the Calendar, notice has been given on the part of the people of a motion to be made this morning to advance that cause to the earliest opportunity consistent with the opinions and views of the Court.

The Chief Justice—Has it not a preference from its character?

Mr. O'Conor—Yes, Sir; it is an action in the nature of a quo warranto presented by the Attorney-General in the name of the people.

The Chief Justice—It has a preference by statute, I believe.

Mr. O'Conor—I believe so. But of course your honors have control over the business of the Court. The counsel are here upon the other side, and I will, with the permission of the Court, move it when the motions are through. I would also inquire of the Court in reference to the time to be allowed in the hearing of the cause, and also as to the number of counsel to be heard.

Mr. Cutting—We desire to know whether the Court think this case should be argued by one or two counsel upon either side. This is a matter for the Court to determine. We want nothing more than the instructions of the Court about it. It is a matter that we will leave entirely to it.

The Chief Justice—Do you desire that two counsel may be heard on both sides?

Mr. Cutting—I have no very great desire about it.

Mr. O'Conor—My associate, Judge Edwards, and myself, are disposed to be heard, I believe. It will therefore not be disagreeable to us, if it be agreeable to the Court, that two counsel be heard on both sides.

Mr. Cutting—We are indifferent upon that subject, if your Honor please, at least as far as I am personally concerned. I am quite disposed to leave it to be argued by one on each side, or two on each side, just as the Court may see fit.

The Court—We will hear two counsel, in consideration of the importance of the case, and limit them to two hours each.

Mr. Cutting—Not to exceed four hours on each side?

The Court—Yes.

Mr. Evarts—I presume that counsel may divide their time between themselves, as they may deem expedient.

The Court—Certainly.

Mr. Cutting suggested that the Court should proceed with motions, and allow the argument in this cause to stand over until to-morrow morning, (the 16th instant,) to which the Bench assented, and it was adjourned accordingly.

☞ Judge BIRDSEYE, of the Kings County Supreme Court, rendered a decision Monday in the case of RICHARD S. ROBERTS against the Mayor, Aldermen and Commonalty of New-York, in which he denies the application for a modification of the injunction prohibiting the expenditure of the $10,000 appropriated to contest the validity of certain laws passed by the last Legislature respecting the City of New-York.

THE CIVIL WAR.

The Mayor still in the Sheriff's Keeping.

Eight Hundred of the Mayor's Policemen in the City Hall.

The Metropolitan Force increased to Nine Hundred.

FOUR REGIMENTS UNDER ARMS.

Fernando Wood Acknowledges the New Police, General Sandford assuring him that he must.

Hearing on the Habeas Corpus.

THE MATTER POSTPONED TO FRIDAY.

TWO STREET COMMISSIONERS ACTING.

ALDERMAN WILSON TO BE ARRESTED.

UNABATED EXCITEMENT.

THE MAYOR NOT YET BEFORE THE RECORDER.

Deputy Turner and Capt. Bennett give Bail.

GOVERNOR KING ARRIVES AT MIDNIGHT.

There was no more blood shed yesterday, nor rioting on account of Mayor Wood's resistance to the officers of the law. The excitement of the people was scarcely less, however, than on Tuesday. The Park was crowded soon after sunrise. The Police closely guarded the avenues to the City Hall throughout the day.

Governor KING, while in the procession at Charlestown, Mass., that went out to inaugurate the Warren Statue and celebrate the Battle of Bunker Hill, received a telegraphic despatch from President BUCHANAN, of the Police Commissioners, wheeling his horse out of line, he instantly rode to the depôt, and took the train for New-York. Here he arrived at a little past midnight, this morning, proceeded to the Astor House, where the Commissioners, General HALL, and a few others were in waiting.

The Governor expressed himself gratified on finding that quiet had been restored to the City at last. After a brief discussion of affairs the party sat down to dinner—where they still were when our paper went to press.

THE RETURN OF THE WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

At 10 o'clock Wednesday morning, the writ of habeas corpus issued Tuesday, to require the Sheriff to produce the body of FERNANDO WOOD at the office of the City Judge, in Chambers, was duly returned; but Mayor was not produced at the City Judge's office.

Judge RUSSELL, fearing an increase of the excitement, saw fit to alter the place of return for the writ, and the by the following order, selected the Mayor's office:

ORDER OF JUDGE RUSSELL.

Before the City Judge.

The People vs. Fernando Wood.—A habeas corpus having been allowed by me on the 16th day of June, 1857, returnable before me forthwith, and it having been represented to me that great public excitement exists in consequence of the arrest of the said Fernando Wood, he being the Mayor of the City and County of New-York, the said habeas corpus requiring the said Sheriff to produce the body of the said Fernando Wood at the office of the City Judge, No. 25 Chambers-street, in said City, said Sheriff having made return to said writ that he hath the said Fernando Wood in custody ready to be produced, and in view of the great public excitement in consequence of the said Sheriff to [illegible] the said Fernando Wood as directed in [illegible] I hereby adjourn the hearing upon said [illegible] to said writ to room No. 6 in the City Hall [illegible] said City forthwith, in pursuance of the direction of said writ, at which place I require the [illegible] Sheriff to produce before me the said Fernando [illegible].

A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.

NEW-YORK, June [illegible].

AT THE MAYOR'S OFFICE.

At a few minutes before [illegible] o'clock, District-Attorney, Mr. A. O. HALL, attended at the Mayor's office, in pursuance of the notice served upon him of the change of place. Mr. [illegible] found his passage objected to. He sent [illegible] his name by a man in citizen's clothes. Before [illegible] answer returned Mr. HALL attempted to [illegible] in and was repulsed. Soon, however, the answer came to admit, and he went in. Within the Mayor's outer office he found about 20 policemen. In the inner room were the City Judge, the Mayor, the Deputy Sheriff, G. G. BARNARD and Judge DEAN of counsel.

Mr. HALL immediately protested in warm terms against the hearing in this private room, claimed it was a public proceeding, spoke of the large force that was present, and the indecorum of a Judge sitting in the private office of the defendant thus surrounded, of his own difficulties in getting in, and demanded [illegible] adjourned to some more proper

Judge RUSSELL said if the District Attorney would evince the production of the defendant's body, so that he might go on with his duties as Mayor, he would adjourn it elsewhere. Mr. HALL suggested to the Court of Sessions room. The Mayor shook his head, but the Judge so adjourned it—to the Sessions room.

At the Court room he postponed the regular Calendar, and the argument was proceeding when Mr. HALL objected to the right of the City Judge to issue or hear a habeas corpus, arguing that the City Judge was created since the Code of Procedure and the New Constitution, and that no officer possesses the powers of a Supreme Court Commissioner except he were in being at the time of the New Constitution and Code. The Judge decided that he had jurisdiction.

ANOTHER CHANGE OF PLACE.

Judge RUSSELL adjourned the case to the Court of Sessions Room, where a formal hearing took place.

The following petition was put in by the Mayor's counsel:

PETITION FOR DISCHARGE FROM ARREST.

To Hon. A. D. Russell, City Judge of the City of New-York:

The petition of GILBERT DEAN shows that FERNANDO WOOD is restrained of his liberty by Captain WALLING or the Sheriff of New York, and that he is not committed or detained by virtue of any power issued by any Court of the United States, or by any Judge thereof. Nor is he committed or detained by virtue of the final judgment or decree of any competent tribunal of civil or criminal jurisdiction, or by virtue of any execution issued upon such judgment or decree; that the cause or pretence of such imprisonment, according to the best knowledge and belief of your petitioner, is that the Recorder of the City of New-York has issued a warrant charging that one DANIEL D. CONOVER has made complaint against your petitioner, CHARLES TURNER and JOHN W. BENNETT for inciting a riot in said City on the 15th and 16th of June last., and for assaulting the said CONOVER. Your petitioner further shows that said WOOD is the Mayor of the City of New-York, and was on said 15th of June, and that all the acts done by him were as Mayor of said City.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that the writ of habeas corpus issue directed to the said Sheriff, commanding him to return the body of him, the said FERNANDO WOOD forthwith, before your Honor. Dated the 16th day of June, 1857.

G. DEAN, City and County of New-York.

FERNANDO WOOD being duly sworn, doth depose and say that the facts set forth in the above petition, subscribed by him are true.

Sworn before me this 16th day of June, 1857.

A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.
G. DEAN.

ANSWER TO WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS.

The following answer was put in by Judge DEAN:

In force Hon. A. D. Russell, in the matter of the imprisonment of Fernando Wood.

The petitioner, GILBERT DEAN, for answer to the return of JAMES C. WILLET, Sheriff of the City and County of New York, says that the said Sheriff has no right longer to detain the body of the said FERNANDO WOOD on the said warrant, because he says that he is informed that the said warrant was issued on an insufficient affidavit—and further, that he is informed and believes that all the acts therein charged to have been done by said FERNANDO WOOD, were done by him while acting in his official capacity as Mayor of the City of New-York, and that the said FERNANDO WOON is not liable to arrest or imprisonment on account of his official acts, and your petitioner prays that the cause of said imprisonment may be inquired into by your Honor.

JUNE 17, 1857. GILBERT DEAN.

City and County of New-York, ss.—The above-named petitioner, being sworn, says that the above answer is true, except as to the matters therein stated on information and belief, and, as to those matters, he believes it to be true. G. DEAN.

Sworn before me, this 17th of June, 1857.

A. D. RUSSELL, City Judge.

The District-Attorney, examining the document attentively for a moment, said: "I shall accept this, as in law I think I am justified in doing, as a demurrer; it sets forth no new facts, and sets up that all the acts done by Mr. WOOD were in his capacity as Mayor, in which I join issue."

Judge DEAN—Then the District-Attorney admits all the facts stated as true in the return.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—No, Sir, I do not.

Judge DEAN wanted the demurrer in writing.

Judge RUSSELL—An oral demurrer is sufficient for the present as all the facts in the case are well known.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—Then put his argument in writing, which is given elsewhere.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY'S DEMURRER.

The District-Attorney immediately put in the following demurrer:

I join in the above demurrer, so deeming it in law, and ever in negative terms:

1. That the affidavit is not insufficient.
2. That the acts, whether done in any capacity, are subjects of arrest in law.
3. That the privilege as Mayor does not, in law, avail the defendant in the warrant annexed, or in the acts for which it issued.

A. OAKEY HALL, District-Attorney.

Judge DEAN had engagements at the Surrogate's office, in the Burdell case, and asked a postponement of the case until morning, as it was now reduced to a few simple law points. The District-Attorney opposed the adjournment of the case upon any plea whatever, except it were for a half hour or an hour, to allow the learned counsel to prepare: the case possessed momentous interests as it affected the peace of the City. Its first Chief Magistrate was under arrest for a felony, and had set the example of open resistance to the service of a legal process by officers of the law. He could not consent to the adjournment of the case.

Judge RUSSELL inquired of Judge DEAN how soon he could be ready, who answered he would go on at 2 o'clock.

Judge R. to District-Attorney—If you say so, then Mr. Hall, we will defer the hearing until 2 o'clock—which was agreed to.

Judge DEAN, with some warmth, then said: "It is unjust to FERNANDO WOOD, as well as to the Chief Magistrate of the whole people, to allege, as the learned gentleman had done, that this warrant was issued for a felony—it was a misdemeanor. (The Judge—A misdemeanor.) It was unjust, he repeated, to make this charge. Had it been issued for a felony, he would have been the last man to resist the service of the warrant.

By whom was this warrant attempted to be served? By a discharged and a disgraced policeman, whom the Mayor could not recognize as an officer, &c.

Mr. HALL—This is, of course, merely in the way of personal explanation, and has no bearing upon the case. He had seen the warrant issued for felony, and may have confounded the two. The Court was then adjourned by the Crier to 2 o'clock P. M.

RETURN OF THE HABEAS CORPUS.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The proceedings of the Court of Sessions were resumed at 2 o'clock.

Considerable excitement prevailed in the vicinity, occasioned by a rumor that Mayor WOOD would be brought up for examination in charge [illegible]. This excitement was greatly increased shortly before the opening of the Court by the appearance of Major-General SANFORD [illegible] Park. The General being, as the present [illegible], the most important man in the community, was the object of much popular attention, and [illegible] his way towards Centre-street followed by a crowd of people. When it was known that District-Attorney Hall had waived the attendance of the Mayor, all the proceedings before the Judge lost their savor, and, instead of a crowded Court, there were merely a sprinkling of people of a legal turn of mind and a host of reporters.

JUDGE DEAN'S ARGUMENT.

Mr. Dean, addressing the Court, said: If your Honor please, the Mayor of the City of New-York is now before your Honor, on a petition for his discharge from arrest on a criminal warrant. The charge against him was read at the opening of the proceedings this morning. It was substantially that on the 15th and 16th of the present month he had incited a riot, and had assaulted one Daniel D. Conover. The answer to that charge was and is, first, that the affidavit on which the warrant was granted was utterly insufficient for the issuing of any criminal process; and, secondly, that as matter of fact, that whatever Mayor Wood did in the premises was done by him as the chief magistrate of this City.

At the time that that answer was put in, owing to the state of affairs round the City Hall, neither the Mayor nor myself were able to communicate, and we had to act on information and belief, as to the contents of the affidavits, regarding what is charged against the Mayor.

The Mayor informed me that from the time he had reached the City Hall in the morning of yesterday, and on the morning of the day before, until the time that the attempt was made to arrest him, he had not left the apartment set apart for him by the authorities; that all he had done had been done by him in the exercise of his official capacity as Mayor, and that he had not been [illegible] (or the reverse, as he may be considered) of seeing Daniel D. Conover.

Believing then that Mr. Conover swore to the truth—not supposing that perjury had been employed as one of the instruments to degrade the Chief Magistrate of this City,—we put in as one of the returns of the Sheriff, that the affidavit on which the warrant had been issued by his personal and political opponents—by the men who are willing, for the purpose of stabbing him, to destroy law and order,—that that affidavit was insufficient.

Believing, I say, that perjury had not been employed, we stated in our answer to the return of the Sheriff, that the affidavit in which Fernando Wood was charged with inciting a riot, was charged with having assaulted Daniel D. Conover, without having seen him—that this affidavit was insufficient to warrant the arrest of any citizen, much less the arrest of a man intrusted by your City Charter, and by every charter of this City for the last hundred years, with the execution of the law. Since coming into Court this time I have, for the first, seen this affidavit—I have read it—and all that was sworn to on information and belief can now be sworn to in positive language, and will be so adjudicated by your Honor in the decision of this case, and by every Court in which this thing called an affidavit can ever be brought. I say that I have now read it, and the only allusion made in this whole affidavit to Fernando Wood is this: Mr. Conover claims that the "King," (and it is almost a century since our fathers said that they had no King,)—Mr. Conover says that the "King" of this City—an instrument to deprive citizens of their rights of self government—has appointed him to a responsible office here, without consulting those whose interests are at stake. Lest there should be some mistake about this jewel—this jewel, I say, of a judicial proceeding, that could only originate in the muddy corner of Chambers and Centre streets—lest there should be some mistake about it, I beg leave to read to your Honor, as part of my argument, this affidavit, to show that we were right in our information and belief that there was no sufficient affidavit on which to warrant the issuing of this process:

"Daniel D. Conover, of said City, being sworn, saith that he is the Street Commissioner of the City of New-York."

Here he swears to a matter of law, because we say that he is not such Street Commissioner, and if your Honor should now send over you would find Mr. Devlin not only appointed by the Mayor and Common Council, but de facto Street Commissioner.

However Mr. Conover is not to blame for swearing to what his lawyers tell him.

District Attorney—Mr. Devlin was not such when the affidavit was made.

Mr. Dean—I think he was; but that is a matter of law; well the affidavit proceeds:

"Having been duly appointed such by the Governor of this State upon the decease of Joseph S. Taylor, the late Street Commissioner; that his apartments consist of four rooms in the Hall of Records, in said City, and that James C. Willet is the Sheriff of said City and County, and that on the 15th day of June, 1857, while deponent was peaceably seated in his said apartments, the said Willet entered the same; that at that time several men were stationed in front of one of the rooms before mentioned, connecting with the room in which deponent was sitting, and on deponent's attempting to enter said room, they refused to permit him to do so, alleging that they had been deputized to act as Deputy Sheriffs by the said Willet, and were directed by him to prevent deponent from entering said room; that the said Willet informed deponent that they had been so deputized, and that they had received from him such orders; that said Willet, in deponent's presence, directed said men to prevent deponent's entrance into said room; and that he subsequently sent other deputies to remain in deponent's office, as deponent believes, to embarrass and annoy him in the prosecution of his duties as Street Commissioner.

Deponent further said, that subsequently, and on the same day, the deputies so placed in deponent's office by the said Willet, ordered deponent to leave his said office, and that, thereupon, one John W. Bennett, aided and assisted by several other men unknown to deponent, who acted under his direction, seized deponent forcibly by the collar and by his arm, and on defendant's attempting to defend himself, struggled violently with him, hurting his arm and neck, and otherwise bruising and injuring him, and forcibly ejecting him from said apartment."

Thus far we hear nothing about Fernando Wood, but now comes the allegation:

"That as deponent has been informed by the persons so assaulting him, and verily believes, all the persons committing the said assault acted by the directions of Fernando Wood, Mayor of the said City, who ordered said assault to be made upon deponent while in the peaceable prosecution of his duty."

That is the only charge in this entire affidavit affecting him, and I will not occupy your Honor's time by reading the rest. Not only is this the only charge against Fernando Wood, but the only allusion to him in this entire affidavit; that some persons who took Mr. Conover by the neck and hurt it; who forcibly ejected him from the place where he had been put by some irresponsible persons; that these persons told him that Fernando Wood directed it. He did not see Fernando Wood—he did not speak to him. Fernando Wood was nowhere in the neighborhood. He does not even tell the Recorder that the Hall of Records was in the same county that Fernando Wood was when the assault was committed on him. He does not charge a riot in this indictment—merely an assault and battery—and that assault and battery, he says, was committed by persons other than Fernando Wood.

We say, therefore, that on the first point of our answer, that this warrant was issued upon an insufficient affidavit, we are right, because there is no pretence that Fernando Wood was present, and there is no evidence that Fernando Wood ordered it.

Mr. Conover says that he was told by the persons who did it that Fernando Wood, the Mayor of New-York, ordered them to do it. He does not name who told him so. We say, then, in behalf of the person who is detained on criminal process, that this affidavit is insufficient; and I ask your Honor—I ask those who represent the people, and who have not come here to-day, if they discharge their duty in behalf of the public, for the purpose of imprisoning any citizen without authority of law,—I ask them if the liberty of the citizen is so cheap, that a man, whether he occupy the position of Mayor, or be the humblest citizen in the country,—if he is to be deprived of his liberty on a statement like this;—that somebody, without saying who,—without calling on that somebody,—has said that somebody else told him to commit a crime? That is the point.

Suppose a burglary was committed in this City, and the burglar was arrested in the act, and he should say that Fernando Wood or John Smith told him to commit this burglary, I ask if Fernando Wood or John Smith could be arrested, or held, on any such affidavit as that? And yet that is the testimony—that is the evidence, under oath—on which Fernando Wood was arrested by the Recorder of this City. There is no pretence that he himself committed any act—no pretence that any person unconnected with the act itself had said that he had directed it—no pretence that there was any joint action—nothing but merely that the persons who did the act said that the Mayor told them to do it. That is the charge and affidavit on which the Recorder of the City has issued his warrant.

Ah! Sir, I do not mention half the truth, when I say has "issued his warrant," because I ought to allude to the fact that he issued his warrant at the time and on the occasion when it was issued!

There is Lynch law in California and in some other places; but here in this great city, with this vast population,—at a time when there are two bodies claiming to be the Police force of the city, and each claiming to have the right to protect the lives and property of citizens;—I say, at such a time, for the Recorder, on such an affidavit, issue a warrant not only against a citizen, but to issue it against the Chief Magistrate of the city, and to deprive him of his liberty, is an act which, if it does not receive, deserves impeachment! It is an act which was done with the design and for no other purpose than to incite a riot; and which would have had the effect that was designed by its author, only that Fernando Wood, the Chief Magistrate of the city, and those who acted under his directions, were moderate, and were [illegible] that the law only should be executed [illegible] and that [illegible] under these circumstances [illegible] granted in discharging the defendant from arrest, or the ground first named—the insufficiency of the affidavit.

Now, on the other point, as I desire to hear what may be said on the other side, before arguing it—I propose merely to state the law, as we understand it, I propose to state it, not merely for the purpose of this argument and for the purpose of this proceeding, but I want to state it for the purpose of clearing up and dispelling and correcting a misapprehension that has gone out in the public mind, that Fernando Wood claims to be exempt from arrest if he has committed a crime, and that he is exempt from arrest in a civil process. There is no such claim advanced by him—no such pretence made. We claim merely that we are not liable to arrest on this process, for the acts here charged and on the facts here admitted. If Fernando Wood, as an individual, has committed a crime, he is, like every other citizen, subject to arrest. If he has done anything which subjects him to arrest in a civil process, he is as liable to arrest as any other individual in the community, and will be as quickly submissive to the law as any other citizen. But, as the Chief Magistrate of this City, in the discharge of his duty, he is not only exempt from arrest on an order issued by the Recorder for any act as Mayor, but he is exempt from presentment or indictment by the Grand Jury. If Daniel D. Conover, or any other man, chooses to usurp any of the offices of this City, and Fernando Wood, as head of the Government, tells the Chief of Police to put the man in possession who is entitled to the office, he is exempt from arrest. If he act improperly, or exceed his authority, there is a right of appeal, and his proceedings can be supervised.

I will not cite authorities, but allude only to the Charter which was smuggled through that Legislature which will be as infamous as the celebrated Rump Parliament in the time of Cromwell, to show that the Mayor is exempt from indictment for any act he does by virtue of his office. The 49th Section of the Charter expressly excepts the Mayor, Counsel to the Corporation and Comptroller, from those officers whom the Grand Jury may present and indict for any official misconduct. We say that the Mayor cannot be presented, indicted, or arrested by any officer for his official conduct. If he, in the discharge of his duty as Mayor, should order a man to be shot down, he cannot be indicted for it.

Now, your honor, the question is one in which Fernando Wood is not the only person interested—it is a question which concerns the social order of this City and every city in the Republic.

Counsel concluded by recapitulating his points, and contending that to subject the Mayor to arrest, would take away all discretion from him, and render him powerless in fulfilling the duties of his office.

THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY'S REPLY.

The District-Attorney, in reply, said: If your honor pleases, it might personally very much gratify me to follow the learned gentleman who has just taken his seat, outside of the record in this case; it might gratify my professional vanity to extemporize a reply to the many considerations he has thrown out—to follow him, in behalf of your coördinate Judge, your associate, whose office has been so invidiously spoken of before you; but, Sir, standing here as a sworn public officer, at a time when no appeal should be made in the slightest degree to the passions or the prejudices of an audience, (for in law it is considered a Judge can never be impressed by them, and therefore to urge them before a Judge is, I think, at all times a breach of professional etiquette,) at such a time I shall not do so. I can only regret that the kind courtesy of your Honor should have permitted my friend on the other side to speak of a writ bearing on it the imprimatur of a Judge of this Court, as coming from the "muddy corner of Chambers and Centre streets." No, Sir! I will rely on the dignity of my position and of your Honor's, and although he whose acts I am called on to defend may be obnoxious to the charge of "a petty-larceny Judge," I know him only as a magistrate and officer of the law. I shall, therefore, in this matter, simply confine myself to a strictly legal line of argument. I represent the people of the State of New-York, according to the notice which has been sent to me under the statute, and am uninstructed, except so far as I have derived aid from the learned gentlemen (Messrs. Field and Noyes) who are associated with me. But I cannot help stating my satisfaction in behalf of your Honor, as judge, of myself as officer and of the people whom I represent, that by the arrangements which your Honor are pleased to make, I am here in a public, open manner, unawed by power, unfettered by anything which might look like menace or threat to any one—be he judge, or District Attorney, or any officer in the solemn discharge of his duty.

With these observations, which I think it necessary to make, I come to answer the few propositions which have been made before your Honor, as tending to show that you should discharge the individual (not the officer) who is before you on this charge, and whose attendance I have waived. The Mayor is not before you on a commitment. That is one of the errors which my learned friend has fallen into. There has been no examination of witnesses after an arrest—no assignment of probable cause, under the seal of the magistrate—not even a temporary commitment, nor a jurisdiction over the person acquired by the magistrate who issued this paper. The intercepting of the order by your habeas corpus has prevented this, and there is, therefore, simply a warrant of arrest on which your Honor is to pass. Now it is not complained that there is any insufficiency in the warrant. With or without a seal it is sufficient. There is no pretence that the gentleman who issued it is not a magistrate—no pretence that the crime charged on the face of the warrant is not an offence of which the law has cognizance. My learned friend has fallen into error when he supposes it necessary by the law of the State that a formal affidavit in writing should precede the warrant of a magistrate for any offence. The statute states that a magistrate may grant a warrant on discretion in two cases: first, where he has ocular demonstration of an offence or crime, and secondly, where there is mere verbal intelligence, on which he relies that the offence or crime has been committed—even when the person bringing it makes his statement on information and belief, and without specifying except in general terms, what the offence is. Your Honor will see that such a discretion is absolutely necessary to give the common law vitality, for the law supposes emergencies, when the warrant cannot be preceded by an affidavit in writing, or the delay consequent on an examination as to whether the evidence in the written affidavit is sufficient to sustain the warrant, and, therefore, discretion is vested in magistrates to issue a warrant based on information and belief.

Your Honor then perceives that we come to contemplate the warrant itself, before the magistrate has acquired jurisdiction; and all you have to inquire into, in my opinion, is, whether on the face of the warrant there is probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed,—probable cause to believe that the person named in the warraot has been guilty of the offence charged, and whether the warrant is sufficient to authorize the officer in whose hands it is to take the party named therein before the magistrate issuing it, to be by him held to bail or discharged,—and not discharged by another magistrate's intercepting that warrant.

To maintain the first subdivision of my proposition: that the insufficiency of the affidavit cannot be urged, because it is not necessary that any evidence in writing should precede a warrant; it may issue on information and belief for the purpose of inquiry, I will give your honor authority——

Judge Russell—I have no doubt on the correctness of that proposition.

Mr. Dean—But it must be on oath.

Judge Russell—There is no doubt that a magistrate may issue a warrant when he has ocular demonstration, or on the statement of a citizen, either under oath or not. I have examined the question, and my mind is made up on those two points.

District Attorney—I will then merely refer to an authority on that point. The People vs. Hicks.—(15th Barbour, 153.)

After some further remarks on this point, still further enforcing his views, the District Attorney took up the second point of his argument, viz: That to say the Mayor cannot be indicted for any act done in his official capacity, is a monstrous proposition, untenable by argument and unsupported by authority.

It is laid down in the elementary books that "If a public officer intrusted with definite powers to be exercised for the benefit of the community, wickedly abuses, or fraudulently exceeds them, he is punishable by indictment, though no injurious effects result to any individual from his misconduct. The crime consists in the public example in perverting those powers to the purposes of fraud and wrong which were committed to him as instruments of benefit to the citizens, or safety to public rights." (Wharton's Cr. Law, p. 885.)

The evil, say the elementary books, consists in the public example. There was the answer to the argument on the other side; for that officers were not indictable at common law for any act done in their official capacity, would be such a monstrous proposition that, if true, we might shut up our constitutions, bar our temples of justice, pull down the flag of liberty, and forever bid justice banish herself from a republic or limited monarchy. The learned District-Attorney continued to argue that the official character of the Mayor carried with it no exemption from responsibility for his acts, unless he could show that he had not exceeded his powers. When an officer exceeded his duty, the remedy against him was two-fold—first as an individual, and secondly as an officer—he was amenable as an officer and as a man. Now, if, on the theory of the other side, we were to punish him as an individual, and while suffering imprisonment for his offence, continue him as an officer, it would a monstrous, and a great political wrong. Were we on the other hand to punish him by deprivation of office, but still allow him (on proof of a criminal offence) to walk abroad in the community, it would be a gross moral wrong from which [illegible]

[illegible] Counsel cited the case of a Judge in one of the English Colonies who was indicted, tried, and executed for murder, for exceeding his authority in ordering the whipping of a man, who died under the sentence. He also called the attention of the Court to the fact that the very same plea set up by Mayor Wood's Counsel had been urged on behalf of Charles I., of England, but was overruled.

What, continued the District Attorney, do we claim on behalf of the people of the State of New-York? First, as to our rights; second, as to the remedy. The legal right of the Magistrate to issue the warrant is, I believe, not objected to. He is arrested under a warrant, and while in obedience to the statute he is about being taken forth before the Magistrate, your Honor is applied to for a writ of habeas corpus, which you must grant under an extreme penalty. You grant it, and it then becomes incumbent on my learned friend who seeks the discharge of this man, first to impeach the warrant. The moment the warrant is shown to be legal on its face, your Honor's duties are at an end. A great deal of this is addressed to your discretion, and I suggest that where a warrant comes from a coördinate Judge, you will not step in and say that this valid warrant is insufficient, or that you will take bail from the party; for if so, to-morrow the same thing might be done by another Judge, if discharging your duty you should issue a warrant, say, against myself. I suggest that if you deem there is not cause to dismiss the defendant on this writ of habeas corpus, there your duty ends, and you cannot bail the defendant, for the reason that the writ of habeas corpus, while it gives you jurisdiction of the body, does not give you jurisdiction of the subject-matter of the warrant, and except you have concurrent jurisdiction of both the subject-matter and the person, you cannot take bail.

I have performed my duty, and I have only to say that while, on one the hand, the liberty and rights of citizens are to be carefully guarded, yet it well behooves a judge, in days when it is allowed at all events that judicial jurisdiction is taking hold of the Common and Statute law, to show that the day will never come in this Republic when, as between two judges of a coördinate jurisdiction, there will be a judicial usurpation on one hand or the other: but that he who first requires jurisdiction, and has a right to it, should continue to act in the matter according to the strict letter of the law, as his duty calls him.

Mr. Dean replied at some length, recapitulating and enforcing his former arguments. He concluded by saying: We have applied to your Honor, as one of the Judges of this City, in a crisis of great public moment. We have applied to you in this case for the purpose of preserving life and the public peace. We have confidence in the judiciary and in its integrity, and we believe that this case will be decided by your Honor in such a manner that the people will be proud to rally around that judiciary which is the last resort in all cases where the rights or liberty of citizens are attacked. I appear, not alone for Mayor Wood, as the Chief Magistrate of this City—not alone for Fernando Wood as an individual, but as the representative of individual liberty against the attacks of personal malice and individual hatred, conveyed through the corrupt channels of official power.

Judge RUSSELL said that in this case he would take time to prepare his decision, and would in the meantime continue the custody of the Mayor in the Sheriff. If he had time to prepare it by 3 o'clock to-day, he would deliver his decision at that hour; if not, on Friday.

The following order was then entered on the back of the writ of habeas corpus:

"The further hearing is adjourned to Thursday, June 18, at 3 o'clock P. M., in the room of the Court of General Sessions, at which time and place the Sheriff of the County will produce the prisoner, unless the same be waived, and until then and further orders, let the custody be and continue with the Sheriff of the County.

JUNE 17, 1857 A. J. RUSSELL, City Judge.

On the adjournment to June 18, at 3 o'clock, I waive the necessity of the personal appearance of the defendant. A. OAKEY HALL, Dist. Atty."

AT THE RECORDER'S OFFICE.

There was quite a large gathering all the morning in the vicinity of the Recorder's office in Chambers-street, and the Park was filled with men, all discussing the condition of the City with more or less earnestness, and anxiously awaiting the appearance of the Mayor, on his way to the Recorder's office. The main room of the office was closed until near 11 o'clock, while the Recorder was consulting with D. DUDLEY FIELD, Esq., WILLIAM E. NOYES, Esq., Gen. SANFORD and others.

In consequence of Judge RUSSELL's having postponed the return of the writ of habeas corpus of Mayor WOOD until 2 o'clock in the afternoon, a procedure of the City Judge that created much astonishment, as it is a departure from precedent—it being customary for proceedings on writs of habeas corpus to take precedence of all other business, while Judge RUSSELL has preferred to sit first in the Court of Sessions, some new action was deemed necessary, and Deputy CARPENTER was sent to the Mayor to see whether he would obey the warrant.

At noon Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER came from the Mayor to the Recorder and told him that he had been to the Mayor with a warrant for his arrest: that the Mayor told him that he did not recognize his authority as a police officer, and should not go with him. Deputy CARPENTER said the Mayor desired him to return that answer to the Recorder as his official one. "The crowd," said Mr. CARPENTER, "that surrounds the Mayor is so large that it would be folly for the force now at my command to attempt the Mayor's arrest, and many would be seriously injured if not killed, should it be attempted. However, I am willing to try, if I am so directed."

The Recorder said he would send to the Metropolitan Police Commissioners and inquire what their force was, and if it was sufficient, to make the arrest without resorting to the military.

DEPUTY TURNER'S ARREST.

Mr. TURNER was arrested at his house by Coroner PERRY, on Tuesday evening, between 6 and 7 o'clock. He was brought before the Recorder at 11½ o'clock.

The Recorder said, "Mr. TURNER, the charge against you is for assault and battery, and for inciting to riot."

"Very well," said Mr. TURNER, but my counsel is not present, and I should wish you to defer action until he comes."

The following affidavit was then shown, together with the warrant that had been issued in consequence:

City and County of New-York—Thomas Dutche being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he resides in the south side of Twenty-Fifth-street, between Eighth and Ninth Avenues in said city; that on the afternoon of this the 16th day of June inst., at the City Hall, in said city, the said William Wilson, Alderman of the First Ward, of said city, struck one of the members of the Metropolitan Police with a club; that at the same time others whose names the deponent does not know, struck the said policeman with clubs; that the said policeman when struck, as aforesaid, had on his hat the badge of his office, and that the said Wilson wore on his breast a star; that within a few minutes after the said assault, the said Wilson, addressing his crowd around him said in a loud tone of voice, "Don't go away boys—stick together." THOMAS DUTCHE.

Sworn before me this 16th day of June, 1857.

J. M. SMITH, Jr., Recorder.

The following is the warrant;

CITY HALL, PARK.

State of New York, City and County of New-York.—To any constable of the City of New-York:

Whereas complaint on oath has been made before the undersigned, Recorder in and for the said City, by THOMAS DUTCHE, charging that WM. WILSON was engaged with others, on the 16th inst., in a riot and assault in the City of New-York;

These are, therefore, in the name of the People of the State of New-York, to command you, the said constable and policeman and every of you, to apprehend the body of the said defendant, and forthwith bring him before me, Recorder of the City of New-York, at No. 23 Chambers-street, to answer the said charge, and to be dealt with as the law directs.

Given under my hand and seal this 17th of June, 1857. JAMES M. SMITH, Jr., Recorder.

CAPT. BENNETT GIVES BONDS.

Counsel for Capt. BENNETT came forward, and was asked by the Recorder what course he intended to pursue.

He said he proposed to waive an examination and give bail for his appearance.

Recorder—Mr. RENNETT, who are your bondsmen?

Capt. Bennett—Mr. C. C. SEELEY.

Mr. SEELEY came forward and swore he was worth more than $5,000, and was accepted as bondsman in that amount.

The same counsel said he wished to pursue a like course in the case of Mr. TURNER, Deputy Street Commissioner.

Mr. C. C. ELLIS was accepted as bondsman. Bail $5,000.

The Recorder said he would send the papers to the Grand Jury of the Court of Sessions, then sitting.

TWO WARRANTS SERVED UPON THE MAYOR—HE ACKNOWLEDGES THE NEW LAW.

Two warrants were during the morning handed to Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER and Capt. SPEIGHT of the Metropolitan Police, issuing from Recorder [illegible] for resisting the service of a warrant by [illegible], and the other for resisting Captain WALLING. All the preliminaries being agreed upon, and Major-General SANFORD having pledged to see the warrants duly served, Captains SPEIGHT and Deputy Superintendent CARPENTER left the office of the Recorder in company with Gen. SANFORD and proceeded towards the City Hall. The Municipal Police were formed in double-line extending from the north door of the Hall for a long way outside the iron gate.

The approach of the Metropolitans was the signal for a movement in the crowd, and another sensation among the Police, but there was something in the presence of General SANFORD which had a magical effect, and the lane opened respectfully right and left as they passed along. They were met at the door of the Hall by a gracious smile and bow of recognition from Chief MATSELL, who preceded them to the Mayor's private room, which they all entered.

The Mayor was seated at his table in consultation with his counsel, Judge DEAN, the Sheriff, and one or two other friends.

Deputy CARPENTER and Capt. SPEIGHT advancing, General SANFORD introduced them to the Mayor.

Capt. SPEIGHT, smiling, "Mr. Mayor, we have come to see you again."

MAYOR, smiling, but retaining his seat, "I am glad to see you."

Deputy CARPENTER, holding out the two warrants: "Here are two warrants on which we have come to arrest you."

Judge DEAN—"Let me see them," taking them from the officers.

Deputy CARPENTER, explaining—"One is for resisting the Coroner, and the other for resisting Captain WALLING."

Judge DEAN—"Yes, but there is nothing new."

The Sheriff, mildly—"I will say, Gentlemen, that I hold the Mayor in my custody under another warrant, and also under arrest of habeas corpus, and I cannot allow him to be taken out of my custody upon these warrants. When he has been discharged on these, I will see your warrants executed, and meantime pledge you the Mayor shall remain in my custody."

GEN. SANFORD TO MAYOR WOOD—You acknowledge the service of these warrants, Mr. Mayor, and will obey them?

THE MAYOR—Yes, Sir.

Deputy CARPENTER—And you will have them served, Mr. Sheriff, as soon as the habeas corpus is discharged?

THE SHERIFF—I will.

CARPENTER, SPEIGHT and SANFORD then said that was all they required.

Judge DEAN—I wish to state here that there has been a misunderstanding about our position in this matter; the Mayor has not resisted legal process, and does not intend to.

Deputy CARPENTER and Gen. SANFORD addressing the Sheriff—Will you receive the warrants, as service of arrest, and execute them when the other warrants are disposed of?

ANSWER—I will.

The whole party then withdrew, Capt. SPEIGHT and Deputy CARPENTER remaining in the Mayor's outer room, in good-natured conversation with their old confrères of the Municipal Police.

Capt. SPEIGHT remarked to one of these good-naturedly: "If you had been strangers to us, it would have been a different affair; we dislike to come in conflict with old friends. If we had not been friends, I think we should have had a good fight before this."

As the officers passed out of the Hall, some characteristic remarks were made by some of the "Roughs" which contained obscene and profane allusions, but no notice was taken of it. As they left the Park, proceeding direct to the Recorder's Office, the crowd, supposing "FERNANDO" was being carried out under arrest, made a grand rush, but there was no violence offered in any form.

WHY THE MAYOR'S ARREST ON THE ORIGINAL WARRANTS WAS INSISTED ON.

About half-past one o'clock Commissioners DRAPER and NYE and General SANFORD, in accordance with a request of the Recorder, met him at his office. General SANFORD stated that the mob was very large, and in a state of great excitement, and that to attempt an arrest he would be compelled to sacrifice the lives of many persons. That the mob were armed, and that muskets alone on the part of the military would not answer,—he would be compelled to use cannon. The General thought that a collision might be avoided by withdrawing the warrants, and directing other warrants upon the same charges to the Sheriff. That the Mayor had expressed his readiness to obey the warrants if they were executed by the Sheriff, but that he would not submit to an arrest by the Metropolitan Police. The Recorder said he would not accede to the proposition.

The person charged with crime could not be permitted to select the officers to make the arrest—there was a principle involved in this case that must not be lost sight of. The law must not be trampled upon—it must be enforced, even at the hazard of human life. He would not consent, under any circumstances, to countenance rebellion to the law,—he could not consent to recede in the discharge of his duty—and would not, even to avoid a conflict involving the loss of life. It was finally agreed that Gen. SANFORD should accompany the officers to the Mayor's office and make the arrest of the Mayor. If he failed to recognize the authority of the officers and to permit the arrest, then the military was at once to be called into requisition. Officer SPAIGHT and Sergeant CARPENTER then proceeded with their warrants to the office of the Mayor, made the arrest and then the Sheriff claimed to hold the prisoner on process then in his hands. The officers then

NICARAGUA.

Letter of Gen. Wm. Walker to the President of the United States.

From the Washington States.

WASHINGTON, Monday, June 15, 1857.

SIR: On the 1st of May last, I entered into a convention with Commander DAVIS, of the United States' sloop St. Mary's, to evacuate the town of Rivas, in the Territory of Nicaragua. Justice to myself, as well as to the Republic of which I claim to be the rightful and lawful Chief Executive, requires me to communicate to your Excellency the circumstances which attended this convention. And in order that the events which led to the agreement between Commander DAVIS and myself may be more fully understood, I beg leave to narrate some facts connected with my presence and authority in Nicaragua, which have never been properly presented to the Government of the United States.

In the month of May, 1854, a few exiles from Nicaragua landed in the port of Realejo, declared against the then existing Government of the Republic, and secured, within two months, possession of nearly all the principal places in the State. They soon organized a Provisional Government, of which Don FRANCISCO CASTELLON was the head. It soon became apparent, however, that although the vast majority of the people of Nicaragua were friendly to this movement, it was likely to fail through want of proper military force and organization. CASTELLON, therefore, sent to me—I was then residing in San Francisco—a contract authorizing me to raise three hundred men for the service of the Provisional Government. This contract I rejected, because it was contrary to the act of Congress of 1818; and I sent back the agent employed by CASTELLON, with instructions to secure, if possible, a grant of colonization, which would not make me amenable to the laws of the United States. Such a grant was obtained; and as soon as I received it, I showed it to the United States District-Attorney for the Northern District of California, and to the General commanding the Pacific Division, who then had special powers and instructions from the President, under the neutrality act of 1818. Both these officers informed me that I could act under the officers informed me that I could act under the contract, not only without fear of interference on their part, but with the express assurance that they would do all in their power to forward the enterprise. Not only did I sail from San Francisco with the approbation and well wishes of all the Federal authorities, but the American sailors, from a revenue cutter then in port, actually beat the sails for the vessel as she was towed out of the harbor.

After arriving at Realejo, I and my fellow-colonists were regularly naturalized as citizens of Nicaragua; and it became necessary for us to use our arms in defence of the rights we had acquired under the Provisional Government. It was soon apparent, however, that the presence of the Americans in Nicaragua was not acceptable to all the adherents of CASTELLON, and I therefore informed the Provisional Director that if our cooperation was injurious to his cause and prospects, we would willingly retire from the country. But CASTELLON insisted that the Americans were the only hope for the Democrats, not only of Nicaragua, but of all Central America, and he begged with fervency and perseverance that we would not think of abandoning him in his extremity. Thus appealed to and besought, we undertook the campaign, which ended in a peace between the contending parties; and I may safely assert, that the American influence was chiefly instrumental in achieving the treaty of the 23d October, 1855.

By this treaty of the 23d October, the old Legitimist Government recognized the rights of the Americans naturalized in Nicaragua under the grant from the Provisional Government. And in order to restrain, as the Legitimists said, the excesses of the Democrats, made arrogant by their success, they insisted that I should retain command of the army of the Republic.

Soon after the inauguration of the Provisional President, under the treaty of the 23d October, one of the Americans in Nicaragua was accredited as Minister to the United States. An American was selected by the Provisional President at the suggestion of members of his Cabinet—all natives of Nicaragua—that such a person would be most acceptable in the United States, from his knowledge of the language and laws of the country to which he was sent. Unfortunately for Nicaragua and for Central America, this Minister was not received by the Government of the United States.

About the time the news of the refusal on the part of the United States to recognize the Nicaraguan Minister reached Granada, General CABANAS was applying to the Provisional Government for assistance to regain his authority in Honduras. I opposed this policy and endeavored to impress on the Government that the first necessity of Nicaragua was peace. Instead of making war on Honduras, I suggested the propriety of sending notes to the other States of Central America, declaring our peaceful intentions and soliciting friendly intercourse. These suggestions prevailed with the Provisional President, but were not palatable to the Minister of Relations, Don MAXIMO JEREZ, who resigned in consequence of the peaceful policy pursued by the Government.

In the meantime, decrees had been issued inviting migration to Nicaragua, offering grants of land and other privileges to such as took up their residence in the State. Under these decrees, a large number of Americans and other foreigners emigrated to Nicaragua, and extensive interests were acquired by them in the country.

As soon, however, as the other States of Central America perceived the policy of the United States Government, they entered into a league for the expulsion of the Americans from Nicaragua. On the 1st of March, 1856, Costa Rica declared war, not against Nicaragua, but against a certain class of persons resident there, and accompanied this declaration with other decrees, disgraceful to the age and revolting to civilization. Costa Rica invaded our Territory, and was repelled by the courage of the naturalized Americans.

But, soon after the enemy retired, it became apparent that Don MAXIMO JEREZ—who had, for his own purposes, again entered the cabinet of the Provisional President—was smarting under the defeat of his war policy, and was conspiring with Don PATRICIO RIVAS to join the other States in their opposition to the Americans. This was so palpable that, in the election for President in June last I became a candidate before the people, and was elected by a large majority. The great objection urged against my election was, that I was not a native of Nicaragua. The Constitution of 1854, however, required no such qualification; and Don FRUTO CHAMORO himself was a native of Guatemala. As the office of President was not known in the Constitution of 1838, it is clear that the qualifications for the office were to be fixed by the Constitution of 1854, which alone created such a Chief Executive.

Duty to the Americans who had been invited to Nicaragua required me to accept the place of President, no matter how anxious I might be to escape its labors and responsibilities. Their interests were to my eyes above and beyond all others; for on them I verily believe the welfare of the whole country, and its utility to all the civilized nations of the earth, depend.

It is unnecessary for me to recapitulate the events of the struggle in Nicaragua for the last year. You, as well as others, are familiar with the dangers through which the Americans naturalized in Nicaragua have passed. You know whether or not they have sustained the ancient fame of their race for valor and good faith. You know how they met the open foe and the lurking pestilence, with nothing but a sense of duty and justice to sustain them in the hour of trial. Alone in the world, unrecognized by the government to which they naturally looked for sympathy and countenance, they have still shown that they knew how to die in defence of rights justly acquired and attempted to be wrested from them by violence and fraud. It merely behoves me now to state how the evacuation of Rivas was effected and how the Americans in Nicaragua became exiled from the land of their adoption.

On the 22d of March last, the allied force of Costa Rica, Guatemala, San Salvador, and Honduras opened a cannonade on the town of Rivas, where the main body of the army of Nicaragua was situated; and on the morning of the 23d they made a general assault, which was repulsed with great loss on the part of the enemy. Afterwards they attempted to invest the town, but never fully succeeded, on account of the vast force required for such an undertaking. On the 11th of April they again assaulted Rivas, but were driven back with even more loss than on the 23d of March. In order to show how the enemy were reduced after the 11th of April, I need only state that on the arriving of that day a single officer, accompanied by a native servant, passed out of Rivas and went down to San Juan del Sur. He there received the letters sent to me from New-York by the steamer of the 20th of March, and brought them to Rivas on the morning of the 13th of April. This fact, let me say, was known to Commander DAVIS.

From the 23d of March until the 23d of April, I knew that Com. DAVIS was in correspondence with the allies concerning the state of the force in Rivas. I knew that he was receiving information from them calculated to mislead him in relation to my position and prospects. But Com. DAVIS was, in the meanwhile, making such professions of friendship for his country en in Nicaragua, that I was disposed to attribute his conduct to an over anxiety for the garrison of Rivas. On the 23d of April, however, circumstances occurred which led me to doubt the sincerity of his professions.

On that day, the second lieutenant of the St. Mary's, Lieut. HOUSTON, accompanied by a non-commissioned officer of marines, came into Rivas for the purpose of conducting the women—both American and native—from that place to San Juan del Sur. While in the town, Lieut. HOUSTON expressed his great surprise at the good condition of the garrison, and at the spirit of cheerful confidence which pervaded the officers and men. But, during his presence, he and the soldier of marines with him gave information to the garrison calculated to diminish the courage of the command. These acts, derogating from their neutrality, were done in violation of an order by me that the soldier of marines was not to repeat in Rivas any of the reports circulated by the enemy in San Juan del Sur. The effect of Lieut. HOUSTON's visit was apparent, from the desertions which immediately followed it.

Another circumstance occurred during Lieut. HOUSTON's stay in Rivas, to which I afterwards learned its after importance. That officer informed me he was ordered by Commander DAVIS to tell me that any communication I desired to make to Mr. C. J. MACDONALD, agent of Messrs. GARRISON, MORGAN & SONS, might be made under enclosure to Capt. DAVIS himself. Although I felt such an offer was a departure from duty on the part of a United States officer, I did not hesitate to take advantage of the offer. I informed Lieut. HOUSTON that I did not desire to write to Mr. MACDONALD; but that he might say to Commander DAVIS from me—and with the understanding that it was to be communicated to Mr. MACDONALD—that I considered my position at Rivas impregnable to the force at the disposal of the enemy, as long as my provisions lasted; that if Col. LOCKRIDGE did not join me in Rivas by the time my commissary stores were exhausted, I would abandon the place and join the force on San Juan River; and that I considered myself entirely able and competent to carry out such a movement. When I learned afterwards that this message was never delivered to Mr. MACDONALD, I was forced to consider Commander DAVIS' offer an effort to draw from me a declaration which he might afterwards turn to my disadvantage.

After the visit of Lieut. HOUSTON, I heard no more from Commander DAVIS until the 30th of April, when two aids-de-camp from the enemy came under a flag of truce with a letter from that officer to myself. The letter proposed that I should abandon Rivas and go aboard of the St. Mary's to Panama, Commander DAVIS undertaking to guarantee my personal safety. Although this proposition was extremely offensive—insinuating, as it did, that my personal safety, instead of the honor and dignity of the Government of which I was the Executive, might prove a determining circumstance in a military convention—I replied that the proposition was vague, and suggested his coming into Rivas, and a personal conference between us. I only submitted to the mortification of answering such a letter on the supposition that Commander DAVIS might have information I did not possess, and which might justify the substance, though not the manner, of his offer. He answered by saying that he was sorry I found his proposition vague; that he proposed "I should abandon the enterprise and leave the country;" that I might rely on the fact of Col. LOCKRIDGE having left the San Juan River; and finally, that he had maturely considered the invitation to enter Rivas, and had decided, unreservedly, not to take such a step.

The tone of this note was, if possible, more offensive than that of the first; and the use of the word "enterprise," in connection with a Government which Commander DAVIS had studiously acknowledged by addressing me as "President" but a few weeks previously, sounded strangely discordant. As, however, the letter stated the evacuation of the San Juan River—the first news I had of this event—I stooped to answer the offensive note by proposing to send two officers—Gen. HENNINGSEN and Col. WATERS—to meet Commander DAVIS, provided they had safe conduct from the allied generals. An answer soon came, enclosing the required safe conduct; and the answer was, in effect, that Gen. HENNINGSEN and Col. WATERS should proceed at once to the head-quarters of the allies, as Commander DAVIS' instructions required his speedy return to San Juan del Sur. I was surprised to recognize the body of the note as the handwriting of General ZAVALA—one of the Generals of the allied forces who spoke and wrote English—and to find that such a note was signed by a professed neutral.

For what passed between General HENNINGSEN and Colonel WATERS and Commander DAVIS, I refer you to the report of the former officer, herewith enclosed, and to the terms of the convention of Rivas. Allow me to suggest, that the convention itself is the best evidence the army in Rivas was not on the eve of destruction or dissolution. If the peril to my command was as great as has been publicly represented, the allies would never have permitted us to evacuate the place, not only in safety but with honor.

In his interview with General HENNINGSEN, Commander DAVIS had expressed his "unalterable determination" to seize the schooner Granada; and this had been a determining circumstance with me in signing the convention. I was, therefore, surprised on the morning after I went aboard the St. Mary's to hear Commander DAVIS propose that I should deliver the vessel to him without the necessity for the use of force. This I rejected. He then proposed I should deliver the vessel on condition he gave me the arms and ammunition on board of her. I replied, not a rag or a splinter should be given up, except to an overwhelming force; for the honor of the little vessel was in her hull and rigging and in the flag she bore, and, in comparison with this, the value of the property aboard her was mere nothing. Need I express surprise that a United States naval officer should make so dishonorable a proposition?

Seeing that Commander DAVIS appeared to be acting in the execution of what he had declared was his "unalterable determination," I endeavored to convince him of the gross wrong and injury he would commit by the seizure of the Granada. I endeavored to satisfy him he had no right to question the flag of the schooner as she lay in the port of San Juan; that while there she was within the territory of Nicaragua, and subject only to the sovereignty of that Republic; that it was unworthy of the United States thus to trample on the most sacred rights of a sister State; and that I could not and would not believe his Government would sanction such a violation of international law. He replied he would weigh what I had said and see me again on the subject; but without any further conversation he gave written instructions to his first lieutenant to seize the Granada by force. The order was executed. The first lieutenant boarded the Granada with a large force. Captain FAYSSOUX, of the Granada, beat to quarters. Lieut. MAURY endeavored to persuade Capt. FAYSSOUX to give up his vessel, judging, in accordance with his instructions, that it would be in accordance with the Rivas Convention. Captain FAYSSOUX said his orders were not to deliver the schooner unless to an overwhelming force. Lieut. MAURY returned to the St. Mary's, and informed me that he intended to take the Granada; and if I desired to save the effusion of blood, I should give an order to deliver her to him. He then brought his broadside of eleven guns to bear on the schooner, manned his small boats with 100 men, and came to me for the order; which was, of course, given. Soon after I had the mortification to see the Nicaraguan flag hauled down and the American flag hoisted. Indignation as an officer of Nicaragua at the lowering of its flag was stifled by shame as a native of the United States at seeing its glorious ensign disgraced by covering an act of perfidy and wrong.

I ask leave to beg your special consideration of the fact that Lieut. MAURY applied to me for an order to Capt. FAYSSOUX. This was an acknowledgment that Capt. FAYSSOUX was still an officer of the Government of which I was the Executive.

But the dignity and honor of Nicaragua had not been sufficiently degraded by having her own flag lowered in her own port. It was reserved for Commander DAVIS to complete a series of insults, by delivering the Granada, with all her armament and equipments, to an alien enemy.

Nor did the hostility of the United States naval officers cease on our departure from San Juan del Sur. On the arrival of the St. Mary's at Panama, Commodore MERVINE kept me and the sixteen officers with me prisoners on the sloop. He would not permit us to land or hold communication with the shore. Even my letters from the United States were sent back to the shore; and when I requested to send aboard the California steamer in order to inquire for letters I expected, the Commodore replied he would send one of his own officers to inquire for my letters. I protested that I had gone aboard the St. Mary's as an officer—with my sword on—and not as a prisoner; but the Commodore replied, that the New-Granada Government had published a decree forbidding any one lately engaged in the Central American war to land at Panama unless upon conditions. An American citizen at Panama afterwards assured me that the Governor of the place remarked, there would have been no difficulty about my landing, if the application for it had been made.

Such, Sir, is a faithful history of the means which have been used to exile the Americans naturalized in Nicaragua from the country for which they have spilt their blood and risked their lives. For the land of their adoption they left the ease and comfort of homes endeared to them by many a tender tie and many a glorious recollection. One thousand Americans have perished in order to secure the lands and privileges promised them in Nicaragua. Their heirs are, for the most part, citizens of the United States; and I leave it to your wisdom to decide whether it is right or politic that such interests should be endangered, if not sacrificed, by the acts, either authorized or unauthorized, of American officers.

But whatever your wisdom may decide, in relation to the policy of such conduct, I know the justice of the Government your Excellency so worthily controls will not fail to raise up the honor of Nicaragua, wounded by the seizure of her own vessel in her own port, and by its delivery to a foreign foe. I know you will not, with impunity, permit the sovereignty of a sister-Republic to be violated, simply because she is weak. With full confidence, I trust for such acts and declarations, on the part of the Government of the United States, as will entirely clear it from any participation in the insults and degradation which Nicaragua has received at the hands of American officers.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

WM. WALKER.

President of the United States.

One Man Marrying Six Wives and Killing Four Persons.

From the Louisville Democrat.

Some weeks ago we published a brief account of the career of EDWARD W. HAWKINS, convicted of the murder of the two officers in Estill County. He paid the penalty of his high crime on Friday last, in the county where the murder was committed. The same day upon which the unfortunate man was hanged he wrote the following letter to the editors of this paper:

I see in your last issue a piece styled "Incidents in the Life of a Felon," and as there are various inaccuracies in it, I wish to point them out to you, and hope that you will correct them. I am a felon, it is true, and am sentenced to the death, which debt I imagine I shall this day pay. The first error is, that I am 23 years old; I will not be 21 until the 11th day of July next, (1857.) Your next error is, that all my wives are alive; alas! one of them, young, beautiful, and lovely as she was, committed suicide on account of the enormous deception I had practiced upon her. Your next error is, you say I am the grandson of TOM HARPE. I have no connection of that name. Your next error is, that you say I killed a commanding officer of the regular army; this is not true. Your next error is, that I number my murdered victims by the half dozen: I have only murdered four persons in my life. I have married the six women, as stated in your article. I have committed the many other felonies—and more than alluded to by you.

Correspondence of the New-York Daily Times.

HAVANA, Wednesday, June 10, 1857.

The English steamer arrived from Vera Cruz on the morning of the 8th, and brings the full particulars of the discovery and summary punishment of another conspiracy against General COMONFORT. The instigators were principally friends and admirers of Ex-President SANTA ANA, and their object was to overthrow the existing Government and recall SANTA ANA to power. It is generally believed in the city of Mexico that this movement had been previously combined and agreed upon by parties in the confidence of the Spanish Government, who offered every assurance of protection. The conspirators were seized on the night of the 26th, together with all the documents, and were sent off the next morning manacled to Acapulco, whence they would be forwarded to Lower California to work with the chain gang in the opening of public roads. A part of their plan was to get possession of the Government by murdering COMONFOOT and all his ministers.

Orders have been transmitted to the war steamers Democrata and Guerrero to cruise off Tampico in search of an expedition of filibusters under the command of Capt. VILLAVICENCIO, who is also at work for the cause of SANTA ANA. This is the same worthy individual who ran away with the steamer Democrata and brought her into this port.

The returns have been received from several of the States, and the general impression was that COMONFORT would be elected President by an overwhelming majority. A large English and French fleet was collecting at Vera Cruz, and the Mexicans seem to anticipate some interference on the part of the allies and their domestic relations.

COMONFORT, in anticipation of serious difficulties with Spain, has sent a large division down to Vera Cruz to defend the castle and town. Orders have also been given to fortify the National Bridge and several other important passes. Several other parties concerned in the assassination of Spanish subjects had been tried and punished; but the impression prevailed that there would be difficulties, and COMONFORT intended to take the command in person, and ALVAREZ would watch the movements of the domestic enemies.

Americans in China.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I have read with attention and interest the correspondence between Commodore ARMSTRONG, Commander of the United States Naval forces in the China seas, and certain American merchants at Hong Kong, published in your journal of the 6th inst. If their object was to bring to the notice of the Government at Washington the inefficient naval force in the China seas, it was well intended, but if intended to reflect upon the gallant Commander, it seems, upon a careful perusal of these letters, that they have signally failed, and brought discredit upon themselves. Some weeks since was published a correspondence commenced by Mr. SILAS E. BURROUGHS and Commodore ARMSTRONG. Mr. BURROUGHS, it would seem, wanted a man-of-war detailed for the protection of a trading schooner of his at Wampoa. These Merchant Princes solicit from the Commodore protection for two small steamers (passenger boats) running between Macao and Hong Kong, stating, as a reason for this request, that two steamers under the English flag had recently been captured by the Chinese, acknowledging at the same time that the capture of those vessels was owing to the grossest carelessness of the officers in command. The facts were these: The steamer Thistle, running between Canton and Hong Kong, received on board at the former place, a number of passengers who be proved to China soldiers with concealed arms; they rose upon the officers of the boat and put them all to death, taking their heads to Canton for the reward of $150, offered for the head of a long-haired or "western devil." The other boat was lost in much the same manner. The best defence of the American steamers running between Hong Kong and Macao, would be ordinary prudence and vigilance on the part of the officers and crews of the boats. The letters refer to armed junks cruising between Macao and Hong Kong. If these armed junks can outsail American steamboats, the Chinese since their war with the English must have improved the models of their junks. We rather think their armed junks only existed in the imaginations of the letter writers. The English have some six or eight war-steamers in and near Canton River, and some of them are almost daily entering the harbor of Hong Kong, and all that can be learned of these formidable cruising junks, amounts to reports that for safety they have been carried up the shallow streams that fall into Canton River, and the English are waiting for the arrival of their gun-boats of light draft, to ascend the streams and destroy these ferocious cruisers.

These writers complain that all the protection they receive is from the English forces. They have sought refuge in an English colony, and under the protection of the British flag. They might with the same reason complain that they are indebted to British enterprise for the receipt, semi-monthly, of letters from their European and American correspondents. To the Peninsular and Oriental Mail steamers not only are the American merchants in China, but the United States Government are also indebted for receiving communications from China in sixty days, that would otherwise be from 100 to 120 days in transit. It seems exceedingly unfair for the press to reflect upon Commodore ARMSTRONG for the inadequate American naval force in the Chinese seas. When Commodore ARMSTRONG took command of the Chinese squadron, his force consisted of the steamer San Jacinto, of 9 guns, and the Levant of eighteen; the Portsmouth sloop of sixteen guns has since joined him. The British naval force at that period was not much less than three hundred guns afloat. This squadron has since been reinforced, and more vessels are on their way to China to join the squadron of Admiral SEYMOUR. Before our squadron can be increased, Canton will be occupied by the English forces, and Governor YEH will be in danger for allowing the long haired barbarians to take an Imperial City of the Celestials. An English force will be sent up the Gulf of Pichely to the mouth of the Pi Ho; a treaty will be concluded securing a resident Minister at Pekin, and the opening of other ports in China to foreign trade. We shall come in to the benefits of this arrangement, upon the footing of the "most favored nations," without the cost of a large fleet or any hard blows.

Commodore ARMSTRONG, in ordering the capture and subsequent destruction of the Barrier Forts has now a character for decision, energy and gallantry deserving of the highest honors. The American flag had been fired upon from these Forts, and an American had been killed; before the lapse of twelve hours, the Commodore was, with his only available force, the Portsmouth sloop, with a broadside of eight guns and the Levant, with a broadside of nine guns,—with this small force, (the steamer San Jacinto, the flag ship, drawing too much water to approach the forts,) the Commodore with his flag on board the Portsmouth commenced action with the Barrier Forts, and for more than an hour was under the fire of these heavy batteries with the Portsmouth alone; this attack tested the strength of the enemy, and also the destructive power of the shell guns used on this occasion for the first time, (in the history of our Naval operations,) against a granite-built fortress. The subsequent capture of these Forts by the Portsmouth and Levant and their destruction by the orders of Commodore ARMSTRONG is well known; the ruined walls will long remain a monument to his energy and ability, and a warning to these arrogant barbarians, that they cannot with impunity insult our flag.

The absolute necessity for steam sloops-of-war on the China station is obvious. Commodore ARMSTRONG could not have carried on his operations against the Barrier Forts without the aid of steamers which were hired by him to tow the Levant and Portsmouth into position before these batteries. The frequent calms and the periodical winds which prevail on this coast render our old sloops-of-war almost useless. One of these sloops was forty-five days in making a passage up the China Sea, which a steamer could have made in eight days. Small steamers are required to ascend the Gulf of Pichely and approach the entrance of the Pi Ho, the river near which Pekin is situated.

There seems to be an impression that our treaty with China has expired by limitation, but such is not the case. The treaty of "Wang Hiya" was a treaty of "perfect, permanent and universal peace." There is an article of the treaty to the effect "that its provisions shall not be altered without grave cause," but as circumstances might arise rendering modifications &c., relating to navigation, necessary, in which case the two governments at the expiration of twelve years from the date of the Convention, (1844) can appoint suitable persons to treat amicably thereon; this limitation expired in July, 1856. Having in view this limitation, the United States Government in the summer of 1855 determined to reopen negotiations with the Court of Pekin. For this purpose the American Commissioner was charged with a letter from the President of the United States to the Emperor of China, to be delivered to one of the Imperial Governors, as pointed out in the treaty. The Commissioner charged with this important trust was to be supported by a respectable naval force, which Mr. Secretary DOBBIN was to furnish, but which he failed to do, being at that period probably too much engaged in decimating the Navy list and disorganizing the service at home, to attend to its efficiency on foreign shores. The consequence was, the Commissioner reached Hong Kong (via the English mail steamer,) in June, 1855, and there met Commodore ARMSTRONG with the powerful force of a steamer of 9 guns and a sloop-of-war of 18 guns; the latter was all that could be placed at his disposal, the San Jacinto being under orders to carry Consul-General HARRIS to Japan.

With the Levant the Commissioner proceeded to the River Mir, the Governor of Foo Chou on that river being also Governor of the provinces of Mir and Chele, to whom the letter of the President of the United States for the Emperor of China was delivered by the American Commissioner and received with every demonstration of respect. The important document enclosed in a sandal-wood box lined with yellow satin, (the imperial color) was duly forwarded to Pekin, and in the course of the month was returned to the American Commissioner then at Shanghae. The reason assigned was the letter should have been sent through the hands of YEH, the Governor of Canton. If the American Commissioner had been supported by a respectable naval force, which it was the duty of Secretary DOBBIN to have provided, and could have followed his letter by ascending the Gulf of Pichely to the mouth of the Pi Ho, within fifty miles of Pekin, his mission would probably have resulted differently. What a mortifying contrast does this effort to reopen negotiations with the Court of Pekin offer to the powerful force sent by Mr. DOBBIN's predecessor to treat with the Emperor of Japan; this difference of force could not have been lost upon the Chinese; a small sloop-of-war furnished by the great American nation to support the commission in negotiating with the most arrogant, powerful race of semi barbarians of the Eastern world. 'Tis to be hoped that the next letter or commission sent to the Imperial Court will, instead of a sandal wood box, be inclosed in a Paixhan shell, the only mode of sending communications that will commend the attention of these self-sufficient barbarians.

The refusal of the Court of China to reopen negotiations except through the medium of Governor YEH, of Canton, seems to denote a foregone conclusion that YEH was placed at Canton to "manage the foreigners," and repel any effort to reopen negotiations for commercial purposes. His subsequent course with the English officials would lead to this conclusion. Possibly they wish to return again to their old system or policy of non-intercourse with foreigners; in fact, the result of a Chinese no nothing movement.

CHIN CHIN.

Jeff. Davis' Reception in Mississippi—His Speech Reviewing the Pierce Administration.

From the Jackson (Miss.) Mississippian, June 2.

A more agreeable morning than Friday is not often granted to the purposes of a popular demonstration. Sixteen guns proclaimed the advent of the day which the people of Hinds and their neighbors of contiguous counties had consecrated to gratitude. In carriages and on horseback the people poured in from the country—a stream of joyous and expectant life. By 10 o'clock, it was computed that there were 3,000 people in the Capitol and on the adjacent grounds.

It was intended that Senator DAVIS should be received in the specious Hall of Representatives; but long before the designated hour it was a jam, on floor and in galleries, and it was found necessary to adjourn the ceremonies of the day to the open air. A platform was hastily constructed, and the other arrangements made in accordance with the change. At 11½ o'clock, Gen. GRIFFITH, Marshal of the day, with his aids, formed the citizens into procession. A band of music preceded followed by an open carriage, in which was seated Judge C. S. TARPLEY, Chairman of the Committee of Reception, drawn by four white horses. Arrived at the mansion of Mrs. DICKSON, Col. DAVIS entered the carriage, and the procession returned to the Capitol. On they went, through the broad and massive iron portals with their pillars of stone, the front of the State House being conspicuously adorned with a garlanded banner bearing the inscription,

"WELCOME JEFF. DAVIS."

From the soul of the congregated thousands went up a vocal welcome still more cordial and thrilling.

After an address of welcome by Gov. MCRAE, Col. DAVIS rose, visibly affected by the cordiality and magnitude of his reception, his blue eye flashing the emotions of his soul, and that countenance upon whose every feature intelligence is traced, expressive of surcharged feeling. Proud was the greeting, as his tall form stood erect before them. The ladies, who were present in multitudes, waved their handkerchiefs, the men cheered, and a few of the soldiers of Monterey and Buena Vista were excusably boisterous in their huzzas. When the applause subsided, Col. DAVIS said:

He was thrice and four times happy to meet again his fellow citizens of Hinds and the adjacent county at the capital of the State.

For the past four years he had been absent, at the call of the elected chief of the nation, to take charge of a department of government. It was with reluctance that he accepted the position of Secretary of War, and he need not say he did so with assurance that no principle of State rights democracy would be contravened. The promise was not broken; the Administration proved unflinchingly true; the pledges to the people were redeemed with a stern fidelity, and the whole country, in its peace, its prosperity and growing regard for the constitutional rights of all sections, were the eloquent witnesses for its good faith and patriotism.

THE FOREIGN POLICY OF THE PIERCE ADMINISTRATION—DAVIS "INDORSES" FILIBUSTER WALKER.

It was but just to say that the late Administration had done much to improve our foreign relations. From our immediate neighbors to the remotest point ever reached by the Argonautic expedition, the flag of American commanded the homage of respect, and the name of American was a passport and a protection through the world. In regard to one thing, however, he confessed to disappointment—the legitimate acquisition of the island of Cuba. The failure of that most desirable object was not chargeable upon the President. To the lower house of Congress was all censure attributable. In its premises. They withheld supplies, refused even a vote of confidence in the Administration; and the next election surged upon the country a curse worse than the locusts of Egypt—a horde of Black Republicans and Know-Nothings desecrated the hall of Congress.

The Black Republicans aimed at the legalization of treason, and from the Know-Nothings nothing was expected. Born of a fantastic nothing, they knew nothing, and they done nothing, and that was the total of their history. The Clayton-Bulwer treaty—a diplomatic blunder—threw serious obstacles in the way of an equitable arrangement of our relations with Britain. The Dallas-Clarendon treaty was obnoxious because of the recognition of the English treaty with Honduras, prohibiting Slavery from that American State. By the conservatism of the Senate it was amended in that respect; but we are told that England rejects the amended treaty, so that our affairs with that Government are still in an unsettled condition. He (Col. DAVIS) was an advocate of the Monroe doctrine. The attempt of England to exclude Slavery from Honduras was an unwarrantable interference, and it was well that it was resisted, no matter what the hazard.

Within a few years another event, which lately met with a painful termination, had given hope to the South of the expansion of her institutions. Central America was in a transition state. The people of Nicaragua had revolted against despotism, and had invited a well-known citizen to their aid. With a Spartan band he answered the summons. But he had other foes to contend with than the native tyrants of the soil. There was palpable British interference under the flimsy guise of protection to British subjects; there was Black Republicanism at the North pouring in gold, munitions and armaments to the Costa Ricans; and there were the supplies of the patriots cut off, their reinforcements prevented from junction, and such an accumulation of obstacles from powerful sources that successful resistance became impossible, and defeat was the end. He attached no importance to the story that WILLIAM WALKER and his men capitulated to the commander of the St. Mary's. He knew her captain well; knew that a more chivalrous gentleman never trod an American battle-deck, and knew that the story must be false that he took WALKER and his men as prisoners. No, he rescued them from Costa Rican vengeance, threw over them the ægis of our flag, and bore them to their friends. He was glad that the people of Louisiana had given such a welcome to the filibusters. They were not vanquished; it was but temporary defeat. Clearly, in responding to the call of the oppressed Nicaraguans, they were guiltless of crime, though Black Republicanism had denounced them as murderers and brigands.

THE RETRIBUTION OF ANTHONY BURNS—MORE PROTECTION NEEDED FOR SLAVE PROPERTY.

In its domestic policy, the late Administration had much to encounter. For instance, there was the slave rescue in Boston. The arm of municipal law was paralyzed. The Marshal could not take a fugitive to the waiting ship; and to the performance of the duty of that Federal officer neither State or city authorities gave aid or countenance. A conflict between State and Federal power seemed to impend. It was a crisis; but the Administration was equal to the delicate and hazardous emergency. The Federal authority was coercively interposed, the supremacy of the law was vindicated, and the rights of a Southern citizen maintained.

But (said Col. DAVIS) we will never have obtained all our rights until the legislation of Congress shall amply protect slave as it does all other property. Of that, he was rejoiced to say, he had stronger hopes than ever. The Federal opposition of 1851, which so unnaturally prevailed even in the South, to a full measure of our rights, was being reduced to an impotent minority. There was a healthful reaction at the time, and that reaction was still in progress.

JEFFERSON DAVIS OBJECTS TO SQUATTER SOVEREIGNTY.

He had ever combatted the "Squatter Sovereignty" doctrine as a dangerous innovation. And what a harvest have we reaped from that novel tenet. It sent the Slavery issue from the Halls of Congress to the Territories, there to generate fraternal strife, bloodshed and the other unhallowed incidents of civil war, without producing one tangible good. It compelled the administration, in the Kansas difficulties, to interpose the federal arm, notwithstanding the earnest desire that the local civil power, with the ordinary aid of the posse comitatus, would be all sufficient. Such were the results of Squatter Sovereignty, even as exemplified in a Territory where the inhabitants were emigrants from the old States; and their tendency should be to convince every citizen of the danger, the fallacy and the impracticability of the doctrine.

In the last Presidential contest, we witnessed the great crisis. It was the mightiest effort of the Black Republican faction, grown up to the colossal proportions of a sectional party. The contest was known to be between Democracy and the Black Republicans. True, there was a third party; but it was like the tub thrown to the whale—it meant nothing. Grandly passed the constitutional Union through that most terrific of all our crises; and where is that man that does not know, whether he will confess it or not, that the Southern Democracy saved the Union of equal rights? Yes, in that appalling emergency, when all that was held dear was jeopardied, they stood like the old guard of NAPOLEON, with the inscription written upon their brows, "The Old Guard knows how to die, but never surrenders," [Cheers.] He claimed for Mississippi the van in that grandest of moral combats for the perpetuation of co equal liberty. Mississippians had their reward. It was enough for them to know that they had done battle for no phantom—that Buchanan was true.

NE VINDICATES SOUTH CAROLINA—PREPARE FOR SECESSION IN 1860.

He (Col. DAVIS) was no alarmist; he had a contempt for panics and a scorn of panic-mokers; but he would tell them that in 1860 the monster crisis was to be met. Then shall American patriotism pass the ordeal of fire. He hoped for the best; but a sense of danger imposed upon him the duty of warning them to prepare for the worst. The time had been when the puling newspapers of the opposition would have denounced him as a traitor for uttering this sentiment. It was a time when patriotism was construed to be submission to degradation and wrong, for the sake of a Union whose soul was perishing away, and which was being periled only by such submission.

He thanked Heaven that time was passed. It was not the Revolutionary time: O, no; submission was an unuttered word in that day of bold resolve and high achievement. It was a period intermediate between now and then—a "dark age" in our political history. But he need not adjure them to preparation. They were preparing. That iron interlink, now in progress, with Charleston on the Atlantic, was such preparation. The Southern Railroad was originally a conception of JOHN C. CALHOUN's. He sought this commercial and social intimacy between Mississippi and South Carolina. And—who would think it?—it was stigmatized at the time as an act of treason.

How fugitious, then, according to the quaint judgment of that day, must be Mississippi's perfidy; for she has made the treason practical—the locomotive traitor is partially on its way! It would bring the South in intimate communion with herself; it would develop her resources within the South; and that was her great need. Mississippi wants factories; he hoped they would spring up in every town and neighborhood all over the State. Ay, public factories for arms and ammunition. Virginia, in the epoch of her pride, built them, and it was no treason; but she has permitted their decay, and they are now but vestiges of her power and pristine grandeur. South Caroline built them, and they are still fostered, giving to her people a sense of security, to the State a spirit of independence, to the country a guaranty of her patriotism. Better than any State in the Union is she prepared for the exigencies of war or peace.

But the name of South Carolina, most unaccountably to him, seemed always to evoke in certain quarters, even in the South, a peculiar sentiment of dread. What had she done, that gallant sister of the ancient and primitive Thirteen, to inspire aversion or incite contumely? Did she falter in the Revolution? No! Was she faithless to the Constitution? Never—always is defender! but the ignorant calumniator says she nullified. The charge was untrue; she never nullified a federal statute; but her voice has been shrill and clear in the cause of right, and her opposition invincible to wrong. Why charge upon South Carolina the sin of Massachusetts? Massachusetts nullifies both the statute and organic law; South Carolina is consistently obedient to both; yet Massachusetts is eulogized, South Carolina derided!

The Fugitive Slave Affair in Ohio—Proceedings Before the Courts.

The following additional testimony has been produced in this case:

RUSSELL HYDE testified that he was arrested at Mechanicsburg by ELLIOTT, who read a line or two at the top and the same at the bottom of the writ, but did not read it all, and refused to let it be seen. The affidavit detailed the going to Urbana, the turning off when they had gone four or five miles, the ordering RUTAN and COLWELL not to follow, RUTAN saying "they were going to see fair play," the striking of COLWELL, his drawing his pistol, (Squire RUTAN preventing his firing it, the Marshals drawing their pistols, and TAYLOR begging his neighbors not to stop behind. The affiant then said one of the United States posse seized TAYLOR's arms, another his hair, and a third his throat while they handcuffed him, and I went on to detail the assault on Sheriff LAYTON and COMPTON, and the remark made by one of the posse that "these men (LAYTON and COMPTON) must be d—d fools to attempt to stop them with two men, and the next time they would not get off so easily."

CHARLES TAYLOR, one of those arrested by the United States posse, made affidavit to very nearly the same circumstances as the last affiant stated. Heard one of the Marshals address Mr. RUTAN with, "What the devil are you following us for?" RUTAN said, "To see justice done to my neighbors." Affiant appealed to RUTAN not to stop behind. He (affiant) was then seized and abused. CHURCHILL said, "G—

NEW-YORK CITY.

Quarantine Matters.

IMPORTERS VS. THE BOARD OF HEALTH.

We mentioned, a day or two since, that a conflict of opinion exists between the importers and our Health Officers; that the importers complained that sufficient discrimination was not made between vessels perfectly healthy and those that are infected; that the detention of their vessels and consequent losses were greatly in excess of what is really necessary; that their vessels were robbed by persons in small boats while in the Bay and under Quarantine; and that they were about to initiate some movement by which they could escape the delays and losses to which they were subject during the last Summer. All these complaints are made by the importers. But those who stand between the infected vessels and importers on the one hand, and the people on the other, say that the importers they notice profess great willingness that vessels belonging to their neighbors should be considered infected; that they think it highly proper for their neighbor's cargo to be detained at Quarantine; and that on no account should their neighbor's "sickly vessel" be allowed to come to the wharves of the City short of her full period of detention at the Quarantine anchorage. When the authorities are busy or rigid in dealing with the vessel of the neighbor, not a growl is heard that they do not properly discriminate "between vessels perfectly healthy and those that are infected!" But the Quarantine restriction comes home to the importer, his eyes are suddenly open to the bad judgment of the Health Officers, and shut to any necessity for Quarantine at all! It is very evident to the Board of Health, however, that the people of the port better not rely on the good judgment of the West India importer, for the protection of the public health, when the case for Quarantine adjudication should happen to be his own vessel.

SHRINKAGE OF CARGOES AT QUARANTINE.

It is admitted on all hands that "harbor thieves" made sad havoc with cargoes of sugar on board of vessels under Quarantine last Summer; but it was the fault most clearly of the ship-owner, whose duty it was to man his vessel with trust-worthy men—men who would not collude with the "thieves" by day and deliver to them their employer's cargo by night. Each ship-owner has the same privilege to place whom he pleases as ship-keeper on board of vessels under Quarantine that he enjoys when vessels are at the wharves in the City. There are no quarantine restraints imposed in this respect. So far as the selection of ship keepers is concerned the health authorities do not interfere at all, and hence they do not like to be held responsible; that the cargoes of vessels under Quarantine are not stolen by "harbor thieves." The fact that "there was a shrinkage of from ten to fifteen per cent. in many cargoes of sugar and molasses, while anchored in the lower bay last season, to which we have before alluded, proves that their owners did not properly care for them, but left them in the hands of irresponsible men. The remedy for this wealth from vessels under Quarantine is within the power of the ship-owner.

PREPARING TO PREVENT EVASIONS.

We have several times said that the importers have it in contemplation to avoid delays and losses to their cargoes and vessels at Quarantine by practicing a "dodge"—ordering their vessels from the West Indies to put into some Eastern or near Southern port, and thence to bring them and their infected cargoes immediately to the City of New-York. In a few instances it was perpetrated last year from New Haven, and was not discovered by our authorities until several cases of yellow fever appeared along the East River, which could not be accounted for, from vessels which had been allowed in the usual way to come to the wharves. It will be remembered, as soon as the "dodge" was suspected, the Commissioners of Health passed an ordinance, directing the Inspector of Vessels to cause all vessels having thus invaded our Health laws, as well as their cargoes, to be forthwith taken" to the Quarantine grounds or other place of safety." This action of the Commissioners of Health broke up the "dodging" commerce. It was soon found to be a losing game. The West Indiamen, however, propose this season to change the programme. They do not contemplate to bring the infected vessel into our harbor at all, but to enter and discharge it at some small sound port, and thence bring its cargo in small vessels to our City. This arrangement, compared with the plan of last year, is certainly an improvement and might work like a charm, were it not that the Commissioners of Health have already arranged to care for the "small vessels" and their infected cargoes, as they would if they were to come directly from Havana. By a perusal of the Health laws, it appears that the Mayor and Commissioners of Health have full power to order any vessel at the wharves of the City, or in its vicinity, "to the Quarantine grounds or other places of safety," and also the cargo of any vessel, so that it would seem impossible for importers of goods from the West Indies into this port to evade the restrictions of our Quarantine, however burthensome they may be.

FROM SEGUINE'S POINT.

One of our Reporters visited the new Quarantine grounds at Seguine's Point yesterday, and found everything quiet. On his trip he met a physician of much experience, who called his attention at the new site, to the great extent of marsh and fresh water pond included in the purchase of 50 acres. The Doctor assured him that this is the most favorable spot for the development of epidemic yellow fever that could have been selected. Moisture and heat are essential to an infectious state of atmosphere—as Dr. BARTON argues and proves—and here is a large district of quagmire and stagnant water, directly alongside the new hospitals. Intermittents have always prevailed here to a great extent, and the Doctor thinks this an insuperable objection to the use of this spot for Quarantine purposes. The fifty acres purchased by the Commissioners seem to embrace nearly all the swamp on the Wolfe farm.

Alleged Smuggling on Board the Steamship Fulton.

THOMAS RONE, steward on board the steamship Fulton, was arrested Thursday afternoon, charged with having attempted to smuggle into port on board the Fulton a large quantity of diamonds, rubies, oriental pearls and jewelry of different descriptions, valued at nearly $50,000. As the Fulton was coming up the bay two Custom House officers, named THOS. BYRNS and ALEXANDER ISAACS, boarded her off Staten Island. Upon inspecting the cargo of the steamer and baggage of passengers they discovered the diamonds, rubies, &c., stored in small boxes placed in different parts of the vessel. The appearance of the boxes and the manner of their disposition on board the steamer excited the suspicions of the officers and they at once made diligent examination as to their contents. They discovered that they contained diamonds and other precious stones. It was ascertained that the boxes belonged to the steward, and he was arrested accordingly. Yesterday the diamonds were delivered into the custody of Mr. RENWICK, the Collector. The steward was taken before United States Commissioner BRIDGEMAN and held to bail in the sum of $5,000 to answer the charge of smuggling.

CENTRAL PARK.—The Board of Central Park Commissioners met on Tuesday afternoon at their office, at 3 o'clock, the President, Mr. COOLEY, in the Chair.

The President reported that the request for $50,000 from the Common Council had been sent to the Mayor.

Mr. DILLON reported that the Counsel to the Corporation had drawn up a complaint in the name of the Corporation and the Commissioners of Central Park, and obtained an injunction from the Supreme Court restraining the Land Commissioners from selling the State Arsenal, and that said sale had been deferred to the 24th inst.

On motion of Mr. STRONG, the Board then went into an election for Chief Engineer of the Park, which resulted in the choice of EGBERT L. VIELE, Esq.

ANDREW H. GREEN, Esq., was chosen Treasurer and after some other unimportant business, the Board adjourned to Tuesday next at 3 o'clock.

THE SUICIDE OF WILLIAM C. WILLIAMS—NO MYSTERY ABOUT IT.—A little boy named HENRY STEIN entering the drug store No. 29 Spring-street, Tuesday morning, at 6 o'clock, discovered the body of WM. COX WILLIAMS, a clerk in the store, lying dead on the floor in the back room. His face was cut and bloody and at first it was supposed that he had been murdered; bottles of prussic acid and other poisons were lying around and many thought he had committed suicide. His wife, an Irish woman, was arrested. She had not, it would appear, been on the most amicable terms with the deceased, and was known to have had a quarrel with him the night before, which resulted in the cute in his face, inflicted with a pestle by her; and in his saturating her clothes with sulphuric acid and almost burning her up.

CORONER CONNERY held an inquest at the Fourteenth Ward Station-house at 9 A. M. yesterday; MRS. WILLIAMS, in her testimony, gave an account of the quarrel as above. It appeared they were both inebriated and that the deceased was habitually drunken. The body was cut up and prussic acid was found in the stomach. His habits had been such that he could not have lived very long. His blood and liver were in a diseased state, and his right lung entirely gone. The Jury found that his death was occasioned by taking prussic acid. The inquest was adjourned at 2 P. M.

Historical Society.

On Tuesday evening the special meeting of the New-York Historical Society took place in the large chapel of the University, the object being to listen to a lecture from G. REMBRANDT PEALE, Esq., of Philadelphia, on the existing portraits of Washington. The hall was completely crowded with an attentive auditory. The aged artist was introduced with a few appropriate remarks by the Hon. LUTHER BRADISH, President of the Society.

Mr. PEALE commenced with some remarks in reference to the personal physique of the immortal hero, and of his distinguishing mental characteristics. His father's first portrait of WASHINGTON was painted in 1772. Mr. PEALE proceeded to give a detailed account of all the other portraits which had been painted by other artists upon these; his remarks were chiefly technical. Mr. PEALE spoke long in reference to STEWART'S pictures of WASHINGTON with mixed eulogy and criticism. Some persons had said that if the father of his country were to rise from the dead, and it were found that he did not resemble STEWART'S portrait he would be repudiated. [Laughter.] Subsequently Mr. PEALE spoke of his own efforts in depicting the features of WASHINGTON, of which he stated he retained the strongest recollection, his best picture being painted from memory, as well as from assistance derived from the works of other artists. He spoke of the "awful reverence" which the presence of WASHINGTON inspired as a fact, and quoted the well-known expression of ERSKINE to that effect, as not hyperbolical.

He exhibited by stroeg reflection a study for a picture of WASHINGTON on horseback, attended by LAFAYETTE. He recounted the transaction. It is about 40 inches by 30. It was offered to Congress, but yet remains in the artist's possession. The head, imperfectly seen in so large a room, is hardly more than three inches in depth. The artist gave the history of the travels of this; picture of its intrinsic merits it was impossible to judge. Mr. PEALE quoted many testimonials as to its excellence. The picture painted from this study was sold to Congress for $2,000, a small sum compared with the price LAWRENCE realized for the portraits of the members of the Holy Alliance.

The audience listened for two hours very patiently and with interest to the pleasant gossip of the speaker.

Marshal Rynders Defines his Position.

NEW-YORK, Wednesday, June 17, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

SIR: It may be considered an unjustifiable waste of time and paper for any man to defend himself against every gross and absurd slander which appeare in a newspaper. But my attention has been directed to a malicious and unwarrantable falsehood contained in a leading article of this morning's Herald, which is of such a mischievous character as will justify a contradiction. In the editorial alluded to it is stated that we have a Democratic faction here aiding and abetting the Seward party in their work of subjugation, and among the chiefs of this treacherous faction are I. V. FOWLER, GEO. N. SANDERS, E. B. HAAT, and ISAIAH RYNDERS. I speak for myself, and denounce that assertion as an unmitigated falsehood in every respect. I ask those who gave the editor of the Herald this information to state when, where, and in what manner I have, either directly or indirectly, aided and abetted the Seward Party in their work of subjugation; or if the editor knows the fact himself, let him proclaim it. The only public meeting which I have attended was in the Park, and the report of the Herald will speak for itself. I then briefly gave my opinions upon the subject of the unjustifiable, and, as I believe, unconstitutional laws, passed by the late Legislature, and I have seen nothing to change my views since.

But I understand the object of this attack, and will inform "all whom it may concern" that I am not to be driven into the support of any faction or clique in the Democratic Party, nor to take part in a quarrel among conflicting authorities which the propriety of my position will not justify.

Yours, &c., &c., ISAIAH RYNDERS.

Waiting for the Comet.

NEW-YORK, Tuesday, June 16, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Daily Times:

I noticed in your paper some time ago, an article on a man who walked up and down Murray-street. You can now see an equally singular man, where he has been for the last ten days, walking up and down the flags opposite Park Row, from morning till night. No one can tell anything about him. The writer of this accosted him at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning. All he could get out of him was that he was waiting for the "Comet;" that he had got private information it would be here precisely at 11 o'clock. Though Saturday has passed, and no comet has come, this mysterious being still pursues his pilgrimage from 7 o'clock in the morning till night. T. M. G.

BOARD OF GOVERNORS.—The Board of Governors of the Almshouse met on Tuesday, at the residence of the Warden of the Almshouse.

The Warden of the Penitentiary forwarded a communication, stating that for some time past there has been received at that institution a bad quality of meat. The last lot was refused by the inmates. He asked that a better quality may be furnished.

Governor TIEMANN said that perhaps a mistake had been made by using as food for the inmates material intended for feed.

Governor MOLONEY said that an inferior quality of provisions was purchased by Mr. Spellman, because the cost was below market prices. The matter was referred to the Committee on Supplies.

A communication was received from the School Trustees of the Twelfth Ward, submitting a resolution adopted by them, June 5, to the effect that the Primary Department of School No. 6 (Randall's Island) be placed in the charge of the Principal of the Grammar Department of said school. Ordered on file.

After the transaction of other routine business the Board adjourned.

MEETING OF THE EXCISE COMMISSIONERS—June 17.—The Board met pursuant to adjournment at the Common Pleas Court room, Part First. Present Commissioners WM. J. HASKETT and ROBERT D. HOLMES. The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

HENRY S. CROCKER, Esq., Gramercy Park House, by his council, J. M. ACKLEY, Esq., presented an application for an innkeeper's license.

After a session of an hour the Board adjourned to meet at 10 A. M. to day, in the same place.

Commissioner HASKETT announced that it is the intention of the New-York Temperance Alliance to prosecute those storekeepers who sell liquor without license in preference to prosecuting members of the Liquor Dealers Association. Respectable storekeepers, he thinks, would do well to procure licenses immediately.

Next Monday the Board will commence to hold the fifty days' session for granting licenses and receiving applications as provided by the law.

COMMODORE STEVENS AND THE YACHT CLUB.—The New-York Yacht Club, at a special meeting, on Tuesday, adopted a series of resolutions deploring the loss which they had susteined in the death of Commodore JOHN C. STEVENS, who founded the Association. The flags of the New-York Yacht Squadron will be hoisted at half mast, while at anchor, for thirty days from the day on which the meeting was held, as a token of respect to his memory.

A copy of the resolutions will be sent to the family of Mr. STEVENS, and to the Commodore of the Royal Yacht Squedron, of England. Commodore STEVENS had especial claims upon the regard of his fellow-members of the Club; through his fostering it has attained its present prosperous condition; and he, it will be remembered, was in command of the yacht America when, in 1851, she astonished our English friends, and carried off the prize, in the regatta at Cowes.

☞ A new and independent line between New-York and Boston has been established at a $3 fare, via Newport, Bristol and Providence. The steamer Governor, now running, will soon be followed by the steamer Eastern City.

☞ The dog law went into effect to-day. All dogs not safely muzzled are outlawed, and when found will be taken to the pound and there drowned.

COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION.—The Commissioners of Emigration met on Wednesday at Staten Island, the President, G. C. VERPLANCK, Esq., in the Chair.

A communication from counsel was read to the Board, relative to a letter from the Quarantine Commissioners of notification of the temporary Quarantine. Counsel's opinion being that the Commissioners are required to take charge of the temporary hospital at Seguinn's Point.

The letter was referred to a Special Committee, consisting of Messrs. CARRIGAN, GARRIGUE, and CURTISS.

The Committee appointed on the subject, reported in favor of paying the special police detailed by the Metropolitan Police Commission for their term of service, and recommended their discharge.

The Board then adjourned. The following is the usual weekly return:

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

BURDELL ESTATE.

Mr. Sanxay's Testimony Resumed—Dr. Burdell's Ledger Produced, Showing Entries made by him on the 28th and 29th of October—Testimony of Hiram N. Stevens, and A. Laflin—Catharine Lamb Relates a Conversation which she heard between Dr. Burdell and Mrs. Cunningham, in which they Speak of Marriage.

SURROGATE'S COURT—June 18.

The examination in the matter of the Burdell Estate was resumed before the Surrogate this morning at 10 o'clock A. M., when the following additional testimony was presented for the claimant:

The following paper, in the hand-writing of Dr Burdell, was offered in evidence by counsel for claimants:

"Received, New-York, Jan. 14, 1856, of Harvey Burdell, $35. it being the balance in full for law services, referee fees, and charges, and all other matters appertaining to the suit of Vorst vs. Vorst, before referee Wm. B. Horne, Esq. This is also all the demand I have against E. A. Cuningham, or her bond or other obligation for costs in the above entitled suit, and this is also a receipt for the suit of E. A. Cuningham. J. R. AMMERMAN. Attorney for Demis Vorst (Hubbard.)

Mr. Sanxay was again called to the stand and verified the following entries in the ledger of Dr. Burdell: Page 47, for filling a tooth on the 28th of October, charged to Mr. ALEX. Frazier's account; also, on page 73 an entry for the receipt of $20 from T. C. Fields on the 29th of October. He further testified as follows: It was a constant habit of Dr. B. to indulge in abuse of his relatives; he used to speak of the female sex as not being entitled to any confidence.

Mr. Clinton desired to show what Dr. Burdell's opinions of the Deity were, and his opinions of female chastity, but the question was objected to by the counsel for the contestant, and ruled out by the Surrogate.

Mr. Clinton offered, in evidence, three checks, numbered 3, 6, and 12. No. 3 read as follows:

NEW-YORK, Nov. 24, 1856.

ARTISANS' BANK:

Pay to Mrs. E. Van Ness, or order, thirty dollars. ($30.) HARVEY BURDELL.

Mr. Clinton contended that the entries in the check-book, which was produced, showed that Mrs. Cuningham's name was taken out. Dr. Burdell having first drawn the check in that name, but as he was then married to her, he did not wish her to use the name of CULNINGHAM, accordingly drew two of the checks in the name of Miss Van Ness and Mr. Gunther.

SIDAM N. STEVENS' TESTIMONY.

Hiram N. Stevens was sworn and testified: I live in Carroll place of this City; am a clerk at No. 70 Chambers street, with Stevens & Co.; have stopped at Taylor's Hotel in Herkimer; have been there five or six times; Taylor used to keep a register two years ago.

ADDISON LAFLIN'S TESTIMONY.

Addison Laflin sworn and testified: Am a paper manufacturer; have resided in the village of Herkimer about four years: knew the late Harvey Burdell; have seen him at Herkimer; I came on the 27th of October to New-York; took the steamboat train at five o'clock P. M.; did not see Dr. Burdell in that train, and did not see him on board the New World coming down the river; am in the habit of keeping a memorandum, in which I find that I left for New-York on the 27th of October; have not the book with me.

Cross examination—Never had any business with Dr. Burdell; I come in what is called the express train in which there is usually a large number of the passengers; there are frequently seven or eight cars in the train; have no recollection of seeing any body at the depôt whom I knew.

CATHERINE LAMB'S TESTIMONY.

Catherine Lamb was sworn, and testified as follows—Live at No. 174 Fourth-avenue; am housemaid with Mrs. Van Ness; lived with Mrs. Burdell five years ago, and left her last June two years ago; lived with her when she resided at Twenty-fourth street; saw Dr. Burdell when he came there; he used to come there often—came every day, sometimes twice a day, to see Mrs. Cunningham; he used to go out with her; they treated each other very kindly, indeed; saw Dr. Burdell last October, at No. 31 Bond-street; Mrs. Cunningham was present when I saw Dr. Burdell; Mrs. C. asked me to come and live with her; I told her I heard she was going to break up house; she said no, she was going to be married; I asked who with; she said with Dr. Burdell; I said, "Are you, Doctor?" and he said "Yes, and you can come and live with us;" I came down the next day to No. 31 Bond-street for him to finish my teeth; he said then, "wouldn't I come back;" I said I would see about it, and that was all.

Cross examination—Do not know whether it was middle of the month; I know it was the month of October; I have told no person about it until I told Mrs. Burdell the other evening; she was making me about it at No. 31 Bond-street; Mrs. Cunningham sent for me and asked me if I remembered this; Mrs. Cunningham did not ask me anything about what day of the month it was; the finishing of my teeth took about half an hour; did not have much conversation with the Doctor; Mrs. Cunningham was not present the second day, when the Doctor was finishing my teeth; it was Thursday when he fixed my teeth first; did not tell Mrs. Cunningham that it was Thursday; I paid him $5 50 for fixing my teeth; did not find him busy when I went there; went in at the basement door and went up stairs; did not see Hannah Conlon or Mary Donohue or Mary Murphy; have not been doing any work for Mrs. C. lately; have been staying two years this June with Mrs. Van Ness; have told Mrs. Van Ness about it since I saw Mrs. C.; did not know Mrs. Van Ness was going to be a witness; heard of the murder at the time of it; have been in the habit of calling this lady Mrs. Burdell ever since she was in the Tombs; heard Mrs. Van Ness call her so and also Miss Van Ness; went twice to see Mrs. C. in the Tombs; have seen her at Mrs. Van Ness' once since she was at the Tombs; don't remember who told me that Mrs. C. was married; I didn't want to mention the conversation I heard, because I had my own business to attend to; Mrs. C. asked me if I remembered what Dr. B. said to her when I got my teeth filled; I said yes; she did not tell me last week what Dr. Burdell had said; she asked me if I remembered what it was that Dr. B. said when he fixed my teeth, that is all; she never asked me what Dr. B. said at any other time than the time when he fixed my teeth; I am sure of this; she never talked to me about any other conversations of Dr. Burdell's, or asked me anything about what she said before or after that time; the Doctor was a pretty good-natured man at the time when he fixed my teeth; this conversation took place while he was fixing my teeth; this conversation in which I asked him if he was going to be married, and he said yes; never asked him the question but this once.

Q.—Who talked to you about testifying to-day? A.—They sent me a paper; Miss Van Ness gave it to me; she said I would have to come down here; this was last Friday; don't remember whether it was before or after I talked with Mrs. C.; Miss Van Ness didn't say anything else in that conversation; I told Mrs. Van Ness and Miss Van Ness that I had to come here; don't know whether it was the same day or after; have had no conversation about it with any of the other members of Mrs. C.'s family.

ABNER LANE'S TESTIMONY.

Abner Lane was sworn, and testified as follows: My business is that of agent for oil paintings; I served a subpœna on Dr. Burdell.

Q.—Is that the original subpœna of which you left a copy? [handing the paper.] A.—Yes, Sir; I served it on him at No. 31 Bond-street, on the 27th of October; he talked ten or fifteen minutes about witnesses, and then went together to Dr. Main's office, and there had room talk about one or two witnesses.

Cross-examination—Was at the Court, on this business, two or three times, but not at this time; I was a supernumerary in the office of my brother, who is a lawyer, and who was an attorney for Griffin, in the suit of Warner vs. Griffin; Dr. Burdell was the first person I served a subpœna on; Dr. Main the second; the witness also gave the names of other parties on whom he served subpœnas;) I saw my brother on the 28th, at the office, after dinner; he said to me: "I do not know but I may want to use you again, to serve his subpœnas again;" I subpœnaed only two or three the second time—Dr. Nait and another gentleman, whose name I can't recollect; did not subpœna Dr. Burdell or Dr. Maie, the second time; when I subpœnaed Dr. Burdell it might have been twelve or one o'clock: my brother handed me the subpœna at seven or eight o'clock in the morning; I rang the bell at the Doctor's, and he came to the door; couldn't say that my brother was engaged the next day after the witnesses were subpœned in the trial of the case; was not in the court on the 29th or 29th of October; knew that the trial was coming on the 28th; the case was put off twice, I think; it might have been put off three or four days the last time: the trial lasted, on and off, some week or ten days; I left the office before it was through; the indorsement on the subpœna is not in my handwriting.

Judge Dean said that it was absolutely necessary for him to leave this case for the day. When he was taken from here yesterday, the summons was such that he did not feel authorized to obey it. He was detained until after 9 o'clock, so that he had been unable to see any of his associates this morning. He asked the Court for a recess of half an hour that he might consult with them in regard to the facts of which he was in possession, so that they might go on with the case.

A recess of half an hour was accordingly ordered.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD D. STILWELL.

Richard D. Stilwell, a clerk of the U. S. Circuit Court, was sworn, and verified the Calendar of that Court for the October Term of 1856, in which the case of Warner vs. Griffin was set down for October 27, and in which Dr. Burdell had been subpœnaed as a witness.

Upon the cross-examination, the witness stated that no Jury causes were tried on that day, nor on the 28th; the case taken up on the 29th was that of Sickles vs. Borden, a patent case about a steam cut-off. The trial of the case, Warner vs. Griffin, was commenced on the 10th day of November.

TESTIMONY OF JOHN SPARKS.

Mr. John Sparks was then called and testified as follows: I am now, and have been, for a number of years, a Deputy Clerk of the Court of Sessions and Oyer and Terminer; have heard of Cyrenus Stevens; the indictment now shown me (Mr. Clinton having handed the witness some papers) was found in the Court of Common Pleas and Oyer and Terminer on the 15th of June, 1832, against Cyrenus Stevens for forgery in the second degree.

Mr. Tilden—I wish to make the point whether the counsel thinks the indictment would hurt anybody.

Mr. Clinton—Mr. Stevens swore, upon his examination, that he was never indicted in his life.

TESTIMONY OF GILBERT P. HAYS.

Gilbert F. Hays was then called, and testified as follows: Have been a policeman of this City for the last twenty-five years; am now an officer appointed by the Sheriff; I know Cyrenus Stevens; have known him by reputation for twenty-five years; during that time his character has been very bad, as bad as bad can be.

By Mr. Clinton—Do you know anything about his occupation?

The Surrogate—That course of inquiry will not do. We cannot try him here.

Q.—What is his reputation for truth and veracity? A.—I would not believe him under oath in any manner or shape.

Q.—I would ask you whether he is a man well known to the Police?

Mr. Edwards objected to the question.

Mr. Clinton—What I propose to prove by this witness and other Policemen—and it is unfortunate that the father of this gentleman is not alive, distinguished as he was for his great skill in Police matters—is this: that for the last thirty-five years, if not more, Mr. Stevens has been known to the Police as a counterfeiter and receiver of stolen goods, and that his associations during all the period to which I have referred have been with thieves and counterfeiters. Your Honor knows the testimony which he gave before you, and I think it is right that we should know who this pure and spotless witness was who swears away the character of this lady.

Mr. Tilden—I would suggest to your Honor, that it was proved by the office boys and by several other persons of unimpeachable character that Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were in association with the plaintiff, the claimant in this case. If this is offered as rebutting testimony to shew that any character which she might have acquired is impaired by associations with them by which the gentleman alleges that they have been surrounded, I do not know but it would be legitimate.

Mr. Clinton—The counsel does not object, then, to the question.

The Surrogate—I shall not allow it, as I do not intend to sit here and try crimes.

Mr. Edwards—With regard to this indictment there is an affidavit of Stevens' accompanying it to the effect that he was not guilty of forgery.

Mr. Clinton said that the indictment was only offered by him in evidence.

By Mr Clinton—What has been Stevens' reputation as to truth and veracity since the time you first knew him down to the present time? A.—Very bad, and I would not believe him under oath in any manner and shape, directly or indirectly.

Mr. Edwards—I presume all the papers about the forgery are to be received.

Mr. Clinton—I do not want to offer anything but the indictment.

The Surrogate reserved the question whether he would admit the affidavit or not.

TESTIMONY OF JAMES B. WELSH.

James B. Welsh was then called and testified as follows: I keep a hotel at present; was many years a policeman, but left the service when the new organization came in, which was about ten years ago; knew Cyrenus Stevens well when I was upon the police; I first knew him about 25 years ago or thereabouts; his reputation has been bad from that time until the present, as dealing in counterfeit money and such kind of business; I would not believe him under oath.

JAMES WILSON'S TESTIMONY.

Mr. James Wilson was next sworn, and testified as follows: I am a bed-joiner, residing at Elizabethport, New Jersey, and was a tenant of Dr. Burdell for two years, up to the time of his death; have seen him at my house five or six times, and I saw Mrs. Cunningham there with the Doctor about a year ago; on the Tuesday or Wednesday of the week before the murder I met the Doctor at the corner of Broadway and Broome streets; I was on my way to see him upon business when I met him; I said, "How do you do, Doctor," and said he, "how do you do, Wilson;" I said, "how is Mrs. Burdell, or Mrs. Burdell that is to be," and he says, "it is Mrs. B. I am sorry to say, or I am sorry for it;" I had joked with him two or three times before, and asked him how the lady was that he brought down to our house.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

Could not say when it was that I asked him this question, but it was when he came for rent; when I met him at the corner of Broadway and Broome streets we were together some five or six minutes; when he was down to our house in January, if I recollect right, I asked him if he knew of anybody who had any money to loan, and he said that he could let me have a little in a week or two; that was the reason I was going to see him, when I met him; he said he was sorry he could not accommodate me then; that was a main part of the conversation; I asked him if he would not take a ball ticket to a fireman's ball which was to be given in our ward; he said he never took such tickets; I did not feel much interest about Mrs. Cunningham, but I remember what was said about her; I said, "How is Mrs. C. ?" or "How is Mrs. Burdell that is to be?" he replied, "I am sorry to say it is Mrs. Burdell," or, "I am sorry that it is Mrs. Burdell;" he did not say he was sorry "if it was Mrs. Burdell;" he seemed very solemn in saying it, but I can't say that he felt very bad; I am not aware that there were any other words said about this affair but those I have repeated; the first person I mentioned this conversation to was Mr. Fairbanks, of Elizabethport, some time last week; Mr. F. asked me if I was going on with the drain about my house; I said that I was going to have nothing to do with it, for I did not know how the property was to be settled; I asked if he had any idea how it was to be settled; he said that Mrs. Burdell was going to be the owner of the property; Mr. Fairbanks is not the agent of the property; there is none of the rent in arrear; in the conversation with Mr. Fairbanks he did not say whether the estate was settled or not, but he said he did not see anything to keep her out of it; I said if Mrs. Burdell knew what I did she would have had me on the stand; then he asked me, what do you know, and I told him the conversation that passed between me and the Doctor; he said he would send her word; I have said to my wife and several others that Mrs. Cunningham was Mrs. Burdell, and that I had no doubt about it, that the Doctor had told me so; the Doctor did not seem to be very lively when I talked with him at the time I met him; I thought he appeared sad; have not seen Mrs. Cunningham recently; the first person I talked with after I talked with Mr. Fairbanks was my wife, and I told her that Mr. Fairbanks thought I ought to come down here; she said I ought not to have anything to do with the matter; I came directly here and the subpœna was put into my hands at a quarter past twelve o'clock by Mr. Schenck; I never mentioned to my wife the conversation I have given until the murder case; paid $100 a year for the rent of my house; never had any business with Dr. Burdell except as a tenant.

JEROME B FELLOWS' TESTIMONY.

Mr. Jerome B. Fellows was then sworn, and testified as follows: Am a merchant at No. 30 Pearl-street, and reside at No. 22 Bond street; have seen Dr. Burdell; was present at the Coroner's inquest at the first Sunday when Rev. Mr. Marvine was there; had a conversation with him after he was examined before the Coroner and came down stairs; Mr. Dennison, one of the Directors of the Artisans' Bank, Mr. Frazier and Mr. Howell, I think were present also; Mr. Marvine was talking about the murder and I stood listening; after he got through I asked him whether or not it was Dr. Burdell that he married, and he told me that he was positive as he could be that it was Dr. Burdell, but at the same time as Eckel was a similar-looking man it might be doubtful; if he could see Eckel he could make up his mind immediately.

CROSS-EXAMINATION.

This was after Mr. Marvine had come down stairs; he did not say that he was as positive as any man could be; he stood very near me so that I could hear him.

Mr. Clinton suggested that the Surrogate adjourn now, it being 4 o'clock, until to-morrow morning. They were prepared to finish their testimony in half an hour more. He made this announcement so that counsel might be prepared upon the other side.

The Surrogate then adjourned the Court till to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS—SPECIAL TERM.

Before Judge Brady.

James A. Philips vs. Edward J. Powers.—Motion granted.

John C. Wheeler, &c., vs. F. A. Fowler.—Motion for leave to commence action granted.

LONG ISLAND.

KINGS COUNTY BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—An adjourned meeting of this Board was held on Tuesday.

The Vagrant Act—A committee reported in favor of leasing the old Penitentiary building to the City of Brooklyn at the nominal sum of $100, to be used as an Asylum under the Vagrant Act of 1853, which requires all idle and truant children about the streets, who have no parents and who have parents and they refuse to care for them, to be arrested by the police and cared for at the public expense. The City has appropriated $10,000 for this project.

The report was adopted.

Assembly District—The committee having in charge the redistricting of the County into seven instead of three Assembly Districts, reported that they had not been able to agree upon any one plan, but each member of the Committee submitted a plan, making three, from which the Board could select.

The following plan was adopted:

No. Dist	Ward or Town.	Rep. Pop. of Ward or Town.	Rep. Pop of Dist
1	New Utrecht	1713
	Gravesend	859
	Flatlands	1201

The vote stood as follows:

Ayes—Mayor Powell, Supervisors McLaughlin, White, Bell, Bleecker, Hamilton, Smith, Campbell, Delaney, Cummings, Lindsey, Bontelle, Woodworth, Bergen, Schoonmaker, Stryker, Ryder—17.

Noes—Studwell, Adams, Will, Cross.

Supervisor BLEECKER, who reported the plan adopted, said he did so, not because it was the best division that could be made for the community, but because it was best for the Democratic party, and he believed Democracy the best for any community.

A POLICEMAN ASSAULTED.—Sergeant PATTERSON, of the Second Precinct, Brooklyn, while going his rounds Monday night, was attacked and severely beaten by a gang of rowdies, who said they made the attack because he was a "Metropolitan." A complaint has been made against several of the assailants, who will probably be arrested to-day.

ALLEGED BRIBERY.—In the Brooklyn Common Council, Monday evening, Alderman KALBFLEISCH, of the Eighteenth Ward, charged that at least one member of the Board of Health had received a bribe, and offered a resolution appointing a committee to investigate. He subsequently based his charge upon rumor, and the resolution was adopted.

DISEASED MEAT.—WILLIAM DOUGHERTY and JOHN TALBOT, keepers of a meat-market in Jay-street, Brooklyn, were held, on Tuesday, by Justice CORSWELL, to answer a charge of selling diseased meat.

☞ The Health Officer of Brooklyn reports eighty deaths for the week ending Saturday last.

NEW-YORK, THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1857.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

There was no blood shed in the City yesterday on account of the Mayor's resistance to the laws. Four regiments were under arms throughout the day, but were not called into active service. The Mayor was not taken before Recorder SMITH, as was the programme; but during the day he admitted the authority of the Metropolitan Police by accepting the service of a warrant at their hands upon him, Gen. SANDFORD standing by and assuring him that he must. Judge RUSSELL three times during the day changed the place at which the writ of habeas corpus was made returnable.

On the return of the writ before Judge RUSSELL, at 2 o'clock, Judge DEAN argued the motion to discharge Mayor WOOD, contending that the affidavit on which the warrant had been issued was insufficient, and also that the Mayor was not amenable to arrest for acts done in his official capacity.

Attorney-General HALL replied, quoting the statute, to show that a Magistrate had discretion to issue a warrant on the allegation of an offence being committed, when founded on information and belief. The other point, that the Mayor could not be indicted for any act done in his official capacity, was, he argued, a monstrous proposition, untenable and unsupported by authority. Judge RUSSELL reserved his decision until 3 o'clock to-day, if prepared, or if not then, to Friday, the Mayor in the meantime to continue in the custody of the Sheriff.

The anticipations of a riot continued until near sundown. Several alarms of fire increased the excitement, and the parade of sundry companies of military in the street tended to complicate the matter. The papers, however, of which frequent editions were issued throughout the day kept the people so well informed that in ten minutes after the adjournment of the Court of Sessions comparative quiet was restored. The showers of the afternoon and the heavy rain of the evening contributed much towards keeping the peace. The following dispatch was received last evening from Boston:

GOVERNOR KING left Boston this afternoon in the 3 o'clock train for New-York, accompanied by Colonels STEWARD and LEROY of his staff. During the forenoon he received a dispatch signed by some of the State Police Commissioners requiring his immediate return, and asking that the Seventh Regiment might be ordered immediately to New-York as their presence was indispensable. The Governor accordingly immediately drew up and signed an order for the regiment to leave at 5½ o'clock. After the Governor had gone, however, and all the preparations had been made for the return of the regiment, Col. DURYEA received a telegraphic message from General SANDFORD telling him there was no necessity for his immediate return, whereupon Col. DURYEA countermanded the order for the return of the regiment.

The Governor arrived in town about midnight.

The argument in the Court of Appeals in the Metropolitan Police case was proceeded with yesterday, by Messrs. O'CONNOR for Mayor WOOD, and EVARTS and CUTTING for the new Commissioners. Judge EDMONDS will speak this morning and close the argument. It is expected that a decision will not be rendered until the latter part of next week.

The letter from Gen. WILLIAM WALKER, of Nicaragua, to the President of the United States, embodying a protest against the recent action of Commander DAVIS, of the sloop-of-war St. Mary's, will be found in our columns this morning. He sets out with a claim to be "the rightful and lawful Chief Executive" of Nicaragua, and details all the circumstances of his connection with the fortunes of that Republic, from his first correspondence with CASTILLON to the seizure of the Granada by Capt. DAVIS and the subsequent capitulation. He is very bitter against Capt. DAVIS and his officers, and calls upon the President to take such action as will entirely clear the Government of the United States from "any participation in the insults and degradation which Nicaragua has received" at their hands.

The celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill at Boston yesterday was a grand affair. The great feature of the occasion was the inauguration of a statue of Gen. WARREN, whose name is inseparably connected with the historical event commemorated. The inauguration address was delivered by Hon. EDWARD EVERETT, and the response was made by Hon. GEORGE WASHINGTON WARREN, President of the Bunker Hill Monument Association. Both speeches—for advance copies of which we are indebted to the courtesy of members of the Boston Press—will be found in full elsewhere, together with a very full telegraphic sketch of all the other proceedings of interest.

The Kansas Free-State Legislature met at Topeka on the 9th inst., but no quorum was present on the first day. On the 11th, W. A. PHILLIPS was elected by the Senate U. S. Senator, in place of Col. LANE. The Free-State Convention also met on the 9th, and the former action of the Free-State men, disowning the Territorial Government, etc., was reaffirmed. The action of the Convention is sustained by the Legislature.

AUGUSTE PAROT, one of the prisoners in the French Extradition case, which was recently decided by Commissioner BETTS, was yesterday given into the custody of the Deputy Jailor of Eldridge-street Jail, acting on behalf of the Sheriff, by United States Marshal RYNDERS. Commissioner BETTS denied an application of the French Consul-General to reopen the case, and decided that the United States had no authority to detain PAROT. With the assistance of his counsel, Messrs. TOWNSHEND and GALBRAITH, the prisoner succeeded in making his escape from the Deputy soon after his surrender by the Marshal.

Commencement at Spingler Institute came off yesterday morning with éclat. The exercises were commenced at 11 o'clock. After a chant—"Thy will be done"—a selection from the Scriptures was read and prayer offered. An original song—"Farewell to the Graduates"—appropriate to the occasion, followed. Compositions by members of the graduating classes were read, parting hymns were sung, and Dr. GORHAM D. ABBOTT, the Principal, presented diplomas to the senior class with an affecting address. In the evening the twenty-third soirée musicale, under the direction of Professors BERG and LEATI, closed the anniversary exercises of the Institute. There were duetts, and solos, and choruses, and performances on the harp and piano-forte, all by pupils of the School. It was an interesting occasion and seemed to be especially enjoyed by the parents and friends of the pupils, who thronged the rooms. The following are the members of the Graduating Class:—Misses Harriet V. Abbott, Me.; Fannie Anderson, N. Y.; Mary S. Andrews, N. Y.; Laura M. Ayres, Tenn.; Laura J. Baker, N. J.; Henrietta V. Barnum, N. Y.; Fannie Burch, N. Y.; Ellen F. Clark, N. Y.; Annie E. Goulson, Miss.; Clara B. Coventry, N. Y.; Rebecca Curtis, N. Y.; Elizabeth C. Delano, Ohio; Virginia M. Gibson, N. Y.; Anna Gilman, Me.; Sarah H. Hills, N. Y.; Helen W. Lndlow, N. Y.; Gertrude McNamee, N. Y.; Mary Anna Palmer, N. Y.; Josephine Perry, N. Y.; S. Agnes Pinney, N. Y.; Harriett O. Scultz, N. Y.; Catharine L. Smith, N. Y.; Carrie E. Stiles, N. J.; Elizabeth J. Stokes, N. Y.; Adelaide Van Dyke, N. Y.

The testimony in the matter of the "Burdell Estate" is now nearly all presented before the Surrogate, the counsel for the claimant having announced, at the close of yesterday's proceedings, that they would finish this morning in half an hour. About a dozen witnesses were examined yesterday. CATHARINE LAMB testified to a conversation, last October, between the Doctor and Mrs. CUNNINGHAM, at No. 31 Bond street, in which they talked of their marriage, and asked CATHARINE to come and live with them. Dr. BURDELL'S ledger was produced, showing entries made by him on the 28th and 29th of October. Witnesses were introduced to impeach the testimony of CYRENUS STEVENS. It is understood that the counsel will not sum up to-morrow, but that a recess of two or three days will be taken before their arguments will be made.

The steward of the steamship Fulton was arrested yesterday charged with attempting to smuggle some diamonds and other precious stones, worth about $50,000, into this port. He was held to bail in the sum of $5,000, before United States Commissioner BRINGMAN, to answer the charge. The diamonds have been given over to the keeping of the Collector of the Port.

Broadway was thoroughly swept, on Monday night, from Union-square to Bowling Green. It was again swept on Tuesday night, with exception of that portion of it which flanks the Park. The contractor, Mr. SMITH, thought it was not safe to risk the machines in that part of the street while the excited crowd around the City Hall remained there. The same considerations deterred them only from cleaning that part of Broadway last night.

A special meeting of the New-York Academy of Medicine was held last evening, at which a very valuable paper was read by Dr. SQUIB, of the U. S. N., on the manufacture, properties and tests of chloroform. Dr. CLARK continued the discussion of puerperal fever, in some very interesting statements. Dr. MCNULTY presented some resolutions on the filth of the City.

The Board of Education failed to hold its regular session last evening for the want of a quorum.

The Live Stock Market showed less activity and less firmness yesterday. The week's receipts of Beeves were 524 less than last week—and about 1,000 less than the weekly average for last year. There were more available, however, than butchers required,—at the high rates prevailing. A more plentiful supply of Mutton deducts somewhat from the Beef trade,—and strawberries and fresh vegetables come in for competition with the heavier and more costly meat-diet. Yet prices for Beeves at Forty-Fourth-street presented no noticeable change as compared with those of last week,—ranging from 11c.@13c. per lb.

The Appointment of Street Commissioner.

It is, of course, understood by every one, that the tumults which have been excited by the Mayor, during the past three days, derive from the question—Who has the right to hold, or to fill the office of Street Commissioner, made vacant by the death of Mr. TAYLOR? There are three individuals who claim the Street Commissioner's place, viz., Mr. DANIEL D. CONOVER, the appointee of Governor KING; Mr. CHARLES DEVLIN, nominated by the Mayor, and confirmed by the Board of Aldermen; and Mr. CHARLES TURNER, who held the post of Deputy under the late incumbent. Each of the aspirants affects to recognize the new Charter, the ordinances of the Common Council, and the statutes of the State, as guides of action in the premises. It only remains, therefore, to be seen what the law is, in order to judge of the degree of weight which ought to attach to the respective pretensions of the three candidates. Mr. DEVLIN is an adherent of the political fortunes of Mr. FERNANDO WOOD, though it is understood he aided the election of the late Street Commissioner; Mr. CONOVER is a political friend of Governor KING; and Mr. TURNER is a Whig Know-Nothing; but it is to be hoped that political feeling will be sufficiently disregarded by the thinking masses of the people to enable them to form a judgment at the present time, in accordance with law, and not biased by mere party instincts.

Mayor WOOD founds his claim to nominate a Street Commissioner solely upon the 19th section of the new charter. It reads as follows:

"The Mayor, Comptroller and Counsel to the Corporation, shall each be elected by the electors of the City; the Mayor for the term of two years, the Counsel to the Corporation for the term of three years, and the Comptroller for the term of four years. The Comptroller shall be voted for upon a separate ballot. The other heads of departments shall be appointed by the Mayor, with the advice and consent of the Board of Aldermen. The Board of Aldermen shall have power to confirm or reject all nominations of officers made by the Mayor; and whenever any person nominated by the Mayor shall be rejected by the Board of Aldermen, the Mayor shall immediately nominate another person."

If the clause in italics stood alone, or if there were no limitation to it elsewhere, it might be considered as conclusive in favor of the Mayor. There are other provisions, however, which show that the possibility of vacancies occurring in the superintendence of Departments, previous to the expiration, on the 1st of January, 1858, of Mr. TAYLOR'S term, was probably contemplated by the framers of the new Charter, and that the right of Mr. WOOD to fill them was, in any case, explicitly provided against. The 51st section of the Charter reads as follows:

"The Mayor, Aldermen and Councilmen, PROVIDED FOR IN THIS ACT, shall be elected at the first election for Charter Officers to be held after the passage hereof, which election shall take place on the first Tuesday OF DECEMBER, 1857."

As the Charter also declares, that the "Street Commissioner shall continue in office until the expiration of his term," which would have been at a period subsequent to the next election, the present Mayor cannot, by any process of reasoning, suppose himself to be the "Mayor provided for in the Act," who shall be elected "on the first Tuesday of December, 1857." No other "Mayor" than such future incumbent of the office of Chief Executive, as the people may choose, can supply vacancies under the authority conferred by the 19th section. Power to act in the present emergency, is bestowed by the Charter upon no one; nor is any direct provision whatsoever made by it for filling the office recently held by Mr. TAYLOR. It becomes necessary to look elsewhere for a means of solving the difficulty. The decision of Hon. NICHOLAS HILL, than whom a higher legal authority could scarcely have been appealed to by Governor KING, is based upon this necessity. Respecting the illegality of any appointment to the office by the Mayor, he is most explicit, as follows:

"No power over this vacancy is given to the Mayor and Board of Aldermen by the 19th or any other section of the amended charter. Even the power of appointment given by that section was not to take effect, in respect to this office, until the expiration of the term of the deceased incumbent. (Sec. 51.) The cases, moreover, in which the power to fill vacancies was intrusted to the Mayor and Aldermen are expressly designated, and their right to fill them in cases not designated, is thus excluded by implication." (Section 20.)

And he adds:

"I know of no special enactment or other law authorizing the filling of this vacancy, except the statute passed Feb. 3, 1849, (Laws of 1849, Sec. 28,) and it seems to me that the case comes fairly within the power there given to the Governor."

The act to which Mr. HILL refers, reads as follows:

"Whenever vacancies shall exist or shall occur in any of the offices of this State, where no provision is now made by law for filling the same, the Governor shall appoint some suitable person who may be eligible to the office so vacant or to become vacant, to execute the duties thereof, until the commencement of the political year next succeeding the first annual election, after the happening of the vacancy at which such officer could be by law elected, and the person so appointed to fill such vacancy, shall possess all the rights and powers, and be subject to all the liabilities, duties and obligations of such officer as they are now or may hereafter be prescribed by law; but nothing in this act contained shall authorize the Governor to fill a vacancy in the office of County Judge and Surrogate, or either of them, where provision is made by law for the election of local officers under the 15th section of article 6 of the Constitution of this State."

The question might arise how far the Street Commissioner is to be considered an "officer of this State," but as "local officers," under State laws, are referred to as embraced within the meaning of the act, this objection seems to be sufficiently disposed of. It is the well-founded opinion of Mr. HILL, who is an out-and-out Democrat, as well as of the Governor, that the latter has the power of making the appointment, which the Mayor cannot, and, in spite of the intrusion of Mr. DEVLIN, and the disturbances to which the WOOD struggle for more patronage has given rise, this will probably be the view which will be sustained by the Courts.

The ordinance of 1849, organizing the Departments of the Municipal Government, provides that "in case of a vacancy in the office of Street Commissioner, the Deputy shall act as Street Commissioner, until the vacancy shall be supplied by a new appointment, and until the person appointed shall be duly qualified." Mr. TURNER, Deputy of the late Commissioner, claims office under this ordinance, and justly claimed, for some days, that the Mayor had no legal right to supersede him. If, however, as appears from the statute of 1849, the right of filling offices vacated, for which there is "no other provision by law," is vested in the Governor, Mr. CONOVER is now his superior officer, and, distasteful as it may be to him individually, it is his duty to submit to the law.

The Era of Rowdies.

We are fast verging on a period when physical strength will become the great standard of fitness for public office. The system of competitive examinations so long in use in that old and highly-respectable concern, the Chinese Empire, and which is gradually working its way into adoption in many European countries, has clearly no chance of finding favor in our eyes. If any great change takes place in our mode of filling vacancies—if the claims of merit are ever substituted for those of political partisanship, it will certainly not be merit of a moral or intellectual kind. For the examiner's chair, we shall substitute a weighing-machine, a crowbar, or boxing-gloves. Instead of extorting from candidates specimens of English composition, or boring them with questions on history or geography, calling for the solution of a problem, or the working out of an equation, upon the absurd plan now pursued in London, we shall ascertain their dead weight, their height in their stockings, their breadth around the chest, their freedom from organic disease, and the length of their arms. The old world has tried, with more or less success, the government of birth, of wealth, of talent, and of military organization. It will be our proud lot to inaugurate the reign of pure and unmitigated brute force. A famous buffer, far from pursuing a disreputable calling and winning ignoble triumphs, may then aspire with confidence to the highest offices in the State. A man of two hundred pounds weight may feel tolerably sure of a seat in the Common Council. Five feet ten will give one a fair chance of the office of District-Attorney. A six-footer will have his choice either of the Street Commissionership, or a seat on the bench of the Supreme Court. Those who rise much above the average of height or rotundity, by dint of being fat and strong, extend their reputation beyond their native State, become leaders of parties, and find federal offices fall within their grasp. A man's paunch or calves will get him a Secretaryship of State, or a foreign embassy, or he will be serenaded for his embonpoint. How the price of beef would rise, and the consumption of beer extend! What honors would await all professors of the noble art of self-defence. Good hits would then bring down as enthusiastic applause as now; but they would be hits delivered by the clenched fist, and not sparks from a glowing intellect. Seeing a giant in the street, men would say—"What a Mayor he would make," or "What an Attorney-General he might become." Mind would at last give way to muscle, and ideas to inches.

We have no doubt that many of our readers, on perusing the above suggestions, will accuse us of extravagance. Nothing can be further from our intention than either to outrage probability, or practice on public credulity. That we are really tending in this direction, a very small amount of attention to what is passing around us will show. A man has clearly no chance in political life, now-a-days, unless he is a practiced bruiser. For instance: Has the position of Hon. DANIEL E. SICKLES not been lowered by his supposititious castigation at the hands of Mr. MCLEOD MURPHY? or has MURPHY not suffered from being worsted in a personal encounter with SICKLES? We know not which way the issue went, but, on whichever side the victory lay, the illustration is equally good. Capt. RYNDERS is certainly not a large man, but he is an active and determined man, and, in a prize-fight, we have not the slightest doubt he would deliver some very hard knocks upon his adversary's countenance. The gallant officer, until this year, never attracted public attention save by displays of physical force. What he wants in size he makes up for in vigor, and has consequently been appointed United States Marshal. We are sorry that the principle upon which the Federal authorities have so wisely acted in his case is not adhered to more rigidly in our selection of our State and Municipal officers. The right to fill offices in this city is no longer determined by the Courts of Justice, or the mandates of the Executive. The new Commissioners of Police, for instance, can only maintain their position by dint of scientific bruising, on the part of their adherents. The possession of station-houses, the right to capture felons are both determined by personal encounters between rival ministers of the law. The tenacity with which Captain SPEIGHT held on to the railings in the Street Commissioner's office the other day has evidently created a profound impression on the public mind. A public official, whom twelve men cannot drag out of an office, is prima facie lawfully appointed; but he must take into account that the weight of this authority is somewhat lessened by the fact that he was very near being throttled by a large Irishman, named "MULLIGAN," and MULLIGAN is one of Mayor WOOD'S party. Had MULLIGAN not compressed Mr. SPEIGHT'S windpipe, we should certainly have been prepared to set down the Constitutionality of the Metropolitan Police act as beyond question. As it is, we have our doubts.

Then take the case of Mr. CONOVER. We are not aware what is the precise extent of this gentleman's bodily powers, but after what has occurred, it is quite plain to us that his appointment is not simply illegal, but a gross blunder. Governor KING should have appointed a more muscular man. It is mere driveling to quote the Revised Statutes, or the new Charter, to us, in support of the claims of a man to an office of such importance as the Street Commissionership, who has allowed himself, though aided by two clerks, to be dragged ignominiously from his office desk, and deposited in the street with torn clothes and ruffled countenance. He ought to have given TURNER a black eye by way of confirming his appointment as Deputy, and then delivered a few such taps on the "knowledge boxes" of Mayor WOOD'S police as would have at least vindicated Governor KING'S judgment in selecting him. More care is evidently called for at the hands of the Republican Party in making its nominations. It wants practiced buffers—men long in the arms, broad in the chest, with plenty of wind, and not under six feet, and who "strike from the shoulder"—men who "travel on their muscle." We want to have an end of the present state of anarchy, and we know of no way of arriving at that desirable consummation so soon as by the infliction by one party upon the other of a thorough and effectual drubbing, to establish the superiority of one side or the other.

COMPETITION FOR THE GREAT EASTERN.—A marvelous spirit of hospitality is shown by some of our neighbors in their desire to receive the Great Eastern on her first passage from England to this Continent. Norfolk and Portland have both sent forward a polite request to be permitted the honor of entertaining the monster on her arrival, although it is by no means certain that even though she should ever leave port at all she would come to this country. Unless she come across the Atlantic on an experimental trip merely, whatever cargo she may bring, whether of merchandise or human beings, its destination would probably be for this port, and it would be decidedly the more sensible plan for her to come here.

The only obstacles in the way of her coming to New-York, is the lack of a sufficient depth of water on the bar of Sandy Hook. But New-York has the advantage which no other sea port on the Atlantic Coast can boast of, of two entrances from the ocean, and, if the gate way by Sandy Hook is deficient in water, there is no such deficiency through that other entrance, which is known by the name of Hell-Gate; and this latter entrance, notwithstanding its unpromising name, is equally safe as the other, and much more picturesque and pleasant, while the water is deep enough for a ship twice the size of the Great Eastern, great as she is. It is through Hell-Gate that three or four of our largest steamers make their daily passages, and there is no reason why the Great Eastern should not come to New-York through that entrance. In fact Hell-Gate is within the City limits, and the monster steamer might lie there much more securely and comfortably than she can in the Thames where she is built. We have no wish to deprive either Norfolk or Portland of whatever advantages are to be derived from the great ship; but our merchants and City officials should not permit the idea to be sent abroad that there is any obstacle to the entrance of the Great Eastern to our port if her proprietors should be desirous of sending her here; and, if the object be to let her be seen by the largest number of persons New-York is the proper place for her to be sent to.

THE MAYOR'S ROAD TO RUIN.—If Mayor WOOD had tried his best to gratify his worst enemy he could not have accomplished that object more effectually than he has done by his conduct during the past ten days. If he had resigned his office, as he once positively threatened to do on the event of a certain contingency which has since happened, he would have falsified the predictions of his enemies and gained a character for sincerity, at least. But he has now not only justified the worst things that have been said of him, but shown himself more audacious than any one supposed him capable of being. He must either be as mad as a March hare, or else he must believe all the inhabitants of this City to be a pack of imbeciles, or he would never indulge in such criminal vagaries as he has been doing this week. If Governor KING or the Legislature violate the Constitution in respect to our chartered privileges, there is a legal method for obtaining redress. The Mayor is not a member of the Court of Appeals, and, if he were, he would have no right to decide on the constitutionality of a measure until it was brought properly before him. He has set himself up as a power above the law, and not only decided what is and what is not constitutional, but, in his madness, even, has resisted, as an individual the execution of a civil process. But we shall have no more trouble from Mayor WOOD; he has taken rope enough, of his own accord committed felo de se.

A WORD TO OUR COUNTRY COTEMPORARIES.—Quite as a matter of course, our excitable cotemporaries in the rural districts are indulging in fearful visions of the "anarchy" and "revolution" in our City. But it may be as well to disabuse their minds of the idea that New-York is a whit the less comfortable and agreeable as a residence than it ever has been. The anarchy does not extend beyond the Mayor's office, and nobody has been in the slightest degree inconvenienced by the resistance made by his Honor to the officers who attempted to serve a writ upon him. All the ordinary affairs of the City have been transacted as usual, in spite of Mayor WOOD'S little eccentricities. The jobbers have attended to their customers just as though nothing had happened; the dinner tables at the hotels have been as well filled as ever, strawberries have been just as abundant, and all our places of amusement have been just as crowded as they were before. The only person who has suffered in consequence of the Mayor's row has been Gen. WALKER, who has not been quite so much of a lion as he might have been, but for the attention which the Mayor has drawn upon himself. Otherwise we are quite as well as could be expected.

GENERAL WALKER'S INGRATITUDE.—The letter of General WALKER to the President, complaining of Commander DAVIS, to whose interference he and his staff are indebted for their lives, will strike the majority of people as a singular instance of ingratitude. It reminds us very forcibly of the indignation of the Queen of Lilliput, who protested against the humane conduct of Captain GULLIVER in extinguishing the conflagration which threatened to destroy her Majesty's palace. Some people are more precise than wise, and General WALKER appears to be one of them. If Commander DAVIS had left him and his starving comrades to their fate, a terrible outcry would have been raised against the inhumanity of his conduct. But, since the General shows so much dissatisfaction at the manner of his rescue from certain destruction, the better way to settle the difficulty will be for the President to send him back and place him exactly where Commander DAVIS found him. If he should object to this we do not see what right he can have to complain.

NOMINATION OF MR. BANKS.—The Nomination of Hon. N. P. BANKS for Governor of Massachusetts, with extraordinary unanimity by the American Convention of that State, brings him again prominently before the public, and will doubtless elevate him to the Executive chair. The American sentiment in Massachusetts is very decided, and any nominee of the American Party whose opposition to Slavery extension, and fealty to free Kansas, are well known, as in the case of the late Speaker of the U. S. House of Representatives, will be quite likely to sweep away all opposition. Of course it is not yet known what the Republican Convention will do, but we should think it more than probable that it also will nominate Mr. BANKS. As Speaker of the late House, Mr. B. displayed executive abilities of no common order, giving assurance that if successful in the contest on which he is now entering, the duties of the Gubernational office will be discharged with wisdom, energy and fidelity.

BOGUS DEMOCRACY.—The Mayor, busy with "fierce and bloody war" in the Park, fails to continue his side-walk conflict for power, against the regular Democratic organization at Tammany Hall, with that vigor which he infused in the days when he carried the Wigwam "in his breeches pocket." The rowdy-dow resolutions of night before last, which were voted for by the Wilson-Small schismatics, offer but a lame apology for reform, and bid fair to end in smoke, where they began. They explicitly repudiate what they call the "Sachem nnmmery," and thus virtually separate the Wood faction forever from Tammany Hall. The plan of action itself is called a "reorganization" of the Democratic party, and amounts to nothing more than a disfranchisement of all anti-Fernandoes for his own aggrandizement and that of his Allies.

Examination at West Point.

The examination of the graduating class at West Point closed on Monday evening, with the announcement of its result, including the settlement of the relative rank of the different members, the distribution of the diplomas, and the recommendation of the graduates to promotion.

The following named gentlemen, who had been, as usual, invited by the Secretary of War to attend the examination of the cadets, constituted the Board of Visitors for the present year:

1. Samuel H. Blake, Esq.....Maine.
2. Col. Benjamin F. Butler.....Massachusetts.
3. Henry C. Deming, Esq.....Connecticut.
4. Gen. Noble P. Elderkin.....New-York.
5. Gen. Conrad Shiemer.....Pennsylvania.
6. Prof Campbell Morfitt.....Maryland.
7. Col. Galloway.....North Carolina.
8. Gen. Paul Simmes.....Georgia.
9. Robert B. Lindsay.....Alabama.
10. Dr. Edward H. Bryan.....Mississippi.
11. Col. L. G. DeRussy*.....Louisiana.
12. George W. Houk, Esq.....Ohio.
13. Major William H. Chase.....Florida.
14. Rev. J. Phelps.....Iowa.

At five o'clock in the afternoon the Board of Visitors and the staff of instructors took their seats on the platform of the Library Hall, followed by the friends of the officers and the young cadets, the graduating class of whom, in addition to their uniform of gray and white, were allowed to wear side-arms.

Heretofore the exercises of graduation day have been held in the chapel, but this time the library was preferred.

The following is a list of the graduating class, in the order of their proficiency as decided by the Board of Visitors yesterday, together with the military promotion for which they are recommended to the President:

Recommended by the Academic Board for promotion in Engineers, Topographical Engineers, Ordnance, Artillery, Infantry, Dragoons, Mounted Riflemen or Cavalry.

1. John C. Palfrey,
2. Richard K. Meade, Jr.
3. E. Porter Alexander.
4. Henry M. Robert.

Topographical Engineers, Ordnance, Artillery, Infantry, Dragoons, Mounted Riflemen or Cavalry.

5. George C. Strong.
6. J. L. Kirby Smith.
7. Thomas G. Baylor.
8. Haldeman S. Putnam.
9. William S. Smith.

Ordnance, Artillery, Infantry, Dragoon, Mounted Rifleman or Cavalry.

10. George A. Kensel.
11. Thomas J. Berry.
12. Charles H. Morgan.
13. Oliver H. Fish.
14. Abraham C. Wilderick.
15. Charles J. Walker.
16. Francis Beach.
17. Hiram Sinclair.
18. Augustus G. Robinson.
19. Samuel W. Ferguson.
20. Marcus A. Read.
21. Edward R. Warner.
22. Manning M Kimmel.
23. George A. Weeks.
24. John T. Magruder.
25. Geo. A. Cunningham.
26. Henry C. McNeil.
27. Ira W. Claflin.

Infantry, Dragoon, Mounted Riflemen or Cavalry.

28. Aurelius F. Cone.
29. Paul J. Quattlebaum.
30. John S. Marmaduke.
31. George W. Hull.
32. Joseph S. Conrad.
33. Edward J. Conner.
34. George Ryan.
35. Robert H. Anderson.
36. Charles E. Ferrand.
37. Thomas J. Lee.
38. Lafayette Peck.

The student who had obtained the highest honors had previously graduated at Harvard College, and is a son of JOHN J. PALFREY, some years since a prominent Congressman from Massachusetts.

Mr. HENRY C. DEMING, the Connecticut member of the Board of Visitors, and Mayor of Hartford, was then invited to deliver the farewell address to the graduating class, who rose from their seats and stood during its delivery.

MUSICAL.—Mme. LA GRANGE'S first concert since her return to the City, is definitely fixed for Friday next, and will, we are assured, take place on that day without fail. It will, we trust, be generally remembered by the innumerable friends and admirers of the lady. Mme. LA GRANGE will be assisted by Miss SIMON, Mr. MOLLENHAUER, and M. GUYON, Pianist.

THE NEW FERRY TO WILLIAMSBURG.—The new ferry which runs from the foot of James Slip, East River, to the foot of South Tenth-street, Williamsburg, has now been in operation over six weeks. Its success, we learn, exceeds what was anticipated. At present two large boats ply between the opposite shores. The present season there have been large additions to the stores and private dwellings in Williamsburg. The opening of Chambers-street, in this city, will make a wide avenue from James-Slip to Hudson-street, and by means of the new Williamsburg ferry will connect that city with the midst of this.

BROOKLYN CITY RAILROAD COMPANY.—Much complaint is made against this Company for landing passengers for Greenwood Cemetery on Third-avenue, instead of extending their trips to near the Cemetery entrance, as formerly. The road from where the cars now stop to the Cemetery is in a very bad condition for foot passengers, particularly for ladies, and many are deterred from visiting the Cemetery on this account.

☞ There were in this port yesterday, 794 vessels,—including 28 steamers, 176 ships, 154 barks, 125 brigs, and 311 schooners.

THE BUNKER HILL CELEBRATION.

Inauguration of A Statue of Gen. Warren.

Address of Hon. Edward Everett and Response of Hon. George Washington Warren.

Speeches by Other Distinguished Gentlemen.

Grand Procession of Military and Civic Societies.

BOSTON, Wednesday, June 17.

The sky to-day was overcast, but there was no rain, making the weather favorable for the Bunker Hill Celebration. The 7th Regiment, Colonel DURYEA, arrived shortly after 7 o'clock this morning, and were received at the dépôt by the National Lancers and escorted to head-quarters at the Revere House, where they breakfasted. The Regiment is quite full, and their marching and serviceable appearance drew immense admiration.

Among the distinguished gentlemen present to participate in the celebration, are the Governors of New-York, New-Jersey, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont; the Mayors of Baltimore and Montreal; Senator MASON, of Virginia; Judge BREESE, of Illinois; GEORGE PEABODY, CALEB CUSHING, and a crowd of other notabilities.

At 12 o'clock the procession was got in order, and proceeded to Bunker Hill, where the statue of WARREN was inaugurated.

The procession, the main features of which were the Freemasons, the Bunker Hill Monument Association, the Governors of different States, and distinguished guests in carriages, was about one hour in passing a given point.

On the route from the State-House to Charlestown, every available point was occupied by crowds of strangers and citizens.

The "Seventh Regiment" was especially an object of admiration, and received hearty cheers. Companies from Providence, Portland, Lowell, Manchester, and other places, were also present, and with a full turn-out of the military of Boston and vicinity, made up a brilliant display.

The Masons, in their varied imposing regalia, turned out about 1,500 strong.

The procession reached the Monument grounds at about 3 o'clock, where a pavilion, capable of holding 7,000 persons, was immediately filled, while thousands were unable to press in.

The statue of General WARREN was within the pavilion, hidden from view by a tent composed of American flags, and facing the speakers' platform.

Previous to the commencement of the services, an invitation was extended to the Seventh Regiment, New-York National Guard, to march through the pavilion and view the statue, it being their only opportunity, as they were ordered home by Governor KING this afternoon.

The inauguration exercises then commenced by prayer from President WALKER, of Harvard College, which was followed by an original ode finely sung by the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston.

Hon. EDWARD EVERETT was then introduced, when the statue was uncovered, the Band playing the "Star Spangled Banner." Mr. EVERETT then proceeded to deliver his inauguration address.

ADDRESS OF HON. EDWARD EVERETT.

SIR: On behalf of a Committee of the Directors of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, I have the honor to surrender to you, as the President of that body, yonder marble statue of General JOSEPH WARREN, who laid down his life for his country on this spot, eighty-two years ago this day. In this act of grateful commemoration, we do but pay an early-promised long-deferred tribute of affection and respect, to one of the most zealous champions and efficient promoters of American liberty and independence—the first distinguished victim in the cause. As far as it is in our power, we wipe off the reproach which has rested upon us for two generations. As early as the 8th of April, 1777, it was ordered by the Continental Congress, that a monument should be erected to the memory of General WARREN in the town of Boston, and to the memory of General MERCER in Fredericksburg, Virginia. The marble of which those monuments are to be erected has not yet been quarried. In 1794, the members of King Solomon's Lodge of Masons in Charlestown erected on the summit of Bunker Hill a Tuscan column, in honor of General WARREN and his brave associates in arms. The property of the spot on which this monument stood was, by the donation of Hon. JAMES RUSSELL, vested in the Lodge, and was ceded by them to the Bunker Hill Monument Association in 1825, on condition that some trace of their early patriotic effort should be preserved within the more appropriate and permanent monument which the association was about to erect. This pledge was fully redeemed in 1845, by allowing the Lodge to place within their great work an exact copy in marble of the original monument and of the inscriptions upon it.

At the celebration of the anniversary of the battle, in 1850, three-quarters of a century after the great event, it occurred to a generous and patriotic citizen present—whose heart and hand were ever open to the calls of public spirit or benevolence—the late THOMAS HANDASYD PERKINS, that the time had come, when the duty of erecting some permanent memorial of General WARREN ought no longer to be neglected, and a contribution of $1,000 was liberally offered by him for this purpose. This offer, contained in a letter to the late lamented Dr. JOHN C. WARREN, was referred to a committee of the Directors of the Bunker Hill Monument Association; by whom, after due consideration, a marble statue, to be executed by some American artist, was recommended as the most suitable form of the memorial. This recommendation was adopted by the Directors, was approved by Col. PERKINS, and has been carried into effect by his generous subscription and the contributions of other liberal benefactors. The work was confided, in conformity with the expressed wish of Col. PERKINS, to Mr. HENRY DEXTER, of Cambridgeport, a meritorious self-taught American artist, who, in its execution, has united the sympathetic ardor of the patriot with the conscientious zeal of the sculptor. He has adopted the original portrait of WARREN, by COPLEY, as the basis of his likeness, and has no doubt attained as perfect a resemblance of the youthful hero, as it is now in the power of the art to produce. In his presence, and that of his work, it would be alike superfluous and indelicate to enlarge upon its merits. I perform the last pleasing and honorable duty of the Committee for procuring the statue, in now transferring to your official possession, and placing it through you in the permanent custody of the Bunker Hill Monument Association.

The performance of this pleasing and honorable duty is not unattended with sadness. In the interval of seven years, which has elapsed since the work was proposed, its first and greatest benefactor has passed away, and with him the other earliest and largest contributors to the statue, our late respected and liberal fellow citizens, JOHN WELLES and SAMUEL APPLETON, and the two noble brother patrons of every public-spirited and philanthropic undertaking, AMOS and ABBOTT LAWRENCE. One half of the cost of the statue was defrayed by these five departed benefactors,—the residue is the more recent donation of living contributors. The pedestal of beautiful verde antique is the contribution of the family of the late Dr. WARREN. For whatever of interest there is in this occasion—for whatever of satisfaction we enjoy, in seeing the first beloved and youthful victim in the cause of American liberty restored to us in enduring marble, we are indebted, in the first instance, to the large-hearted, warm-hearted man whose names I have repeated. They have all passed away; and with them has also passed away another honored associate, the friend of nearly half a century, who would have enjoyed a silent but intense gratification in this day's proceedings—the late lamented Dr. JOHN C. WARREN, the nephew of Gen. JOSEPH WARREN, whose warm and active interest in the commemoration of the 17th June, 1775, transcending the limits of mania and kindred, led him to consecrate the strenuous exertion of more than 30 years, not merely to the erection of the monument, but to the illustration of all the memories that cluster round Bunker Hill. And may it be permitted to me, Sir, as the only survivor of the first Committee appointed to procure subscriptions in 1825, and of the Executive Committee clothed with the full powers of the directors, in the construction of the work, to state, that among all the zealous, persevering and judicious friends of the Bunker Hill Monument, there was none who from first to last contributed more effectively to its successful prosecution and final completion than Dr. JOHN C. WARREN.

Nor let it be thought, Sir, that, in erecting the statue of Gen. JOSEPH WARREN, and bestowing the honors of this day exclusively upon him, we forget the services of the brave men, of whatever rank, who partook, with like courage and patriotic devotion, the perils of the ever-memorable 17th of June, 1775, whether with him they gave their lives to the country, or survived for other fields of danger and other calls of duty. To honor, without attempting to enumerate or compare their names—to mark, to the latest generation, the spot where they stood, side by side, through the live-long hours of that anxious, toilsome night, and that tremendous day—and braved, in their most terrible form, and most of them for the first time, the perils of the battle—is the object of the time-defying work which crowns the hill on which we stand. It commemorates no individual man or State. It stands, indeed, on the soil of Massachusetts, where the battle was fought; but there it stands equally for Connecticut, New-Hampshire, and Rhode Island, and the younger sisters of the New-England family, Vermont and Maine, whose troops shared with ours the dangers and the honors of the day. It stands for PRESCOTT and WARREN, but not less for PUTNAM, and STARK, and GREEN. No name adorns the shaft; but ages hence, though our alphabets may become as obscure as those which cover the monuments of Nineveh and Babylon, its uninscribed surface (on which monarchs might be proud to engrave their titles) will perpetuate the memory of the 17th of June. It is the monument of the day, of the event, of the battle of Bunker Hill; of all the brave men who shared its perils—alike of PRESCOTT and PUTNAM and WARREN—the chiefs of the day, and the colored man, SALEM, who is reported to have shot the gallant PITCAIRN as he mounted the parapet. Cold as the clods on which it rests, still as the silent heavens to which it soars, it is yet vocal, eloquent, in their undivided praise. Till the ponderous and well-compacted blocks of granite, which no force but that of an earthquake will heave from their bearings, shall fall asunder, it will stand to the most distant posterity a grand and impartial illustration—(nature's own massive lithography)—of the noble page, second to no other in the annals of America, on which History shall write down the names and the deeds of the 17th of June, 1775.

But while the obelisk, unappropriated to any individual name, however brilliant, forgetful of no individual merit, however humble, towers in serene simplicity, the one impartial monument of the day,—it seemed proper to the munificent proposer of the work we now inaugurate, and to his liberal associates in the undertaking, that a beginning should at length be made of a separate commemoration of those who rendered especial service in an action which gave a character to the whole succeeding contest; a battle in which the loss of the enemy exceeded two-fold that of Saratoga, Monmouth, or Yorktown, or of any other conflict in the war; and which, disguising a disastrous defeat with the name of victory, was, in the language of Gen. BURGOYNE, who witnessed the engagement, "the loss of the British Empire in America." No one, I am persuaded, will think it unjust that the first statue has been erected to WARREN; no one but must desire that the example thus set should be followed by those of PRESCOTT, of PUTNAM, of MCCLEARY, and of whomsoever else a grateful posterity may deem worthy to be associated with them in these posthumous honors. I need not tell you, Sir, that it has long been in contemplation to erect a permanent lodge on some portion of these consecrated grounds, which shall afford an appropriate place of deposit for the archives of the Association, and for the relics and memorials of the battle, and there it is probable, if this design is executed, that the statue we this day inaugurate will be definitely set up, to be surrounded, let us hope, with the busts and statues of many others of the brave men who stood or fell in the cause of the country on that momentous day.

In these ways and by these works—by the majestic structure which points its uninscribed shaft to the skies, and by the monumental statues which we dedicate to individual merit, a grateful posterity will seek to honor those to whose wise and brave counsels, to whose toils and whose blood, we are indebted, under Providence, for this rich heritage of public and private prosperity. Of these—in this part of the Union—there is no name to stand before WARREN'S. Prudent, resolute, fearless, not yet thirty five years of age, he was in reality, as President of the Provincial Congress of Massachusetts, and Chairman of the Committee of Safety, the efficient head of the patriot cause in New-England. In addition to these important offices, three days before the battle of 17th of June, he was chosen Major General of the Massachusetts troops. He was himself opposed to the occupation of Bunker Hill, but, that measure having been resolved upon by the council of war, WARREN determined to support it by his presence, and, if need should be, his blood. Mr. GERRY, his associate in the Committee of Safety, in conference with him on the 16th, strongly dissuaded his joining the detachment, which had been ordered on this eventful errand. "It will be madness," said he, "to expose yourself where destruction will be all but inevitable." "I am aware of this," said WARREN, "but I live within the sound of the cannon—how could I hear their roaring in such a cause and not be there?" Again Mr. GERRY remonstrated, and concluded with saying, "As surely as you go to the hill, you will be slain." WARREN'S reply was:

"Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori."

"It is sweet and becoming to die for the country."

That day, the 16th, he passed at Watertown, the seat of the Provincial Assembly, remaining there the greater part of the night, in the discharge of the public business. At 5 o'clock on the morning of the 17th he rode to Cambridge, and suffering severely from headache, threw himself on the bed for a little repose—the last he ever took on earth. When the intelligence reached Cambridge that the enemy was in motion, it was communicated to him by General WARD. He rose from his bed—declared that he was well,—mounted his horse, and rode to Charlestown. Just elected a Major-General, he repaired to the field as a volunteer,—refused the command which was tendered him by PUTNAM and PRESCOTT,—inquired where the attack would be most formidable, and placed himself there,—among the foremost in the conflict, among the last in the lingering retreat; till he was struck with a bullet in the head, and fell to rise no more. The next morning the body was found by Dr. JEFFRIES and General WINSLOW, who visited the field, and who saw the spot where it was buried. The following Spring, after the departure of the Royal forces, the honored remains, identified by sure indications, were re-interred with appropriate funeral ceremonies in Boston. The pall was borne by General WARD and other distinguished associates in arms, and the opening words of MORTON the Eulogist,—"Illustrious Relics! what tidings from the Grave?"—produced a thrill in the audience, which clung through life to the memory of those who heard it. In the official account of the battle, prepared a short time afterwards, at the instance of the Committee of Safety, Major General JOSEPH WARREN is named first among the dead, as "a man whose memory will be endeared to his countrymen, and to the worthy in every part and age of the world, so long as virtue and valor shall be esteemed among mankind."

Eighty-two years have passed away since these prophetic words were uttered, and we now behold a pledge of their fulfillment, in this great assembly gathered to do honor to his name, and to the attendance of so many of the most distinguished of our community and of the land. We are deprived, indeed, by a cause which demands all our sympathy, of the desired presence of the illustrious Chief, the Lieutenant General of the armies of the United States, whose own blood has not been spared in the service of the country, who has fought her battles victoriously in every climate, from the Canadian frontier to the tropics, and who, more favored of Providence, has lived to an honored age, to enter into that reward of gratitude and veneration, which it was given to WARREN to deserve, but not to enjoy. But we are honored by the presence of the chief magistrates of several sister States, and especially of the Empire State of New-York, worthy representative of a noble Massachusetts sire, Governor of a State whose population equals that of the whole United Colonies on the day when WARREN fell; of others who have served the Republic in posts of honor and usefulness, in different parts of our common country; of these patriotic military corps, and civic and literary and benevolent fraternities; in a word, of this vast multitude of every age and either sex, assembled to pay homage to the marble presentment of the youthful hero; eager to crown with this earthly immortality of fame the first great martyr in the cause of American Independence.

Nor is it the least of the satisfactions with which we pay these honors to the memory of WARREN, and celebrate the anniversary of his sacrifice, that we do it with no feelings of unkindness toward the land of our fathers. Time has long since poured its healing balm into the wounds of the Revolution, and the ancient ties of common language and kindred blood have resumed their force. Reason and humanity alike forbid that the fierce collisions which unavoidably attend the disruption and reorganization of States should open perennial fountains of national bitterness. When the excitements of the struggle are past, the great movements of public policy should be as calm and passionless as the march of the planets through the sky. While we pay due honors to the illustrious men who led the armies of the Revolution, we rejoice to believe and do know, that the great separation which they effected has been productive of equal benefits to both countries, and that the enlightened English statesmen of the present day, like the BURKES and CHATHAMS of the Revolutionary period, acknowledge the soundness of the principles for which our Fathers flew to arms, and ere everywhere extending their application throughout the colonial empire of Great Britain. Henceforth let our only contest with the father-land be a generous emulation in the arts of peace. While I speak, the public vessels of the two countries are bound on a joint errand to the mid ocean, not to stain its waters with fraternal blood, but to knit the two continents together by those mysterious bonds by which modern science and art, outstripping the laggard bours, annihilating the width of oceans, and flashing like thought through the rayless depths, is bringing the whole civilized world into the magic circle of instantaneous communication.

But, after all, the obelisks we erect and the statues we set up are but expressive symbols. The proudest monuments to the memory of our fathers are not those which are carved by the skillful artist from blocks of marble, or reared by the architect in majestic piles of granite. These indeed have their value and their interest. They mark for the latest posterity the scene of some momentous conflict; they redeem from the power of time and decay the features of some noble countenance and the proportions of some manly form, causing the poor dust to start into life again from the molten bronze or the quarried marble. But these are not the rewards for which WARREN and his associates braved death; not the monuments which will best perpetuate their fame. The principles of free government for which they laid down their lives; the national independence which by united counsels and painful sacrifices they achieved on hard fought fields; this great family of States which, with prophetic foresight, they bound together in a fraternal confederacy; this admirable adjustment of local and federal government—the most exquisite contrivance of political wisdom which the world has seen—these shall be their enduring monument. Nor less eloquent in their praise shall be the material prosperity which has resulted from their wise and patriotic measures. The world surrounding ocean whitened with the sails of American commerce, which before the Revolution was beamed in by the narrow limits of colonial restriction; and hundreds of cities that line the coast and crown the banks of noble rivers, and which have started from the soil since the establishment of independence; the vast wilderness, whose primeval forests are yearly bowing to the settler's axe, affording a home to the redundance of our own population and the hungry millions of Europe; those boundless prairies over which the living wave of population is pouring like a rushing tide, bringing with it to the utmost verge of settlement the last results of civilization; railroads following the line of the recent Indian trail, electric telegraphs to convey intelligence where the mail-coach was a thing of yesterday; great steamers on rivers and lakes traversed within a generation by the bark canoe,—these proclaim, in language more expressive than inscriptions on the monumental granite—in forms more significant than the sculptured marble—the worth and the memory of the great and good men who sowed in weakness the harvest which we raise in power, who, in the doubtful elements of national greatness which opened upon them in a visionary future beheld the germs of this palmy growth, of this imperial abundance, as the sculptor beholds in advance the muscular limbs, the glowing features, the triumphant expression of his marble hero, in the heart of the shapeless block.

Finally, my friend, let the recollections of a common danger and a common glory, which the day and the spot awaken, bring with them the strengthened love of a common country. The patriotism of our fathers, and especially of the illustrious man whom we commemorate, was of the most comprehensive cast. In a letter of the 21st of November, 1774, addressed to JOSIAH QUINCY, another early-lost, devoted champion of American liberty, General WARREN declares, "it is the united voice of America to preserve their freedom or lose their lives in defence of it. I am convinced that the true spirit of liberty was never so universally diffused through all ranks and orders of the people in any country on the face of the earth, as it now is through all North America."

On the day on which WARREN fell, WASHINGTON was commissioned as "Commander-in-Chief of all the continental forces raised or to be raised in defence of American Liberty." Massachusetts and Connecticut had their arms in the field, commanded by their favorite generals; but JOHN ADAMS took the lead in promoting the nomination of a general from that part of the Union, where there was as yet no force embodied, eager to give a striking proof that no local feelings swayed New-England, by entrusting the command of her army,—for such it was,—to a leader from the banks of the distant Potomac, whom he already designated as the "Beloved WASHINGTON." The melancholy tidings of the death of WARREN were received with poignant grief throughout the country, and it may be doubted whether the most brilliant success on Bunker Hill could have done as much to bind the colonies together as the noble, though in its immediate results unavailing resistance; the profuse, though at the time unprofitable, outpouring of human blood. A great revolution must be inaugurated with a great sacrifice, and all the loftier passions are enobled by the purification of sorrow; nor is it certain that WARREN, had he assumed the command and driven the enemy back to his boats, would have done as much to kindle a chastised and resolute enthusiasm throughout the country, and unite the colonies in the impending struggle, as when he shouldered his musket and fell in the ranks.

And, oh! my friends, let the lesson of fraternal affection which he taught us in his death be repeated in the persuasive silence of those stony lips. In his own heart-stirring language, let "the voice of our fathers' blood cry to us from the ground;" and upon this sacred day, and on this immortal hill, let it proclaim a truce to sectional alienation and party strife, as the mediæval Church proclaimed the "Truce of God." Wherever else the elements of discord may rage, let the billows sink down and the storm be hushed, like yonder placid waves, at the foot of Bunker Hill. Here let the kindly feelings that animated our fathers revive in the bosoms of their sons, assured that—should "malice domestic or foreign levy" invade us—if living champions should fail, that monumental cheek would burn with the glow of patriotism, that marble sword would leap from its scabbard, and the benving rods of Bunker Hill give up their sheeted regiments to the defence of the Union!

Mr. EVERETT, during the course of his remarks, was repeatedly applauded.

Hon. GEO. WASHINGTON WARREN, as President of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, responded to the address of Mr. EVERETT, as follows;

REPLY OF HON. G. WASHINGTON WARREN, PRESIDENT OF THE BUNKER HILL MONUMENT ASSOCIATION.

MR. EVERETT: It most becomes me, in following you, Sir, in this distinguished presence, to respond in the briefest manner possible to the suggestions you have so eloquently made, in the formal delivery to me, as President of the Bunker Hill Monument Association, of this valued treasure of art and historic interest. We accept it gratefully, Sir, and here give our sacred pledge for ourselves and our successors that it shall ever be cherished with reverential regard. BUNKER HILL herself—crowded as she now is with people from every part of that nation to which her glory equally belongs—is proud to welcome back, as it were, to her soil that manly and heroic form which, eighty-two years ago to-day was seen to mingle in the thickest of the combat, was among the last to follow in the retreat, and was struck down to death on yonder spot, while lingering there as if loth to leave the place ever after to be identified with his name.

While it was the good fortune of many of the fathers of the Revolution to live for years after that period in the service of the country they had helped to make free, and to share in her new glories, it was the peculiar lot of WARREN to be among the first to die in her cause. On entering upon the vigor of manhood, being in a high social position, and living upon the most intimate terms with the Governor and magistrates of the Province, and also with the officers of the British army—who were not here to enforce submission to laws now universally conceded to be wrong, but then pertinaciously insisted upon—he had to make his election between a base acquiescence in them, which would have been accepted, or an open opposition, and a consequent separation from many chivalrous friends. True to the instincts of his native land, and true even to the inbred principles of freedom transmitted from his British ancestors, he chose the American side. He grew in popular favor. He passed rapidly into distinction. He was a close friend and adviser with SAMUEL ADAMS.

He was successor to JOHN HANCOCK as President of the Provincial Congress, when the latter resigned that place to go to the Continental Congress. At the same time being chairman of the Committee of Public Safety, in this united capacity he may in fact be regarded as being to all intents and purposes an illustrious predecessor of Your Excellency (Gov. GARDNER) as Governor of the then incipient Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

Thus JOSEPH WARREN was not only the foremost man in this most portentous movement, but he had not a little of that power which no man living knows better than you, Sir, (Mr. EVERETT,) how to wield, and to wield most effectively for the grandest purposes—the power of an orator. He knew how to move the heart of the people; and he knew also how to speak unwelcome truths to the face of those in high authority, who had presented themselves to overawe him. By the moral courage which he exhibited, he proved himself to be worthy of the post of Major-General, with which title his name has been, down to this day, most commonly connected. And in this enduring and life-like statue before us we see him as he may well be supposed to have been at the very moment he had in his mind determined to accept this accumulated honor. We behold him meditating upon the wrongs inflicted upon his native land; we know by that expressive gesture that he is kindling with those heaven-born aspirations under which he acted; he holds in his left hand the sword, which he resolves to gird about him, with which he is to learn the, to him, new art of war, and which he vows never to relinquish in life, until his country's cause shall triumph.

You have, Sir, most aptly alluded to the fact, that the order to fortify this Hill was given against his advice; he entertained the opinion that the attempt would not succeed. But notwithstanding he was overruled by the body of which he was chairman, he gave to the execution of their decision his heart and soul, aye, even his life! A glorious example! a type of many patriots who have imitated him in different periods of our country's history; of noble men, who, when the exigency of the time required, have sunk their conflicting opinions, their various political principles and jealousies, and acted together for the common good. To go no farther back than to our late war with Mexico, so nobly and successfully conducted by him, our chief-promised guest, whose absence and its lamented cause, we now most sincerely deplore, but in relation to whom, we may now, in his absence, with perfect propriety, speak out our mind, and say, that he is unquestionably the greatest General of the age—at that critical time, eminent men and sons of eminent men, forgetting their differences and the grounds of them, rallied and fought bravely side by side. So may it ever be with our own America! In her every peril, in every period of imminent difficulty and danger, may her true-hearted sons from every section of our vast extended domain, stand together as one man to defend her honor, and to maintain the entire integrity of our glorious confederated Union!

For the present occasion of this statue we have provided an unpretending temporary building. And you, sir, have alluded to the plan, for many years determined upon, and postponed only for the want of means, of providing a permanent granite structure, which shall be so designed and located as to be in perfect harmony with the monument and which shall at the same time serve the purposes of which it may be required. Our monument—which the Association holds in trust for the benefit of the whole country—is visited, and ascended even by tens of thousands annually. In the still cold days of winter, when from its summit in the clear translucent atmosphere, free from exhalations, the farthest reach of prospect is gained, as well as in the hot summer's day, when in those upper currents the air whistles through those openings most luxuriously, while every thing is dry and parched below,—the patriotic pilgrim from our own or foreign lands is glad at least for once in his life to enjoy the unsurpassed view from that elevated position. Some place of shelter is therefore demanded for visitors, both before and after the somewhat toilsome ascent. Another early pledge of the Association remains to be fulfilled; it is the one first given, and I believe, Sir, under your own hand as the first Secretary, that of depositing in the archives of the Association the original subscription books for the erection of this monument, which was built almost entirely by private effort. All of these books, with many original papers, many of them of great interest, are in my possession, waiting for this final disposition of them. When this is done it will not unfrequently happen, and at many distant periods from this, that some exploring visitor will leap with joy and pride at the sudden discovery of the genuine autograph of his own ancestor, who had helped to build this mighty work. In providing for these ends, the Association may also provide for a status room, as you have suggested, Sir, somewhat larger than the one before us. And while the exposition of any statue standing upon these grounds in open contrast with this monument would neither be agreeable or proper, there can be no well founded objection to placing within a keeper's lodge, properly constructed and adapted to the legitimate uses connected with the monument, this and other appropriate works of art, calculated to deepen the impression of all the hallowed and lofty associations of the place. As in the contemplation of some one of the grand cathedrals of the Old World—in the building of which by men's hands centuries were employed—the display upon one of its lofty outer walls of a painting, illustrating some touching scene in Scripture, though even by a RAPHAEL or a RUBENS, would be offensive from a too violent contrast and disproportion, and yet the same picture hung within the same cathedral, in one of its chapels and under one of the many arches which greet the eye in the interior, would not only be deemed to be well placed, but its effect would be heightened in that very position, and would tend to enchant the beholder and to draw him at every enraptured gaze, nearer and nearer to his God.
